But to make it admissible in any case it ought to appear that it was made voluntarily, and that no motives of hope or fear were employed to induce the accused to confess.¹ The evidence ought to be clear and satisfactory that the prisoner was neither threatened nor cajoled into admitting what very possibly was untrue. Under the excitement of a charge of crime, coolness and self-possession are to be looked for in very few persons; and however strongly we may reason with ourselves that no one will confess a heinous offence of which he is not guilty, the records of criminal courts bear abundant testimony to the contrary. If confessions could prove a crime beyond doubt, no act which was ever punished criminally would be better established than witchcraft;² and the judicial executions which have been justified by such confessions ought to constitute a solemn warning against the too ready reliance upon confessions as proof of guilt in any case. As "Mr. Justice Parke several times observed," while holding one of his circuits, "too great weight ought not to be attached to evidence of what a party has been supposed to have said, as it very frequently happens, not only that the witness has misunderstood what the party has said, but that by unintentionally altering a few of the expressions really used, he gives an effect to the statement completely at variance with what the party really did say."³ And when the admission is full and positive, it perhaps quite as often happens that it has been made under the influence of the terrible fear excited by the charge, and in the hope that confession may ward off some of the consequences likely to follow if guilt were persistently denied.

A confession alone ought not to be sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti. There should be other proof that a crime has actually been committed; and the confession should only be allowed for the purpose of connecting the defendant with the ¹ See Smith v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. 734; Saffet v. Commonwealth, 14 Gratt. 652; Page v. Commonwealth, 27 Gratt. 634; Williams v. Commonwealth, 27 Gratt. 297; United States v. Cox, 1 Cliff. 5 21; Jordan's Case, 32 Miss. 382; Rannels v. State, 28 Ark. 121; Commonwealth v. Holt, 121 Mass. 61; Miller v. People, 39 Ill. 457.

² See Mary Smith's Case, 2 Howell's State Trials, 1049; Case of Essex Witches, 4 Howell's State Trials, 817; Case of Suffolk Witches, 6 Howell's State Trials, 647; Case of Devon Witches, 8 Howell's State Trials, 1017. It is true that torture was employed freely in cases of alleged witchcraft, but the delusion was one which often seized upon the victims as well as their accusers, and led the former to freely confess the most monstrous and impossible actions. Much curious and valuable information on this subject may be found in "Superstition and Force," by Leav; "A Physician's Problems," by Elam; and Lecky, History of Rationalism.

³ Note to Earle v. Picken, 5 C. & P. 642. See also 1 Greenl. Ev. § 214, and note; Commonwealth v. Curtis, 97 Mass. 674; Derby v. Derby, 21 N. J. Eq. 36; State v. Chambers, 39 Iowa, 179.

offence.¹ And if the party's hopes or fears are operated upon to induce him to make it, this fact will be sufficient to preclude the confession being received; the rule upon this subject being so strict that even saying to the prisoner it will be better for him to confess, has been decided to be a holding out of such inducements to confession, especially when said by a person having a prisoner in custody, as should render the statement obtained by means of it inadmissible.² If, however, statements have been made before

¹ In Stringfellow v. State, 26 Miss. 157, a confession of murder was held not sufficient to warrant conviction, unless the death of the person alleged to have been murdered was shown by other evidence. In People v. Hennessy, 15 Wend. 147, it was decided that a confession of embezzlement by a clerk would not warrant a conviction where that constituted the sole evidence that an embezzlement had been committed. So on an indictment for blasphemy, the admission by the defendant that he spoke the blasphemous charge, is not sufficient evidence of the uttering. People v. Porter, 2 Park. Cr. R. 14. And see State v. Guild, 19 N. J. 163, 18 Am. Dec. 404; Long's Case, 1 Hayw. 524; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; Ruloff v. State, 15 N. Y. 179; Hector v. State, 2 Mo. 123, 22 Am. Dec. 454; Roberts v. People, 11 Cal. 213, 17 Pac. 337; Winslow v. State, 76 Ala. 42.

² Rex v. Enoch, 5 C. & P. 539; State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. 563; Boyd v. State, 2 Humph. 350; Morehead v. State, 9 Humph. 635; Commonwealth v. Taylor, 5 Cosh. 605; Rex v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551; Commonwealth v. Curtis, 97 Mass. 574; State v. Staley, 14 Minn. 105; Erwin v. State, 49 Ga. 529; Austine v. State, 51 Ill. 239; People v. Phillips, 42 N. Y. 200; State v. Brokman, 46 Mo. 596; Commonwealth v. Mitchell, 117 Mass. 421; Commonwealth v. Sturdivant, 117 Mass. 122; Coley v. State, 50 Ark. 305, 7 S. W. 255. Mr. Phillips states the rule thus: "A promise of benefit or favor, or threat or imputation of disfavor, connected with the subject of the charge, held out by a person having authority in the matter, will be sufficient to exclude a confession made in consequence of such inducements, either of hope or fear. The prosecutor, or the prosecutor's wife or attorney, or the prisoner's master or mistress, or a constable, or a person assisting him in the apprehension or custody, or a magistrate acting in the business, or other magistrate, has been respectively looked upon as having authority in the matter; and the same principle applies if the inducement has been held out by a person without authority, but in the presence of a person who has such authority, and with his sanction, either express or implied." 1 Phil. Ev. by Cowen, Hill, and Edwards, 541, and cases cited. But we think the better reason is in favor of excluding confessions where inducements have been held out by any person, whether acting by authority or not. Rex v. Simpson, 1 Mood. C. C. 410; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. 163, 18 Am. Dec. 404; Spears v. State, 2 Ohio St. 583; Commonwealth v. Knapp, 9 Pick. 496; Rex v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221; Rex v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 357; Rex v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543; Rex v. Walkley, 6 C. & P. 175; Rex v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. "The reason is, that in the agitation of mind in which the party charged is supposed to be, he is liable to be influenced by the hope of advantage or fear of injury to state things which are not true." Per Morton, J. in Commonwealth v. Knapp, 9 Pick. 496, 502; People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 387. There are not wanting many opposing authorities, which proceed upon the idea, that "a promise made by an indifferent person, who interfered officiously without any kind of authority, and promised without the means of performance, can scarcely be deemed sufficient to produce any effect, even on the weakest mind, as an inducement to confess." 1 Greenl. Ev. § 223. No supposition could be more fallacious; and, in point of fact, a case can scarcely occur in which some one, from age, superior wisdom, or experience, or from his relations to the accused or to the prosecutor, would not be likely to exercise more influence upon his mind than some the confession which were likely to do away with the effect of the inducements, so that the accused cannot be supposed to have of the persons who are regarded as "in authority" under the rule as stated by Mr. Phillips. Mr. Greenleaf thinks that, while as a rule of law all confessions made to persons in authority should be rejected, "promises and threats by private persons, however, not being found so uniform in their operation, perhaps may, with more propriety, be treated as mixed questions of law and fact; the principle of law, that a confession must be voluntary, being strictly adhered to, and the question, whether the promises or threats of the private individuals who employed them were sufficient to overcome the mind of the prisoner, being left to the discretion of the judge under all the circumstances of the case." 1 Greenl. Ev. § 223. This is a more reasonable rule than that which admits such confessions under all circumstances; but it is impossible for a judge to say whether inducements, in a particular case, have influenced the mind or not; if their nature were such that they were calculated to have that effect, it is safer, and more in accordance with the humane principles of our criminal law, to presume, in favor of life and liberty, that the confessions were "forced from the mind by the flattery of hope, or by the torture of fear" (per Eyre, C. B., Warickshall's Case, 1 Leach, C. C. 240), and exclude them altogether. In case of doubt as to the fact that the confession was voluntary, the jury should be left to exclude it, if they think it involuntary. Com. v. Preece, 149 Mass. 276, 5 N. E. 494; People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277, 27 N. W. 529. In Ellis v. State, 65 Miss. 44, 3 So. 188, it is held the duty of the court to decide whether it was voluntary, and that the jury may or may not believe it true, if admitted. This whole subject is very fully considered in note to 2 Leading Criminal Cases, 182. And see Whart. Cr. Law, § 686 et seq. The cases of People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 385, and Commonwealth v. Curtis, 67 Mass. 574, have carefully considered the general subject. In the second of these, the prisoner had asked the officer who made the arrest, whether he had better plead guilty, and the officer had replied that "as a general thing it was better for a man who was guilty to plead guilty, for he got a lighter sentence." After this he made statements which were relied upon to prove guilt. These statements were not allowed to be given in evidence. Per Foster, J.: "There is no doubt that any inducement of temporal fear or favor coming from one in authority, which preceded and may have influenced a confession, will cause it to be rejected, unless the confession is made under such circumstances as show that the influence of the inducement has passed away. No cases require more careful scrutiny than those of disclosures made by a party under arrest to the officer who has him in custody, and in none will sinister threats or promises of favor exclude the subsequent confessions. Commonwealth v. Taylor, 5 Cush. 610; Commonwealth v. Turkerman, 10 Gray, 193; Commonwealth v. Morey, 1 Gray, 461. 'Saying to the prisoner that it will be the worse for him if he does not confess, or that it will be the better for him if he does, is sufficient to exclude the confession, according to constant experience.' 2 Hale, P. C. 650; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 210; 2 Bennett and Hoard's Lead. Cr. Cas. 164; Ward v. State, 50 Ala. 120. Each case depends largely on its own special circumstances. But we have before us an instance in which the officer actually held out to the defendant the hope and inducement of a lighter sentence if he pleaded guilty. And a determination to plead guilty at the trial, thus induced, would naturally lead to an immediate disclosure of guilt." And the court held it an unimportant circumstance that the advice of the officer was given at the request of the prisoner, instead of being volunteered. A voluntary confession obtained by artifice is admissible. State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 100; Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492, 30 N. W. 426. So, if made in response to a simple request by the officer in charge of the person. Ross v. State, 67 Md. 285, 10 Atl. 218. Statements made to the grand jury as individuals in the jury room are inadmissible. State v. Coffey, 56 Conn. 519, 16 Atl. 151. But not those made to a coroner by an ignorant foreigner, without counsel, or knowledge of his rights. People v.

acted under their influence, the confession may be received in evidence;¹ but the showing ought to be very satisfactory on this point before the court should presume that the prisoner's hopes did not still cling to, or his fears dwell upon, the first inducements.²

Before prisoners were allowed the benefit of assistance from counsel on trials for high crimes, it was customary for them to make such statements as they saw fit concerning the charge against them, during the progress of the trial, or after the evidence for the prosecution was put in; and upon these statements the prosecuting officer or the court would sometimes ask questions, which the accused might answer or not at his option. And although this practice has now become obsolete, yet if the accused in any case should manage or assist in his own defence, and should claim the right of addressing the jury, it would be difficult to confine him to "the record" as the counsel may be confined in his argument. A disposition has been manifested of late to allow the accused to give evidence in his own behalf; and statutes to that effect are in existence in some of the States, the operation of which is believed to have been generally satisfactory.³ These statutes, however, cannot be so construed as to authorize compulsory process against an accused to compel him to disclose more than he chooses; they do not so far change the old system as to establish an inquisitorial process for obtaining evidence; they confer a privilege, which the defendant may use at his option. If he does not choose to avail himself of it, unfavorable inferences are not to be drawn to his prejudice from that circumstance;⁴ and if he does testify, he is at liberty to stop at any Mendon, 103 N. Y. 211, 8 N. E. 498. The rule does not cover statements of facts not involving guilt, but which in connection with other facts may tend to show it. People v. Le Roy, 65 Cal. 613, 4 Pac. 549. See, upon the general subject of admissibility of confessions with reference to their voluntary character, Greenleaf on Evidence, ed. 18, §§ 219-230.

¹ State v. Guild, 10 N. J. 163, 18 Am. Dec. 404; Commonwealth v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269; State v. Vaigneur, 5 Rich. 231; Rex v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535; Rex v. Howes, 5 C. & P. 404; Rex v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318; Thompson v. Commonwealth, 20 Gratt. 724.

² See State v. Roberts, 1 Dev. 259; Rex v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535; Thompson v. Commonwealth, 20 Gratt. 724; State v. Lowthorne, 56 N. C. 538; Thompson v.

State, 19 Tex. App. 593; Coffee v. State, 25 Fla. 501, 6 So. 493; [People v. Stewart, 75 Mich. 21, 42 N. W. 962]. Before the confession can be received, it must be shown by the prosecution that it was voluntary. State v. Garvey, 28 La. Ann. 955, 26 Am. Rep. 123. Compare Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

³ See American Law Register, Vol. V, n. s. pp. 129, 705; Ruff v. People, 45 N. Y. 213. As such statutes do not compel, even morally, a defendant to testify, they are valid. People v. Courtney, 64 N. Y. 450. In Tennessee, the prisoner's statement is not, in a legal sense, testimony, but the jury may nevertheless believe and act upon it. Wilson v. State, 3 Heisk. 342.

⁴ People v. Tyler, 63 Cal. 522; State v. Cameron, 40 Vt. 555. For a case rest-point he chooses, and it must be left to the jury to give a statement, which he declines to make a full one, such weight as, under ing upon an analogous principle, see Carne v. Littenfield, 2 Mich. 349. A different view would seem to be taken in Maine. See State v. Bartlett, 55 Me. 200. The views of the court are thus stated in the recent case of State v. Cleaves, 59 Me. 238, 8 Am. Rep. 422. The judge below had instructed the jury that the fact that the defendant did not go upon the stand to testify was a proper matter to be taken into consideration by them in determining the question of her guilt or innocence. This instruction was sustained. Appleton, Ch. J. "It has been urged that this view of the law places the prisoner in an embarrassed condition. Not so. The embarrassment of the prisoner, if embarrassed, is the result of his own previous misconduct, not of the law. If innocent, he will regard the privilege of testifying as a boon justly conceded. If guilty, it is optional with the accused to testify or not, and he cannot complain of the election he may make. If he does not avail himself of the privilege of contradiction or expansion, it is his fault if by his own misconduct or crime he has placed himself in such a situation that he prefers any inferences which may be drawn from his refusal to testify, to those which must be drawn from his testimony, if truly delivered. The instruction given was correct, and in entire accordance with the conclusions to which, after mature deliberation, we have arrived. State v. Bartlett, 55 Me. 200; State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 375."

In People v. Tyler, 38 Cal. 522, 529, Swann, Ch. J., expresses the contrary view as follows: "At the trial, by his plea of not guilty, the party charged denies the charge against him. This is itself a positive act of denial, and puts upon the people the burden of affirmatively proving the offense alleged against him. When he has once raised this issue by his plea of not guilty, the law says he shall thenceforth be deemed innocent till he is proved to be guilty; and both the common law and the statute give him the benefit of any reasonable doubt arising on the evidence. Now, if at the trial, when for all the purposes of the trial the burden is on the people to prove the offense charged by affirmative evidence, and the defendant is entitled to rest upon his plea of not guilty, an inference of guilt could legally be drawn from his declining to go upon the stand as a witness, and again deny the charge against him in the form of testimony, he would practically if not theoretically, by his act declining to exercise his privilege, furnish evidence of his guilt that might turn the scale and convict him. In this mode he would indirectly and practically be deprived of the option which the law gives him, and of the benefit of the provision of the law and the Constitution, which say in substance that he shall not be compelled to criminate himself. If the inference in question could be legally drawn, the very act of exercising his option, as to going upon the stand as a witness, which he is necessarily compelled by the adoption of the statute to exercise one way or the other, would be, at least to the extent of the weight given by the jury to the inference arising from his declining to testify, a crimination of himself. Whatever the ordinary rule of evidence, with reference to inferences to be drawn from the failure of parties to produce evidence that must be in their power to give, we are satisfied that the defendant, with respect to exercising his privilege under the provisions of the act in question, is entitled to rest in silence and security upon his plea of not guilty, and that no inference of guilt can be properly drawn against him from his declining to avail himself of the privilege conferred upon him to testify in his own behalf; that to permit such an inference would be to violate the principles and the spirit of the Constitution and the statute, and defeat rather than promote the object designed to be accomplished by the innovation in question." See also Commonwealth v. Boomer, 97 Mass. 587; Commonwealth v. Morgan, 107 Mass. 169; Commonwealth v. Nichols, 114 Mass. 285, 19 Am. Rep. 340; Commonwealth v. Scott, 123 Mass. 239, 25 Am. Rep. 87; Birch v. State, 30 Ga. 585. In New York and Ohio, by statute, unfavorable inferences are not allowed to be drawn from the fact of the defendant not offering himself as a witness. See the circumstances, they think it entitled to;¹ otherwise the statute must have set aside and overruled the constitutional maxim which protects an accused party against being compelled to testify against himself, and the statutory privilege becomes a snare and a danger.²

Brandon v. People, 42 N. Y. 265; Connors v. People, 50 N. Y. 240; Stover v. People, 56 N. Y. 315; Calixins v. State, 18 Ohio St. 368.

In Devries v. Phillips, 63 N. C. 53, the Supreme Court of North Carolina held it not admissible for counsel to comment to the jury on the fact that the opposite party did not come forward to be sworn as a witness as the statute permitted. In Michigan the wife of an accused party may be sworn as a witness with his assent; but it has been held that his failure to call her was not to subject him to inferences of guilt, even though the case was such that, if his defence was true, his wife must have been cognizant of the facts. Knowles v. People, 15 Mich. 408.

When a defendant in a criminal case takes the stand in his own behalf, he is subject to impeachment like other witnesses. Fletcher v. State, 49 Ind. 124, 19 Am. Rep. 673; Mershon v. State, 61 Ind. 14; State v. Beal, 98 Ind. 345; Morris v. State, 74 Ind. 335; Commonwealth v. Bonner, 97 Mass. 587; Commonwealth v. Gallagher, 126 Mass. 54; State v. Hardin, 46 Iowa 623, 25 Am. Rep. 174; Gifford v. People, 87 Ill. 211. As to the extent to which a prisoner may be cross-examined, see Hanoff v. State, 87 Ohio St. 178; People v. Noelke, 94 N. Y. 167; State v. Clinton, 67 Mo. 380; State v. Saunders, 14 Ore. 300, 12 Pac. 441; People v. O'Brien, 60 Cal. 602, 6 Pac. 695. [That cross-examination may be full and searching, see Elizabeth v. United States, 178 U. S. 204, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.] On the whole subject of the accused as witness, see 4 Crim. Law Mag. 333.

¹ In State v. Ober, 52 N. H. 459, 13 Am. Rep. 88, the defendant was put on trial for an illegal sale of liquors; and having offered himself as a witness, was asked on cross-examination a question directly relating to the sale. He declined to answer, on the ground that it might tend to criminate him. Being convicted,

it was alleged for error that the court suffered the prosecuting officer to comment on this refusal to the jury. The Supreme Court held this no error. This ruling is in entire accord with the practice which has prevailed without question in Michigan, and which has always assumed that the right of comment, where the party makes himself his own witness, and then refuses to answer proper questions, was as clear as the right to exemption from unfavorable comment when he abstains from asserting his statutory privilege.

The case of Connors v. People, 50 N. Y. 240, is different. There the defendant, having taken the stand as a witness, objected to answer a question; but was directed by the court to do so, and obeyed the direction. This was held no error because he had waived his privilege. If the defendant had persisted in refusing we are not advised what action the court would have deemed it proper to take, and it is easy to conceive of serious embarrassments in such a case. Under the Michigan practice, when the court had decided the question to be a proper one it would have been left to the defendant to answer or not at his option, but if he failed to answer what seemed to the jury a proper inquiry, it would be thought surprising if they gave his imperfect statement much credence. On this point see further State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 234, 20 Am. Rep. 685; State v. Witham, 72 Me. 321.

As to extent to which comment may be made upon the defendant's testimony or his failure to make it full, see Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492, 30 N. W. 629; Watt v. People, 128 Ill. 9, 18 N. E. 540; State v. Graves, 95 Mo. 519, 8 S. W. 730; State v. Ward, 61 Vt. 153, 17 Atl. Rep. 453.

² The statute of Michigan of 1861, p. 159, removed the common-law disabilities of parties to testify and added, "Nothing in this act shall be construed as giving the right to compel a defendant in criminal cases to testify; but any such defendant shall be at liberty to make a statement to the court or jury, and may be cross-examined on any such statement." It has been held that this statement should not be under oath. People v. Thomas, 9 Mich. 314. That its purpose was to give every person on trial for crime an opportunity to make full explanation to the jury, in respect to the circumstances given in evidence which are supposed to have a bearing against him. Annis v. People, 13 Mich. 511. That the statement is evidence in the case, to which the jury can attach such weight as they think it is entitled to. Maier v. People, 10 Mich. 212. That the court has no right to instruct the jury that, when it conflicts with the testimony of an unimpeached witness, they must believe the latter in preference. Durant v. People, 13 Mich. 351. And that the prisoner while on the stand, is entitled to the assistance of counsel in directing his attention to any branch of the charge, that he may make explanations concerning it if he desires. Annis v. People, 13 Mich. 511. The prisoner does not cease to be a defendant by becoming a witness, nor forfeit rights by accepting a privilege. In People v. Thomas, 9 Mich. 321, Comp. St., J., in speaking of the right which the statute gives to cross-examine a defendant who has made his statement, says: "And while his constitutional right of declining to answer questions cannot be removed, yet a refusal by a party to answer any fair question, not going outside of what he has offered to explain, would have its proper weight with the jury." See Commonwealth v. Mullen, 97 Mass. 547; Commonwealth v. Curtis, 97 Mass. 574; Commonwealth v. Morgan, 107 Mass. 199. In Florida under a similar statute the prisoner may make his statement even after the evidence is closed. Higginbotham v. State, 19 Fla. 567. [Defendant may be compelled to testify against his interest in civil cases. Levy v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 105 Cal. 990, 28 Pac. 955, 24 L. R. A. 811, and note in L. R. A. And in criminal cases the accused may be compelled to stand up before the jury for identification. People v. Gardner, 144 N. Y. 119, 38 N. E. 1603,

The testimony for the people in criminal cases can only, as a general rule, be given by witnesses who are present in court.¹

28 L. R. A. 699, 43 Am. St. 741, and note in L. R. A. Where accused offers himself as witness he may be cross-examined. People v. Tice, 131 N. Y. 651, 30 N. E. 494, 15 L. R. A. 659, and note. The constitutional maxim which protects one from testifying against himself is available to one though he is not on trial. Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.]

¹ State v. Thomas, 64 N. C. 74; Goodman v. State, Meigs, 197; Jackson v. Commonwealth, 19 Gratt. 659. See Skaggs v. State, 108 Ind. 53, 8 N. E. 695. By the old common law, a party accused of felony was not allowed to call witnesses to contradict the evidence for the Crown; and this seems to have been on some idea that it would be derogatory to the royal dignity to permit it. Afterwards, when they were permitted to be called, they made their statements without oath; and it was not uncommon for both the prosecution and the court to comment upon their testimony as of little weight because unsworn. It was not until Queen Anne's time that they were put under oath.

The rule that the prisoner shall be confronted with the witnesses against him does not preclude such documentary evidence to establish collateral facts as would be admissible under the rules of the common law in other cases. United States v. Benner, Baldw. 234; United States v. Little, 2 Wash. C. C. 159; United States v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. 531; People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215. But the corpus delicti—e. g. the fact of marriage in an indictment for bigamy—cannot be proved by certificates. People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 549. Compare Patterson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 102. [On right to be confronted with witnesses, see Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; also Gore v. State, 52 Ark. 285, 12 S. W. 504, 5 L. R. A. 832, and note. Jury may view the premises where the crime was committed, and the prisoner has no right to be present. People v. Thorn, 156 N. Y. 286, 50 N. E. 947, 42 L. R. A. 268; upon view by jury, see note to this case in L. R. A.]

The defendant is entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him;¹ and if any of them be absent from the Commonwealth, so that their attendance cannot be compelled, or if they be dead, or have become incapacitated to give evidence, there is no mode by which their statements against the prisoner can be used for his conviction.² The exceptions to this rule are of cases which are excluded from its reasons by their peculiar circumstances; but they are far from numerous. If the witness was sworn before the examining magistrate, or before a coroner, and the accused had an opportunity then to cross-examine him, or if there were a former trial on which he was sworn, it seems allowable to make use of his deposition, or of the minutes of his examination, if the witness has since deceased, or is insane, or sick and unable to testify, or has been summoned but appears to have been kept away by the opposite party.³ So, also, if a person is

¹ Ball v. State, 2 Tex. App. 216, 28 Am. Rep. 429. It has been held competent, even in a criminal case, to make the certificate of the proper official accountant prima facie evidence of an official delinquency in the tax collector. Johns v. State, 66 Md. 350. [So a statute making evidence that a bank failed and that deposits were received by an officer of the bank shortly before the failure, prima facie evidence of a taking with knowledge of insolvency is valid. State v. Buck, 120 Mo. 479, 25 S. W. 573. See also, People v. Cannon, 139 N. Y. 32, 34 N. E. 769, 36 Am. St. 638.]

It is not competent for the legislature to make reputation evidence against an accused of a public offence,—e. g. of keeping a place for the sale of liquors,—which the jury are bound to follow. State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211; contra, State v. Thomas, 47 Conn. 545, 30 Am. Rep. 38. It may be made sufficient evidence, provided the jury, while free to convict upon it, are not bound to do so. State v. Wilson, 15 R. I. 180, 1 Atl. 415. [The prisoner must be allowed to see witness's face and to be near enough to hear what witness says and to watch its effect upon jury. State v. Mannon, 19 Utah, 505, 57 Pac. 542, 45 L. R. A. 638. Record which does not show the prisoner present during the entire trial is fatally defective. French v. State, 85 Wis. 400, 55 N. W. 506, 27 L. R. A. 402, 39 Am. St. 855.]

² People v. Howard, 50 Mich. 239, 15 N. W. 101. But a statute may give the prisoner the right to take depositions out of the State upon condition that the State shall have the like right. Buders v. State, 97 Ind. 378.

³ 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 103-106; Bishop, Cr. Pro. §§ 520-527; Whart. Cr. Law, § 687; 2 Phil. Ev. by Cowen, Hill, and Edwards, 217, 229; Beets v. State, Meigs, 108; Kendricks v. State, 10 Humph. 479; United States v. McComb, 5 McLean, 286; Summons v. State, 5 Ohio St. 225; Pope v. State, 22 Ark. 371; Brown v. Commonwealth, 78 Pa. St. 321; Johnson v. State, 1 Tex. App. 333; O'Brien v. Commonwealth, 6 Bush, 563; Commonwealth v. Richards, 18 Pick. 434; People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137; People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 45; Davis v. State, 17 Ala. 354; Marler v. State, 67 Ala. 55; State v. Johnson, 12 Nev. 121; State v. Hooker, 17 Vt. 658; State v. Elliott, 90 Mo. 359, 2 S. W. 411; Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601, 21 N. W. 484; State v. Fitzgerald, 63 Iowa, 268, 19 N. W. 202. [Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 237, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; s. c. 146 U. S. 140, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50. Contra, Cline v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. 320, 35 S. W. 1099, 37 S. W. 722, 61 Am. St. 850. See, upon this right of confrontation, note to Cline v. State, supra, 61 Am. St. 856, and dissenting opinion of Henderson, J., in same case.] Compare Puryear v. State, 63 Ga. 692; State v. Campbell, 1 Rich. 124. That the legislature may make the notes of the official stenographer evidence in a subsequent trial, see State v. Frederic, 69 Me. 400, on trial for homicide, the declarations of the party whom he is charged with having killed, if made under the solemnity of a conviction that he was at the point of death, and relating to matters of fact concerning the homicide, which passed under his own observation, may be given in evidence against the accused; the condition of the party who made them being such that every motive to falsehood must be supposed to have been silenced, and the mind to be impelled by the most powerful considerations to tell the truth.¹ Not that such evidence is of very conclusive character; it is not always easy for the hearer to determine how much of the declaration related to what was seen and positively known, and how much was surmise and suspicion only; but it is admissible from the necessity of the case, and the jury must judge of the weight to be attached to it.

In cases of felony, where the prisoner's life or liberty is in peril, he has the right to be present, and must be present, during the whole of the trial, and until the final judgment. If he be absent, either in prison or by escape, there is a want of jurisdiction over the person, and the court cannot proceed with the trial, or receive the verdict, or pronounce the final judgment.² But misdemeanors may be tried in the absence of the accused.

3 Am. Cr. R. 78. See People v. Sligh, 48 Mich. 54, 11 N. W. 782. Whether evidence that the witness cannot be found after diligent inquiry, or is out of the jurisdiction, would be sufficient to let in proof of his former testimony, see Bull. N. P. 235, 242; Rex v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167; Sells v. Brown, 3 C. & P. 601; People v. Chung Ah Chue, 57 Cal. 607. Evidence of a witness at a former trial, alive but out of the State, is inadmissible. Owens v. State, 63 Miss. 450.

¹ Greenl. Ev. § 156; 1 Phil. Ev. by Cowen, Hill, and Edwards, 285-287; Whart. Cr. Law, §§ 669-682; Donnelly v. State, 26 N. J. 463; Anthony v. State, Mags. 2-5; Hill's Case, 2 Gratt. 524; State v. Freeman, 1 Speers, 67; State v. Brunetta, 13 La. Ann. 45; Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 226; More v. State, 35 Ala. 421; Brown v. State, 32 Miss. 433; Whitley v. State, 48 Ga. 73; State v. Quick, 15 Rich. 138; Jackson v. Commonwealth, 19 Gratt. 679; State v. Oliver, 2 Houst. 385; People v. Simpson, 48 Mich. 474, 12 N. W. 602; State v. Saunders, 14 Oreg. 370, 12 Pac. 441; State v. Vansant, 89 Mo. 37. This whole subject was largely considered in Morgan v. State, 31 Ind. 193; State v. Framburg, 40 Iowa, 555.

² See Andrews v. State, 2 Sneed 550; Jacobs v. Cone, 5 S. & R. 335; Witt v. State, 5 Cold. 11; State v. Alman, 64 N. C. 364; Gladden v. State, 12 Fla. 577; Maurer v. People, 43 N. Y. 1; note to Winchell v. State, 7 Cow. 525; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Smith v. People, 8 Col. 457, 8 Pac. 929; State v. Kelly, 97 N. C. 404, 2 S. E. 185. In capital cases the accused stands upon all his rights, and waives nothing. Nomaque v. People, Breese, 145; Dempsey v. People, 47 Ill. 325; People v. McKay, 18 Johns. 217; Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385. The court cannot make an order changing the venue in a criminal case in the absence of and without notice to the defendant. Ex parte Bryan, 45 Ala. 404. Nor in the course of the trial allow evidence to be given to the jury in his absence, even though it be that of a witness which had been previously reduced to writing. Jackson v. Commonwealth, 19 Gratt. 699; Wade v. State, 12 Ga. 25. See People v. Bragle, 88 N. Y. 585. And in a capital case the record

The Traverse Jury.

Accusations of criminal conduct are tried at the common law by jury;¹ and wherever the right to this trial is guaranteed by the constitution without qualification or restriction, it must be understood as retained in all those cases which were triable by jury at the common law,² and with all the common-law inci-must affirmatively show the presence of the accused at the trial, and when the verdict is received and sentence pronounced. Dougherty v. Commonwealth, 68 Pa. St. 286. As to right to be present, at a view of the locus in quo, see People v. Lowrey, 70 Cal. 193, 11 Pac. 606; State v. Congdon, 14 R. I. 458; Scholar v. State, 105 Ind. 289, 4 N. E. 870; People v. Thorn, 156 N. Y. 286, 50 N. E. 947, 4 L. R. A. 368, and note in L. R. A. at argument of motion for a new trial; People v. Ormsby, 48 Mich. 494, 12 N. W. 671; State v. Defeat, 20 S. C. 382; Bond v. Com., 83 Va. 581, 3 S. E. 149; when jury come in for further instructions: Shipp v. State, 11 Tex. App. 491; Roberts v. State, 111 Ind. 340, 12 N. E. 500; State v. Myrick, 38 Kan. 238, 16 Pac. 530; State v. Jones, 29 S. C. 201, 7 S. E. Rep. 296. Whether any of the steps in the trial can be taken in the defendant's absence if he is under bail, see Barton v. State, 67 Ga. 663; Sablinger v. People, 102 Ill. 241; State v. Smith, 90 Mo. 37, 1 S. W. 753; Gore v. State, 52 Ark. 285, 12 S. W. 564, 5 L. R. A. 832. [If the accused wilfully absents himself pending the trial, it may proceed in his absence. Gore v. State, 52 Ark. 285, 12 S. W. 564, 5 L. R. A. 832, and note.]

¹ See in general Thompson and Merriam on Juries. It is worthy of note that all that is extant of the legislation of the Plymouth Colony for the first five years, consists of the single regulation, "that all criminal facts, and also all manner of trespasses and debts between man and man, shall be tried by the verdict of twelve honest men, to be impanelled by authority, in form of a jury, upon their oath." 1 Palfrey's New England, 340. [Upon right to trial by jury, see Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 843, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629, and note to 42 L. ed. U. S. 1361. The right to trial by jury may be conditioned upon furnishing an affidavit of merits in actions ex contractu. Fidelity

& Deposit Co. v. United States, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120 (Dec. 1, 1902).]

² Cases of contempt of court were never triable by jury; and the object of the power would be defeated in many cases if they were. The power to punish contempts summarily is incident to courts of record. King v. Almon, 8 St. Trials, 59; Respublica v. Oswald, 1 Dall. 519, 1 Am. Dec. 246; Mariner v. Dyer, 2 Me. 186; Morrison v. McDonald, 21 Me. 550; State v. White, T. U. P. Chart. 136; Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. 395, 5 Am. Dec. 259; Sanfers v. Metcalf, 1 Tenn. Ch. 419; Clark v. People, 1 Bl. 340, 12 Am. Dec. 177; People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 155, 13 Am. Rep. 528; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 354; Gorham v. Luckett, 6 B. Monr. 338; State v. Woodfin, 6 Ired. 199; Ex parte Adams, 25 Miss. 883; State v. Copp, 15 N. H. 212; State v. Mathews, 37 N. H. 450; Neel v. State, 9 Ark. 259; State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. 103; Middlebrook v. State, 43 Conn. 256; Garrigue v. State, 63 Ind. 239; Chafee v. Quilnick Co., 13 R. I. 442. [Timley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 161, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 815. Upon powers of court to punish for contempt, see note to 22 L. ed. U. S. 235; limits to rule of no review of contempt proceedings, note to 22 L. ed. U. S. 374. Also, Smith v. Speed, — Okla. —, 55 L. R. A. 402. A court of review may cut down an excessive verdict and give judgment for the modified amount without violating the right to a jury trial. Burdick v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 123 Mo. 221, 27 S. W. 453.] This is true of the federal courts. United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Wood. & M. 491. See Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 503; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 283, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. The legislature may designate the cases in which a court may punish summarily. In re Oldham, 89 N. C. 23; State v. McClagherty, 53 W. Va. 250, 10 S. E. Rep. 497. Whether justices of dents to a jury trial, so far, at least, as they can be regarded as tending to the protection of the accused.¹ (a)

the peace may punish contempts in the absence of any statute conferring the power, will perhaps depend on whether the justice's court is or is not deemed a court of record. See Lining v. Bentham, 2 Bay, 1; Re Cooper, 82 Vt. 253; Ex parte Kerrigan, 33 N. J. 345; Rhinehart v. Lance, 43 N. J. 311, 39 Am. Rep. 592. But court commissioners have no such power. In re Remington, 7 Wis. 645; Haight v. Lucia, 39 Wis. 355; Ex parte Perkins, 29 Fed. Rep. 409; nor notaries; Burt v. Pyle, 59 Ind. 898; but see Dodge

v. State, 21 Neb. 272, 31 N. W. 929. Nor can the legislature confer it upon municipal councils. Whitcomb's Case, 120 Mass. 118. As the courts in punishing contempts are dealing with cases which concern their own authority and dignity, and which are likely to suggest, if not to excite, personal feelings and animosities, the case should be plain before they should assume the authority. Bachelder v. Moore, 42 Cal. 415. See Storey v. People, 79 Ill. 45; Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 77; Ex parte Bradley,

¹ See note to p. 590, post. A citizen not in the land or naval service, or in the militia in actual service, cannot be tried by court-martial or military commission, on a charge of discouraging volunteer enlistments or resisting a military conscription. In re Kemp, 16 Wis. 355. See Ex parte Muzzigan, 4 Wall. 2. The constitutional right of trial by jury extends to newly created offences. Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 281; State v. Peterson, 41 Vt. 594. Contra, Thins v. State, 26 Ala. 185 [case of an inferior offence]. But not to offences against city by-laws. McGear v. Woodruff, 33 N. J. 213. Ex parte Schmitt, 24 S. C. 353; Wong v. Astoria, 13 Oreg. 533, 11 Pac. 255; Leberman v. State, 23 Neb. 461, 42 N. W. 410; Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62, 40 N. W. 805. Englin v. City of Madison, 111 Wis. 473, 87 N. W. 598, 55 L. R. A. 593. Otherwise if the offence is a crime. In re Rolfs, 20 Kan. 758, 1 Pac. 523; Creston v. Nye, 74 Iowa, 359, 37 N. W. 777. A provision in an excise law, authorizing the excise board to revoke licenses, is not void as violating the constitutional right of jury trial. People v. Board of Commissioners, 59 N. Y. 92. See Luttrell v. Co. Com'rs, 59 Conn. 321. [A jury may by statute be dispensed with where the defendant pleads guilty, and the court may be empowered to examine witnesses and determine from their testimony what is the degree of the offence. This is true even in capital cases. Hallinger v. Davis, 149 U. S. 314, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; and see note to 36 L. ed. U. S. 985; State v. Army, 97 N. H. 273, 28 Atl. 372, 22 L. R. A. 744; Craig v. State, 49 Ohio St. 415, 30 N. E. 1120, 16 L. R. A. 368. The jury may by law be required to be drawn from a special list secured by a special commissioner by eliminating unfit persons from the general list. People v. Dunn, 157 N. Y. 528, 52 N. E. 572, 43 L. R. A. 247. Fixing of period of sentence is no part of constitutional function of jury of which it cannot be deprived. Miller v. State, 149 Ind. 697, 42 N. E. 891, 40 L. R. A. 139. Statute authorizing dismissal of part of jury and receipt of verdict from remainder is void. McRae v. Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co., 93 Mich. 301, 53 N. W. 591, 17 L. R. A. 750. Where the Constitution gives right to trial by jury in civil cases, it is a violation of that right for the court to take the question of negligence from the jury though the facts are undisputed if different inferences may be drawn from such facts. Snobert v. May, — Oreg. —, 65 Pac. 461, 55 L. R. A. 810. The power of a court to set aside the verdict of a jury as against the weight of evidence is not in conflict with the constitutional right to trial by jury. Hintz v. Mich. Cent. Ry. Co., — Mich. —, 93 N. W. 694.]

(a) [But any State is competent to establish through its constitution a jury of fewer than twelve persons for the trial of criminal charges, and it may probably provide that less than the whole number of jurors may render a verdict. Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 464. M. was tried upon an information filed by the prosecuting attorney of a Utah county, charging him with robbery. He

A petit, petty, or traverse jury is a body of twelve men, who are sworn to try the facts of a case, as they are presented in

7 Wall. 364. If the contempt is in the presence of the court, it may be punished without notice or opportunity for defence. Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. See State v. Gibson, 33 W. Va. 97, 16 S. E. Rep. 58. A libelous publication as to a pending cause may be punished as a contempt. Cooper v. People, 13 Col. 373, 22 Pac. Rep. 790. [The power to punish a party for contempt of court cannot be so used as to deprive him of his right to a defense upon the merits in the principal case. A decree pro confesso entered after striking a party's answer from the files as a punishment for his refusal to obey an order of the court is void for want of due process. Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841, aff. 145 N. Y. 123, 39 N. E. 841. See the whole subject of contempts very fully discussed by Mr. Justice White in delivering the opinion of the court in this case. See, also, Carter v. Commonwealth, 90 Va. 791, 32 S. E. 780, 45 L. R. A. 310; Telegram Newspaper Co. v. Commonwealth, 172 Mass. 244, 62 N. E. 445, 44 L. R. A. 159, 70 Am. St. 280; Dahke v. People, 168 Ill. 102, 48 N. E. 137, 39 L. R. A. 147; Dixon v. People, 168 Ill. 179, 48 N. E. 108, 39 L. R. A. 116; State v. Circuit Court, 97 Wis. 1, 72 N. W. 193, 38 L. R. A. 554, 65 Am. St. 99; Re Huron, 58 Kan. 152, 48 Pac. 574, 36 L. R. A. 822, 62 Am. St. 614, and note in L. R. A.; Coleman v. Roberts, 113 Ala. 323, 21 So. 449, 36 L. R. A. 84, 59 Am. St. 111; Ex parte Senior, 37 Fla. 1, 19 So. 652, 32 L. R. A. 133; Dailey v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 112 Cal. 94, 44 Pac. 458, 32 L. R. A. 273, 53 Am. St. 169; Clair v. State, 40 Neb. 534, 59 N. W. 118, 28 L. R. A. 387; Mullin v. People, 15 Col. 437, 24 Pac. 889, 9 L. R. A. 563, and note, 22 Am. St. 414; Thomas v. People, 14 Col. 254, 23 Pac. 325, 9 L. R. A. 563. Court has no inherent power to prohibit the publication of testimony given before it. Re Shortridge, 90 Cal. 526, 34 Pac. 227, 21 L. R. A. 755, 37 Am. St. 78.]

Charges of vagrancy and disorderly conduct were never triable by jury. See full review by Alvey, J., in State v. Glenn, was tried before a jury composed of but eight jurors, was convicted, sentenced to imprisonment in the State prison, and duly committed.

Section 13, Article 1, of the Constitution of Utah provides: "Offences heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment shall be prosecuted by information after examination and commitment by a magistrate, unless the examination be waived by the accused with the consent of the State, or by indictment, with or without such examination and commitment. The grand jury shall consist of seven persons, five of whom must concur to find an indictment; but no grand jury shall be drawn or summoned unless in the opinion of the judge of the district public interest demands it." Section 19, Article 1, of that Constitution is as follows: "In capital cases the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate. In courts of general jurisdiction, except in capital cases, a jury shall consist of eight jurors. In courts of inferior jurisdiction, a jury shall consist of four jurors. In criminal cases the verdict shall be unanimous. In civil cases three-fourths of the jurors may find a verdict. A jury in civil cases shall be waived unless demanded."

Mr. after incarceration "applied to the supreme court of the State for a writ of habeas corpus, and alleged in his sworn petition that he was a natural-born citizen of the United States, and that his imprisonment was unlawful because he was prosecuted under an information instead of by indictment by a grand jury, and was tried by a jury composed of eight instead of twelve jurors. He specially set up and claimed (1) that to prosecute him by information abridged his privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States, under Article 5 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and also violated section 1 of Article 14 of those Amendments; (2) that a trial by jury of only eight persons abridged his privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States, under Article 6, and also violated section 1 of Article 14 of such Amendments; (3) that a trial by such a jury, and his subsequent imprisonment by reason of the verdict of that jury, deprived him of his

the evidence placed before them. Any less than this number of twelve would not be a common-law jury, and not such a jury

54 Md. 572. Also State v. Anderson, 40 N. J. 224. Petty offences need not be so tried. Ex parte Wooten, 62 Miss. 174; Inwood v. State, 42 Ohio St. 186; Ex parte Marx, 86 Va. 40, 9 S. E. 617. [Nor are breaches of the rules prescribed for the discipline of the national guard. State v. Wagener, 74 Minn. 518, 77 N. W. 424, 42 L. R. A. 749. Nor is a summary proceeding for a restraining order. Ex parte Keeler, 45 S. C. 537, 23 S. E. 895, 31 L. R. A. 678, 55 Am. St. 785. But an offence triable by jury at time of adoption of Constitution cannot subsequently be made triable without jury in the first instance. Miller v. Conn., 88 Va. 618, 14 S. E. 151, 342, 970, 15 L. R. A. 441, and note. The provision being considered does not require trial by jury of offences before consuls under the authority of treaty stipulations, though such offence was committed on the deck of an American vessel. Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 458, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897. Nor can one ordered to leave this country under the Chinese exclusion act object that he was not given a jury trial of his claimed right to remain. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016. The procedure in equity to enforce a mechanics' lien is not in conflict with the constitutional right to trial by jury. Hathorne v. Panama Park Co. — Fla. —, 32 So. 812.] But one may not be imprisoned for two years as an habitual drunkard upon a chamber order. State v. Ryan, 70 Wis. 676, 35 N. W. 822.

[And a commitment until further order of court is valid for indolentness. Ex parte Curtis, 10 Okla. 202, 23 Pac. 993. That right to jury extends to trial of issues of fact in quo warranto proceedings, see Buckman v. State, 34 F. 45, 15 So. 697, 24 L. R. A. 806, and note. But not to actions of book-account. Hall v. Armstrong, 65 Vt. 421, 26 Atl. 522, 20 L. R. A. 306. Nor to assessment of damages for negligence on default of answer. Dean v. Willamette Bridge Co., 22 Oreg. 167, 29 Pac. 440, 15 L. R. A. 514.]

liberty without due process of law, in violation of section 1 of Article 14, which provides that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

"The supreme court of the State, after a hearing of the case, denied the petition for a writ, and remanded the prisoner to the custody of the keeper of the State prison to undergo the remainder of his sentence; and he then sued out a writ of error and brought the case" before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Said that court, speaking by Mr. Justice Peckham: "The objection that the proceeding by information does not amount to due process of law has been heretofore overruled, and must be regarded as settled by the case of Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292. The case has since been frequently approved. Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 322, 691, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 645, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 222, 272, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Hollen v. Hardy, 159 U. S. 366, 384, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 176, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Bullis v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

"But the plaintiff in error contends that the Hurtado case did not decide the question whether the State law violated that clause in the Fourteenth Amendment which provides that no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States. . . . In a Federal court no person can be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless by indictment by a grand jury, with the exceptions stated in the Fifth Amendment. Yet this amendment was held in the Hurtado case not to apply to a prosecution for murder in a State court pursuant to a State law. The claim was made in that case (and referred to in the opinion) that the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment provided an additional security to the individual against oppression by the States themselves, and limited their powers to the same extent as the amendments theretofore adopted had limited the powers of the federal government. By holding that the conviction upon an information was valid, the court necessarily held that the indictment was not necessary; that exemption from trial for an infamous crime, excepting under an indictment, was not one of those privileges of a citizen of the United States which a State was prohibited from abridging. The whole case was probably regarded as involved in the question as to due process of law. The particular objection founded upon the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States is now taken and insisted upon in this case."

as the Constitution guarantees to accused parties, when a less

That the first ten Amendments to the Constitution of the United States "were intended as restraints and limitations upon the powers of the general government, . . . and did not have any effect upon the powers of the respective States . . . has been many times decided," citing Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 83, 131, 166, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 382, 787, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. These cases cite many others to the same effect. That the Fourteenth Amendment did not extend these restrictions to the States was decided in the Slaughter-House Cases, 19 Wall. 86.

In conclusion, Mr. Justice Peckham says: "It appears to us that the questions whether a trial in criminal cases not capital shall be by a jury composed of eight instead of twelve jurors, and whether in case of an infamous crime a person shall only be liable to be tried after presentment or indictment of a grand jury, are eminently proper to be determined by the citizens of each State for themselves, and do not come within the clause of the amendment under consideration, so long as all persons within the jurisdiction of the State are made liable to be proceeded against by the same kind of procedure and to have the same kind of trial, and the equal protection of the laws is secured to them. Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 422, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577. It is emphatically the case of the people by their organic law providing for their own affairs, and we are of opinion they are much better judges of what they ought to have in these respects than any one else can be. The reasons given in the learned and most able opinion of Mr. Justice Mathers, in the Hurtado case, for the judgment therein rendered, apply with equal force in regard to a trial by a jury of less than twelve jurors. The right to be proceeded against only by indictment, and the right to a trial by twelve jurors, are of the same nature, and are subject to the same judgment, and the people in the several States have the same right to provide by their organic law for the change of both or either. Under this construction of the amendment there can be no just fear that the liberties of the citizen will not be carefully protected by the States respectively. It is a case of self-protection, and the people can be trusted to look out and care for themselves. There is no reason to doubt their willingness or their ability to do so, and when providing in their Constitution and legislation for the manner in which civil or criminal actions shall be tried, it is in entire conformity with the character of the Federal government that they should have the right to decide for themselves what shall be the form and character of the procedure in such trials whether there shall be an indictment or an information only, whether there be a jury of twelve or a lesser number, and whether the verdict must be unanimous or not. These are matters which have no relation to the character of the Federal government. As was stated by Mr. Justice Brewer, in delivering the opinion of the court in Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77, the State has full control over the procedure in its courts, both in civil and criminal cases, subject only to the qualification that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution. The legislation in question is not, in our opinion, open to either of these objections.

"Judged by the various cases in this court, we think there is no error in this record, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Utah must therefore be affirmed." To this there was a vigorous dissenting opinion by Mr. Justice Harlan, chiefly upon the ground that the holding of the court made the amendment clause in question only declaratory of the earlier law.]

number is not allowed in express terms (a); and the necessity of a full panel could not be waived—at least in case of felony—even by consent.¹ The infirmity in case of a trial by jury of less than twelve, by consent, would be that the tribunal would be one

¹ Work v. State, 2 Ohio St. 206; Cannell v. People, 18 N. Y. 125; Brown v. State, 8 Blackf. 561; 2 Lead. Cr. Cas. 337; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351. And see State v. Cox, 3 Eng. 436; Murphy v. Commonwealth, 1 Met. (Ky.) 365; Tyze v. Commonwealth, 2 Met. (Ky.) 1; State v. Marshall, 41 Mo. 470; Brown v. State, 16 Ind. 493; Opinions of Judges, 41 N. H. 556; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 225; Dowling's Case, 13 Miss. 664; Tillmann v. Arles, 15 Miss. 373; Vaughan v. Seale, 30 Mo. 590; Kleinschmidt v. Dunphy, 1 Mont. 118; Allen v. State, 54 Ind. 401; State v. Everett, 14 Minn. 447; State v. Lockwood, 43 Wis. 403; State v. Davis, 65 Mo. 484; Williams v. State, 12 Ohio St. 622; Allen v. State, 54 Ind. 401; Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443; 6 N. W. 656; Mays v. Com., 82 Va. 559; Harris v. People, 128 Ill. 355; 21 N. E. 563; State v. Stewart, 89 N. C. 563. In Commonwealth v. Dalley, 12 Cush. 80, it was held that, in a case of misdemeanor, the consent of the defendant that a verdict might be received from eleven jurors was binding upon him, and the verdict was valid. See also State v. Barowsky, 11 Nev. 119; Murphy v. Commonwealth, 1 Met. (Ky.) 365; Connelly v. State, 60 Ala. 89, 31 Am. Rep. 34; State v. Sackett, 39 Minn. 63, 38 N. W. 779. No distinction is made in the last case between felony and misdemeanor in this regard. In Iowa the right to jury trial is regarded as a personal privilege which may be waived. State v. Polsen, 29 Iowa, 133; State v. Kaufman, 51 Iowa, 578, 2 N. W. 275, 33 Am. Rep. 148. But not in case of homicide. State v. Carman, 63 Iowa, 130, 18 N. W. 631. And in Connecticut and Ohio, under statutes permitting a defendant in a criminal case to elect to be tried by the court, his election is held to bind him. State v. Worden, 46 Conn. 549, 33 Am. Rep. 27; Dillingham v. State, 5 Ohio St. 280. Such a statute is valid; Edwards v. State, 45 N. J. L. 419; except as to a capital case. Murphy v. State, 97 Ind. 579. In Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 356, it was decided that if one of the jurors called was an alien, the defendant did not waive the objection by failing to challenge him, if he was not aware of the disqualification; and if the court refused to set aside the verdict on affidavits showing these facts, the judgment upon it would be reversed on error. The case of State v. Quarrel, 2 Bay, 159, is contra. The case of State v. Stone, 3 Ill. 323, in which it was held competent for the court, even in a capital case, to strike off a jurymen after he was sworn, because of alienage, affords some support for Hill v. People. ["Struck" juries are permissible. Lommen v. Minneapolis Gaslight Co., 65 Minn. 196, 68 N. W. 53, 33 L. R. A. 437, 60 Am. St. 450.]

(4) [That a jury composed, as at common law, of twelve jurors was intended by the Sixth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, see Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 349, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; and that their verdict shall be unanimous in all Federal courts where a jury trial is held, see American Pub. Co. v. Fisher, 166 U. S. 494, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618, and Springville v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717. See also Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580. Upon number of jurymen necessary to jury, etc., see note to 14 L. ed. U. S. 394. With regard to grand jury, and that it must, unless otherwise expressly stated in constitution, consist of not less than twelve, whose verdict must be concurred in by twelve, see State v. Hartley, 22 Nev. 342, 40 Pac. 372, 28 L. R. A. 33, and note. Under the constitution of Wyoming providing that the right to a jury trial in criminal cases shall remain inviolate, but that in civil cases a jury may consist of less than twelve, it is held that a statute providing that a verdict might be found in civil cases by an agreement of three-fourths of the jurors is void. First Nat'l Bank of Rock Springs v. Foster, 9 Wyo. 157, 61 Pac. 460, 63 Pac. 1036, 54 L. R. A. 549.]

unknown to the law, created by mere voluntary act of the parties; and it would in effect be an attempt to submit to a species of arbitration the question whether the accused has been guilty of an offence against the State. But in those cases which formerly were not triable by jury, if the legislature provide for such a trial now, they may doubtless create for the purpose a statutory tribunal, composed of any number of persons, and no question of constitutional power or right could arise.

Many of the incidents of a common-law trial by jury are essential elements of the right. The jury must be indifferent between the prisoner and the Commonwealth; and to secure impartiality challenges are allowed, not only for cause,¹ but also peremptory without assigning cause. The jury must also be summoned from the vicinage where the crime is supposed to have been committed;² and the accused will thus have the benefit on his trial

¹ Inability to read and write may be made good cause for challenge. McCampbell v. State, 9 Tex. App. 124, 35 Am. Rep. 726. But not inability to understand English, in New Mexico, in the absence of statute. Terr. v. Romine, 2 New Mexico, 114. See, on the subject of challenges for opinion formed, Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 430, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Palmer v. State, 42 Ohio St. 536; State v. Munckrath, 78 Iowa, 298 43 N. W. 211. [Coughlin v. People, 144 Ill. 140, 33 N. E. 1, 19 L. R. A. 57; and upon challenges generally, notes to 41 L. ed. U. S. 104 and 20 L. ed. U. S. 663.]

² Offences against the United States are to be tried in the district, and those against the State in the county in which they are charged to have been committed: Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443, 5 N. W. 635; but courts are generally empowered, on the application of an accused party, to order a change of venue, where for any reason a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the locality. See Hudson v. State, 3 Cold. 335; Rowan v. State, 30 Wis. 129; State v. Mcney, 10 Iowa, 507; State v. Read, 42 Iowa, 85; Wayrick v. People, 83 Ill. 90; Manly v. State, 52 Ind. 215; Gut v. State, 9 Wall. 35; State v. Abee, 61 N. H. 423. [State v. McCarty, 52 Ohio St. 953, 39 N. E. 1641, 27 L. R. A. 534.] It has been held incompetent to order such a change of venue on the application of the prosecution. Kirk v. State, 1 Cold. 344. See also Wheeler v. State, 24 Wis. 52; Osborn v. State, 24 Ark. 629. [People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 348, 25 Pac. 481, 11 L. R. A. 75.] And in another case in Tennessee it was decided that a statute which permitted offences committed near the boundary line of two counties to be tried in either was an invasion of the constitutional principle stated in the text. Armstrong v. State, 1 Cold. 338. See also State v. Denton, 6 Cold. 539. Conder, State v. Robinson, 14 Minn. 447; Willis v. State, 10 Tex. App. 493. [Statute providing that where the blow is struck outside the state and the stricken one dies within the state, the crime shall be deemed to have been committed at the place of death was sustained in Ex parte McNeely, 36 W. Va. 84, 14 S. E. 436, 15 L. R. A. 226, 32 Am. St. 831. Jury cannot be summoned from country districts to exclusion of residents of city in which crime occurred. Zanone v. State, 97 Tenn. 101, 35 S. W. 711, 35 L. R. A. 556.]

The case of Dana decided by Judge Butchford, when U. S. District Judge for the southern district of New York is of interest in this connection. The "New York Sun," of which Mr. Charles A. Dana was editor-in-chief, published an article reflecting upon the public conduct of an official at Washington. This article was claimed to be a libel. The actual offence, if any, was committed in New York; but a technical publication also took place in

of his own good character and standing with his neighbors, if these he has preserved; and also of such knowledge as the jury may possess of the witnesses who may give evidence against him. He will also be able with more certainty to secure the attendance of his own witnesses. The jury must unanimously concur in the verdict (a). This is a very old requirement in the English common law, and it has been adhered to, notwithstanding very eminent men have assailed it as unwise and inexpedient.¹ And the jurors must be left free to act in accordance with the dictates of their judgment. The final decision of the facts is to rest with them, and interference by the court with a view to coerce them into a verdict against their convictions is unwarrantable and irregular. A judge is not justified in expressing his conviction to the jury that the defendant is guilty upon the evidence adduced.² Still

Washington, by the sale of papers there. The offended party chose to have his complaint tried summarily by a police justice of the latter city, instead of submitting it to a jury required to be indifferent between the parties. A federal commissioner issued a warrant for Mr. Dana's arrest in New York for transportation to Washington for trial; but Judge Blanchford treated the proceeding with little respect, and ordered Mr. Dana's discharge. Matter of Dana, 7 Ben. 1. It would have been a singular result of a revolution where one of the grievances complained of was the assertion of a right to send parties abroad for trial, if it should have been found that an editor might be seized anywhere in the Union and transported by a federal officer to every territory into which his paper might find its way, to be tried in each in succession for offences which consisted in a single act not actually done in any of them. [Upon right of accused to object to local judge for prejudice, see State v. Kent, 4 N. D. 677, 62 N. W. 831, 27 L. R. A. 689.]

¹ For the origin of this principle, see Forsyth, Trial by Jury, c. 11. The requirement of unanimity does not prevail in Scotland, or on the Continent. Among the eminent men who have not approved

it may be mentioned Locke and Jeremy Bentham. See Forsyth, supra; Lieber, Civil Liberty and Self-Government, c. 20. [Unanimity necessary. American Publishing Co. v. Fisher, 166 U. S. 464, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618; Springville City v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.]

² A judge who urges his opinion upon the facts to the jury decides the cause, while avoiding the responsibility. How often would a jury be found bold enough to declare their opinion in opposition to that of the judge upon the bench, whose words would fall upon their ears with all the weight which experience, learning, and commanding position must always carry with them? What lawyer would care to sum up his case, if he knew that the judge, whose words would be so much more influential, was to declare in his favor, or would be bold enough to argue the facts to the jury, if he knew the judge was to declare against him? Blackstone has justly remarked that "in settling and adjusting a question of fact, when intrusted to any single magistrate, partiality and injustice have an ample field to range in; either by boldly asserting that to be proved which is not so, or by more artfully suppressing some circumstances,

(a) [But see the note on Maxwell v. Dow, note (a), page 454, ante. And upon number and agreement of jurors necessary to constitute a valid verdict, see note to 43 L. R. A. 33. See also Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 33 Fla. 608, 15 So. 277, 24 L. R. A. 272, and note. That statute may make majority of three-fourths sufficient in civil cases, where the constitution expressly so provides, see Hess v. White, 9 Utah, 51, 33 Pac. 246, 24 L. R. A. 277.]

less would he be justified in refusing to receive and record the verdict of the jury, because of its being, in his opinion, rendered in favor of the prisoner when it ought not to have been (a).

He discharges his duty of giving instructions to the jury when he informs them what in his view the law is which is applicable to the case before them, and what is essential to constitute the offence charged; and the jury should be left free and unbiased by his opinion to determine for themselves whether the facts in evidence are such as, in the light of the instructions of the judge, make out beyond any reasonable doubt that the accused party is guilty as alleged.¹

How far the jury are to judge of the law as well as of the facts, is a question, a discussion of which we do not propose to enter upon. If it be their choice to do so, they may return specially what facts they find established by the evidence, and allow the court to apply the law to those facts, and thereby to determine whether the party is guilty or not. But they are not obliged in any case to find a special verdict; they have a right to apply for themselves the law to the facts, and to express their own opinion, upon the whole evidence, of the defendant's guilt. Where a stretching and warping others, and distinguishing away the remainder." 3 Bl. Com. 381. These are evils which jury trial is designed to prevent; but the effort must be vain if the judge is to control by his opinion, where the law has given him no power to command. In Lord Campbell's Lives of the Chancellors, c. 181, the author justly condemns the practice with some judges in libel cases, of expressing to the jury their belief in the defendant's guilt. On the trial of parties charged with a libel on the Empress of Russia, Lord Kington, sneering at the late Libel Act, said: "I am bound by my oath to declare my own opinion, and I should forget my duty were I not to say to you that it is a gross libel." Upon this Lord Campbell remarks: "Mr. Fox's act only requires the judges to give their opinion on matters of law in libel cases as in other cases. But did any judge ever say, 'Gentlemen, I am of opinion that this is a wilful, malicious, and atrocious murder?' For a considerable time after the act passed, against the unanimous opposition of the judges, they almost all slyly followed this course. I myself heard one judge say: 'As the legislature requires me to give my own opinion in the present case, I am of opinion that this is a diabolically atrocious libel.'" Upon this subject, see McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 437; State v. McGinnis, 5 Nev. 387; Pittcock v. O'Neil, 63 Pa. St. 253, 3 Am. Rep. 544; People v. Gastro, 75 Mich. 127, 42 N. W. 637.

¹ The independence of the jury, with respect to the matters of fact in issue before them, was settled by Penn's Case, 6 Howell's State Trials, 951, and by Bushell's Case, which grew out of it, and is reported in Vaughan's Reports, 135. A very full account of these cases is also found in Forsyth on Trial by Jury, 337. See Bushell's Case also in Broom's Const. Law, 120, and the valuable note thereto. Bushell was foreman of the jury which refused to find a verdict of guilty at the dictation of the court, and he was punished as for contempt of court for this refusal, but was released on habeas corpus.

(a) [But when verdict is unintelligible or its parts are repugnant the jury may be sent back to correct it. Grant v. State, 33 Fla. 261, 14 So. 757, 23 L. R. A. 723, and note upon correction of verdict.]

general verdict is thus given, the jury necessarily determine in their own mind what the law of the case is;¹ and if their determination is favorable to the prisoner, no mode is known to the law in which it can be reviewed or reversed. A writ of error does not lie on behalf of the Commonwealth to reverse an acquittal, unless expressly given by statute;² nor can a new trial be granted in such a case;³ but neither a writ of error nor a motion for a new trial could remedy an erroneous acquittal by the jury, because, as they do not give reasons for their verdict, the precise grounds for it can never be legally known, and it is always presumable that it was given in favor of the accused because the evidence was not sufficient in degree or satisfactory in character; and no one is at liberty to allege or assume that they have disregarded the law.

Nevertheless, as it is the duty of the court to charge the jury upon the law applicable to the case, it is still an important question whether it is the duty of the jury to receive and act upon the law as given to them by the judge, or whether, on the other hand, his opinion is advisory only, so that they are at liberty either to follow it if it accords with their own convictions, or to disregard it if it does not.

In one class of cases, that is to say, in criminal prosecutions for libels, it is now very generally provided by the State constitutions, or by statute, that the jury shall determine the law and the

¹ "As the main object of the institution of the trial by jury is to guard accused persons against all decisions whatsoever by men invested with any permanent official authority, it is not only a settled principle that the opinion which the judge delivers has no weight but such as the jury choose to give it, but their verdict must besides [unless they see fit to return a special finding] comprehend the whole matter in trial, and decide as well upon the fact as upon the point of law that may arise out of it; in other words, they must pronounce both on the commission of a certain fact, and on the reason which makes such fact to be contrary to law." De Lolme on the Constitution of England, c. 13. In January, 1735, Zenger, the publisher of Zenger's Journal in New York, was informed against for a libel on the governor and other officers of the king in the province. He was defended by Hamilton, a Quaker lawyer from Philadelphia, who relied upon the truth as a defence. The court excluded evidence of the truth as constituting no defence, but Hamilton appealed to the jury as the judges of the law, and secured an acquittal. Street's Council of Revision, 71.

² See State v. Reynolds, 4 Hayw. 110; United States v. Mare, 3 Cranch, 174; People v. Dell, 2 Ill. 257; People v. Royal, 2 Ill. 557; Commonwealth v. Cummings, 3 Cush. 212; People v. Corning, 2 N. Y. 9; State v. Kemp, 17 W. 669; compare State v. Robinson, 27 La. Ann. 673. A constitutional provision, saving "to the defendant the right of appeal" in criminal cases, does not, by implication, preclude the legislature from giving to the prosecution the same right. State v. Tait, 22 Iowa, 143. Compare People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467; State v. Lee, 10 R. 1 494.

³ People v. Comstock, 8 Wend. 549; State v. Brown, 15 Conn. 54; State v. Kanouse, 20 N. J. 115; State v. Burns, 3 Tex. 118; State v. Taylor, 1 Hawks, 462.

facts.¹ How great a change is made in the common law by these provisions it is difficult to say, because the rule of the common law was not very clear upon the authorities; but for that very reason, and because the law of libel was sometimes administered with great harshness, it was certainly proper and highly desirable that a definite and liberal rule should be thus established.²

In all other cases the jury have the clear legal right to return a simple verdict of guilty or not guilty, and in so doing they necessarily decide such questions of law as well as of fact as are involved in the general question of guilt. If their view conduce to an acquittal, their verdict to that effect can neither be reviewed

¹ See Constitutions of Alabama, Connecticut, California, Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas. See post, p. 596, note. That of Maryland makes the jury judges of the law in all criminal cases; and the same rule is established by constitution or statute in some other States. In Hobler v. State, 5 Ga. 444, the following view was taken of such a statute: "Our penal code declares, 'On every trial of a crime or offence contained in this code, or for any crime or offence, the jury shall be judges of the law and the fact, and shall in every case give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty, and on the acquittal of any defendant or prisoner, no new trial shall on any account be granted by the court.' Juries were, at common law, in some sense judges of the law. Having the right of rendering a general verdict, that right involved a judgment on the law as well as the facts, yet not such a judgment as necessarily to control the court. The early commentators on the common law, notwithstanding they concede this right, yet held that it is the duty of the jury to receive the law from the court. Thus Blackstone equivocally writes: 'And such public or open verdict may be either general, guilty or not guilty, or special, setting forth all the circumstances of the case, and praying the judgment of the court whether, for instance, on the facts stated, it be murder or manslaughter, or no crime at all.' This is where they doubt the matter of the law, and therefore choose to leave it to the determination of the court, though they have an unquestionable right of determining upon all the circumstances, and of finding a general verdict, if they think proper so to hazard a breach of their oaths,' &c. 4 Bl. Com. 361; Co. Lit. 228 a; 2 Hale, P. C. 313. Our legislature have left no doubt about this matter. The juries in Georgia can find no special verdict at law. They are declared to be judges of the law and the facts, and are required in every case to give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty; so jealous, and rightfully jealous, were our ancestors of the influence of the State upon the trial of a citizen charged with crime. We are not called upon in this case to determine the relative strength of the judgment of the court and the jury, upon the law in criminal cases, and shall express no opinion thereon. We only say it is the right and duty of the court to declare the law in criminal cases as well as civil, and that it is at the same time the right of the jury to judge of the law as well as of the facts in criminal cases. I would not be understood as holding that it is not the province of the court to give the law of the case distinctly in charge to the jury; it is unquestionably its privilege and its duty to instruct them as to what the law is, and officially to direct their finding as to the law, yet at the same time in such way as not to limit the range of their judgment." See also McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497; Clem v. State, 31 Ind. 480; and post, p. 652, et seq.

² For a condensed history of the struggle in England on this subject, see May's Constitutional History, c. 9. See also Lord Campbell's Lives of the Chancellors, c. 178; Introduction to Speeches of Lord Erskine, edited by James L. High; Fortynth's Trial by Jury, c. 12.

nor set aside. In such a case, therefore, it appears that they pass upon the law as well as the facts, and that their finding is conclusive. If, on the other hand, their view leads them to a verdict of guilty, and it is the opinion of the court that such verdict is against law, the verdict will be set aside and a new trial granted. In such a case, although they have judged of the law, the court sets aside their conclusion as improper and unwarranted. But it is clear that the jury are no more the judges of the law when they acquit than when they condemn, and the different result in the two cases comes from the merciful maxim of the common law, which will not suffer an accused party to be twice put in jeopardy for the same cause, however erroneous may have been the first acquittal. In theory, therefore, the rule of law would seem to be, that it is the duty of the jury to receive and follow the law as delivered to them by the court; and such is the clear weight of authority.¹

There are, however, opposing decisions,² and it is evident that

¹ United States v. Battiste, 2 Sum. 240; Stettinius v. United States, 5 Cranch, C. C. 573; United States v. Morris, 1 Curt. 53; United States v. Riley, 5 Blatch. 204; United States v. Greshouse, 4 Sawyer, 459; Montgomery v. State, 11 Ohio, 427; Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 131; Commonwealth v. Porter, 10 Met. 243; Commonwealth v. Antles, 5 Gray, 185; Commonwealth v. Rock, 10 Gray, 4; State v. Peace, 1 Jones, 251; Handy v. State, 7 Mo. 607; Nels v. State, 2 Tex. 289; State v. Taily, 23 La. Ann. 677; State v. Tisdale, 41 La. Ann. 398, 6 So. 579; People v. Pine, 2 Barb. 568; Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. 603; People v. Finnigan, 1 Park C. R. 147; Safford v. People, 1 Park C. R. 474; McMath v. State, 55 Ga. 303; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 173; McGowan v. State, 9 Yerg. 151; Pleasant v. State, 13 Ark. 390; Montee v. Commonwealth, 3 J. J. Marsh. 162; Commonwealth v. Van Tyl, 1 Met. (Ky.) 1; Perce v. State, 13 N. H. 533; People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 40; Mullinex v. People, 78 Ill. 211; Batre v. State, 18 Ala. 113; reviewing previous cases in the same State. "As the jury have the right, and if required by the prisoner are bound to return a general verdict of guilty or not guilty, they must necessarily, in the discharge of this duty, decide such questions of law as well as of fact as are involved in the general question, and there is no mode in which their opinions upon questions of law can be reviewed by this court or by any other tribunal. But this does not diminish the obligation resting upon the court to explain the law. The instructions of the court in matters of law may safely guide the consciences of the jury, unless they know them to be wrong; and when the jury undertake to decide the law (as they undoubtedly have the power to do) in opposition to the advice of the court, they assume a high responsibility, and should be very careful to see clearly that they are right." Commonwealth v. Knapp, 10 Pick. 496; cited with approval in McGowan v. State, 9 Yerg. 155, and Dale v. State, 10 Yerg. 555. And see Kane v. Commonwealth, 89 Pa. St. 522, 33 Am. Rep. 787; Habersham v. State, 58 Ga. 61, 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 45; Hunt v. State, 51 Ga. 140, 7 S. E. 142. Even where the jury are judges of the law and facts and instructions are only advisory, error in the charge is prejudicial. State v. Rice, 56 Iowa, 431; Hudson v. State, 64 Ind. 428. Even if there is no dispute, a court cannot direct a conviction. United States v. Taylor, 8 McCrary, 590.

² See especially State v. Croteau, 23 Vt. 14, where will be found a very full and carefully considered opinion, holding that at the common law the jury are the judges of the law in criminal cases. See also State v. Wilkinson, 2 Vt. 280; Doss v. Commonwealth, 1 Gratt. 557; State v.

the judicial prerogative to direct conclusively upon the law cannot be carried very far or insisted upon with much pertinacity, when the jury have such complete power to disregard it, without the action degenerating into something like mere scolding. Upon this subject the remarks of Mr. Justice Baldwin, of the Supreme Court of the United States, to a jury assisting him in the trial of a criminal charge, and which are given in the note, seem peculiarly dignified and appropriate, and at the same time to embrace about all that can properly be said to a jury on this subject.¹

Jones, 5 Ala. 606; State v. Snow, 18 Me. 349; State v. Allen, 1 McCord, 625, 10 Am. Dec. 687; Armstrong v. State, 4 Blackf. 247; Warren v. State, 4 Blackf. 150; Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326; Lynch v. State, 9 Ind. 541; Neison v. State, 2 Swan, 482; People v. Thayers, 1 Park. C. R. 596; People v. Vileto, 1 Park. C. R. 903. The subject was largely discussed in People v. Croswell, 3 Johns. Cas. 337. In Virginia, it is said that unless instructions are asked, a court should in general not instruct the jury upon the law; Dejarrette v. Com., 75 Va. 867, and in Maryland it seems to be optional with the court to instruct them. Broh v. State, 45 Md. 356.

"In repeating to you what was said on a former occasion to another jury, that you have the power to decide on the law as well as the facts of this case, and are not bound to find according to our opinion of the law, we feel ourselves constrained to make some explanations not then deemed necessary, but now called for from the course of the defence. You may find a general verdict of guilty or not guilty, as you think proper, or you may find the facts specially, and leave the guilt or innocence of the prisoner to the judgment of the court. If your verdict acquit the prisoner, we cannot grant a new trial, however much we may differ with you as to the law which governs the case; and in this respect a jury are the judges of the law, if they choose to become so. Their judgment is final, not because they settle the law, but because they think it not applicable, or do not choose to apply it to the case.

"But if a jury find a prisoner guilty against the opinion of the court on the law of the case, a new trial will be granted. No court will pronounce a judgment on a prisoner against what they believe to be the law. On an acquittal there is no judgment; and the court do not act, and cannot judge, there remaining nothing to act upon.

"This, then, you will understand to be what is meant by your power to decide on the law; but you will still bear in mind that it is a very old, sound, and valuable maxim in law, that the court answers to questions of law, and the jury to facts. Every day's experience evinces the wisdom of this rule." United States v. Wilson, Baldw. 108. We quote also from an Alabama case: "When the power of juries to find a general verdict, and consequently their right to determine without appeal both law and fact, is admitted, the abstract question whether it is or is not their duty to receive the law from the court becomes rather a question of casuistry or conscience than one of law; nor can we think that anything is gained in the administration of criminal justice by urging the jury to disregard the opinion of the court upon the law of the case. It must, we think, be admitted, that the judge is better qualified to expound the law, from his previous training, than the jury; and in practice, unless he manifests a wanton disregard of the rights of the prisoner, — a circumstance which rarely happens in this age of the world and in this country, — his opinion of the law will be received by the jury as an authoritative exposition, from their conviction of his superior knowledge of the subject. The right of the jury is doubtless one of inestimable value, especially in those cases where it may be supposed that the government has an interest in the conviction of the criminal; but in this country, where the government in all its branches, executive, legislative, and judicial, is created by the people, and is in fact their servant, we are unable to perceive why the jury should be invited or urged to exercise this right contrary to their own convictions of their capacity to do so, without danger of mistake. It appears to us that it is sufficient that it is admitted that it is their peculiar province to determine facts, intents, and purposes, that it is their right to find a general verdict, and consequently that they must determine the law; and whether in the exercise of this right they will distrust the court as expounders of the law, or whether they will receive the law from the court, must be left to their own discretion under the sanction of the path they have taken." State v. Jones, 5 Ala. 672. But as to this case, see Batre v. State, 15 Ala. 113.

One thing more is essential to a proper protection of accused parties, and that is, that one shall not be subject to be twice put in jeopardy upon the same charge. One trial and verdict must, as a general rule, protect him against any subsequent accusation of the same offence,¹ whether the verdict be for or against him,

It cannot be denied that discredit is sometimes brought upon the administration of justice by juries acquitting parties who are sufficiently shown to be guilty, and where, had the trial been by the court, a conviction would have been sure to follow. In such cases it must be supposed that the jury have been controlled by their prejudices or their sympathies. However that may be, it by no means follows that because the machinery of jury trial does not work satisfactorily in every case, we must therefore condemn and abolish the system, or, what is still worse, tolerate it, and yet denounce it as being unworthy of public confidence. The remarks of Lord Erskine, the most distinguished jury lawyer known to English history, may be quoted as peculiarly appropriate in this connection: "It is of the nature of everything that is great and useful, both in the animate and inanimate world, to be wild and irregular, and we must be content to take them with the alloys which belong to them, or live without them. . . . Liberty herself, the last and best gift of God to his creatures, must be taken just as she is. You might pare her down into bashful regularity, shape her into a perfect model of severe, scrupulous law; but she would then be liberty no longer; and you must be content to die under the lash of this inexorable justice which you have exchanged for the banners of freedom."

The province of the jury is sometimes invaded by instructions requiring them to adopt, as absolute conclusions of law, those deductions which they are at liberty to draw from a particular state of facts, if they regard them as reasonable; such as that a homicide must be presumed malicious, unless the defendant proves the contrary; which is a rule contradictory of the results of common observation; or that evidence of a previous good character in the defendant ought to be disregarded, unless the other proof presents a doubtful case; which would deprive an accused party of his chief protection in many cases of false accusations and conspiracies. See People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9; People v. Lamb, 2 Keyes, 399; State v. Henry, 5 Jones (N. C.), 63; Harrington v. State, 19 Ohio St. 263; Silvus v. State, 22 Ohio St. 90; State v. Patterson, 45 Vt. 308; Remsen v. People, 43 N. Y. 6; Kistler v. State, 54 Ind. 409. Upon the presumption of malice in homicide, the reader is referred to the Review of the Trial of Professor Webster, by Hon. Joel Parker, in the North American Review, No. 72, p. 178. See also, upon the functions of judge and jury respectively, the cases of Commonwealth v. Wood, 11 Gray, 86; Maher v. People, 16 Mich. 212; Commonwealth v. Billings, 57 Mass. 405; State v. Patterson, 63 N. C. 520; State v. Newton, 4 Nev. 410. [See, upon the right of the jury to pass upon the law, note to State v. Whitmore in 42 Am. St. Rep. 290-295; 13 Am. Law Reg. 355, and 7 Crim. Law Mag. 662. No more scholarly contribution to the discussion of this general subject of "Law and Fact in Jury Trials" can be found than in the late Professor Thayer's "Preliminary Evidence at the Common Law," c. 5.]

¹ By the same offence is not signified the same ex nomine, but the same criminal act or omission. Hersfield v. State, 11 Tex. App. 207; Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57; State v. Thornton, 37 Mo. 366;

and whether the courts are satisfied with the verdict or not. We shall not attempt in this place to collect together the great number of judicial decisions bearing upon the question of legal jeopardy, and the exceptions to the general rule above stated; for these the reader must be referred to the treatises on criminal law, where the subject will be found to be extensively treated. It will be sufficient for our present purpose to indicate very briefly some general principles.

A person is in legal jeopardy when he is put upon trial, before a court of competent jurisdiction, upon indictment or information which is sufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction, and a jury has been charged with his deliverance.¹ And a jury is

Holt v. State, 38 Ga. 187; Commonwealth v. Hawkins, 11 Bush, 603; People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 3 Pac. 597; People v. Stephens, 79 Cal. 428, 21 Pac. 856; State v. Colgate, 21 Kan. 511, 3 Pac. 346; State v. Mikesell, 70 Iowa, 176, 30 N. W. 474; Hurst v. State, 56 Ala. 604, 6 So. 120; Moore v. State, 71 Ala. 607. [The same act may be an offence against two or more jurisdictions, and each may punish it. Re Chapman, 106 U. S. 661, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Crossley v. California, 108 U. S. 640, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; s. c., below, People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 363, 45 Pac. 844. Where accused is acquitted of the offence charged, he cannot thereafter be prosecuted for perjury in swearing that he did not commit the offence charged. Cooper v. Commonwealth, 106 Ky. 609, 61 S. W. 789, 45 L. R. A. 216. That same act may involve two offences against the State, see Commonwealth v. Vaughn, 101 Ky. 603, 42 S. W. 117, 43 L. R. A. 853, and note thereto in L. R. A. Where putative father is liable to fine, no appeal can be allowed against successful defendant in a bastardy proceeding. State v. Ostwalt, 118 N. C. 129, 24 S. E. 690, 32 L. R. A. 365. Statute giving State right of appeal upon questions of law in criminal cause is valid. State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 59 Atl. 1110, 27 L. R. A. 493, 48 Am. St. 292.]

¹ Commonwealth v. Cook, 6 S. & R. 554; State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. 24; Williams v. Commonwealth, 2 Gratt. 598; People v. McGowan, 17 Wend. 383; Mounts v. State, 14 Ohio, 235; Price v. State, 13 Ohio 423; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 292; State v. Nelson, 26 Ind. 356; State v. Spier, 1 Dev. 491; State v. Ephraim,

2 Dev. & Bat. 162; Commonwealth v. Tuck, 20 Pick. 356; People v. Webb, 28 Cal. 467; People v. Cook, 10 Mich. 164; State v. Ned, 7 Port. 217; State v. Callendine, 8 Iowa, 258; [State v. Rook, 61 Kan. 382, 59 Pac. 653, 49 L. R. A. 186; State v. Richardson, 47 S. C. 166, 25 S. E. 220, 35 L. R. A. 238.] If a defendant is arraigned before a justice who has jurisdiction, and pleads guilty, and the prosecutor dismisses the case, he has been in jeopardy. Roswell v. State, 111 Ind. 47. It cannot be said, however, that a party is in legal jeopardy in a prosecution brought about by his own procurement; and a former conviction or acquittal is consequently no bar to a second indictment, if the former trial was brought about by the procurement of the defendant, and the conviction or acquittal was the result of fraud or collusion on his part. Commonwealth v. Alderman, 4 Mass. 477; State v. Little, 1 N. H. 257; State v. Lowry, 1 Swan, 35; State v. Green, 16 Iowa, 239. See also State v. Reed, 25 Conn. 292; Bigham v. State, 59 Miss. 529; State v. Simpson, 28 Minn. 66, 9 N. W. 78; McFarland v. State, 68 Wis. 400, 32 N. W. 226. And if a jury is called and sworn, and then discharged for the reason that it is discovered the defendant has not been arraigned, this will not constitute a bar. United States v. Riley, 5 Blatch. 294. In State v. Garvey, 42 Conn. 292, it is held that a prosecution ad prosequi after the jury is sworn is no bar to a new prosecution. "If the prisoner does not claim a verdict, but waives his right to insist upon it." See Hoffman v. State, 20 Md. 425. [See notes to 21 L. ed. U. S. 872, 6 L. ed. U. S.

said to be thus charged when they have been impanelled and sworn.¹ The defendant then becomes entitled to a verdict which shall constitute a bar to a new prosecution; and he cannot be deprived of this bar by a nolle prosequi entered by the prosecuting officer against his will, or by a discharge of the jury and continuance of the cause.²

If, however, the court had no jurisdiction of the cause,³ or if the indictment was so far defective that no valid judgment could be rendered upon it,⁴ or if by any overruling necessity the jury are discharged without a verdict,⁵ which might happen from the 165, 4 L. R. A. 513, and 1 L. R. A. 451. Indefinite suspension of sentence and discharge without recognizance after plea of guilty amounts to a complete loss of power over prisoner, and he cannot subsequently be taken and sentenced. People v. Allen, 155 Ill. 61, 39 N. E. 563, 41 L. R. A. 473; but the court may after sentence suspend in whole or in part the execution thereof, and may at any time thereafter within the term in which such sentence was rendered revoke the suspension of execution. Webster v. State, 58 Ohio St. 916, 51 N. E. 119, 41 L. R. A. 472. See also People v. Monroe Co. Ct., 141 N. Y. 288, 36 N. E. 384, 23 L. R. A. 855. Statute giving complainant in criminal case for illegal fishing a right of appeal in case of acquittal is void. People v. Miner, 144 Ill. 305, 33 N. E. 40, 19 L. R. A. 842, and note.]

¹ McFadden v. Commonwealth, 22 Pa. St. 12; Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 296, 7 Am. Rep. 311; O'Brien v. Commonwealth, 9 Bush, 330, 15 Am. Rep. 715. The jury must be of competent men. If, after the jury is sworn but before any evidence is taken, an incompetent juror is set aside, there has been no jeopardy. People v. Barker, 66 Mich. 277, 27 N. W. 301; State v. Pritchard, 18 Nev. 161. Compare Adams v. State, 39 Ind. 244; Whitmore v. State, 43 Ark. 271.

² People v. Barrett, 2 Calves, 394; Commonwealth v. Tuck, 20 Pick. 365; Mounts v. State, 14 Ohio, 295; State v. Connor, 3 Cal. 311; State v. Callendine, 8 Iowa, 207; Baker v. State, 12 Ohio St. 214; Graham v. State, 44 Ala. 9; State v. Alman, 64 N. C. 354; Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521; Piziño v. State, 29 Tex. App. 150. It is otherwise in Vermont. State v. Champeau, 69 Vt. 319, 30 Am. Rep. 754. A judge cannot order discharge in order to try again upon another complaint. Com. v. Hart, 149 Mass. 7, 20 N. E. 310. [Proof that a juror is sick must be given in open court in order to justify discharge of jury and retent or of prisoner. Telephone message is insufficient. State v. Nelson, 19 R. I. 467, 34 Atl. 990, 35 L. R. A. 550, 61 Am. St. 789. See also Upchurch v. State, 55 Tex. Cr. 624, 38 S. W. 205, 44 L. R. A. 684. Where one in his defence to a prosecution for an assault with intent to murder offers to prove a former conviction of a battery for the same attack, held a good defence. People v. McDonald. — Cal. —, 50 Pac. 1909. But see Reg. v. Morris, 10 Cox C. C. 489, where a prosecution for an assault, afterward resulting in death, is held to be no bar of a prosecution for the felony.]

³ Commonwealth v. Goddard, 13 Mass. 455; People v. Tyler, 7 Mich. 161; Montross v. State, 61 Miss. 429; State v. Shelly, 98 N. C. 673, 4 S. E. 530; Brown v. State, 79 Ga. 324, 4 S. E. 861. Acquittal by court-martial is no bar to a prosecution in the criminal courts. State v. Rankin, 4 Cold. 146; United States v. Cashe, 1 Hughes, 552.

⁴ Gerard v. People, 4 Ill. 363; Pritchett v. State, 2 Sneed, 255; People v. Cook, 10 Mich. 164; Mount v. Commonwealth, 2 Duv. 93; People v. McNealy, 17 Cal. 503; Kohlheimer v. State, 39 Miss. 548; State v. Kason, 20 La. Ann. 48; Black v. State, 38 Ga. 447; Commonwealth v. Brkman, 105 Mass. 53; State v. Ward, 48 Ark. 33, 2 S. W. 161; People v. Clark, 67 Cal. 99, 7 Pac. 178; Garvey's Case, 7 Col. 384, 4 Pac. 705.

⁵ United States v. Perez, 9 Wheat. 579; State v. Ephraim, 2 Dev. & Bat. 165; Commonwealth v. Fells, 9 Lezh. 620; People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. 209;

sickness or death of the judge holding the court;¹ or of a juror;² or the inability of the jury to agree upon a verdict after reasonable time for deliberation and effort;³ or if the term of the court as fixed by law comes to an end before the trial is finished;⁴ or the jury are discharged with the consent of the defendant expressed or implied;⁵ or if, after verdict against the accused, it has been set aside on his motion (a) for a new trial, or on writ of error;⁶

Commonwealth v. Bowden, 9 Mass. 194; Hoffman v. State, 20 Md. 425; Price v. State, 36 Miss. 533. In State v. Wiseman, 32 N. C. 203, the officer in charge of the jury was found to have been conversing with them in a way calculated to influence them unfavorably towards the evidence of the prosecution, and it was held that this was such a case of necessity as authorized the judge to permit a juror to be withdrawn, and that it did not operate as an acquittal. See also State v. Washington, 89 N. C. 535. If a nolle prosequi to an indictment is entered after the jury is sworn, because it is found that the person alleged to have been murdered is misnamed, this is no bar to a new indictment which shall give the name correctly. Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 97.

¹ Nugent v. State, 4 Stew. & Port. 72.

² Hector v. State, 2 Mo. 160; State v. Curtis, 3 Humph. 591; Mahala v. State, 10 Yerg. 532; Commonwealth v. Fells, 9 Leigh, 613; Doss v. State, 97 Ind. 555; State v. Emery, 53 Vt. 84, 7 Atl. 129. [Or from the fact just then brought to the judge's notice that one of the jurors had sat upon the grand jury that returned the indictment. Tompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73. Or was otherwise incompetent. Simmons v. United States, 142 U. S. 148, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.]

³ People v. Goodwin, 18 Johns. 187; Commonwealth v. Olds, 5 Lit. 140; Dubbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 493; Miller v. State, 8 Ind. 325; State v. Walker, 26 Ind. 345; Commonwealth v. Fells, 9 Leigh, 613; Winsor v. The Queen, L. R. 1 Q. B. 289; State v. Prince, 63 N. C. 623; Moseley v. State, 33 Tex. 671; Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 329; Ex parte McLaughlin, 41 Cal. 211, 10 Am. Rep. 272; People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 481, 18 N. W. 555, 19 N. W. 155; Conklin v.

State, 25 Neb. 784, 41 N. W. 788; Powell v. State, 17 Tex. App. 345; State v. Sutfin, 22 W. Va. 771. [Upon discharging jury without a verdict, see notes to 21 L. ed. U. S. 872, and 6 L. ed. U. S. 165. That jury may be discharged when unable to agree, and prisoner may then be retried, see State v. Hager, 61 Kan. 504, 59 Pac. 1680, 48 L. R. A. 254; Re Allison, 13 Col. 625, 22 Pac. 820, 10 L. R. A. 790, 16 Am. St. 224. See also United States v. Perez, 9 Wheaton, 579. The opposite conclusion is reached by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 121 Pa. St. 109, 15 Atl. 466, 6 Am. St. 757; Dreyer v. Illinois. — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.]

⁴ State v. Brooks, 3 Humph. 70; State v. Battle, 7 Ala. 259; Mahala v. State, 10 Yerg. 532; State v. Spier, 1 Dev. 491; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 290. See Whitten v. State, 61 Miss. 717.

⁵ State v. Slack, 6 Ala. 876; Elijah v. State, 1 Humph. 103; Commonwealth v. Stowell, 9 Met. 572; People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 57, 17 Pac. 941; People v. White, 68 Mich. 648, 37 N. W. 34; State v. Parker, 66 Iowa, 586, 24 N. W. 225. As to the effect of jury's separation by defendant's consent, see State v. Ward, 48 Ark. 36, 2 S. W. 191; Hilands v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 1, 2 Atl. 70.

⁶ Kendall v. State, 55 Ala. 492; State v. Blaisdell, 59 N. H. 328; Gannon v. People, 127 Ill. 507, 21 N. E. 625; State v. Brecht, 41 Minn. 50, 42 N. W. 602; People v. Hardisson, 61 Cal. 378. See Com. v. Downing, 150 Mass. 197, 22 N. E. 912. And it seems, if the verdict is so defective that no judgment can be rendered upon it, it may be set aside even against the defendant's objection, and a new trial had. State v. Redman, 17 Iowa, 329.

(a) See Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639, aff. 174 Mass. 399, 54 N. E. 500.

or the judgment thereon been arrested,¹—in any of these cases the accused may again be put upon trial upon the same facts before charged against him, and the proceedings had will constitute no protection. But where the legal bar has once attached, (4) the government cannot avoid it by varying the form of the charge in a new accusation: if the first indictment or information were such that the accused might have been convicted under it on proof of the facts by which the second is sought to be sustained, then the jeopardy which attached on the first must constitute a protection against a trial on the second.² And if a prisoner is acquitted on some of the counts in an indictment, and convicted on others, and a new trial is obtained on his motion, he can be put upon trial a second time on those counts only on which he was before convicted, and is forever discharged from the others.³

¹ Casborus v. People, 13 Johns. 351; State v. Clark, 59 Iowa, 126, 28 N. W. 537. But where the indictment was good, and the judgment was erroneously arrested, the verdict was held to be a bar. State v. Norvell, 2 Yerg. 24. See People v. Webb, 28 Cal. 467. So if the error was in the judgment and not in the prior proceedings, if the judgment is reversed, the prisoner must be discharged. See post, p. 473. But it is competent for the legislature to provide that on reversing the erroneous judgment in such case, the court, if the proper proceedings are regular, shall remand the case for the proper sentence. McKee v. People, 32 N. Y. 239. [Upon correction of sentence and re-sentence, see note to 36 L. ed. U. S. 60.] It is also competent, by statute, in the absence of express constitutional prohibition, to allow an appeal or writ of error to the prosecution, in criminal cases. See cases, p. 462, note 2.

² State v. Cooper, 13 N. J. 350; Commonwealth v. Roby, 12 Pick. 504; People v. McGowan, 17 Wend. 589; Price v. State, 19 Ohio, 423; Leslie v. State, 18 Ohio St. 335; State v. Benham, 7 Conn. 414. See Mitchell v. State, 42 Ohio St. 383; Williams v. Com., 78 Ky. 93; Sims v. State, 65 Miss. 23, 5 So. 525. [Where judge is authorized to discharge jury when a juror becomes sick, such discharge must be in open court and in presence of prisoner; else he will be allowed to plead former jeopardy. Upchurch v. State, 86 Tex. Cr. 634, 38 S. W. 209, 44 L. R. A. 994; State v. Nelson, 19 R. I. 467, 34 Atl. 500, 33 L. R. A. 519, and upon former jeopardy by reason of discharge of jury in prisoner's absence, see note to this case in L. R. A. Where injunction may issue to prevent a prohibited act, punishment for contempt in disobeying the injunction will not prevent a prosecution for the crime. State v. Roby, 142 Ind. 108, 41 N. E. 145, 33 L. R. A. 213, 51 Am. St. 174. The fact that acquittal was secured by bribery of prosecuting attorney does not invalidate plea of former jeopardy. Studer v. State, 129 Ind. 523, 28 N. E. 537, 29 N. E. 26, 16 L. R. A. 225, 28 Am. St. 206.]

³ Campbell v. State, 9 Yerg. 800; State v. Kettle, 2 Tyler, 475; Morris v. State, 8 S. & M. 702; Esmon v. State, 1 Sess. 14; Guenther v. People, 24 N. Y. 103; State v. Kuttelman, 35 Mo. 105; State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 83; State v. Martin, 30 Wis. 213, 11 Am. Rep. 587; United States v. Davenport, Deady, 234, 1 Green, Cr. R. 429; Stuart v. Commonwealth, 28 Gratt. 959; Johnson v. State, 29 Ark. 31; Barnett v. People, 54 Ill. 351; contra, State v. Belhimer, 29 Ohio St. 572. A rule proposed on one count of an indictment after a jury is called and sworn, is a bar to a new indictment for the offence charged therein. Baker v. State, 12 Ohio St. 214; Murphy v. State, 25 Neb. 807, 41 N. W.

(4) [As to when jeopardy attaches, see notes to 4 L. R. A. 543, and 1 L. R. A. 451; also to 21 L. ed. U. S. 572, and to 6 L. ed. U. S. 165.]

Excessive Fines and Cruel and Unusual Punishments.

It is also a constitutional requirement that excessive bail shall not be required, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

Within such bounds as may be prescribed by law, the question what fine shall be imposed is one addressed to the discretion of the court. But it is a discretion to be judicially exercised; and there may be cases in which a punishment, though not beyond any limit fixed by statute, is nevertheless so clearly excessive as to be erroneous in law.¹ A fine should have some reference to the party's ability to pay it. By Magna Charta a freeman was not to be amerced for a small fault, but according to the degree of the fault, and for a great crime in proportion to the heinousness of it, saving to him his contournement; and after the same manner a merchant, saving to him his merchandise. And a villein was to be amerced after the same manner, saving to him his wainage. The merciful spirit of these provisions addresses itself to the criminal courts of the American States through the provisions of their constitutions.

702. See Com. v. Dunster, 145 Mass. 101, 13 N. E. 350. [On the subject of double jeopardy, see 50 Cent. L. Jour. 143.]

¹ The subject of cruel and unusual punishments was somewhat considered in Barker v. People, 3 Cow. 680, where the opinion was expressed by Chancellor Sanford that a forfeiture of fundamental right—e. g. the right to jury trial—could not be imposed as a punishment, but that a forfeiture of the right to hold office might be. But such a forfeiture could not be imposed without giving a right to trial in the usual mode. Commonwealth v. Jones, 10 Bush. 725. In Done v. People, 5 Park. 334, the cruel punishments of colonial times, such as burning alive and breaking on the wheel, were enumerated by W. W. Campbell, J., who was of opinion that they must be regarded as "cruel" if not "unusual," and therefore as being now forbidden. [And where the criminal is convicted of many offences, he cannot complain if the punishments therefor are cumulated, provided the punishment for a single offence is not excessive, although the aggregate punishments may amount to imprisonment for a term much greater than his natural life. O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; but see the vigorous dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Field in this case, and also the dissenting opinion of Harlan and Brewer, JJ. And see also State v. Whitaker, 48 La. Ann. 327, 19 So. 457, 35 L. R. A. 661, and note thereto in L. R. A., in which cases upon "cruel and unusual punishment" are collected. In Whitaker's case it was held, that a total imprisonment for 2190 days or fine of $720 for 72 violations imposed within one hour and forty minutes, though upon separate complaints, was within the prohibition of the constitution. Also Ex parte Keeler, 45 S. C. 337, 23 S. E. 835, 31 L. R. A. 678, 55 Am. St. 785. See also People ex rel. Tweed v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 553, 19 Am. Rep. 211, upon cumulative punishment, holding that punishment for several offences charged in separate counts of same indictment is unlawful; that punishment for one offence exhausts the power of the court under that indictment. Life imprisonment for constructive rape is not invalid, even though the legal age of consent is as high as sixteen years, and the female lacked only a few months of that age, and actually consented, and the male was a mere youth. Com. v. Murphy, 165 Mass. 68, 42 N. E. 564, 30 L. R. A. 764, 52 Am. St. 493.]

It has been decided by the Supreme Court of Connecticut that it was not competent in the punishment of a common-law offence to inflict fine and imprisonment without limitation. The precedent, it was said, cited by counsel contending for the opposite doctrine, of the punishment for a libel upon Lord Chancellor Bacon, was deprived of all force of authority by the circumstances attending it; the extravagance of the punishment being clearly referable to the temper of the times. "The common law can never require a fine to the extent of the offender's goods and chattels, or sentence of imprisonment for life. The punishment is both uncertain and unnecessary. It is no more difficult to limit the imprisonment of an atrocious offender to an adequate number of years than to prescribe a limited punishment for minor offences. And when there exists no firmly established practice, and public necessity or convenience does not imperiously demand the principle contended for, it cannot be justified by the common law, as it wants the main ingredients on which that law is founded. Indefinite punishments are fraught with danger, and ought not to be admitted unless the written law should authorize them."¹

It is certainly difficult to determine precisely what is meant by cruel and unusual punishments. Probably any punishment declared by statute for an offence which was punishable in the same way at the common law could not be regarded as cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. And probably any new statutory offence may be punished to the extent and in the mode permitted by the common law for offences of similar nature. But these degrading punishments which in any State had become obsolete before its existing constitution was adopted, we think may well be held forbidden by it as cruel and unusual. We may well doubt the right to establish the whipping-post and the pillory in States where they were never recognized as instruments of pun-

¹ Per Hosmer, Ch. J., in State v. Danforth, 3 Conn. 112-116. Peters, J., in the same case, pp. 122-124, collects a number of cases in which perpetual imprisonment was awarded at the common law, but, as his associates believed, unwarrantably. Compare Blydenburg v. Miles, 36 Conn. 484. [Fixing by statute the minimum fine to be collected for a certain offence, but not the maximum, is not the imposition of an excessive fine. Southern Express Co. v. Comm., 92 Va. 59, 22 S. E. 809, 41 L. R. A. 436. Prisoner upon conviction may, where statute authorizes, be sentenced for the maximum period with power to prison managers to release upon parole and good behavior after satisfactory conduct during minimum period. Miller v. State, 149 Ind. 607, 49 N. E. 894, 40 L. R. A. 109; People v. Bd. of Managers, &c., 148 Ill. 413, 36 N. E. 73, 23 L. R. A. 130; contra, People v. Cummings, 88 Mich. 249, 50 N. W. 313, 14 L. R. A. 285, and note. A statute providing for a more severe punishment for a second conviction is not for that reason invalid. Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179, aff. 121 Mo. 514, 26 S. W. 345.]

ishment, or in States whose constitutions, revised since public opinion had banished them, have forbidden cruel and unusual punishment. In such States the public sentiment must be regarded as having condemned them as "cruel," and any punishment which if ever employed at all, has become altogether obsolete, must certainly be looked upon as "unusual."¹

A defendant, however, in any case is entitled to have the precise punishment meted out to him which the law provides, and no other. A different punishment cannot be substituted on the ground of its being less in severity. Sentence to transportation for a capital offence would be void; and as the error in such a case would be in the judgment itself, the prisoner would be entitled to his discharge, and could not be tried again.² If, however, the legal punishment consists of two distinct and severable

¹ In New Mexico it has been decided that flogging may be made the punishment for horse-stealing: Garcia v. Territory, 1 New Mex. 415; so for wife-beating. Foot v. State, 53 Md. 264. For the non-payment of fine for unlicensed liquor selling, street labor may be imposed. Ex parte Bedell, 20 Mo. App. 125. See further as to unusual punishments, Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44, 9 S. W. 10; People v. Haug, 68 Mich. 549, 37 N. W. 21.

The power in prison keepers to inflict corporal punishment for the misconduct of convicts cannot be delegated to contractors for convict labor or their managers. Cornell v. State, 6 Lea. 624. The keeper of a workhouse may not be authorized to inflict such punishment at his discretion. Smith v. State, 8 Lea. 744. A jailer may not chain up a prisoner for several hours by the neck so he cannot lie or sit. In re Birdsong, 89 Fed. Rep. 609. [Punishment of death may be inflicted by electric shock. Re Kemmler, 135 U. S. 439, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930, aff. People v. Durston, 55 Hun, 64, 119 N. Y. 569, 24 N. E. 6, 10 Am. St. 859; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159, aff. 121 N. Y. 250, 24 N. E. 465, 125 N. Y. 506, 26 N. E. 923; Re Storti, 178 Mass. 549, 60 N. E. 210, 62 L. R. A. 520. Permitting the warden to fix the particular day of execution does not render statute void upon the theory that such permission tends to aggravate the punishment. Id. A sentence fixing a maximum and minimum term of imprisonment, the prison board to determine when the prisoner shall be discharged within such limits, is not within the constitutional prohibition. Miller v. State, 149 Ind. 607, 40 N. E. 894, 40 L. R. A. 109. An act of Congress providing for the arrest, trial, and punishment of one as a "suspicious person" is invalid as providing a punishment without an offence, which is cruel and unusual. Stentzenburgh v. Frazier, 13 D. C. App. 226, 48 L. R. A. 220. An act providing the death penalty for assault upon a railway train with intent to commit robbery or other felony, does not prescribe a cruel or unusual punishment. Terr. of New Mexico v. Ketchum, 10 N. M. 718, 65 Pac. 164, 56 L. R. A. 90. A statute providing that any tramp who shall threaten to do injury to the person or property of any person shall be imprisoned in the State penitentiary, is not one providing for cruel or unusual punishments. State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 292, 58 N. E. 672, 81 Am. St. 626.]

² Bourne v. The King, 7 Ad. & El. 58; Lowenberg v. People, 27 N. Y. 336; Hartung v. People, 26 N. Y. 167; Elliot v. People, 13 Mich. 825; Ex parte Page, 49 Mo. 201; Christian v. Commonwealth, 5 Met. 539; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 133; McDonald v. State, 45 Md. 90. See also Whitebread v. The Queen, 7 Q. B. 582; Rex v. Fletcher, Russ. & Ry. 58. It is competent, however, to provide by statute that on setting aside an erroneous sentence the court shall proceed to impose the sentence which the law required. Wilson v. People, 24 Mich. 410; McDonald v. State, 45 Md. 90.

things, — as fine and imprisonment, — the imposition of either is legal, and the defendant cannot be heard to complain that the other was not imposed also.¹

The Right to Counsel. (a)

Perhaps the privilege most important to the person accused of crime, connected with his trial, is that to be defended by counsel. From very early days a class of men who have made the laws of their country their special study, and who have been accepted for the confidence of the court in their learning and integrity, have been set apart as officers of the court, whose special duty it should be to render aid to the parties and the court² in the application of the law to legal controversies. These persons, before entering upon their employment, were to take an oath of fidelity to the courts whose officers they were, and to their clients;³ and

¹ See Kane v. People, 8 Wend. 203. When one has been convicted and sentenced to confinement, it is not competent, after the period of his sentence has expired, to detain him longer in punishment for misbehavior in prison; and a statute to that effect is unwarranted. Gross v. Rice, 71 Me. 241. The whole measure of punishment must be imposed at once. The judgment cannot be split up. People v. Ficker, 61 Mich. 110, 114, 27 N. W. 569, 28 N. W. 83. Cumulative punishment may be imposed: Lillard v. State, 17 Tex. App. 114; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140. 2 Atl. 383 [sustained in 144 U. S. 323 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603 but with very vigorous dissenting opinions from Field, Harlan, and Brewer, JJ. But see State v. Whitaker, 48 La. Ann. 627, 19 So. 457, 35 L. R. A. 511; Ex parte Keeler, 45 S. C. 537, 25 S. E. 865, 31 L. R. A. 678, 55 Am. St. 785, and People ex rel. Tweed v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 539, 19 Am. Rep. 211]; so increased punishment for second offence may be imposed. Kelly v. People, 115 Ill. 583, 4 N. E. 644; Chenoweth v. Com., 11 Ky. L. 521, 12 S. W. 585.

² In Commonwealth v. Knapp, 9 Pick. 498, the court denied the application of the defendant that Mr. Rantoul should be assigned as his counsel, because, though admitted to the Common Pleas, he was not yet an attorney of the Supreme Court, and that court, consequently, had not the usual control over him; and, besides, counsel was to give aid to the court as well as to the prisoner, and therefore it was proper that a person of more legal experience should be assigned.

³ "Every counsellor is chargeable by the oath that he shall do no wrong nor falsity,

(a) [The right to compulsory process by which to secure witnesses in his favor is also an important right of the accused. Where the constitution secures this right, the witnesses thus compelled to appear do not thereby become entitled to claim their fees of the county. Henderson, Petitioner, in State v. Evans, 51 S. C. 331, 29 S. E. 5, 40 L. R. A. 426; Whittle v. Sandida Co., 59 S. C. 554, 38 S. E. 108. Where important witnesses for the accused are absent from the court without his fault, a continuance must be granted until they can be brought in. Ryder v. State, 100 Ga. 529, 28 S. E. 213, 38 L. R. A. 721, 23 Am. St. 534. But after a reasonable time and opportunity have been allowed for this purpose, the prosecution may be allowed to proceed upon the admission of the prosecutor that the witnesses for the accused would, if present, testify as accused alleges they would. It is not necessary to admit that such testimony is true. Arkins v. Commonwealth 98 Ky. 539, 35 S. W. 945, 32 L. R. A. 108; Hoyt v. People, 110 Ill. 583, 20 N. E. 315, 16 L. R. A. 239, and note; State v. Gibbs, 10 Mont. 213, 23 Pac. 289, 10 L. R. A. 749, and note.

it was their special duty to see that no wrong was done their clients by means of false or prejudiced witnesses, or through the perversion or misapplication of the law by the court. Strangely enough, however, the aid of this profession was denied in the very cases in which it was needed most, and it has cost a long struggle, continuing even into the present century, to rid the English law of one of its most horrible features. In civil causes and on the trial of charges of misdemeanor, the parties were entitled to the aid of counsel in eliciting the facts, and in presenting both the facts and the law to the court and jury; but when the government charged a person with treason or felony, he was denied this privilege.¹ Only such legal questions contrary to his knowledge, but shall plead for his client the best he can, according to his understanding." Mirror of Justice, c. 2, § 5. The oath in Pennsylvania, on the admission of an attorney to the bar, "to behave himself in the office of an attorney, according to the best of his learning and ability, and with all good fidelity, as well to the court as to the client; that he will use no falsehood, nor delay any man's cause, for lucre or malice," is said, by Mr. Sharswood, to present a comprehensive summary of his duties as a practitioner. Sharswood's Legal Ethics, p. 3. The advocate's oath, in Geneva, was as follows: "I solemnly swear, before Almighty God, to be faithful to the Republic, and to the canton of Geneva; never to depart from the respect due to the tribunals and authorities; never to counsel or maintain a cause which does not appear to be just or equitable, unless it be the defence of an accused person; never to employ, knowingly, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to me, any means contrary to truth, and never to seek to mislead the judges by any artifice or false statement of facts or law; to abstain from all offensive personality, and to advance no fact contrary to the honor and reputation of the parties, if it be not indispensable to the cause with which I may be charged; not to encourage either the commencement or continuance of a suit from any motives of passion or interest; nor to reject, for any consideration personal to myself, the cause of the weak, the stranger, or the oppressed." In "The Lawyer's Oath, its Obligations, and some of the Duties springing out of them," by D. Bethune Duffield, Esq., a masterly analysis is given of this oath; and he well says of it: "Here you have the creed of an upright and honorable lawyer. The clear, terse, and lofty language in which it is expressed needs no argument to elucidate its principles, no eloquence to enforce its obligations. It has in it the sacred savor of divine inspiration, and sounds almost like a restored reading from Sinai's original, but broken tablets."

¹ When an ignorant person, unaccustomed to public assemblies, and perhaps feeble in body or in intellect, was put upon trial on a charge which, whether true or false, might speedily consign him to an ignominious death, with able counsel arrayed against him, and all the machinery of the law ready to be employed in bringing forward the evidence of circumstances indicating guilt, it is painful to contemplate the barbarity which could deny him professional aid. Especially when in most cases he would be imprisoned immediately on being apprehended, and would thereby be prevented from making even the feeble preparations which might otherwise have been within his power. A "trial" under such circumstances would be only a judicial murder in very many cases. The spirit in which the old law was administered may be judged of from the case of Sir William Parkins, tried for high treason before Lord Holt and his associates in 1695, after the statute 7 Wm. III. c. 3. allowing counsel to prisoners indicted for treason, had been passed, but one day before it was to take effect. He prayed to be allowed counsel, and quoted the preamble to the statute that such allowance was just and reasonable. His prayer was denied; Lord as he could suggest was counsel allowed to argue for him; and this was but a poor privilege to one who was himself unlearned in the law, and who, as he could not fail to perceive the monstrous injustice of the whole proceeding, would be quite likely to accept any perversion of the law that might occur in the course of it as regular and proper, because quite in the spirit that denied him a defence. Only after the Revolution of 1688 was a full defence allowed on trials for treason,¹ and not until 1836

Holt declaring that he must administer the law as he found it, and could not anticipate the operation of an act of Parliament, even by a single day. The accused was convicted and executed. See Lieber's Hermeneutics, c. 4, § 15; Sedgwick on Stat. and Const. Law, 81. In proceedings by the Inquisition against suspected heretics the aid of counsel was expressly prohibited. Lea's Superstition and Force, 377.

¹ See an account of the final passage of this bill in Macaulay's "England," Vol. IV. c. 21. It is surprising that the effort to extend the same right to all persons accused of felony was so strenuously resisted afterwards, and that, too, notwithstanding the best lawyers in the realm admitted its importance and justice. "I have myself," said Mr. Scarlett, "often seen persons I thought innocent convicted, and the guilty escape, for want of some acute and intelligent counsel to show the bearings of the different circumstances on the conduct and situation of the prisoner." House of Commons Debates, April 25, 1826. "It has lately been my lot," said Mr. Denman, on the same occasion, "to try two prisoners who were deaf and dumb, and who could only be made to understand what was passing by the signs of their friends. The cases were clear and simple; but if they had been circumstantial cases, in what a situation would the judge and jury be placed, when the prisoner could have no counsel to plead for him." The cases looked clear and simple to Mr. Denman; but how could he know they would not have looked otherwise, had the coloring of the prosecution been relieved by a counter-presentation for the defence? See Sydney Smith's article on Counsel for Prisoners, 45 Edinb. Rev. p. 74; Works, Vol. II. p. 353. The plausible objection to extending the right was, that the judge would be counsel for the prisoner, — a pure fallacy at the best, and, with some judges, a frightful mockery. Baron Garraux, in a charge to a grand jury, said: "It has been truly said that, in criminal cases, judges were counsel for the prisoners. So, undoubtedly, they were, as far as they could be, to prevent undue prejudice, to guard against improper influence being excited against prisoners; but it was impossible for them to go further than this, for they could not suggest the course of defence prisoners ought to pursue, for judges only saw the deposition so short a time before the accused appeared at the bar of their country, that it was quite impossible for them to act fully in that capacity."

If one would see how easily, and yet in what a shocking manner, a judge might pervert the law and the evidence, and act the part of both prosecutor and king's counsel, while assuming to be counsel for the prisoner, he need not go further back than the early trials in our own country, and he is referred for a specimen to the trials of Robert Tucker and others for piracy, before Chief Justice Trot at Charleston, S. C., in 1718, as reported in 6 State Trials (Emlyn), 159 et seq. Especially may he there see how the statement of prisoners in one case, to which no credit was given for their exculpation, was used as hearsay evidence to condemn a prisoner in another case. All these abuses would have been checked, perhaps altogether prevented, had the prisoners had able and fearless counsel. But without counsel for the defence, and under such a judge, the witnesses were not free to testify, the prisoners could not safely make even the most honest explanation, and the jury, when they retired, could only feel that returning a verdict in accordance with the opinion of the judge was merely matter of form. Sydney Smith's lecture on "The judge that smites was the same privilege extended to persons accused of other felonies.¹

With us it is a universal principle of constitutional law, that the prisoner shall be allowed a defence by counsel. And generally it will be found that the humanity of the law has provided that, if the prisoner is unable to employ counsel, the court may designate some one to defend him who shall be paid by the government; but when no such provision is made, it is a duty which counsel so designated owes to his profession, to the court engaged in the trial, and to the cause of humanity and justice, not to withhold his assistance nor spare his best exertions, in the defence of one who has the double misfortune to be stricken by poverty and accused of crime. No one is at liberty to decline such an appointment,² and few, it is to be hoped, would be disposed to do so.

In guaranteeing to parties accused of crime the right to the aid of counsel, the Constitution secures it with all its accustomed incidents. Among these is that shield of protection which is thrown around the confidence the relation of counsel and client requires, and which does not permit the disclosure by the former, even in the courts of justice, of communications which may have contrary to the law" is worthy of being carefully pondered in this connection. "If ever a nation was happy, if ever a nation was visibly blessed by God, if ever a nation was honored abroad, and left at home under a government (which we can now conscientiously call a liberal government) to the full career of talent, industry, and vigor, we are at this moment that people, and this is our happy lot. First, the Gospel has done it, and then justice has done it; and he who thinks it his duty that this happy condition of existence may remain, must guard the piety of these times, and he must watch over the spirit of justice which exists in these times. First, he must take care that the altars of God are not polluted, that the Christian faith is retained in purity and in perfection; and then, turning to human affairs, let him strive for spotless, incorruptible justice; praising, honoring, and loving the just judge, and abhorring as the worst enemy of mankind him who is placed there to judge after the law, and who smites contrary to the law."

¹ By statute 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 114; 4 Cooley's Bl. Com. 355; May's Const. Hist. c. 18.

² Vice v. Hamilton County, 19 Ill. 18;

Wayne Co. v. Waller, 90 Pa. St. 99, 35 Am. Rep. 636; House v. White, 5 Bax 690. It has been held that, in the absence of express statutory provisions, counties are not obliged to compensate counsel assigned by the court to defend poor prisoners. Bacon v. Wayne County, 1 Mich. 461; Wayne Co. v. Waller, 90 Pa. St. 99, 35 Am. Rep. 636. But there are several cases to the contrary. Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 15; Hall v. Washington County, 2 Greene (Iowa), 473; Carpenter v. Dane County, 9 Wis. 277. But we think a court has a right to require the service, whether compensation is to be made or not; and that counsel who should decline to perform it, for no other reason than that the law does not provide pecuniary compensation, is unworthy to hold his responsible office in the administration of justice. Said Chief Justice Hale in one case: "Although sergeants have a monopoly of practice in the Common Pleas, they have a right to practice, and do practice, at the bar; and if we were to assign one of them as counsel, and he was to refuse to act, we should make bold to commit him to prison." Life of Chief Justice Hale, in Campbell's Lives of the Chief Justices, Vol. II.

been made to him by the latter, with a view to pending or anticipated litigation. This is the client's privilege; the counsel cannot waive it; and the court would not permit the disclosure even if the client were not present to take the objection.¹

Having once engaged in a cause, the counsel is not afterwards at liberty to withdraw from it without the consent of his client and of the court; and even though he may be impressed with a belief in his client's guilt, it will nevertheless be his duty to see that a conviction is not secured contrary to the law.² The worst

¹ The history and reason of the rule which exempts counsel from disclosing professional communications are well stated in Whiting v. Barney, 50 N. Y. 339. And see 1 Phil. Ev., by Cowen, Hill, and Edwards, 150 et seq.; Earle v. Grant, 48 Vt. 115; Machette v. Wardless, 2 Col. 163. The privilege would not cover communications made, not with a view to professional assistance, but in order to induce the attorney to act in a criminal act. People v. Blakely, 1 Park. Cr. R. 176; Bank of Utica v. Mersereau, 8 Barb. Ch. 398. And see the analogous case of Hewitt v. Prince, 21 Wend. 73. Nor communications before a crime with a view to being guided as to it. Orman v. State, 22 Tex. App. 594, 3 S. W. 428; People v. Van Alstine, 57 Mich. 50, 23 N. W. 594. But it is not confined to cases where litigation is begun or contemplated: Rout v. Wright, 84 N. Y. 72; or to cases where a fee is received: Andrews v. Simms, 53 Ark. 771; Bacon v. Fisher, 80 N. Y. 334, 53 Am. Rep. 527; [Brady v. Garvin, 105 Wis. 625, 81 N. W. 1038, 48 L. R. A. 539;] and is not waived by the party becoming a witness for himself. Dettenhofer v. State, 64 Ohio St. 91, 32 Am. Rep. 322; Sutton v. State, 16 Tex. App. 490; but see Jones v. State, 65 Miss. 173, 3 So. 379. Communications to a State's attorney with a view to a prosecution are privileged. Vogel v. Gratz, 110 U. S. 311, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12. Communications extraneous or impertinent to the subject-matter of the professional consultation are not privileged. Dixon v. Parmelee, 2 Vt. 185. See Brandon v. Gowing, 7 Rich. 459. Or communications publicly made in the presence of others. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Reynolds, 36 Mich. 52. See Perkins v. Grey, 55 Miss. 153; M. East v. Hardin, 22 S. C. 9; [Kramer v. Kister, 187 Pa.

227, 40 Atl. 1008, 44 L. R. A. 482.] Or to the communications made to or by the attorney when acting for both parties. Hanson v. Doherty, 109 Ind. 37, 6 N. E. 782; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157, 28 N. W. 805; Goodwin, &c. Co.'s Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 514, 12 Atl. 785. Or to an attorney if he acts as a mere scrivener. Smith v. Long, 103 Ill. 485; Ted v. Munson, 53 Conn. 579, 4 Atl. 99. Or facts within the personal knowledge of counsel, such as the dating of a bond. Rundle v. Foster, 3 Tenn. Ch. 558. The privilege extends to communications by other means than words: State v. Dawson, 90 Mo. 149, 1 S. W. 827; and to communications to a legal adviser, who is not a licensed attorney. Benedict v. State, 44 Ohio St. 679, 11 N. E. 125; Ladd v. Rice, 57 N. H. 274. [But see 1 Greenleaf on Evidence, ed. 19, § 239, and cases cited. See also People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277, 27 N. W. 539, 1 Am. St. 501. It is waived by asking the attorney who drew a will to be a witness to it. Matter of Coleman, 111 N. Y. 229, 19 N. E. 71.]

It has been intimated in New York that the statute making parties witnesses has done away with the rule which protects professional communications. Mitchell's Case, 12 Abb. Pr. R. 249; note to 1 Phil. Ev., by Cowen, Hill, and Edwards, 159 (margin). Supposing this to be so in civil cases, the protection would still be the same in the case of persons charged with crime, for such persons cannot be compelled to give evidence against themselves, so that the reason for protecting professional confidence is the same as for civil.

² If one would consider this duty and the limitations upon it fairly, he should read the criticisms upon the conduct of Mr. Charles Phillips on the trial of Courvoisier for the murder of Lord William criminal is entitled to be judged by the laws; and if his conviction is secured by means of a perversion of the law, the injury to the cause of public justice will be more serious and lasting in its results than his being allowed to escape altogether.¹

But how persistent counsel may be in pressing for the acquittal of his client, and to what extent he may be justified in throwing his own personal character as a weight in the scale of justice, are questions of ethics rather than of law. No counsel is justifiable who defends even a just cause with the weapons of fraud and falsehood, and no man on the other hand can excuse himself for accepting the confidence of the accused, and then betraying it by a feeble and heartless defence. And in criminal cases we think the court may sometimes have a duty to perform in seeing that

Russell. See Sharswood, Legal Ethics, 46; Littel, Living Age, Vol. XXIV, pp. 179, 230; Vol. XXV, pp. 289, 306; West. Rev. Vol. XXXV, p. 1.

¹ There may be cases in which it will become the duty of counsel to interpose between the court and the accused, and fearlessly to brave all consequences personal to himself, where it appears to him that in no other mode can the law be vindicated and justice done to his client; but these cases are so rare, that doubtless they will stand out in judicial history as notable exceptions to the ready obedience which the bar should yield to the authority of the court. The famous scene between Mr. Justice Barber and Mr. Erskine, on the trial of the Dean of St. Asaph for libel, — 5 Campbell's Lives of the Chancellors, c. 158; Erskine's Speeches, by Jas. L. High, Vol. I. p. 242, — will readily occur to the reader as one of the exceptional cases. Lord Campbell says of Erskine's conduct: "This noble stand for the independence of the bar would alone have entitled Erskine to the statue which the profession affectionately erected to his memory in Lincoln's Inn Hall. We are to admire the decency and propriety of his demeanor during the struggle, no less than its spirit, and the felicitous precision with which he meted out the requisite and justifiable portion of defiance. His example has had a salutary effect in illustrating and establishing the relative duties of judge and advocate in England." And elsewhere, in speaking of Mr. Fox's Libel Act, he makes the following somewhat extravagant remark: "I have said, and I still think, that this great constitutional triumph is mainly to be ascribed to Lord Camden, who had been fighting in the cause for half a century, and uttered his last words in the House of Lords in its support; but had he not received the invaluable assistance of Erskine, as counsel for the Dean of St. Asaph, the Star Chamber might have been re-established in this country." And Lord Brougham says of Erskine: "He was an undaunted man; he was an undaunted advocate. To no court did he ever truckle, neither to the court of the King, neither to the court of the King's Judges. Their smiles and their frowns he disregarded alike in the fearless discharge of his duty. He upheld the liberty of the peers against the one; he defended the rights of the people against both combined to destroy them. If there be yet amongst us the power of freely discussing the acts of our rulers; if there be yet the privilege of meeting for the promotion of needful reforms; if he who desires wholesome changes in our Constitution be still recognized as a patriot, and not doomed to die the death of a traitor, — let us acknowledge with gratitude that to this great man, under Heaven, we owe this felicity of the times." Sketches of Statesmen of the Time of George III. A similar instance of the independence of counsel is narrated of that eminent advocate, Mr. Samuel Dexter, in the reminiscences of his life by "Sigma," published at Boston, 1857, p. 61. See Stor on Const. (4th ed.) § 1064, note.

the prisoner suffers nothing from inattention or haste on the part of his counsel, or impatience on the part of the prosecuting officer or of the court itself. Time may be precious to the court; but it is infinitely more so to him whose life or whose liberty may depend upon the careful and patient consideration of the evidence; when the counsel for the defence is endeavoring to sift the truth from the falsehood, and to subject the whole to logical analysis, so as to show that how suspicious soever the facts may be, they are nevertheless consistent with innocence. Often indeed it must happen that the impression of the prisoner's guilt, which the judge and the jury unavoidably receive when the case is opened to them by the prosecuting officer, will, insensibly to themselves, color all the evidence in the case, so that only a sense of duty will induce a due attention to the summing up for the prisoner, which after all may prove unexpectedly convincing. Doubtless the privilege of counsel is sometimes abused in these cases; we cannot think an advocate of high standing and character has a right to endeavor to rob the jury of their opinion by asseverating his own belief in the innocence of his client; and cases may arise in which the court will feel compelled to impose some reasonable restraints upon the address to the jury;¹ but it is better in these cases to err on the side of liberality; and restrictions which do not leave to counsel, who are apparently acting in good faith, such reasonable time and opportunity as they may deem necessary for presenting their client's case fully, may possibly in some cases be so far erroneous in law as to warrant setting aside a verdict of guilty.²

Whether counsel are to address the jury on questions of law in criminal cases, generally, is a point which is still in dispute. If the jury in the particular case, by the constitution or statutes of the State, are judges of the law, it would seem that counsel should be allowed to address them fully upon it,³ though the contrary seems to have been held in Maryland;⁴ while in Massachusetts where it is expected that the jury will receive the law from the

¹ Thus it has been held, that, even though the jury are the judges of the law in criminal cases, the court may refuse to allow counsel to read law-books to the jury. Murphy v. State, 6 Ind. 490. And see Lynch v. State, 9 Ind. 541; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Allen, 11 Mich. 591.

² In People v. Keenan, 13 Cal. 581, a verdict in a capital case was set aside on this ground.

³ Lynch v. State, 9 Ind. 541; Murphy v. State, 6 Ind. 490.

⁴ Franklin v. State, 12 Md. 266. What was held there was, that counsel should not argue the constitutionality of a statute to the jury; and that the Constitution, in making the jury judges of the law, did not empower them to decide a statute invalid. This ruling corresponds to that of Judge Chase in United States v. Callendar, Whart. State Trials, 688, 710. But see remarks of Perkins, J., in Lynch v. State, 9 Ind. 542.

court, it is nevertheless held that counsel has a right to address them upon the law.¹ It is unquestionably more decorous and more respectful to the bench that argument upon the law should always be addressed to the court; and such, we believe, is the general practice. The jury hear the argument, and they have a right to give it such weight as it seems to them properly to be entitled to.

For misconduct in their practice, the members of the legal profession may be summarily dealt with by the courts, who will not fail, in all proper cases, to use their power to protect clients or the public, as well as to preserve the profession from the contamination and disgrace of a vicious associate.² A man of bad reputation may be expelled for that alone;³ and counsel who has

¹ Commonwealth v. Porter, 10 Met. 263; Commonwealth v. Austin, 7 Gray, 61.

² "As a class, attorneys are supposed to be, and in fact have always been, the vindicators of individual rights, and the fearless assertors of the principles of civil liberty, existing where alone they can exist, in a government, not of parties nor of men, but of laws. On the other hand, to declare them irresponsible to any power but public opinion and their consciences, would be incompatible with free government. Individuals of the class may, and sometimes do, forfeit their professional franchise by abusing it; and a power to exact the forfeiture must be lodged somewhere. Such a power is indispensable to protect the court, the administration of justice, and themselves. Abuses must necessarily creep in; and, having a deep stake in the character of their profession, they are vitally concerned in preventing it from being sullied by the misconduct of unworthy members of it. No class of the community is more dependent on its reputation for honor and integrity. It is indispensable to the purposes of its creation to assign it a high and honorable standing; but to put it above the judiciary, whose official tenure is good behavior and whose members are removable from office by the legislature, would render it intractable; and it is therefore necessary to assign it but an equal share of independence. In the absence of specific provision to the contrary, the power of removal is, from its nature, commensurate with the power of appointment, and it is consequently the business of the judges to deal with delinquent members of the bar, and withdraw their faculties when they are incorrigible." Gibson, Ch. J., In re Austin et al., 5 Rawle, 191, 203, 28 Am. Dec. 657. See State v. Kirke, 12 Fla. 278; Rice's Case, 18 B. Monr. 472; Waiker v. State, 4 W. Va. 749.

An attorney may be disbarred for a personal attack upon the judge for his conduct as such; but the attorney is entitled to notice, and an opportunity to be heard in defence. Beene v. State, 22 Ark. 143. See In re Wallace, L. R. 1 P. C. 288; Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 364; Withers v. State, 35 Ala. 252; Matter of Moore et al., 63 N. C. 387; Ex parte Biggs, 64 N. C. 202; Bradley v. Fisher, 13 Wall. 335; Dickens's Case, 67 Pa. St. 169.

³ For example, one whose reputation for truth and veracity is such that his neighbors would not believe him when under oath. Matter of Mills, 1 Mich. 303. See In re Percy, 30 N. Y. 551; People v. Ford, 54 Ill. 529. An attorney convicted and punished for perjury, and disbarred, was refused restoration, notwithstanding his subsequent behavior had been unexceptionable. Ex parte Garbett, 18 C. B. 403. See Matter of McCarthy, 42 Mich. 71, 51 N. W. 933; Ex parte Wells, 64 Ind. 491. An attorney disbarred for collusion to procure false testimony. Matter of Gale, 75 N. Y. 535. See Matter of Ellridge, 82 N. Y. 151, 37 Am. Rep. 558. For inducing a commissioner to admit to bail without right a convicted prisoner. State v. Burr, 19 Neb. 563, 25 N. W. 261. For antedating jurat and acknowledgment. Matter of once taken part in litigation, and been the adviser or become entrusted with the secrets of one party, will not afterwards be suffered to engage for an opposing party, notwithstanding the original employment has ceased, and there is no imputation upon his motives.¹ And, on the other hand, the court will not allow counsel to be made the instrument of injustice, nor permit the client to exact of him services which are inconsistent with the obligation he owes to the court and to public justice, — a higher and more sacred obligation than any which can rest upon him to gratify a client's whims, or to assist in his revenge.²

Arctander, 26 Minn. 25, 1 N. W. 43. For embezzlement of client's papers, though he has settled with client. In re Davies, 93 Pa. St. 116. For want of fidelity to client. Matter of Wool, 86 Mich. 209; Strout v. Proctor, 71 Me. 288; Slemmer v. Wright, 54 Iowa, 184, 8 N. W. 181; People v. Murphy, 119 Ill. 159, 6 N. E. 488. If he commits a crime in his professional capacity he may be disbarred, though he has not been convicted of the crime. State v. Winton, 11 Oreg. 456, 5 Pac. 337. Even if it is not committed as an attorney. The rule is not inflexible that he must be convicted before disbarment. Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 265, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Delano's Case, 58 N. H. 5. See Ex parte Steinman, 35 Pa. St. 220. One may be disbarred for publishing a libel on the court unless some constitutional or statutory provision forbids. State v. McClaugherty, 33 W. Va. 250, 10 S. E. 407.

¹ In Gaudin v. State, 11 Ga. 47, the late solicitor-general was not suffered to assist in the defence of a criminal case, because he had, in the course of his official duty, instituted the prosecution, though he was no longer connected with it. And see Wilson v. State, 10 Ind. 392. A late city attorney for accepting a retainer not to appear for the city in certain cases against it, appealed by him while such attorney, was suspended for six months from practice. In re Cowdery, 69 Cal. 32, 10 Pac. 47.

² Upon this subject the remarks of Chief Justice Gibson in Rush v. Cavanaugh, 2 Pa. St. 189, are worthy of being repeated in this connection. The prosecutor in a criminal case had refused to pay the charges of the counsel employed by him to prosecute in the place of the attorney-general, because the counsel, after a part of the evidence had been put in, had consented that the charge might be withdrawn. In considering whether this was sufficient reason for the refusal, the learned judge said: "The material question is, did the plaintiff violate his professional duty to his client in consenting to withdraw his charge. . . . Instead of lending himself to the prosecution of one whom he then and has since believed to be an innocent man?"

"It is a popular but gross mistake to suppose that a lawyer owes no fidelity to any one except his client, and that the latter is the keeper of his professional conscience. He is expressly bound by his official oath to behave himself in his office of attorney with all due fidelity to the court as well as to the client; and he violates it when he consciously presses for an unjust judgment; much more so when he presses for the conviction of an innocent man. But the prosecution was depending before an alderman, to whom, it may be said, the plaintiff was bound to no such fidelity. Still he was bound by those obligations which, without oaths, rest upon all men. The high and honorable office of a counsel would be degraded to that of a mercenary, were he compellable to do the bidding of his client against the dictates of his conscience. The origin of the name proves the client to be subordinate to his counsel as his patron. Besides, had the plaintiff succeeded in having Crean held to answer, it would have been his duty to abandon the prosecution at the return of the recognizance. As the office of attorney-general is a public trust which involves, in the discharge of it, the exercise of an almost boundless discretion by an officer who stands as impartial as a judge, it might be doubted whether counsel retained by a private

The Writ of Habeas Corpus.

It still remains to mention one of the principal safeguards to personal liberty, and the means by which illegal restraints upon it are most speedily and effectually remedied. To understand this guaranty, and the instances in which the citizen is entitled to appeal to the law for its enforcement, we must first have a correct idea of what is understood by personal liberty in the law, and inquire what restraints, if any, must exist to its enjoyment.

Sir William Blackstone says, personal liberty consists in the power of locomotion, of changing situation, or moving one's person to whatsoever place one's own inclination may direct, without imprisonment or restraint, unless by due course of law.¹ It appears, therefore, that this power of locomotion is not entirely unrestricted, but that by due course of law certain qualifications and limitations may be imposed upon it without infringing upon constitutional liberty. Indeed, in organized society, liberty is the creature of law, and every man will possess it in proportion as the laws, while imposing no unnecessary restraints, surround him and every other citizen with protections against the lawless acts of others.² prosecutor can be allowed to perform any part of his duty; certainly not unless in subservience to his will and instructions. With that restriction, usage has sanctioned the practice of employing professional assistants, to whom the attorney-general or his regular substitute may, if he please, confide the direction of the particular prosecution; and it has been beneficial to do so where the prosecuting officer has been overmatched or overborne by numbers. In that predicament the ends of justice may require him to accept assistance. But the professional assistant, like the regular deputy, exercises not his own discretion, but that of the attorney-general, whose locum tenens at sufferance he is; and he consequently does so under the obligation of the official oath." And see Meister v. People, 81 Mich. 99. [In furtherance of the full discharge of the duties which an attorney owes to his client and to the court, he is granted certain privileges. One is to be exempt from the service of process while attending upon the court and in going to and returning from the same. Hoffman v. Judge of Circuit Court, 113 Mich. 109, 71 N. W. 480; 88 L. R. A. 663; 67 Am. St. 458. Similar exemption in regard to service of summons and other civil process extends to parties and witnesses. Mulhearn v. Press Publishing Co., 63 N. J. L. 153, 21 Atl. 186, 11 L. R. A. 101.]

¹ 1 Bi. Com. 134. Montesquieu says: "In governments, that is, in societies directed by laws, liberty can consist only in the power of doing what we ought to will, and in not being constrained to do what we ought not to will. We must have continually present to our minds the difference between independence and liberty. Liberty is a right of doing whatever the laws permit, and if a citizen could do what they forbid, he would no longer be possessed of liberty, because all his fellow-citizens would enjoy the same power." Spirit of the Laws, Book 11, c. 3.

² "Liberty," says Mr. Webster, "is the creature of law, essentially different from that authorized licentiousness that trespasses on right. It is a legal and a refined idea, the offspring of high civilization, which the savage never understood, and never can understand. Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint; the more restraint on others to keep off from us, the more liberty we have. It is an error to suppose that lib-

In examining the qualifications and restrictions which the law imposes upon personal liberty, we shall find them classed, according to their purpose, as, first, those of a public, and, second, those of a private nature.

The first class are those which spring from the relative duties and obligations of the citizen to society and to his fellow-citizens. These may be arranged into sub-classes as follows: (1) Those imposed to prevent the commission of crime which is threatened; (2) those in punishment of crime committed; (3) those in punishment of contempts of court or legislative bodies, or to render their jurisdiction effectual; (4) those necessary to enforce the duty citizens owe in defence of the State;¹ (5) those which may become important to protect the community against the acts of those who, by reason of mental infirmity, are incapable of self-control. All these limitations are well recognized and generally understood, but a particular discussion of them does not belong to our subject. The second class are those which spring from the helpless or dependent condition of individuals in the various relations of life.

1. The husband, at the common law, is recognized as having legal custody of and power of control over the wife, with the right to direct as to her labor, and to insist upon its performance. The precise nature of the restraints which may be imposed by the husband upon the wife's actions, it is not easy, from the nature of the case, to point out and define; but at most they can only be such gentle restraints upon her liberty as improper conduct on her part may appear to render necessary;² and the general tendency of public sentiment, as well as of the modern decisions, has been in the direction of doing away with the arbitrary power which the husband was formerly supposed to possess, and of placing erty consists in a paucity of laws. If one wants few laws let him go to Turkey. The Turk enjoys that blessing. The working of our complex system, full of checks and restraints on legislative, executive, and judicial power, is favorable to liberty and justice. Those checks and restraints are so many safeguards set around individual rights and interests. That man is free who is protected from injury." Works, Vol. II. p. 363.

¹ In Judson v. Reardon, 16 Minn. 431, a statute authorizing the members of a municipal council to arrest and imprison without warrant persons refusing to obey the orders of fire wardens at a fire was held unwarranted and void.

² 2 Kent, 181. See Cochran's Case, 8 Dowl. P. C. 630. The husband, however, is under no obligation to support his wife except at his own home; and it is only when he wrongfully sends her away, or so conducts himself as to justify her in leaving him, that he is bound to support her elsewhere. Rumney v. Keyes, 7 N. H. 570; Allen v. Aldrich, 29 N. H. 63; Shaw v. Thompson, 16 Pick. 198; Clement v. Mattison, 3 Rich. 93. In such a case his liability to supply her with necessaries cannot be restricted by giving notice to particular persons not to trust her. Bolton v. Prentice, 2 Strange, 1214; Harris v. Morris, 4 Esp. 41; Watkins v. De Armond, 89 Ind. 553.

the two sexes in the marriage relation upon a footing nearer equality. It is believed that the right of the husband to chastise the wife, under any circumstances, would not be recognized in this country; and such right of control as the law gives him would in any case be forfeited by such conduct towards the wife as was not warranted by the relation, and which should render it improper for her to live and cohabit with him, or by such conduct as, under the laws of the State, would entitle her to a divorce.¹ And he surrenders his right of control also, when he consents to her living apart under articles of separation.²

2. The father of an infant, being obliged by law to support his child, has a corresponding right to control his actions, and to employ his services during the continuance of legal infancy. The child may be emancipated from this control before coming of age, either by the express assent of the father, or by being turned away from his father's house, and left to care for himself;³ though in neither case would the father be released from an obligation which the law imposes upon him to prevent the child becoming a public charge, and which the State may enforce whenever necessary. The mother, during the father's life, has a power of control subordinate to his; but on his death,⁴ or conviction and sentence to imprisonment for felony,⁵ she succeeds to the relative rights which the father possessed before. (a)

3. The guardian has a power of control over his ward, corresponding in the main to that which the father has over his child, though in some respects more restricted, while in others it is broader. The appointment of guardian, when made by the courts,

¹ Hutchinson v. Peck, 5 Johns. 126; Love v. Maynard, 16 Ill. 277.

² Saunders v. Redway, 16 Jur. 1005, 13 Eng. L. & Eq. 493.

³ Whiting v. Earle, 3 Pick. 201; 15 Am. Dec. 247; McGoy v. Huffman, 8 Cow. 811; State v. Barrett, 45 N. H. 15; Wolcott v. Hickey, 22 Iowa, 171; Fairhurst v. Lewis, 20 Ark. 435; Hardwick v. Pawlet, 80 Vt. 320.

⁴ Delham v. Natick, 16 Mass. 135; Com'rs Harford Co. v. Hamilton, 60 Md. 340.

⁵ Bailey's Case, 6 Dowl. P. C. 311. If, however, there be a guardian appointed for the child by the proper court, his right to the custody of the child is superior to that of the parent. Macready v. Wolcott, 33 Conn. 321.

(a) [Upon the principle that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, the State is asserting more and more control over children allowed by their parents to grow up in evil associations, and for the prevention of crime to which such courses so strongly tend, recent statutes authorize the summary arrest and detention, in reform schools and like institutions, of youth of incorrigibly vicious habits. Such detention is not looked upon as imprisonment and punishment to the validity of which a jury trial is necessary. State v. Brown, 50 Minn. 353, 52 N. W. 935, 30 Am. St. 651, 13 L. R. A. 691, and note on commitment of minors to reformatories without conviction of crime. To the same effect, see Lee v. McClelland, 157 Ind. 84, 60 N. E. 392.]

is of local force only, being confined to the State in which it is made, and the guardian would have no authority to change the domicile of the ward to another State or country. But the appointment commonly has reference to the possession of property by the ward, and over this property the guardian is given a power of control which is not possessed by the father, as such, over the property owned by his child.¹

4. The relation of master and apprentice is founded on a contract between the two, generally with the consent of the parent or party standing in loco parentis to the latter, by which the master is to teach the apprentice some specified trade or means of living, and the apprentice, either wholly or in part in consideration of the instruction, is to perform services for the master while receiving it. This relation is also statutory and local, and the power to control the apprentice is assimilated to that of the parent by the statute law.²

5. The power of the master to impose restraints upon the action of the servant he employs is of so limited a nature that practically it may be said to rest upon continuous voluntary assent. If the servant misconducts himself, or refuses to submit to proper control, the master may discharge him, but cannot resort to confinement or personal chastisement.

6. The relation of teacher and scholar places the former more nearly in the place of the parent than either of the two preceding relations places the master. While the pupil is under his care, he has a right to enforce obedience to his commands lawfully given in his capacity of teacher, even to the extent of bodily chastisement or confinement. And in deciding questions of discipline he acts judicially, and is not to be made liable, either civilly or criminally, unless he has acted with express malice, or been guilty of such excess in punishment that malice may fairly be implied. All presumptions favor the correctness and justice of his action.³

7. Where parties bail another, in legal proceedings, they are regarded in law as his jailers, selected by himself, and with the right to his legal custody for the purpose of seizing and delivering him up to the officers of the law at any time before the liability of the bail has become fixed by a forfeiture being judicially declared on his failure to comply with the condition of the bond.¹ This is a right which the bail may exercise in person or by agent, and without resort to judicial process.²

¹ Cooley's Bl. Com. 462, and cases cited.

² The relation is one founded on personal trust and confidence, and the master cannot assign the articles of apprenticeship except by consent of the apprentice and of his proper guardian. Haley v. Taylor, 3 Dana, 222; Nickerson v. Howard, 19 Johns. 113; Tucker v. Magee, 18 Ala. 99.

³ State v. Pendergrass, 2 Dev. & Bat. 365; Cooper v. McJunkin, 4 Ind. 290; Commonwealth v. Randall, 4 Gray, 38; Anderson v. State, 3 Head, 455; Lander v. Seaver, 32 Vt. 114; Morrow v. Wood, 35 Wis. 59; Patterson v. Nutter, 78 Me. 509, 7 Atl. 273; Sheehan v. Sturges, 53 Conn. 481, 2 Atl. 841; Vanvactor v. State, 113 Ind. 276, 15 N. E. 341.

8. The control of the creditor over the person of his debtor, through the process which the law gives for the enforcement of his demand, is now very nearly abolished, thanks to the humane provisions which have been made of late by statute or by constitution. In cases of torts and where debts were fraudulently contracted, or where there is an attempt at a fraudulent disposition of property with intent to delay the creditor, or to deprive him of payment, the body of the debtor is allowed to be seized and confined; but the reader must be referred to the constitution and statutes of his State for specific information on this subject. (a)

These, then, are the legal restraints upon personal liberty. For any other restraint, or for any abuse of the legal rights which have been specified, the party restrained is entitled to immediate process from the courts, and to speedy relief.

The right to personal liberty did not depend in England on any statute, but it was the birthright of every freeman. As slavery ceased it became universal, and the judges were bound to protect it by proper writ when infringed. But in those times when the power of Parliament was undefined and in dispute, and the judges held their offices only during the king's pleasure, it was almost a matter of course that rights should be violated, and that legal redress should be impracticable, however clear those rights might be. But in many cases it was not very clear what the legal ¹ Harp v. Osgood, 2 Hill, 218; Commonwealth v. Brickett, 8 Pick. 138; Worthing v. Prescott, 60 Vt. 68, 11 Atl. 690. The principal may be followed, if necessary, out of the jurisdiction of the court in which the bail was taken, and arrested wherever found. Parker v. Bidwell, 3 Conn. 84. Even though it be out of the State. Harp v. Osgood, supra. And doors, if necessary, may be broken in order to make the arrest. Read v. Case, 4 Conn. 163, 10 Am. Dec. 110; Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. 145. After the recognizance is defaulted, surrender does not discharge the bail. State v. McGuire, 16 R. I. 519, 17 Atl. 918. Nor will surrender discharge surety on bond for the support of a deserted wife. Miller v. Com., 127 Pa. St. 122, 17 Atl. 894.

² Parker v. Bidwell, 3 Conn. 84; Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. 145; Worthing v. Prescott, 60 Vt. 68, 11 Atl. 690.

(a) [Obligation arising under order of court to pay money for support of a husband, is not a debt. Livingston v. Los Angeles Sup. Ct., 117 Cal. 63, 49 Pac. 836, 38 L. R. A. 175. And a defendant may be imprisoned for refusing to pay alimony as ordered. Barclay v. Barclay, 184 Ill. 375, 86 N. E. 656, 51 L. R. A. 351; State v. Cook, 66 Ohio, 520, 64 N. E. 667. Person removing baggage from hotel or lodging-house when such baggage is subject to lien for unpaid bills may be punished by imprisonment. State v. Engle, 159 Ind. 339, 58 N. E. 638.]

rights of parties were. The courts which proceeded according to the course of the common law, as well as the courts of chancery, had limits to their authority which could be understood, and a definite course of proceeding was marked out for them by statute or by custom; and if they exceeded their jurisdiction and invaded the just liberty of the subject, the illegality of the process would generally appear in the proceedings. But there were two tribunals unknown to the common law, but exercising a most fearful authority, against whose abuses it was not easy for the most upright and conscientious judge in all cases to afford relief. These were, 1. The Court of Star Chamber, which became fully recognized and established in the time of Henry VII., though originating long before. Its jurisdiction extended to all sorts of offences, contempts of authority and disorders, the punishment of which was not supposed to be adequately provided for by the common law; such as slanders of persons in authority, the propagation of seditious news, refusal to lend money to the king, disregard of executive proclamations, &c. It imposed fines without limit, and inflicted any punishment in the discretion of its judges short of death. Even jurors were punished in this court for verdicts in State trials not satisfactory to the authorities. Although the king's chancellor and judges were entitled to seats in this court, the actual exercise of its powers appears to have fallen into the hands of the king's privy council, which sat as a species of inquisition, and exercised almost any authority it saw fit to assume.¹ The court was abolished by the Long Parliament in 1641. 2. The Court of High Commission, established in the time of Elizabeth, and which exercised a power in ecclesiastical matters corresponding to that which the Star Chamber assumed in other cases, and in an equally absolute and arbitrary manner. This court was also abolished in 1641, but was afterwards revived for a short time in the reign of James II.

It is evident that while these tribunals existed there could be no effectual security to liberty. A brief reference to the remarkable struggle which took place during the reign of Charles I. will perhaps the better enable us to understand the importance of those common-law protections to personal liberty to which we shall have occasion to refer, and also of those statutory securities which have since been added.

¹ See Hallam, Constitutional History, c. 1 and 8; Todd, Parliamentary Government in England, Vol. II. c. 1. The rise and extension of authority of this court, and its arbitrary character, are very fully set forth in Brodie's Constitutional History of the British Empire, to which the reader is referred for more particular information.

When the king attempted to rule without the Parliament, and in 1625 dissolved that body, and resorted to forced loans, the grant of monopolies, and the levy of ship moneys, as the means of replenishing a treasury that could only lawfully be supplied by taxes granted by the commons, the privy council was his convenient means of enforcing compliance with his will. Those who refused to contribute to the loans demanded were committed to prison. When they petitioned the Court of the King's Bench for their discharge, the warden of the Fleet made return to the writ of habeas corpus that they were detained by warrant of the privy council, informing him of no particular cause of imprisonment, but that they were committed by the special command of his majesty. Such a return presented for the decision of the court the question, "Is such a warrant, which does not specify the cause of detention, valid by the laws of England?" The court held that it was, justifying their decision upon supposed precedents, although, as Mr. Hallam says, "it was evidently the consequence of this decision that every statute from the time of Magna Charta, designed to protect the personal liberties of Englishmen, became a dead letter, since the insertion of four words in a warrant (per speciale mandatum regis), which might become matter of form, would control their remedial efficacy. And this wound was the more deadly in that the notorious cause of these gentlemen's imprisonment was their withstanding an illegal exaction of money. Everything that distinguished our constitutional laws, all that rendered the name of England valuable, was at stake in this issue."¹ This decision, among other violent acts, led to the Petition of Right, one of the principal charters of English liberty, but which was not assented to by the king until the judges had intimated that if he saw fit to violate it by arbitrary commitments, they would take care that it should not be enforced by their aid against his will. And four years later, when the king committed members of Parliament for words spoken in debate offensive to the royal prerogative, the judges evaded the performance of their duty on habeas corpus, and the members were only discharged when the king gave his consent to that course.²

The Habeas Corpus Act was passed in 1679, mainly to prevent such abuses and other evasions of duty by judges and ministerial officers, and to compel prompt action in any case in which illegal imprisonment was alleged. That act gave no new rights to the

¹ Hallam, Const. Hist. c. 7. See also Brodie, Const. Hist. Vol. II. c. 1.

² Hallam, Const. Hist. c. 8; Brodie, Const. Hist. Vol. I. c. 8.

subject, but it furnished the means of enforcing those which existed before.¹ The preamble recited that "whereas great delays have been used by sheriffs, jailers, and other officers to whose custody any of the king's subjects have been committed for criminal or supposed criminal matters, in making returns of writs of habeas corpus, to them directed, by standing out on alias or pluries habeas corpus, and sometimes more, and by other shifts to avoid their yielding obedience to such writs, contrary to their duty and the known laws of the land, whereby many of the king's subjects have been and hereafter may be long detained in prison in such cases, where by law they are bailable, to their great charge and vexation. For the prevention whereof, and the more speedy relief of all persons imprisoned for any such criminal or supposed criminal matters," the act proceeded to make elaborate and careful provisions for the future. The important provisions of the act may be summed up as follows: That the writ of habeas corpus might be issued by any court of record or judge thereof, either in term-time or vacation, on the application of any person confined, or of any person for him; the application to be in writing and on oath, and with a copy of the warrant of commitment attached, if procurable; the writ to be returnable either in court or at chambers; the person detaining the applicant to make return to the writ by bringing up the prisoner with the cause of his detention, and the court or judge to discharge him unless the imprisonment appeared to be legal, and in that case to take bail. If the case was bailable; and performance of all these duties was made compulsory, under heavy penalties. Thus the duty which the judge or other officer might evade with impunity before, he must now perform or suffer punishment. The act also provided for punishing severely a second commitment for the same cause, after a party had once been discharged on habeas corpus, and also made the sending of inhabitants of England, Wales, and Berwick-upon-Tweed abroad for imprisonment illegal, and subject to penalty. Important as this act was,² it was less broad in its scope than the remedy had been before, being confined to cases of imprisonment for criminal or supposed criminal matters;³ but the attempt in Parliament nearly a century later to extend its provisions to other

¹ Hallam, Const. Hist. c. 13; Beeching's Case, 4 B. & C. 136; Matter of Jackson, 15 Mich. 436. [For a valuable article on the History of the Writ of Habeas Corpus, see 18 Law Quar. Rev. 61.]

² Mr. Hurd, in the appendix to his excellent treatise on the Writ of Habeas Corpus, gives a complete copy of the act. See also appendix to Lieber, Civil Liberty and Self-Government; Broom, Const. Law, 218.

³ See Mayor of London's Case, 3 Wils. 198; Wilson's Case, 7 Queen's Bench Rep. 284.

cases was defeated by the opposition of Lord Mansfield, on the express ground that it was unnecessary, inasmuch as the common-law remedy was sufficient; ¹ as perhaps it might have been, had officers been always disposed to perform their duty. Another attempt in 1816 was successful.²

The Habeas Corpus Act was not made, in express terms, to extend to the American colonies, but it was in some expressly, and in others by silent acquiescence, adopted and acted upon, and all the subsequent legislation in the American States has been based upon it, and has consisted in little more than a re-enactment of its essential provisions.

What Courts issue the Writ.

The protection of personal liberty is for the most part confided to the State authorities, and to the State courts the party must apply for relief on habeas corpus when illegally restrained. There are only a few cases in which the federal courts can interfere; and those are cases in which either the illegal imprisonment is under pretence of national authority, or in which this process becomes important or convenient in order to enforce or vindicate some right, or authority under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

The Judiciary Act of 1789 provided that each of the several federal courts should have power to issue writs of scire facias, habeas corpus, and all other writs not specially provided for by statute, which might be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the principles and usages of law; and that either of the justices of the Supreme Court, as well as the district judges, should have power to grant writs of habeas corpus for the purposes of an inquiry into the cause of commitment; provided that in no case should such writs extend to prisoners in jail, unless where they were in custody under or by color of the authority of the United States, or were committed to trial before some court of the same, or were necessary to be brought into court to testify.³ Under this statute no court of the United States or judge thereof could issue a habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner in custody under a sentence or execution of a State court, for any other purpose than to be used as a witness. And this was so whether the imprisonment was under civil or criminal process.⁴

¹ Life of Mansfield by Lord Campbell.
² Lives of Chief Justices, c. 35; 15 Hansard's Debates, 897 et seq.

³ By Stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 100. See Broom, Const. Law, 224.

⁴ 2 Statutes at Large, 81.

⁵ Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103.

During what were known as the nullification troubles in South Carolina, the defect of federal jurisdiction in respect to this writ became apparent, and another act was passed, having for its object, among other things, the protection of persons who might be prosecuted under assumed State authority for acts done under the laws of the United States. This act provided that either of the justices of the Supreme Court, or a judge of any District Court of the United States, in addition to the authority already conferred by law, should have power to grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases of a prisoner or prisoners in jail or confinement, where he or they shall be committed or confined on or by any authority of law, for any act done or omitted to be done, in pursuance of a law of the United States, or any order, process, or decree of any judge or court thereof.¹

In 1842 further legislation seemed to have become a necessity, in order to give to the federal courts authority upon this writ over cases in which questions of international law were involved, and which, consequently, could properly be disposed of only by the jurisdiction to which international concerns were by the Constitution committed. The immediate occasion for this legislation was the arrest of a subject of Great Britain by the authorities of the State of New York, for an act which his government avowed and took the responsibility of, and which was the subject of diplomatic correspondence between the two nations. An act of Congress was consequently passed, which provides that either of the justices of the Supreme Court, or any judge of any District Court of the United States in which a prisoner is confined, in addition to the authority previously conferred by law, shall have power to grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases of any prisoner or prisoners in jail or confinement, where he, she, or they, being subjects or citizens of a foreign State, and domiciled therein,

¹ 4 Stat. at Large, 634. See Ex parte Robinson, 6 McLean, 355, 1 Bond, 39. Robinson was United States marshal, and was imprisoned under a warrant issued by a State court for executing process under the Fugitive Slave Law, and was discharged by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States under this act. See also United States v. Jailer of Fayette Co., 2 Abb. U. S. 265. The relator in that case was in custody of the jailer under a regular commitment charging him under the laws of Kentucky with murder. He averred and offered to show that the act with which he was charged was done by him under the authority of the United States, and in execution of its laws. The federal district judge entered upon an examination of the facts on habeas corpus, and ordered the relator discharged. A similar ruling has been made where a marshal was charged in a State court with murder committed while protecting a Justice of the Supreme Court from an attack. In re Neagle, 39 Fed. Rep. 833, aff. 135 U. S. 1, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658. See also Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371; Ex parte Clark, 100 U. S. 399; Ex parte Bridges, 2 Woods, 428; Ex parte McKean, 3 Hughes, 23; Ex parte Jenkins, 2 Wall. Jr. 521.

shall be committed, or confined, or in custody, under, or by any authority, or law, or process founded thereon, of the United States or of any one of them, for or on account of any act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption, set up or claimed under the commission, or order, or sanction of any foreign State or sovereignty, the validity or effect whereof depends upon the law of nations, or under color thereof.¹

In 1867 a further act was passed, which provided that the several courts of the United States, and the several justices and judges of such courts, within their respective jurisdictions, in addition to the authority already conferred by law, shall have power to grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases where any person may be restrained of his or her liberty in violation of the Constitution, or of any treaty or law of the United States.²

These are the cases in which the national courts and judges have jurisdiction of this writ: in other cases the party must seek his remedy in the proper State tribunal.³ And although the State courts formerly claimed and exercised the right to inquire into the lawfulness of restraint under the national authority,⁴ it is now settled by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, that the question of the legality of the detention in such cases is one for the determination, exclusively, of the federal judiciary, so that, although a State court or judge may issue this process in any case where illegal restraint upon liberty is alleged, yet when it is served upon any officer or person who detains another in custody under the national authority, it is his duty, by proper return, to make known to the State court or judge the authority by which he holds such person, but not further to obey

¹ 5 Stat. at Large, 539. McLeod's Case, which was the immediate occasion of the passage of this act, will be found reported in 25 Wend. 482, and 1 Hill, 377, 37 Am. Dec. 828. It was reviewed by Judge Talmadge in 26 Wend. 603, and a reply to the review appears in 3 Hill, 635.

² R. S. U. S. § 751 et seq. See In re Brosnahan, 18 Fed. Rep. 62; In re Ah Jow, 29 Fed. Rep. 181; In re Chow Goo Pooi, 25 Fed. Rep. 77. While in advance of trial in a State court for an offence against a State law which is void under the federal Constitution, a federal court may discharge a defendant, yet ordinarily when bail is granted it will not do so. Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 6

Sup. Ct. Rep. 734, 742. [Upon jurisdiction of U. S. courts to issue writs of habeas corpus, see Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, and notes to 43 L. ed. U. S. 91, 4 L. R. A. 238, 27 L. ed. U. S. 285, and 1 L. ed. U. S. 490. Upon suspension of writ of habeas corpus, see note to 12 L. ed. U. S. 581.]

³ Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 193; Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 193; De Krafte v. Barney, 2 Black. 764. See United States v. French, 1 Gall. 1; Ex parte Barry, 2 How. 65. [For valuable note upon habeas corpus, collecting many cases, see 43 L. ed. U. S. 92.]

⁴ See the cases collected in Hurd on Habeas Corpus, B. 2, c. 1, § 5, and in Abb. Nat. Dig. 609, note.

the process; and that as the State judiciary have no authority within the limits of the sovereignty assigned by the Constitution to the United States, the State court or judge can proceed no further with the case.¹

The State constitutions recognize the writ of habeas corpus as an existing remedy in the cases to which it is properly applicable, and designate the courts or officers which may issue it; but they do not point out the cases in which it may be employed. Upon this subject the common law and the statutes must be our guide; and although the statutes will be found to make specific provision for particular cases, it is believed that in no instance which has fallen under our observation has there been any intention to restrict the remedy, and make it less broad and effectual than it was at the common law.²

¹ Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 503. See Norris v. Newton, 5 McLean, 92; United States v. Rester, 5 McLean, 174; Spangler's Case, 11 Mich. 268; In re Hopson, 40 Barb. 34; Ex parte Hill, 5 Nev. 154; Ex parte Burr, 49 Cal. 168. Notwithstanding the decision of Ableman v. Booth, the State courts have frequently since assumed to pass definitely upon cases of alleged illegal restraint under federal authority, and this too, by the acquiescence of the federal officers. As the remedy in the State courts is generally more expeditious and easy than can be afforded in the national tribunals, it is possible that the federal authorities may still continue to acquiesce in such action of the State courts, in cases where there can be no reason to fear that they will take different views of the questions involved from those likely to be held by the federal courts. Nevertheless, while the case of Ableman v. Booth stands unreversed, the law must be held to be as there declared. It has been approved in Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, Chief Justice Chase dissenting.

An agent of a State to receive from another State a person under extradition proceedings is not an officer of the United States, nor is his detention of the prisoner so far under national authority that a State court may not compel him to bring in the prisoner for an inquiry into the legality of his detention; that is, whether the warrant and the delivery to the agent were in conformity to the federal statutes. In summing up the discussion

Harlan, J., says: "Subject, then, to the exclusive and paramount authority of the national government, by its own judicial tribunals, to determine whether persons held in custody by authority of the courts of the United States, or by the commissioners of such courts, or by officers in the general government, acting under its laws, are so held in conformity with law, the States have the right, by their own courts, or by the judges thereof, to inquire into the grounds upon which any person, within their respective territorial limits, is restrained of his liberty, and to discharge him, if it be ascertained that such restraint is illegal; and this, notwithstanding such illegality may arise from a violation of the Constitution or the laws of the United States." Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544.

² See Matter of Jackson, 15 Mich. 417, where this whole subject is fully considered. The application for the writ is not necessarily made by the party in person, but may be made by any other person on his behalf, if a sufficient reason is stated for its not being made by him personally. The Hottentot Venus Case, 13 East. 195; Child's Case, 29 Eng. L. & Eq. 259. A wife may have the writ to release her husband from unlawful imprisonment, and may herself be heard on the application. Cobbett's Case, 15 Q. B. 381, note; Cobbett v. Hudson, 10 Eng. L. & Eq. 318; s. c. 15 Q. B. 988. Lord Campbell in this case cites the case of the wife of John Banyan, who was heard on his behalf

We have elsewhere referred to certain rules regarding the validity of judicial proceedings.¹ In the great anxiety on the part of our legislatures to make the most ample provision for speedy relief from unlawful confinement, authority to issue the writ of habeas corpus has been conferred upon inferior judicial officers, who make use of it sometimes as if it were a writ of error, under which they might correct the errors and irregularities of other judges and courts, whatever their relative jurisdiction and dignity. Any such employment of the writ is an abuse.² Where a party who is in confinement under judicial process is brought up on habeas corpus, the court or judge before whom he is returned will inquire: 1. Whether the court or officer issuing the process under which he is detained had jurisdiction of the case, and has acted within that jurisdiction in issuing such process.³ If so, mere irregularities or errors of judgment in the

when in prison. [See note to 48 L. ed. U. S. 92.]

¹ See post, p. 575 et seq.

² Ex parte Clay, 98 Mo. 578, 11 S. W. 398; State v. Hayden, 25 Minn. 283, 28 N. W. 659; Willis v. Bayles, 105 Ind. 332, 5 N. E. 8; State v. Orton, 67 Iowa, 594, 25 N. W. 775; People v. Liscomb, 61 N. Y. 569, 574; Petition of Crandall, 34 Wis. 177; Ex parte Van Hagan, 25 Ohio St. 420; Ex parte Shaw, 7 Ohio St. 51; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23; Perry v. State, 41 Tex. 488; Matter of Underwood, 30 Mich. 502; Matter of Eaton, 27 Mich. 1; In re Burger, 39 Mich. 263; Ex parte Simmons, 62 Ala. 416; Re Stupp, 12 Blatch. 501; Ex parte Winslow, 9 Nev. 71; Ex parte Hartman, 44 Cal. 32; In re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630; Petition of Semler, 41 Wis. 517; In re Stokes, 5 Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 71; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700; Ex parte Thompson, 93 Ill. 89; Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B. N. S. 2, 37. This is so, even though there be no appellate tribunal in which the judgment may be reviewed in the ordinary way. Ex parte Plante, 6 Lower Can. Rep. 106. The writ cannot be used to prevent the commission upon a trial of anticipated errors. Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96. It is worthy of serious consideration whether, in those States where the whole judicial power is by the constitution vested in certain specified courts, it is competent by law to give to judicial officers not holding such courts authority to review, even indirectly, the decisions of the courts, and to discharge persons committed under their judgments. Such officers could exercise only a special statutory authority. Yet its exercise in such cases is not only judicial, but it is in the nature of appellate judicial power. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States to issue the writ in cases of confinement under the order of the District Courts, was sustained in Ex parte Bollman & Swartwout, 4 Cranch, 75, and Matter of Metzger, 5 How. 176, on the ground that it was appellate. It is original only where a State is a party, or an ambassador, minister, or consul. Ex parte Hung Hang, 108 U. S. 552, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863. See also Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 668; Ex parte Milburn, 9 Pet. 704; Matter of Kaine, 14 How. 103; Matter of Eaton, 27 Mich. 1; Matter of Buddington, 29 Mich. 472.

³ The validity of the appointment or election of an officer de facto cannot be inquired into on habeas corpus. Ex parte Strahl, 16 Iowa, 339; Russell v. Whiting, 1 Wins. (N. C.) 463. Otherwise if a mere usurper issues process for the imprisonment of a citizen. Ex parte Strahl supra.

If the record shows that a relator stands convicted of that which is no crime, he is of course entitled to his discharge. Ex parte Kearney, 55 Cal. 212. So if punished for contempt in disobeying a void order of court. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Ex parte exercise of that jurisdiction must be disregarded on this writ, and must be corrected either by the court issuing the process, or on regular appellate proceedings.¹ 2. If the process is not void for want of jurisdiction, the further inquiry will be made, whether, by law, the case is bailable, and if so, bail will be taken if the party offers it; otherwise he will be remanded to the proper custody.²

This writ is also sometimes employed to enable a party to enforce a right of control which by law he may have, springing from some one of the domestic relations; especially to enable a parent to obtain the custody and control of his child, where it is detained from him by some other person. The courts, however, do not generally go farther in these cases than to determine what is for the best interest of the child; and they do not feel com-

Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724. So if he is held under a sentence which contravenes an express constitutional immunity, as when sentenced a second time for the same offence. Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 176, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672. See, also, Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 254, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734, 742; In re Dill, 32 Kan. 648, 5 Pac. 39; Brown v. Duffus, 66 Iowa, 193, 23 N. W. 396; Ex parte Rollins, 80 Va. 314; Ex parte Rosenblatt, 19 Nev. 439, 14 Pac. 298. The question of jurisdiction of a court of limited jurisdiction is open upon this writ. People v. The Warden, &c., 100 N. Y. 20, 2 N. E. 870.

¹ People v. Cassels, 5 Hill, 164; Bushnell's Case, 9 Ohio St. 183; Ex parte Watkins, 7 Pet. 568; Matter of Metzger, 5 How. 176; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Petition of Smith, 2 Nev. 338; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 619; Hammond v. People, 32 Ill. 472, per Breese, J. In State v. Shattuck, 45 N. H. 211, Bellows, J., states the rule very correctly as follows: "If the court had jurisdiction of the matter embraced in these causes, this court will not, on habeas corpus, revise the judgment. State v. Towle, 42 N. H. 541; Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 166; and Riley's Case, 2 Pick. 171; Adams v. Vose, 1 Gray, 51. If in such case the proceedings are irregular or erroneous, the judgment is voidable and not void, and stands good until revised or annulled in a proper proceeding instituted for that purpose; but when it appears that the magistrate had no jurisdiction, the proceedings are void, and the respondent may be discharged on habeas corpus. State v. Towle, before cited; Ex parte Kellogg, 6 Vt. 509. See also State v. Richmond, 6 N. H. 232; Burnham v. Stevens, 33 N. H. 247; Hurst v. Smith, 1 Gray, 49." If the court has jurisdiction of an offence, its judgment as to what acts are necessary to constitute it cannot be reviewed. In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263.

² It is not a matter of course that the party is to be discharged even where the authority under which he is held is adjudged illegal. For it may appear that he should be lawfully confined in different custody; in which case the proper order may be made for the transfer. Matter of Mason, 8 Mich. 70; Matter of Ring, 28 Cal. 247; Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 619. See People v. Kelly, 97 N. Y. 212. And where he is detained for trial on an imperfect charge of crime, the court, if possessing power to commit de novo, instead of discharging him, should proceed to inquire whether there is probable cause for holding him for trial, and if so, should order accordingly. Hurd on Habeas Corpus, 416. A discharge on habeas corpus is, apart from statute, conclusive upon the State. People v. Fairman, 59 Mich. 568, 26 N. W. 569; State v. Miller, 97 N. C. 451; Gagnet v. Reese, 20 Fla. 438. A refusal to discharge is not conclusive. Application may be made to another judge. In re Snell, 31 Minn. 110, 16 N. W. 692. But a statute making such refusal conclusive, unless reversed on appeal, is valid. Ex parte Hamilton, 65 Miss. 98, 3 So. 68. See Ex parte Cuddy, 40 Fed. Rep. 62.

pelled to remand him to any custody where it appears not to be for the child's interest. The theory of the writ is, that it relieves from improper restraint; and if the child is of an age to render it proper to consult his feelings and wishes, this may be done in any case;¹ and it is especially proper in many cases where the parents are living in separation and both desire his custody. The right of the father, in these cases, is generally recognized as best; but this must depend very much upon circumstances, and the tender age of the child may often be a controlling consideration against his claim. The courts have large discretionary power in these cases, and the tendency of modern decisions has been to extend, rather than restrict it.²

There is no common-law right to a trial by jury of the questions of fact arising on habeas corpus; but the issues both of fact and of law are tried by the court or judge before whom the proceeding is had;³ though without doubt a jury trial might be provided for by statute, and perhaps even ordered by the court in some cases.⁴

Right of Discussion and Petition.

The right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances is one which "would seem unnecessary to be expressly provided for in a republican government, since it results from the very nature and structure of its institutions. It is impossible that it could be practically denied until the spirit of liberty had wholly disappeared, and the people had become so servile and debased as to be unfit to exercise any of the privileges of freemen."⁵ But it has not been

¹ Commonwealth v. Aves, 18 Pick. 203; Shaw v. Nachtes, 43 Iowa, 653; Garner v. Gordan, 41 Ind. 82; People v. Weissenbach, 60 N. Y. 385.

² Barry's Case may almost be said to exhaust all the law on this subject. We refer to the various judicial decisions made in it, so far as they are reported in the regular reports. 8 Paige, 47; 25 Wend. 64; People v. Mercein, 3 Hill, 599; 2 Rev. 55; Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 195. See also the recent case of Adams v. Adams, 1 Duv. 187. For the former rule, see The King v. De Manneville, 5 East, 221; Ex parte Skinner, 9 J. B. More, 278. The rules of equity prevail at present in England on the question of custody. In re Brown, L. R. 13 Q. B. 1004. Cases illustrating the doctrine that the good of the child will control: Com. v. Hart, 14 Phila. 352; Ex parte Murphy, 75 Ala. 409; Sturtevant v. State, 15 Neb. 459; Bennett v. Bennett, 61 Iowa, 109, 16 N. W. 91; Jones v. Darnall, 103 Ind. 569, 2 N. E. 229. Where the court is satisfied that the interest of the child would be subverted by refusing the custody to either of the parents, it may be confided to a third party. Chetwynd v. Chetwynd, L. R. 1 P. & D. 39; In re Goodenough, 19 Wis. 274. See Matter of Heather Children, 50 Mich. 261, where the guardian of their estate was refused the custody of their persons.

³ See Hurd on Habeas Corpus, 297-302, and cases cited; Baker v. Gannon, 23 Ind. 290.

⁴ See Matter of Hakewell, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 235; s. c. 12 C. B. 262.

⁵ Story on the Constitution, § 1824.

thought unimportant to protect this right by statutory enactments in England; and indeed it will be remembered that one of the most notable attempts to crush the liberties of the kingdom made the right of petition the point of attack, and selected for its contemplated victims the chief officers in the Episcopal hierarchy. The trial and acquittal of the seven bishops in the reign of James II. constituted one of the decisive battles in English constitutional history;¹ and the right which was then vindicated is "a sacred right which in difficult times shows itself in its full magnitude, frequently serves as a safety-valve if judiciously treated by the recipients, and may give to the representatives or other bodies the most valuable information. It may right many a wrong, and the deprivation of it would at once be felt by every freeman as a degradation. The right of petitioning is indeed a necessary consequence of the right of free speech and deliberation,—a simple, primitive, and natural right. As a privilege it is not even denied the creature in addressing the Deity."² Happily the occasions for discussing and defending it have not been numerous in this country, and have been confined to an exciting subject now disposed of.³

Right to bear Arms.

Among the other safeguards to liberty should be mentioned the right of the people to keep and bear arms.⁴ A standing army is peculiarly obnoxious in any free government, and the jealousy of such an army has at times been so strongly manifested in England as to lead to the belief that even though recruited from among themselves, it was more dreaded by the people as an instrument of oppression than a tyrannical monarch or any foreign power. So impatient did the English people become of the very ¹ See this case in 12 Howell's State Trials, 186; 3 Mod. 212. Also in Bacon, Const. Law, 48. See also the valuable note appended by Mr. Broom, p. 493, in which the historical events bearing on the right of petition are noted. Also, May, Const. Hist. c. 7; 1 Bl. Com. 143.

² Lieber, Civil Liberty and Self-Government, c. 12.

³ For the discussions on the right of petition in Congress, particularly with reference to slavery, see 1 Benton's Abolition of Debates, 3, 7; 2 Benton's Abolition of Debates, 57-60, 182-188, 201, 306-344. In Benton's Abolition of Debates, 500-570, 706-740; 13 Benton's Abolition of Debates, 5-28, 265-290, 557-562. Also Benton's Thirty Years' View, Vol. I. c. 135, Vol. II. c. 32, 33, 56, 37. Also the current political histories and biographies. The right to petition Congress is one of the attributes of national citizenship, and as such is under the protection of the national authority. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 552, per Waite, Ch. J. No such proceeding as a petition of right to a court to determine the constitutionality of a statute is now recognized. In re Miller, 5 Mackey, 507.

⁴ 1 Bl. Com. 143.

army that liberated them from the tyranny of James II. that they demanded its reduction even before the liberation became complete; and to this day the British Parliament render a standing army practically impossible by only passing a mutiny act from session to session. The alternative to a standing army is "a well-regulated militia;" but this cannot exist unless the people are trained to bearing arms. The federal and State constitutions therefore provide that the right of the people to bear arms shall not be infringed; but how far it may be in the power of the legislature to regulate the right we shall not undertake to say.¹ Happily there neither has been, nor, we may hope, is likely to be, much occasion for an examination of that question by the courts.²

¹ See Wilson v. State, 33 Ark. 557.

² In Biss v. Commonwealth, 2 Lit. 90, the statute to "prevent persons wearing concealed arms" was held unconstitutional, as infringing on the right of the people to bear arms in defence of themselves and of the State. But see Nunn v. State, 1 Kelly, 243; State v. Mitchell, 3 Blackf. 229; Aynette v. State, 2 Humph. 164; State v. Bozzard, 4 Ark. 18; Carroll v. State, 28 Ark. 39, 18 Am. Rep. 533; State v. Junel, 13 La. Ann. 399; 1 Green, Cr. Rep. 481; Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 357; Cockrum v. State, 24 Tex. 354; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. 155, 8 Am. Rep. 8; State v. Wilburn, 7 Bax. 51; State v. Reid, 1 Ala. 612; State v. Shelby, 90 Mo. 302, 2 S. W. 465. A statute prohibiting the open wearing of arms upon the person was held unconstitutional in Stockdale v. State, 32 Ga. 225, and one forbidding carrying, either publicly or privately, a dirk, sword-cane, Spanish stiletto, belt or pocket pistol or revolver, was sustained, except as to the last-mentioned weapon; and as to that it was held that, if the weapon was suitable for the equipment of a soldier the right of carrying it could not be taken away. As bearing also upon the right of self-defence, see Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. 73, where it was held that the statute subjecting free persons of color to corporal punishment for "lifting their hands in opposition" to a white person was unconstitutional. And see, in general, Bishop on Stat. Crimes, c. 33, and cases cited. [Unauthorized bodies of men may be prohibited the right to drill or parade with arms, and to associate as a military organization. Comm. v. Murphy, 106 Mass. 171, 44 N. E. 138, 32 L. R. A. 606. A regulation forbidding the carrying of weapons generally is invalid, though such regulation as to concealed weapons is valid. Re Brickey, — Idaho, —, 70 Pac. 609.]

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE PROTECTION TO PROPERTY BY "THE LAW OF THE LAND."

THE protection of the subject in the free enjoyment of his life, his liberty, and his property, except as they might be declared by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land to be forfeited, was guaranteed by the twenty-ninth chapter of Magna Charta, "which alone," says Sir William Blackstone, "would have merited the title that it bears of the Great Charter."¹ The people of the American States, holding the sovereignty in their own hands, have no occasion to exact pledges from any one for a due observance of individual rights; but the aggressive tendency of power is such, that they have deemed it of no small importance, that, in framing the instruments under which their governments are to be administered by their agents, they should repeat and re-enact this guaranty, and thereby adopt it as a principle of constitutional protection. In some form of words, it is to be found in each of the State constitutions;² and though verbal differences

¹ 4 Bl. Com. 424. The chapter, as it stood in the original charter of John, was: "Ne corpus liberi hominis capiatur nec imprisonetur nec disseisietur nec utlagetur nec exaleatur, nec aliquo modo destruatur, nec rex eat vel mittat super eum vi, nisi per iudicium parium suorum, vel per legem terre." No freeman shall be taken or imprisoned or diseised or outlawed or banished, or any ways destroyed, nor will the king pass upon him, or commit him to prison, unless by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land. In the charter of Henry III. it was varied slightly, as follows: "Nullus liber homo capiatur vel imprisonetur, aut disseisietur de libero tenemento suo vel libertatibus vel liberis consuetudinibus suis, aut utlagetur aut exuletur, aut aliquo modo destruatur, nec super eum ibimus, nec super eum matremus, nisi per legale iudicium parium suorum, vel per legem terræ." See Blackstone's Charters. The Petition of Right—1 Car. I. c. 1—prayed, among other things, "that no man be compelled to make or yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax, or such like charge, without common consent, by act of Parliament; that none be called upon to make answer for refusal, so to do; that freemen be imprisoned or detained only by the law of the land, or by due process of law, and not by the king's special command, without any charge." The Bill of Rights—1 Wm. and Mary, § 2, c. 2—was confined to an enumeration and condemnation of the illegal acts of the preceding reign; but the Great Charter of Henry III. was then, and is still, in force.

² The following are the constitutional provisions in the several States:—

Alabama: "That, in all criminal prosecutions, the accused . . . shall not be compelled to give evidence against himself, or be deprived of his life, liberty, or property, but by due course of law." Art. 1, § 7. — Arkansas: "That no person shall . . . be deprived of his life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Art. 1, § 9. — California: Similar to that of Alabama. Art. 1, § 8. — Connecticut:

appear in the several provisions, no change in language, it is thought, has in any case been made with a view to essential

Same as Alabama. Art. 1, § 9. — Delaware: Like that of Alabama, substituting for "course of law," "the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land." Art. 1, § 7. — Florida: Similar to that of Alabama. Art. 1, § 9. — Georgia: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, except by due process of law." Art. 1, § 3. — Indiana: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Art. 1, § 2. — Colorado: The same. Art. 1, § 25. — Iowa: The same. Art. 1, § 9. — Kentucky: "Nor can he be deprived of his life, liberty, or property, unless by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land." Art. 13, § 12. — Maine: "Nor be deprived of his life, liberty, property, or privileges, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land." Art. 1, § 6. — Maryland: "That no man ought to be taken or imprisoned, or disseised of his freehold, liberties, or privileges, or outlawed, or exiled, or in any manner destroyed, or deprived of his life, liberty, or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land." Declaration of Rights, § 23. — Massachusetts: "No subject shall be arrested, imprisoned, despoiled, or deprived of his property, immunities, or privileges, put out of the protection of the law, exiled, or deprived of his life, liberty, or estate, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land." Declaration of Rights, Art. 12. — Michigan: "No person shall . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Art. 6, § 32. — Minnesota: Like that of Michigan. Art. 1, § 7. — Mississippi: The same. Art. 1, § 2. — Missouri: Same as Delaware. Art. 1, § 18. — Nevada: "Nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Art. 1, § 8. — New Hampshire: Same as Massachusetts. Bill of Rights, Art. 15. — New York: Same as Nevada. Art. 1, § 6. — North Carolina: "That no person ought to be taken, imprisoned, or disseised of his freehold, liberties, or privileges, or outlawed, or exiled, or in any manner destroyed, or deprived of his life, liberty, or property, but by the law of the land." Declaration of Rights, § 17. — Pennsylvania: Like Delaware. Art. 1,

§ 9. — Rhode Island: Like Delaware. Art. 1, § 19. — South Carolina: Like that of Massachusetts, substituting "person" for "subject." Art. 1, § 14. — Tennessee: "That no man shall be taken or imprisoned, or disseised of his freehold, liberties, or privileges, or outlawed, or exiled, or in any manner destroyed, or deprived of his life, liberty, or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land." Art. 1, § 8. — Texas: "No citizen of this State shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, or privileges, outlawed, exiled, or in any manner disfranchised, except by due course of the law of the land." Art. 1, § 16. — West Virginia: "No person, in time of peace, shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Art. 2, § 6. Under each of the remaining constitutions, equivalent protection to that which these provisions give is believed to be afforded by fundamental principles recognized and enforced by the courts. [A corporation is within the term "person" and "man" as used in the various constitutional provisions as to "Law of the Land" and "Due Process." Knoxville & Ohio Ry. Co. v. Harris, 92 Tenn. 684, 48 S. W. 115, 63 L. R. A. 921; Johnson v. Goodyear Mining Co., 127 Cal. 4, 59 Pac. 304, 47 L. R. A. 838. A corporation is not, however, a "citizen" within the meaning of that term as used in section 2 of article 4, of the federal constitution, nor within the meaning of that term as used in section 1 of article 14, of the amendments referring to privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States, and of the United States respectively. Hawley v. Hard, 72 Vt. 122, 47 Atl. 461, 82 Am. St. 922; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 657, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281. "Property" within the meaning of the term as used in the federal constitution involves the right to acquire and dispose of the subject of the right. Harrison v. Knoxville Iron Co., 103 Tenn. 421, 53 S. W. 955, 70 Am. St. 682. "Liberty" in the constitutional sense involves the right to use one's faculties in all lawful ways, to live and work where he chooses, to pursue any lawful calling, vocation, trade, or profession, and to enjoy the change in legal effect; and the differences in phraseology will not, therefore, be of importance in our discussion. Indeed, the language employed is generally nearly identical, except that the phrase "due process [or course] of law" is sometimes used, sometimes "the law of the land," and in some cases both; but the meaning is the same in every case.¹ And, by the fourteenth amendment, the guaranty is now incorporated in the Constitution of the United States.²

If now we shall ascertain the sense in which the phrases "due process of law" and "the law of the land" are employed in the several constitutional provisions which we have referred to, when the protection of rights in property is had in view, we shall be able, perhaps, to indicate the rule, by which the proper conclusion may be reached in those cases in which legislative action is objected to, as not being "the law of the land;" or judicial or ministerial action is contested as not being "due process of law," within the meaning of these terms as the Constitution employs them.

If we examine such definitions of these terms as are met with in the reported cases, we shall find them so various that some difficulty must arise in fixing upon one which shall be accurate, complete in itself, and at the same time appropriate in all the cases. The diversity of definition is certainly not surprising, when we consider the diversity of cases for the purposes of which it has been attempted, and reflect that a definition that is sufficient for one case and applicable to its facts may be altogether insufficient or entirely inapplicable in another.

Perhaps no definition is more often quoted than that given by Mr. Webster in the Dartmouth College Case: "By the law of the land is most clearly intended the general law; a law which hears before it condemns; which proceeds upon inquiry, and renders judgment only after trial. The meaning is that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property, and immunities, under the protection of the general rules which govern society. Everything which may pass under the form of an enactment is not therefore to be considered the law of the land."³ fruits thereof. Harbison v. Knoxville Iron Co., supra.]

¹ 2 Inst. 50; Bouv. Law Dic. "Due process of Law," "Law of the Land;" State v. Simons, 2 Speers, 767; Vanzant v. Waddell, 2 Yerg. 260; Wally's Heirs v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511; Greene v. Briggs, 1 Curt. 311; Murray's Lessee v. Hoboken Land Co., 18 How. 272, 276, per Curtis, J.; Parsons v. Russell, 11 Mich. 113, 129, per Manning, J.; Ervine's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 256; Banning v. Taylor, 24 Pa. St. 289, 292; State v. Staten, 6 Cold. 244; Huber v. Reily, 53 Pa. St. 112.

² See ante, p. 15.

³ Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 519; Works of Webster, Vol. V.

The definition here given is apt and suitable as applied to judicial proceedings, which cannot be valid unless they "proceed upon inquiry" and "render judgment only after trial." It is entirely correct, also, in assuming that a legislative enactment is not necessarily the law of the land. "The words 'by the law of the land,' as used in the Constitution, do not mean a statute passed for the purpose of working the wrong. That construction would render the restriction absolutely nugatory, and turn this part of the Constitution into mere nonsense. The people would be made to say to the two houses: 'You shall be vested with the legislative power of the State, but no one shall be disfranchised or deprived of any of the rights or privileges of a citizen, unless you pass a statute for that purpose. In other words, you shall not do the wrong unless you choose to do it.'"¹ When the law

p. 487. And he proceeds: "If this were so, acts of attainder, bills of pains and penalties, acts of confiscation, acts reversing judgments, and acts directly transferring one man's estate to another, legislative judgments, decrees and forfeitures in all possible forms, would be the law of the land. Such a strange construction would render constitutional provisions of the highest importance completely inoperative and void. It would tend directly to establish the union of all powers in the legislature. There would be no general permanent law for courts to administer or men to live under. The administration of justice would be an empty form, an idle ceremony. Judges would sit to execute legislative judgments and decrees, not to declare the law or administer the justice of the country."

¹ Per Bronson, J., in Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, 145. See also Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. 59, 30 Am. Dec. 430; Ervine's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 256; Arrowsmith v. Burlingim, 4 McLean, 489; Lane v. Dorman, 4 Ill. 238; Reed v. Wright, 2 Greene (Iowa), 15; Woodcock v. Bennett, 1 Cow. 711; Kinney v. Beverley, 2 H. & M. 538; Commonwealth v. Byrne, 20 Gratt. 165; Rowan v. State, 30 Wis. 129, 11 Am. Rep. 559. "Those terms, 'law of the land,' do not mean merely an act of the General Assembly. If they did, every restriction upon the legislative authority would be at once abrogated. For what more can the citizen suffer than to be taken, imprisoned, disseised of his freehold, liberties, and privileges; be outlawed, exiled, and destroyed, and be deprived of his property, his liberty, and his life, without crime? Yet all this he may suffer if an act of the assembly simply denouncing those penalties upon particular persons, or a particular class of persons, be in itself a law of the land within the sense of the Constitution; for what is in that sense the law of the land must be duly observed by all, and upheld and enforced by the courts. In reference to the infliction of punishment and divesting the rights of property, it has been repeatedly held in this State, and it is believed in every other of the Union, that there are limitations upon the legislative power, notwithstanding these words; and that the clause itself means that such legislative acts as profess in themselves directly to punish persons, or to deprive the citizen of his property, without trial before the judicial tribunals, and a decision upon the matter of right, as determined by the laws under which it vested, according to the course, mode, and usages of the common law, as derived from our forefathers, are not effectually 'laws of the land' for those purposes." Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. 15, 25 Am. Dec. 677. In Bank of Michigan v. Williams, 5 Wend. 478, 480, Mr. Justice Sutherland says, vested rights "are protected under general principles of paramount, and, in this country, of universal authority." Mr. Broom says: "It is indeed an essential principle of the law of England, 'that the subject hath an undoubted property in his goods and possessions; otherwise there shall remain no of the land is spoken of, "undoubtedly a pre-existing rule of conduct" is intended, "not an ex post facto rescript or decree made for the occasion. The design" is "to exclude arbitrary power from every branch of the government; and there would be no exclusion if such rescripts or decrees were to take effect in the form of a statute."¹ There are nevertheless many cases in which the title to property may pass from one person to another, without the intervention of judicial proceedings, properly so called; and in preceding pages it has been shown that special legislative acts designed to accomplish the like end, are allowable in some cases. The necessity for "general rules," therefore, is not such as to preclude the legislature from establishing special rules for particular cases, provided the particular cases range themselves under some general rule of legislative power; nor is there any requirement of judicial action which demands that, in every case, the parties interested shall have a hearing in court.²

On the other hand, we shall find that general rules may sometimes be as obnoxious as special, if they operate to deprive individual citizens of vested rights. While every man has a right to require that his own controversies shall be judged by the same rules which are applied in the controversies of his neighbors, the whole community is also entitled, at all times, to demand the protection of the ancient principles which shield private rights against arbitrary interference, even though such interference may be under a rule impartial in its operation. It is not the partial nature of the rule, so much as its arbitrary and unusual character, that condemns it as unknown to the law of the land. Mr. Justice Edwards has said in one case: "Due process of law undoubtedly means, in the due course of legal proceedings, accord-more industry, no more justice, no more valor; for who will labor? who will hazard his person in the day of battle for that which is not his own? The Banker's Case, by Turner, 10. And therefore our customary law is not more solicitous about anything than 'to preserve the property of the subject from the innovation of the prerogative.' Ibid." Broom's Const. Law, 228.

¹ Giles, Ch. J., in Norman v. Helst, 5 W. & S. 171, 173. There is no power which can authorize the dispossession by force of an owner whose property has been sold for taxes, without giving him opportunity for trial. Calhoun v. Fletcher, 68 Ala. 574.

² See Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y.

378, 432, per Selden, J. In Janes v. Reynolds, 2 Tex. 259, Chief Justice Hemphill says: "The terms 'law of the land' . . . are now, in their most usual acceptation, regarded as general public laws, binding upon all the members of the community, under all circumstances, and not partial or private laws, affecting the rights of private individuals or classes of individuals." And see Vanzant v. Walldell, 2 Yerg. 269, per Peck, J.; Hard v. Nearing, 44 Barb. 472. Nevertheless there are many cases, as we have shown, ante, pp. 140, 152, in which private laws may be passed in entire accord with the general public rules which govern the State; and we shall refer to more cases further on.

ing to those rules and forms which have been established for the protection of private rights."¹ And we have met in no judicial decision a statement that embodies more tersely and accurately the correct view of the principle we are considering, than the following, from an opinion by Mr. Justice Johnson of the Supreme Court of the United States: "As to the words from Magna Charta incorporated in the Constitution of Maryland, after volumes spoken and written with a view to their exposition, the good sense of mankind has at length settled down to this,—that they were intended to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government, unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice."²

The principles, then, upon which the process is based are to determine whether it is "due process" or not, and not any considerations of mere form. Administrative and remedial process may be changed from time to time, but only with due regard to the landmarks established for the protection of the citizen.³ When the government through its established agencies interferes with the title to one's property, or with his independent enjoyment of it, and its action is called in question as not in accordance with the law of the land, we are to test its validity by those principles of civil liberty and constitutional protection which have our guide Zylstra's Case, 1 Bay, 382; White v. Kendrick, 1 Brev. 469; State v. Coleman & Maxey, 1 McMull. 502, there can be no hesitation in saying that these words mean the common law and the statute law existing in this State at the adoption of our constitution. Altogether they constitute a body of law prescribing the course of justice to which a free man is to be considered amenable for all time to come." Per O'Neill, J., in State v. Simons, 2 Speers, 761, 767. See, also, State v. Doherty, 60 Me. 509. It must not be understood from this, however, that it would not be competent to change either the common law or the statute law, so long as the principles therein embodied, and which protected private rights, were not departed from.

¹ Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 202, 209. See, also, State v. Staten, 6 Cold. 233; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37; Pearson v. Yewdale, 95 U. S. 294; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; Davidson v. New Orleans, 90 U. S. 97; and cases in notes pp. 19, 19, ante, in which the true meaning of due process of law is considered. Also San Mateo County v. Southern Pacific R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 722. [See Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Bullin v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 132, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Holden v. Hardy, 149 U. S. 393, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Hodgson v. Vermont, 165 U. S. 232, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 245, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Hallinger v. Davis, 143 U. S. 314, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; also extensive citations of cases in notes upon "what constitutes due process of law," appended to 42 L. ed. U. S. 865, and 24 L. ed. U. S. 436.]

² Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 244. "What is meant by 'the law of the land'?" In this State, taking as

³ Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 513, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 232; [Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494, and cases therein cited. States have full power to regulate the amendment of pleadings in their courts. Carr v. Nichols, 137 U. S. 570, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640.]

become established in our system of laws, and not generally by rules that pertain to forms of procedure merely. In judicial proceedings the law of the land requires a hearing before condemnation, and judgment before dispossession ;"¹ but when property is appropriated by the government to public uses, or the legislature interferes to give direction to its title through remedial statutes, different considerations from those which regard the controversies between man and man must prevail, different proceedings are required, and we have only to see whether the interference can be justified by the established rules applicable to the special case. Due process of law in each particular case means, such an exertion of the powers of government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs.²

¹ Vanzant v. Waddell, 2 Yerg. 260; Lenz v. Charlton, 23 Wis. 478; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714.

² See Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378, 432, per Selden, J.; Kalloch v. Superior Court, 56 Cal. 229; Baltimore v. Scharf, 54 Md. 499. In State v. Allen, 2 McCord, 56, the court, in speaking of process for the collection of taxes, say: "We think that any legal process which was originally founded in necessity, has been consecrated by time, and approved and acquiesced in by universal consent, must be considered an exception to the right of trial by jury, and is embraced in the alternative 'law of the land.'" To the same effect are In re Hackett, 53 Vt. 354; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201. And see Hard v. Nearing, 44 Barb. 472; New Orleans v. Cannon, 10 La. Ann. 764; McCarroll v. Weeks, 5 Hayw. 246; Sears v. Cottrell, 5 Mich. 250; Gibson v. Mason, 5 Nev. 283. The fourteenth amendment has not enlarged the meaning of the words "due process of law." Whatever was such in a State before that amendment, is so still. Hence, a statute is good which allows execution on judgments against a town to be levied on the goods of individual inhabitants. Eames v. Savage, 77 Me. 212. Taking property under the taxing power is due process of law. Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78; High v. Shoemaker, 22 Cal. 363. [Weyerhauser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. Upon sufficiency of opportunity for hearing upon assessment, see Pittsburgh C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.] See, also, Cruikshanks v. Charleston, 1 McCord, 360; State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill, 487; Harper v. Commissioners, 23 Ga. 566; Myers v. Park, 8 Heisk. 550. So is the seizure and sale under proceedings prescribed by law, of stray beasts. Knoxville v. King, 7 Lea, 441; Hamlin v. Mack, 33 Mich. 103; Stewart v. Hunter, 16 Oreg. 62, 16 Pac. 876. That the owner should have notice of the sale, see Varden v. Mount, 78 Ky. 86. [A collateral-inheritance tax-law which makes no provision for notice to heirs, legatees, and devisees, and affords no opportunity for them to be heard in the matter of appraisal, is void. Ferry v. Campbell, 110 Iowa, 290, 81 N. W. 604, 50 L. R. A. 92.] An act allowing an agent of a humane society to condemn and kill an animal and fix its value conclusively without notice is not due process of law. King v. Hayes, 80 Me. 206, 13 Atl. 882. But a health officer may be empowered to kill a diseased beast, if the owner may afterwards contest the existence of conditions which made the beast a nuisance, and obtain redress, if such conditions are not shown to have existed. Newark & S. O. Co. v. Hunt, 50 N. J. L. 308, 12 Atl. 697. [Where such officer seizes and kills healthy animals, the owner does not thereby acquire any claim against the State. Houston v. State, 98 Wis. 481, 74 N. W. 111, 42 L. R. A. 89.] It is Private rights may be interfered with by either the legislative, executive, or judicial department of the government. The executive department in every instance must show authority of law for its action, and occasion does not often arise for an examination of the limits which circumscribe its powers. The legislative department may in some cases constitutionally authorize interference, and in others may interpose by direct action. Elsewhere we shall consider the police power of the State, and endeavor to show how completely all the property, as well as all the people within the State, are subject to control under it, within certain limits, and for the purposes for which that power is exercised. The right of eminent domain and the right of taxation will also be discussed separately, and it will appear that under each the law of the land sanctions divesting individuals of their property against their will, and by somewhat summary proceedings. In every government there is inherent authority to appropriate the property of the citizen for the necessities of the State, and constitutional provisions do not confer the power, though they generally surround it with safeguards to prevent abuse. The restraints are, that when specific property is taken, a pecuniary compensation, agreed upon or determined by judicial inquiry, must be paid; and in other cases property can only be taken for the support of the government, and each citizen can only be required to contribute his proportion to that end. But there is no rule or principle known to our system under which private property can be taken from one person and transferred to another, for the private use and benefit of such other person, whether by general law or by special enactment.¹ The purpose must be public, and must have no violation of this principle to exclude from the State debauched women who are being imported for improper purposes. Matter of Ah Fook, 49 Cal. 403. [Upon what constitutes "due process of law," see valuable notes to 42 L. ed. U. S. 865, and 24 L. ed. U. S. 438, and see cases cited in note 1, page 605, ante. Issuance and record of writ of error in court of first instance may be made sufficient notice to adverse party that suit is to be continued in the higher court. State v. Canfield, 40 Fla. 38, 23 So. 591. 42 L. R. A. 72. Expulsion from benevolent society under proper by-laws is, though it deprives of property rights. Moore v. Nath. Com. of K. & L. of S. — Kan. —, 70 Pac. 352.]

¹ Lebanon Sch. Dist. v. Female Sem., 12 Atl. 857 (Pa.); People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 18 N. E. 692. The latter case is

with reference to the transfer to a receiver of the assets of a dissolved corporation. It is not competent to provide that the claimant or purchaser of property, for the seizure or sale of which an indemnifying bond has been taken and returned by the officer, shall be barred of any action against the officer, and confined to his action on the bond as his only remedy. Foule v. Mann, 53 Iowa. 42, 3 N. W. 814; Sunberg v. Babcock, 61 Iowa, 601, 16 N. W. 716. See, also, Ehlers v. Strockle, 37 Mich. 261. Contra, Hein v. Davidson, 96 N. Y. 175. Compare Dodd v. Thomas, 69 Mo. 364. A lien may be created by statute in favor of a laborer for a contractor, as against the owner of logs, between whom and the laborer there is no privity of contract. Rally v. Stephenson, 62 Mich. 509, 29 N. W. 89. But reference to the needs or convenience of the public, and no reason of general public policy will be sufficient to validate other transfers when they concern existing vested rights.¹

Nevertheless, in many cases and many ways remedial legislation may affect the control and disposition of property, and in some cases may change the nature of rights, give remedies where none existed before, and even divest legal titles in favor of substantial equities where the legal and equitable rights do not chance to concur in the same persons.

The chief restriction upon this class of legislation is, that vested rights must not be disturbed; but in its application as a shield of protection, the term "vested rights" is not used in any narrow or technical sense, or as importing a power of legal control merely, but rather as implying a vested interest which it is right and equitable that the government should recognize and protect, and of which the individual could not be deprived arbitrarily without injustice. The right to private property is a sacred right; not, as has been justly said, "introduced as the result of princes' edicts, concessions, and charters, but it was the such laborer may not enforce a lien in spite of any contract between the contractor and owner, or of payment by the latter. John Spry Lumber Co. v. Sawt Sav. Bank, 77 Mich. 199, 43 N. W. 778. Nor can the owner's failure to enjoin the labor be made conclusive evidence of his assent to it. Meyer v. Berlandi, 39 Minn. 448, 40 N. W. 513. A mechanic's lien may be made applicable to buildings in process of erection. Colpeper v. Trinity Church, 24 Neb. 113, 37 N. W. 931. [The one in possession of property may be taxed therefor, even though the property belongs to another. Such taxation is not a taking of the property of one person for the benefit of another, for the taxpayer has a lien upon the property for the tax he has paid. Minneapolis & N. El. Co. v. Trall Co., 9 N. D. 213, 82 N. W. 727, 50 L. R. A. 263. One electric light company cannot be authorized to use poles of another unless provision is made for compensation and for regulation of joint use. Citizens' El. Light & P. Co. v. Sands, 65 Mich. 551, 55 N. W. 452, 20 L. R. A. 411. Statutes inaugurating the so-called "Torrrens System" for registration of land titles have been before the courts and attacked for violation of the rule of "due process," but have been usually upheld. Tyler v. Registration

Court Judges, 175 Mass. 71, 55 N. E. 812, 51 L. R. A. 433; People ex rel. Deneen v. Simon, 175 Ill. 165, 52 N. E. 349, 58 Am. St. 775, 44 L. R. A. 801; State ex rel. Douglas v. School District, 55 Minn. 230, 58 N. W. 751, 57 L. R. A. 237. The validity of such act was denied in State ex rel. Monnett v. Guilbert, 55 Ohio St. 575, 47 N. E. 551, 38 L. R. A. 519, 69 Am. St. 755. And see the Massachusetts case in the Supreme Court of the United States, 179 U. S. 405, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203.]

¹ Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140; Osborn v. Hart, 24 Wis. 89, 91, 1 Am. Rep. 161. In Matter of Albany Street, 11 Wend. 149, 25 Am. Dec. 618, it is intimated that the clause in the Constitution of New York, withholding private property from public use except upon compensation made, of itself implies that it is not to be taken in invitum for individual use. And see Matter of John & Cherry Streets, 19 Wend. 659. A different opinion seems to have been held by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, when they decided in Harvey v. Thomas, 10 Watts, 63, that the legislature might authorize the laying out of private ways over the lands of unwilling parties, to connect the coal-beds with the works of public improvement, the constitution not in terms prohibiting it. See note to p. 765, post.

old fundamental law, springing from the original frame and constitution of the realm."¹

But as it is a right which rests upon equities, it has its reasonable limits and restrictions; it must have some regard to the general welfare and public policy; it cannot be a right which is to be examined, settled, and defended on a distinct and separate consideration of the individual case, but rather on broad and general grounds, which embrace the welfare of the whole community, and which seek the equal and impartial protection of the interests of all.²

And it may be well at this point to examine in the light of the reported cases the question, What is a vested right in the constitutional sense? and when we have solved that question, we may be the better able to judge under what circumstances one may be justified in resisting a change in the general laws of the State affecting his interests, and how far special legislation may control his rights without coming under legal condemnation. In organized society every man holds all he possesses, and looks forward to all he hopes for, through the aid and under the protection of the laws;³ but as changes of circumstances and of public opinion,

¹ Arg. Nightingale v. Bridges, Show. 138. See also case of Alton Woods, 1 Rep. 45a; Alcock v. Cooke, 5 Bing. 340; Bowman v. Middleton, 1 Bay, 252; Kennetec Purchase v. Laboree, 2 Me. 275, 11 Am. Dec. 79; ante, p. 63, and note, p. 244, and note. Any one may acquire and hold any species of property, and the acquisition cannot be taxed as a privilege. But the use may be regulated to prevent injury to others. Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291, 35 Am. Dec. 72.

² The evidences of a man's rights — the deeds, bills of sale, promissory notes, and the like — are protected equally with his lands and chattels, or rights and franchises of any kind; and the certificate of registration and right to vote may be properly included in the category. State v. Staten, 6 Cold. 233. See Davies v. McKeeby, 5 Nev. 323.

³ The interest acquired in the practice of learned professions, that is, "the right to continue their prosecution," is property which cannot be arbitrarily taken away. Field, J., in Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213. The office of an attorney is property, and he cannot be deprived of it except for professional misconduct or proved unfitness.

The public discussion of the official conduct of a judge is not professional misconduct, unless it is designed to acquire an influence over the conduct of the judge in the exercise of his judicial functions by the instrumentality of popular prejudice. Ex parte Steinman, 95 Pa. St. 220. But see State v. McClagherty, 83 W. Va. 250, 10 S. E. 407. [Right of property involves right to dispose of same, and statute prescribing who shall and who shall not sell the common proprietary medicines and restricting such sale to registered pharmacists is taking property without due process. Noel v. State, 187 Ill. 587, 58 N. E. 616, 79 Am. St. 238, 52 L. R. A. 287. Property in the constitutional sense is said, in Harbison v. Knoxville Iron Co., 103 Tenn. 421, 53 S. W. 955, 78 Am. St. 682, to include everything having an exchangeable value and as well the right to acquire and dispose of the thing which is the subject of property rights. The office of Governor of a State is not "property." Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800, 1009. It is held in Hoover v. McChesney, 81 Fed. Rep. 472, that the right to use the mails is "property" in the sense that one cannot be deprived of it without as well as other reasons affecting the public policy, are all the while calling for changes in the laws, and as these changes must influence more or less the value and stability of private possessions, and strengthen or destroy well-founded hopes, and as the power to make very many of them could not be disputed without denying the right of the political community to prosper and advance, it is obvious that many rights, privileges, and exemptions which usually pertain to ownership under a particular state of the law, and many reasonable expectations, cannot be regarded as vested rights in any legal sense.¹ In many cases the courts, in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction, cause the property vested in one person to be transferred to another, either through the exercise of a statutory power, or by the direct force of their judgments or decrees, or by means of compulsory conveyances. If in these cases the courts have jurisdiction, they proceed in accordance with "the law of the land;" and the right of one man is divested by way of enforcing a higher and better right in another. Of these cases we do not propose to speak: constitutional questions cannot well arise concerning them, unless they are attended by circumstances of irregularity which are supposed to a chance to be heard and defend. The so-called "right to privacy" has, in several cases, been asserted and protection asked for it through the judicial department of the government, but in the cases which have arisen the courts have declined to recognize such a property or personal right. Atkinson v. Doherty & Co., 121 Mich. 372, 80 N. W. 283, 46 L. R. A. 219, 80 Am. St. 607, and cases cited in the opinion; Roberson v. Rochester, etc. Co., 171 N. Y. 538, 64 N. E. 442; Articles in 4 Harv. Law Rev. 193; 22 Canada Law Times, 281, by E. L. Adams, counsel in Roberson case, supra; 175 No. Am. Review, 331; 2 Columbia Law Review, 437; Curless v. E. W. Walker Co., 57 Fed. Rep. 434, 31 L. R. A. 283, 64 Fed. Rep. 239; Schuyler v. Curtis, 147 N. Y. 434, 42 N. E. 22, 31 L. R. A. 284, 49 Am. St. 671. See also articles in 10 Am. Lawyer, 293, and 55 Cent. Law Journal, 123. The ticket brokerage legislation has been frequently before the courts on constitutional grounds and as against the constitutional objection has been usually upheld. Fry v. State, 63 Ind. 552, 39 Am. Rep. 238; Ex parte Lorenzen, 128 Cal. 431, 61 Pac. 68, 59 L. R. A. 55; Bardick v. People, 149 Ill. 600, 36 N. E. 948, 24 L. R. A. 152, 41 Am. St. 329. Contra, People ex rel.

Tyroler v. Warden, etc., 157 N. Y. 113, 61 N. E. 1006, 43 L. R. A. 264, 68 Am. St. 765.]

¹ "A person has no property, no vested interest, in any rule of the common law. . . . Rights of property which have been created by the common law, cannot be taken away without due process; but the law itself, as a rule of conduct, may be changed at the will, or even at the whim of the legislature, unless prevented by constitutional limitations." Wells, Ch. J., in Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134. See Railroad Co. v. Richmond, 36 U. S. 521; Transportation Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548; post, 548, note. The State may take away rights in a public fishery by appropriating the water to some other use. Howes v. Grush, 131 Mass. 207. [But not the previously acquired right of a tenant to enter and extract ores without accounting therefor. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. v. Mont. Ore. P. Co., 25 Mont. 41, 63 Pac. 825. The rights of a stockholder as the owner of stock cannot be taken through the retirement of stock by conversion into bonds. Berger v. United States Steel Corporation, 63 N. J. Eq. 809, 63 Ad. 68, rev. 63 N. J. Eq. 599, 63 Atl. 14.]

take them out of the general rule. All vested rights are held subject to the laws for the enforcement of public duties and private contracts, and for the punishment of wrongs; and if they become divested through the operation of those laws, it is only by way of enforcing the obligations of justice and good order. What we desire to reach in this connection is the true meaning of the term "vested rights" when employed for the purpose of indicating the interests of which one cannot be deprived by the mere force of legislative enactment, or by any other than the recognized modes of transferring title against the consent of the owner, to which we have alluded.

Interests in Expectancy.

First, it would seem that a right cannot be considered a vested right, unless it is something more than such a mere expectation as may be based upon an anticipated continuance of the present general laws: it must have become a title, legal or equitable, to the present or future enjoyment of property, or to the present or future enforcement of a demand, or a legal exemption from a demand made by another.¹ Acts of the legislature, as has been well said by Mr. Justice Woodbury, cannot be regarded as opposed to fundamental axioms of legislation, "unless they impair rights which are vested; because most civil rights are derived from public laws; and if, before the rights become vested in particular individuals, the convenience of the State procures amendments or repeals of those laws, those individuals have no cause of complaint. The power that authorizes or proposes to give, may always revoke before an interest is perfected in the donee."² And Chancellor Kent, in speaking of retrospective statutes, says that while such a statute, "affecting and changing vested rights, is very generally considered in this country as founded on unconstitutional principles, and consequently inoperative and void," yet that "this doctrine is not understood to apply to remedial statutes, which may be of a retrospective nature, provided they do not impair contracts, or disturb absolute vested rights, and only go to confirm rights already existing, and in furtherance of the remedy by curing defects and adding to the means of enforcing existing obligations. Such statutes have been held valid when clearly just and reasonable, and conducive to the general welfare, even though they might operate in a degree upon existing rights."¹

¹ Weidenger v. Spruance, 161 Ill. 278. is vested. Moore v. Irby, 69 Ark. 102, See Wanser v. Atkinson, 43 N. J. 571. 61 N. W. 371.]
 [The right of a minor to redeem, when ² Merrill v. Searburne, 1 N. H. 149, 213, 8 Am. Dec. 52. See Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304. And cases, ante, p. 402, note 2.

And it is because a mere expectation of property in the future is not considered a vested right, that the rules of descent (a) are held subject to change in their application to all estates not already passed to the heir by the death of the owner. No one is heir to the living; and the heir presumptive has no other reason to rely upon succeeding to the property than the promise held out by the statute of descents. But this promise is no more than a declaration of the legislature as to its present view of public policy as regards the proper order of succession, — a view which may at any time change, and then the promise may properly be withdrawn, and a new course of descent be declared. The expectation is not property; it cannot be sold or mortgaged; it is not subject to debts; and it is not in any manner taken notice of by the law until the moment of the ancestor's death, when the statute of descents comes in, and for reasons of general public policy transfers the estate to persons occupying particular relations to the deceased in preference to all others. It is not until that moment that there is any vested right in the person who becomes heir, to be protected by the Constitution. An anticipated interest in property cannot be said to be vested in any person so long as the owner of the interest in possession has full power, by virtue of his ownership, to cut off the expectant right by grant or devise.²

If this be so, the nature of estates must, to a certain extent, be subject to legislative control and modification.³ In this country estates tail have been very generally changed into estates in fee simple, by statutes the validity of which is not disputed.⁴ Such

¹ 1 Kent, Com. 445. See Briggs v. Hubbard, 19 Vt. 88; Bridgeport v. Hensatonic R. R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Baughner v. Nelson, 9 Gill, 293; Gilman v. Cutts, 23 N. H. 373, 382; Foule v. Mann, 53 Iowa, 42, 3 N. W. 184.

² Lucy Lawrence, 1 Redfield, Sur. Rep. 310. [See also Bass v. Roanoke Nav. & W. P. Co., 111 N. C. 439, 16 S. E. 402, 19 L. R. A. 247, and note on power to defeat contingent interests; McNeer v. McNeer, 142 Ill. 388, 32 N. E. 681, 19 L. R. A. 256, and note on power to change or destroy dower, curtesy, &c.]

But after property has once vested under the laws of descent, it cannot be divested by any change in those laws. Norman v. Heist, 5 W. & S. 171. And the right to change the law of descents in the case of the estate of a person named without his consent being had, was denied in Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210. See post, pp. 512, 540, 541, and notes.

³ Smith on Stat. and Const. Construction, 412.

⁴ De Mill v. Lockwood, 3 Blatch. 56. The legislature may by special act confirm a conveyance in fee simple by a a [These rules do not control succession to land among the members of Indian tribes. Such succession, so long as the tribal organization is still recognized by the Federal government, is according to the laws, usages and customs of the tribe. Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.]

statutes operate to increase and render more valuable the interest which the tenant in tail possesses, and are not therefore open to objection by him.¹ But no other person in these cases has any vested right, either in possession or expectancy, to be affected by such change; and the expectation of the heir presumptive must be subject to the same control as in other cases.²

The cases of rights in property to result from the marriage relation must be referred to the same principle. At the common law the husband immediately on the marriage succeeded to certain rights in the real and personal estate which the wife then possessed. These rights became vested rights at once, and any subsequent alteration in the law could not take them away.³ But other interests were merely in expectancy. He could have a right as tenant by the courtesy initiate in the wife's estates of inheritance the moment a child was born of the marriage, who might by possibility become heir to such estates. This right would be property, subject to conveyance and to be taken for debts; and must therefore be regarded as a vested right, no more subject to legislative interference than other expectant interests which have ceased to be mere contingencies and become fixed. But while this interest remains in expectancy merely,—that is to say, until it becomes initiate,—the legislature must have full right to modify or even to abolish it.⁴ And the same rule will tenant in tail. Comstock v. Gay, 51 Conn. 45.

¹ On the same ground it has been held in Massachusetts that statutes converting existing estates in joint tenancy into estates in common were unobjectionable. They did not impair vested rights, but rendered the tenure more beneficial. Holbrook v. Finney, 4 Mass. 565, 3 Am. Dec. 243; Miller v. Miller, 16 Mass. 59; Annable v. Patch, 3 Pick. 360; Burghardt v. Turner, 12 Pick. 533. Moreover, such statutes do no more than either tenant at the common law has a right to do, by conveying his interest to a stranger. See Bombaugh v. Bombaugh, 11 S. & R. 192; Wildes v. Vanvorhis, 15 Gray, 139.

² See 1 Wash. Real Pr. 81-84, and notes. The exception to this statement, if any, must be the case of tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct: where the estate of the tenant has ceased to be an inheritance, and a reversionary right has become vested.

³ Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 202. See Mr. Bishop's criticism of this case—which, however, does not reach the general principle above stated—in 2 Bishop, Law of Married Women, § 46, and note. Rights under an ante-nuptial contract, which become vested by the marriage, cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation. Deaner v. Jordan, 27 Minn. 295, 7 N. W. 140. [Where at the time community property is acquired, power to dispose of it rests entirely in the husband, subsequent legislation requiring the assent of the wife to its disposition is invalid with regard to such property. Spreckels v. Spreckels, 116 Cal. 336, 48 Pac. 223, 36 L. R. A. 497, 58 Am. St. 170. An act taking away a statutory right of the husband in the wife's land which existed at the time of the marriage, is void as to such right. Rose v. Rose, 104 Ky. 48, 46 S. W. 524, 84 Am. St. 430.]

⁴ Hathorn v. Lyon, 2 Mich. 93; Tong v. Marvin, 15 Mich. 89. And see the cases cited in the next note. The right of a tenant by the courtesy initiate is vested, and it cannot be taken away to the injury of the husband's creditors.

apply to the case of dower; though the difference in the requisites of the two estates are such that the inchoate right to dower does not become property, or anything more than a mere expectancy at any time before it is consummated by the husband's death.¹ In neither of these cases does the marriage alone give a Wyatt v. Smith, 25 W. Va. 813. See Hershizer v. Florence, 33 Ohio St. 516. But see to the contrary, Breeding v. Davis, 77 Va. 639; Alexander v. Alexander, 85 Va. 353, 7 S. E. 335.

¹ When dower is duly assigned it becomes a right not to be divested by subsequent legislation. Talbot v. Talbot, 14 R. I. 57. The law in force at the death of the husband is the measure of the right of the widow to dower. Noel v. Ewing, 9 Ind. 37; May v. Fletcher, 40 Ind. 575; Lucas v. Sawyer, 17 Iowa, 517; Sturdevant v. Norris, 30 Iowa, 65; Meitzel's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 449; Barbour v. Barbour, 46 Me. 9; Magee v. Young, 40 Miss. 164; Bates v. McDowell, 58 Miss. 815; Walker v. Deaver, 5 Mo. App. 139; Guerin v. Moore, 25 Minn. 462; Morrison v. Rice, 35 Minn. 430, 29 N. W. 138; Ware v. Owens, 42 Ala. 212; Pratt v. Tofft, 14 Mich. 191; Bennett v. Harms, 51 Wis. 251, 8 N. W. 222. But if we apply this rule universally, we shall run into some absurdities, and most certainly in some cases encounter difficulties which will prove insurmountable. Suppose the land has been sold by the husband without relinquishment of dower, and the dower right is afterwards by statute enlarged, will the wife obtain the enlarged dower at the expense of the purchaser? Or suppose it is diminished; will the purchaser thereby acquire an enlarged estate which he never bought or paid for? These are important questions, and the authorities furnish very uncertain and unsatisfactory answers to them. In Illinois it is held that though the estate is contingent, the right to dower, when marriage and seisin unite, is vested and absolute, and is as completely beyond legislative control as is the principal estate. Russell v. Rumsey, 35 Ill. 362; Steele v. Gellatly, 41 Ill. 39. See Lawrence v. Miller, 2 N. Y. 245. But it is also held that after marriage a new right corresponding to dower may be conferred upon the husband, and that his homestead right depends on the law in force at the wife's death. Henson v. Moore, 104 Ill. 403. In North Carolina before 1837, the wife had dower only in the lands of which the husband died seised; the statute then restored the common-law right to dower held to be inapplicable to lands which the husband had previously acquired. Sutton v. Aiken, 66 N. C. 172, 8 Am. Rep. 509; Hunting v. Johnson, 68 N. C. 189; Jenkins v. Jenkins, 82 N. C. 202; O'Reilly v. Williams, 84 N. C. 281. In Iowa it is held that when the law of dower is changed after the husband has conveyed lands subject to the inchoate right, the dower is to be measured by the law in force when the conveyance was made. Davis v. O'Ferrall, 4 Greene (Iowa), 155; Young v. Wolcott, 1 Iowa, 174; O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4 Iowa, 351; Moore v. Kent, 37 Iowa, 29; Craven v. Winter, 32 Iowa, 471. In Indiana, on the other hand, a statute enlarging the right of dower to one-third of the land in fee simple was so applied as to deprive the widow, in cases where the husband had previously conveyed, of both the statutory dower and the dower at the common law, thereby enlarging the estate of the purchaser. Strong v. Clem, 12 Ind. 37; Logan v. Walton, 12 Ind. 839; Bowen v. Preston, 48 Ind. 367; Taylor v. Sample, 51 Ind. 423. See May v. Fletcher, 40 Ind. 575. A provision that upon a judicial sale of the husband's property the inchoate dower right shall vest does not apply to a mechanic's lien resting on the whole property before the act passed. Bauer v. Shepard, 107 Ind. 417, 8 N. E. 280. In Missouri it is held that the widow takes dower according to the law in force at the husband's death, except as against those who had previously acquired specific rights in the estate, and as to them her right must depend on the law in force at the time their rights originated. Kennedy v. Insurance Co., 11 Mo. 204. In Williams v. Courtney, 77 Mo. 587, it is held that marriage and seisin concurring, dower cannot be barred by a guardian's sale of the husband's property. In Massachusetts vested right. It gives only a capacity to acquire a right. The same remark may be made regarding the husband's expectant interest in the after-acquired personality of the wife; it is subject to any changes in the law made before his right becomes vested by the acquisition.¹

Change of Remedies.

Again: the right to a particular remedy is not a vested right. This is the general rule; and the exceptions are of those peculiar cases in which the remedy is part of the right itself.² As a general rule, every State has complete control over the remedies which it offers to suitors in its courts.³ It may abolish one class of courts and create another. It may give a new and additional remedy for a right or equity already in existence.⁴ And it may doubt is expressed of the right of the legislature to cut off the inchoate right of dower. Dunn v. Sargent, 101 Mass. 333, 340. But in Hamilton v. Hirsch, 2 Wash. Terr. 223, 5 Pac. 215, such power is affirmed.

¹ Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 202; Norris v. Beyea, 13 N. Y. 273; Kelly v. McCarthy, 3 Bradf. 7. And see Rumb v. Sawyer, 21 Conn. 331; Clark v. McCrery, 12 S. & M. 247; Jackson v. Lyon, 9 Cow. 394; ante, pp. 406-415. On the point whether the husband can be regarded as having an interest in the wife's choses in action, before he has reduced them to possession, see Bishop, Law of Married Women, Vol. II. §§ 45, 46. If the wife has a right to personal property subject to a contingency, the husband's contingent interest therein cannot be taken away by subsequent legislation. Dunn v. Sargent, 101 Mass. 333. It is competent to provide by statute that married women shall hold their property free from claims of husbands, and to make the law apply to those already married. Rugh v. Ottenheimer, 6 Oreg. 231, 25 Am. Rep. 513. See Pritchard v. Citizens' Bank, 8 La. 130, 23 Am. Dec. 132. But vested rights belonging to the husband per se cannot thus be divested. Hershlizer v. Florence, 39 Ohio St. 513; Koehler v. Miller, 21 Ill. App. 557.

² See ante, p. 410, and cases cited. It has been held in some cases that the giving of a lien by statute does not confer a vested right, and it may be taken away by a repeal of the statute. See ante, 407, note 1.

³ Rosier v. Hale, 10 Iowa, 470; Smith v. Bryan, 34 Ill. 334; Lord v. Chadbourne, 42 Me. 420; Rockwell v. Hubbell's Adm'rs, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 137; Cusic v. Douglas, 3 Kan. 123; Holloway v. Sherman, 12 Iowa, 282; McCormick v. Rusch, 15 Iowa, 127; McArthur v. Goddin, 12 Bush, 274; Grundy v. Commonwealth, 12 Bush, 350; Briscoe v. Ankettell, 23 Miss. 331.

⁴ Hope v. Johnson, 2 Yerg. 125; Foster v. Essex Bank, 10 Mass. 245, 9 Am. Dec. 163; Paschall v. Whitsett, 11 Ala. 472; Commonwealth v. Commissioners, &c., 6 Pick. 501; Whipple v. Farrar, 3 Mich. 430; United States v. Samperyac, 1 Hemp. 113; Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250; Anonymous, 2 Stew. 223. See also Lewis v. McElvain, 16 Ohio, 347; Trustees, &c. v. McCaughy, 2 Ohio St. 152; Hepburn v. Curtis, 7 Watts, 300; Schenley v. Commonwealth, 36 Pa. St. 29; Bacon v. Callender, 6 Mass. 303; Brackett v. Norcross, 1 Me. 92; Ralston v. Lothain, 18 Ind. 303; White School House v. Post, 31 Conn. 241; Van Rensselaer v. Hayes, 19 N. Y. 68; Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N. Y. 100; Sedgwick Co. v. Bunker, 10 Kan. 493; Danville v. Pace, 25 Gratt. 1. Thus it may give a legal remedy where before there was only one in equity. Bartlett v. Lang, 2 Ala. 401. In Bolton v. Johns, 5 Pa. St. 145, the extreme ground was taken that the legislature might give a lien on property for a prior debt, where no contract would be abolish old remedies and substitute new; or even without substituting any, if a reasonable remedy still remains.¹ If a statute providing a remedy is repealed while proceedings are pending, such proceedings will be thereby determined, unless the legislature shall otherwise provide;² and if it be amended instead of repealed, the judgment pronounced in such proceedings must be according to the law as it then stands.³ And any rule or reguviolated in doing so. In Towle v. Eastern Railroad, 18 N. H. 546, the power of the legislature to give retrospectively a remedy for consequential damages caused by the taking of property for a public use was denied. On the ground that the remedy only is affected, a judgment against a principal on an existing bond, may be made conclusive on the surety. Pickett v. Boyd, 11 Lea, 498. So a resale on mortgage foreclosure, if the purchase price is inadequate, may be allowed as to an existing mortgage. Chaffe v. Aaron, 62 Miss. 29; and a foreclosure of a tax lien, if the title fails. Schoenheit v. Nelson, 16 Neb. 235, 20 N. W. 205. [A lien for the whole value of labor or material furnished may be made to take precedence of any mortgage or other contract, lien, or conveyance arising subsequent to the beginning of the labor or of the supply of the material, but prior to the completion thereof, upon condition that notice of such lien shall be filed prior to filing of mortgage, &c. Hightower v. Bailey & Koerner, 22 Ky. L. 85, 56 S. W. 147, 49 L. R. A. 255.]

¹ Stocking v. Hunt, 3 Denio, 274; Van Rensselaer v. Read, 26 N. Y. 568; Lennon v. New York, 55 N. Y. 381; Parker v. Shannohouse, 1 Phil. (N. C.) 203. An existing remedy may be modified and the modified remedy made applicable to existing rights. Phelps' Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 613.

² Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492; Ludlow v. Johnson, 3 Ohio, 553, 17 Am. Dec. 609; Yeaton v. United States, 5 Cranch, 281; Schooner Rachel v. United States, 6 Cranch, 329. If an act is repealed without any saving of rights, no judgment can afterwards be taken under it. State v. Passaic, 30 N. J. 382; Menard County v. Kincaid, 71 Ill. 587; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, &c. R. R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; Abbott v. Commonwealth, 8 Watts, 517, 34 Am. Dec. 492.

But it is well said in Pennsylvania that before a statute should be construed to take away the remedy for a prior injury, it should clearly appear that it embraces the very case. Chaikern v. Ives, 55 Pa. St. 81. And see Newsom v. Greenwood, 4 Oreg. 119.

³ See cases cited in last note. Also Commonwealth v. Duane, 1 Binney, 601, 2 Am. Dec. 497; United States v. Passmore, 4 Dall. 372; Patterson v. Philbrook, 8 Mass. 161; Commonwealth v. Marshall, 11 Pick. 350; Commonwealth v. Kimball, 21 Pick. 373; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; State v. Daley, 22 Conn. 272; Rathbun v. Wheeler, 29 Ind. 301; State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 155; Bristol v. Supervisors, &c., 20 Mich. 95; Sumner v. Miller, 64 N. C. 688. [Pending the decision upon an appeal, the constitution was so amended that whereas under the old rule the appeal had been upon questions of law alone, it was under the new to be upon questions of fact also. The case was thereupon remanded, in order that the evidence might be incorporated in the record upon a new trial, and the whole brought up again if either party were dissatisfied. Cassard v. Tracy, 52 La. Ann. 835, 27 So. 365, 49 L. R. A. 272. A mechanic's lien, which is a security given by statute and is in the nature of a remedy, rather than a right springing from contract or the rules of the common law, may be abolished by general statute without disturbing vested rights. Wilson v. Simon, 91 Md. 1, 45 Atl. 1022, 80 Am. St. 427. But a statute taking away the lien of a judgment having effect by operation of law upon the recovery of the judgment, is void as to judgments on contracts made before the enactment of the statute. Merchants' Bank v. Ballou, 95 Va. 112, 32 S. E. 481, 81 Am. St. 715, 44 L. R. A. 808. A statute exempting the earnings of a married man from compulsory process for the collection of debt is lation in regard to the remedy which does not, under pretence of modifying or regulating it, take away or impair the right itself, cannot be regarded as beyond the proper province of legislation.¹

But a vested right of action is property in the same sense in which tangible things are property, and is equally protected against arbitrary interference.² Where it springs from contract, or from the principles of the common law, it is not competent for the legislature to take it away.³ And every man is entitled to a certain remedy in the law for all wrongs against his person or his valid as going to the remedy only. Kirkman v. Bird, 22 Utah, 109, 61 Pac. 338, 83 Ann. St. 774.]

¹ See ante, pp. 461-416; Lennon v. New York, 55 N. Y. 861. The right to a particular mode of procedure is not a vested right. A statute allowing attorney's fees may affect pending causes. Drake v. Jordan, 73 Iowa, 707, 36 N. W. 603.

² It is not incompetent, however, to compel the party instituting a suit to pay taxes on the legal process as a condition. Harrison v. Wills, 7 Beick 35, 19 Am. Rep. 604. [That right of action is property and cannot be made worthless by legislative grant of property of one corporation to another, see Angle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 151 U. S. 1, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.]

³ Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. 477, 5 Am. Dec. 291; Strenzel v. Milwaukee & M. R. R. Co., 12 Wis. 67; Clark v. Clark, 16 N. H. 380; Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 202; Thornton v. Turner, 11 Minn. 333; Ward v. Barnard, 1 Ark. 121; Keith v. Ware, 2 Vt. 174; Lyman v. Mower, 2 Vt. 517; Kendall v. Dodge, 3 Vt. 369; State v. Auditor, &c., 33 Mo. 287; Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370; Norris v. Doniphan, 4 Met. (Ky.) 385; Terrill v. Rankin, 2 Bush, 453; Wilder v. Baltimore, &c. Association, 45 Md. 640; Dunlap v. Toledo, &c. Ry. Co., 59 Mich. 479, 15 N. W. 555. The legislature cannot interfere with the enforcement of a judgment by enactments subsequent to it. Stratford v. Sharon, 61 Vt. 123, 17 Atl. 761. An act of the Dominion Parliament of Canada, assuming to authorize a railroad company to issue bonds in substitution for others previously issued, and at a lower rate of interest, and declaring that the holders could be deemed to assent, was held void, because opposed to the fundamental principles of justice. Gebhard v. Railroad Co., 17 Blatch. 415. An equitable title to lands, of which the legal title is in the State, is under the same constitutional protection that the legal title would be. Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 452. Where an individual is allowed to recover a sum as a penalty, the right may be taken away at any time before judgment. Pierce v. Kimball, 9 Me. 54, 23 Am. Dec. 537; Oriental Bank v. Freeze, 18 Me. 103; Engle v. Schurtz, 1 Mich. 150; Confiscation Cases, 7 Wall. 454; Washburn v. Franklin, 35 Barb. 509; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149; O'Kelly v. Athens Manuf. Co., 36 Ga. 51; United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88; Chicago & Alton R. R. Co. v. Adler, 56 Ill. 344; Van Inwagen v. C. Leago, 61 Ill. 31; Lyon v. Morris, 15 Ga. 489; post, p. 547; [but not after judgment. Dunham v. Anders, 128 N. C. 207, 38 S. E. 842.] See also Curtis v. Leavitt, 17 Barb. 309, and 15 N. Y. 9; Coles v. Madison County, Breese, 115, 12 Am. Dec. 161; Farmerlee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 331; post, pp. 523, 537. The legislature may remit penalties accruing to a county. State v. Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co., 12 Gill & J. 399, 38 Am. Dec. 317. Whether claims arising in tort are protected against State legislation by the federal Constitution, see State v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 799; Langford v. Fly, 7 Humph. 585; Parker v. Savage, 5 Lea. 496; Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370; Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 142; Drehman v. Stiel, 41 Mo. 144; 8 Wall. 595. See cases ante, p. 411, note 3. [The rule against disturbing vested rights does not preclude a declaration of a rule of law at variance with that made in other cases. Mobile Transportation Co. v. Mobile, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170.]

property, and cannot be compelled to buy justice, or to submit to conditions not imposed upon his fellows as a means of obtaining it.¹ Nor can a party by his misconduct so forfeit a right that it may be taken from him without judicial proceedings in which the forfeiture shall be declared in due form. Forfeitures of rights and property cannot be adjudged by legislative act, and confiscations without a judicial hearing after due notice would be void as not being due process of law.² Even Congress, it has been held, has no power to protect parties assuming to act under the authority of the general government, during the existence of a civil war, by depriving persons illegally arrested by them of all redress in the courts.³ And if the legislature cannot confiscate ¹ Thus, a person cannot be precluded by test oaths from maintaining suits. McFarland v. Butler, 8 Minn. 116; ante, p. 410, note. Before attacking a tax deed, payment of taxes and value of improvements may be required. Coats v. Hill, 41 Ark. 149. See Coonradt v. Myers, 31 Kan. 30, 2 Pac. 858; Lombard v. Antioch College, 60 Wis. 459, 19 N. W. 367. But free recourse to the courts is denied, if a deposit of double the amount of the purchase-money and all taxes, &c., is required before suit. Lassiter v. Lee, 68 Ala. 287. See post, pp. 526, 527, note.

² Griffin v. Mixon, 38 Miss. 424. See next note. Also Rison v. Farr, 24 Ark. 161; Woodruff v. Scruggs, 27 Ark. 26; Hodgson v. Millward, 3 Grant's Cas. 406; Leek v. Anderson, 57 Cal. 251, a case of forfeiting nets for illegal fishing; Boorman v. Santa Barbara, 65 Cal. 313, 4 Pac. 31, a case of assessing benefits upon lands for improvements without notice. But no constitutional principle is violated by a statute which allows judgment to be entered up against a defendant who has been served with process, unless within a certain number of days he files an affidavit of merits. Hunt v. Lucas, 97 Mass. 404. Nor by an ordinance allowing a city, on default of the owner, to build a sidewalk and charge the property with the expense, if when sued on the tax bill, he has his day in court. Kansas City v. Huling, 87 Mo. 203. An act subjecting a prisoner's property from the time of his arrest to a lien for the fine and costs, is valid. Silver Bow Co. v. Strombaugh, 9 Mont. 81, 22 Pac. 453.

³ Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370. In this case the act of Congress of March 3,

1863, which provided "that any order of the President or under his authority, made at any time during the existence of the present rebellion, shall be a defence in all courts, to any action or prosecution, civil or criminal, pending or to be commenced, for any search, seizure, arrest, or imprisonment, made, done, or committed, or acts omitted to be done, under and by virtue of such order, or under color of any law of Congress," was held to be unconstitutional. The same decision was made in Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 142. It was said in the first of these cases that "this act was passed to deprive the citizens of all redress for illegal arrests and imprisonment; it was not needed as a protection for making such as are legal, because the common law gives ample protection for making legal arrests and imprisonments." And it may be added that those acts which are justified by military or martial law are equally legal with those justified by the common law. So in Hubbard v. Brainerd, 35 Conn. 563, it was decided that Congress could not take away a vested right to sue for and recover back an illegal tax which had been paid under protest to a collector of the national revenue. See also Bryan v. Walker, 64 N. C. 141. Nor can the right to have a void tax sale set aside be made conditional on the payment of the illegal tax. Wilson v. McKenna, 52 Ill. 43, and other cases cited, post, p. 528, note. The case of Norris v. Doniphan, 4 Met. (Ky.) 385, may properly be cited in this connection. It was there held that the act of Congress of July 17, 1862, "to suppress insurrection, to punish treason and rebellion, to seize and confiscate the property of property or rights, neither can it authorize individuals to assume at their option powers of police, which they may exercise in the condemnation and sale of property offending against their regulations, or for the satisfaction of their charges and expenses in its management and control, rendered or incurred without the consent of its owners.¹ And a statute which authorizes a party rebels, and for other purposes," in so far as it undertook to authorize the confiscation of the property of citizens as a punishment for treason and other crimes, by proceedings in rem in any district in which the property might be, without presentment and indictment by a grand jury, without arrest or summons of the owner, and upon such evidence of his guilt only as would be proof of any fact in admiralty or revenue cases, was unconstitutional and void, and therefore that Congress had no power to prohibit the State courts from giving the owners of property seized the relief they would be entitled to under the State laws. A statute which makes a constitutional right to vote depend upon an impossible condition is void. Davies v. McKeeby, 5 Nev. 329. See further, State v. Staten, 6 Col. 233; Rison v. Farr, 24 Ark. 191; Hodgson v. Millward, 8 Grant, 403. Where no express power of removal is conferred on the executive, he cannot declare an office forfeited for misbehavior; but the forfeiture must be declared in judicial proceedings. Page v. Hardin, 8 3 Monr. 648; State v. Pritchard, 43 N. J. 191. The legislature cannot declare the forfeiture of an official salary for misconduct. Ex parte Tully, 4 Ark. 220, 88 Am. Dec. 33.

¹ The log-driving and booming corporations, which were authorized to be formed under a general law in Michigan, were empowered, whenever logs or lumber were put into navigable streams without adequate force and means provided for preventing obstructions, to take charge of the same, and cause it to be run, driven, boomed, &c., at the owner's expense; and it gave them a lien on the same to satisfy all just and reasonable charges, with power to sell the property for those charges and for the expenses of sale, on notice, either served personally on the owner, or posted as therein provided. In Anes v. Port Huron Log-Driving and Booming Co., 11 Mich. 138, 147, it was held that the power which this law assumed to confer was in the nature of a public office; and Campbell, J., says: "It is difficult to perceive by what process a public office can be obtained or exercised without either election or appointment. The powers of government are parcelled out by the Constitution, which certainly contemplates some official responsibility. Every officer not expressly exempted is required to take an oath of office as a preliminary to discharging his duties. It is absurd to suppose that any official power can exist in any person by his own assumption, or by the employment of some other private person; and still more so to recognize in such an assumption a power of depriving individuals of their property. And it is plain that the exercise of such a power is an act in its nature public, and not private. The case, however, involves more than the assumption of control. The corporation, or rather its various agents, must of necessity determine when the case arises justifying interference; and having assumed possession it assesses its own charges; and having assessed them, proceeds to sell the property seized to pay them, with the added expense of such sale. These proceedings are all ex parte, and are all proceedings in rem. Their validity must therefore be determined by the rules applicable to such cases. Except in those cases where proceedings to collect the public revenue may stand upon a peculiar footing of their own, it is an inflexible principle of constitutional right that no person can legally be divested of his property without remuneration, or against his will, unless he is allowed a hearing before an impartial tribunal where he may contest the claim set up against him, and be allowed to meet it on the law and the facts. When his property is wanted in specie, for public purposes, there are methods assured to him whereby its value can be ascertained. Where a debt or penalty or forfeiture may be set up against him, the

to seize the property of another, without process or warrant, and to sell it without notification to the owner, for the punishment of a private trespass, and in order to enforce a penalty against the owner, can find no justification in the Constitution.¹

Limitation Laws.

Notwithstanding the protection which the law gives to vested rights, it is possible for a party to debar himself of the right to assert the same in the courts, by his own negligence or laches. If one who is dispossessed "be negligent for a long and unreasonable time, the law refuses afterwards to lend him any assistance to recover the possession merely, both to punish his neglect (nam leges vigilantibus, non dormientibus subveniunt), and also because it is presumed that the supposed wrong-doer has in such a length of time procured a legal title, otherwise he would sooner have been sued."² Statutes of limitation are passed which fix upon a determination of his liability becomes a judicial question; and all judicial functions are required by the Constitution to be exercised by courts of justice, or judicial officers regularly chosen. He can only be rescued through the forms of law upon a regular hearing, unless he has by contract referred the matter to another mode of determination."

¹ A statute of New York authorized any person to take into his custody and possession any animal which might be trespassing upon his lands, and give notice of the seizure to a justice or commissioner of highways of the town, who should proceed to sell the animal after posting notice. From the proceeds of the sale, the officer was to retain his fees, pay the person taking up the animal fifty cents, and also a compensation for keeping it, and the balance to the owner, if he should claim it within a year. In Rockwell v. Nearing, 35 N. Y. 397, 3 S. Patt., J., says of this statute: "The legislature has no authority either to deprive the citizen of his property for other than public purposes, or to authorize its seizure without process or warrant, by persons other than the owner, for the mere punishment of a private trespass. So far as the act in question relates to animals trespassing on the premises of the captor, the proceedings it authorizes have not even the misleading semblance of due process of law. The seizure may be privately made; the party making it is permitted to conceal the property on his own premises; he is protected, though the trespass was due to his own connivance or neglect; he is permitted to take what does not belong to him without notice to owner, though that owner is near and known; he is allowed to sell, through the intervention of an officer, and without even the form of judicial proceedings, an animal in which he has no interest by way either of title, mortgage, pledge, or lien; and all to the end that he may receive compensation for detaining it without the consent of the owner, and a fee of fifty cents for his services as an informer. He levies without process, condemns without proof, and sells without execution." And he distinguishes these proceedings from those in distraining cattle dominus fensant, which are always remedial, and under which the party is authorized to detain the property in pledge for the payment of his damages. See also opinion by Morgan, J., in the same case, pp. 314-317, and the opinions of the several judges in Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 395, 419, 434, and 458. Compare Campbell v. Evans, 45 N. Y. 359; Cook v. Gregg, 46 N. Y. 439; Grover v. Huckins, 26 Mich. 479; Campau v. Langley, 33 Mich. 461, 33 Am. Rep. 414.

² 3 Bl. Com. 158; Broom, Legal Maxims, 857.

reasonable time within which a party is permitted to bring suit for the recovery of his rights, and which, on failure to do so, establish a legal presumption against him that he has no rights in the premises. Such a statute is a statute of repose.¹ Every government is under obligation to its citizens to afford them all needful legal remedies;² but it is not bound to keep its courts open indefinitely for one who neglects or refuses to apply for redress until it may fairly be presumed that the means by which the other party might disprove his claim are lost in the lapse of time.³

When the period prescribed by statute has once run, so as to cut off the remedy which one might have had for the recovery of property in the possession of another, the title to the property, irrespective of the original right, is regarded in the law as vested in the possessor, who is entitled to the same protection in respect to it which the owner is entitled to in other cases. A subsequent repeal of the limitation law could not be given a retroactive effect, so as to disturb this title.⁴ It is vested as completely and perfectly, and is as safe from legislative interference as it would have been had it been perfected in the owner by grant, or by any species of assurance.⁵

¹ Such a statute was formerly construed with strictness, and the defence under it was looked upon as unconscionable, and not favored; but Mr. Justice Story has well said, it has often been matter of regret in modern times that the decisions had not proceeded upon principles better adopted to carry into effect the real objects of the statute; that instead of being viewed in an unfavorable light as an unjust and discreditable defence, it had not received such support as would have made it what it was intended to be, emphatically a statute of repose. It is a wise and beneficial law, not designed merely to raise a presumption of payment of a just debt from lapse of time, but to afford security against stale demands after the true state of the transaction may have been forgotten, or be incapable of explanation by reason of the death or removal of witnesses. Beal v. Morrison, 1 Pet. 351, 590. See Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 569; Toll v. Wright, 37 Mich. 63.

² Call v. Hagger, 8 Mass. 423.

³ Beal v. Nason, 14 Me. 544; Beal v. Morrison, 1 Pet. 351; Stearns v. Gittings, 23 Ill. 387; State v. Jones, 21 Md. 432.

See Biddle v. Hooven, 120 Pa. St. 221, 13 Atl. 927.

⁴ Brent v. Chapman, 5 Cranch, 558; Newby's Adm'r v. Blakey, 3 H. & M. 57; Parish v. Eager, 15 Wis. 532; Burg's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 512; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 569; Bicknell v. Constock, 113 U. S. 149, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599. See cases cited in next note. [A statute extending the time for filing a bill of exceptions is held to be invalid as applied to cases in which judgment was rendered before its enactment. Johnson v. Gelbman, — Ind. —, 64 N. E. 855.]

⁵ Although there is controversy on this point, we consider the text fully warranted by the following cases: Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 399; Wright v. Oakley, 5 Met. 499; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Atkinson v. Dunlap, 50 Me. 111; Navis v. Minor, 2 Miss. 163, 28 Am. Dec. 725; Hicks v. Steigleman, 49 Miss. 377; Knox v. Cleveland, 13 Wis. 245; Sprecker v. Wakeley, 11 Ws. 442; Pleasant v. Rohrer, 17 Wis. 577; Moor v. Lee, 29 Pa. St. 240; Morton v. Sharkey, McMahon (Kan.), 113; McKinney v. Springer, 8 Blackf. 506; Bradford v. Brooks, 2 Ark. 284, 16 Am. Dec. 713; Supp v. Brown, 2 Ind. 647;

All limitation laws, however, must proceed on the theory that the party, by lapse of time and omissions on his part, has forfeited his right to assert his title in the law.¹ Where they relate to property, it seems not to be essential that the adverse claimant should be in actual possession;² but one who is himself in the legal enjoyment of his property cannot have his rights therein forfeited to another, for failure to bring suit against that other within a time specified to test the validity of a claim which the latter asserts, but takes no steps to enforce. It has consequently

Briggs v. Hubbard, 19 Vt. 86; Wires v. Farr, 25 Vt. 41; Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473, 14 Am. Dec. 384; Rockport v. Walden, 54 N. H. 167, 20 Am. Rep. 131; Thompson v. Caldwell, 3 Lit. 137; Couch v. McKee, 6 Ark. 495; Reynolds v. Baker, 6 Cold. 221; Trim v. McPherson, 7 Cold. 15; Girdner v. Stephens, 1 Heisk. 280, 2 Am. Rep. 700; Yancy v. Yancy, 5 Heisk. 353, 13 Am. Rep. 5; Bradford v. Shine's Ex'rs, 13 Fla. 393, 7 Am. Rep. 239; Lockhart v. Horn, 1 Woods, 628; Horbach v. Miller, 4 Neb. 31; Pitman v. Bump, 5 Oreg. 17; Thompson v. Read, 41 Iowa, 48; Reformed Church v. Schoolcraft, 65 N. Y. 134; Union Savings Bank v. Taber, 13 R. I. 683; McDuffee v. Sinnott, 119 Ill. 449, 10 N. E. 385. [McEldowney v. Wyatt, 44 W. Va. 711, 30 S. E. 239, 45 L. R. A. 609, and note; Bd. of Edu. v. Blodgett, 155 Ill. 441, 40 N. E. 1025, 31 L. R. A. 70, 46 Am. St. 348; Lawrence v. Louisville, 96 Ky. 595, 29 S. W. 450, 27 L. R. A. 560, 49 Am. St. 309; Ireland v. Mackintosh, 22 Utah, 296, 61 Pac. 901.] In some cases an inclination has been manifested to distinguish between the case of property adversely possessed, and a claim not enforced; and while it is conceded that the title to the property cannot be disturbed after the statute has run, it is held that the claim, under new legislation, may still be enforced; the statute of limitations pertaining to the remedy only, and not barring the right. So it was held in Jones v. Jones, 18 Ala. 248, where the remedy on the claim in dispute had been barred by the statute of another State where the debtor then resided. [See post, 529, note (a).] And see Bentinck v. Franklin, 38 Tex. 458. In Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209, a similar ruling was made, though against vigorous dissent. It was held that one has no property in the bar of the statute as a defence to a promise to pay a debt, and that such bar may be removed by a statute in such case after it has become complete. But this last-mentioned doctrine is rejected in an opinion of much force by Dixon, Ch. J., in Brown v. Parker, 28 Wis. 21, 28. To like effect is McCracken Co. v. Merc. Trust Co., 84 Ky. 344, 1 S. W. 585. And see Rockport v. Walden, 54 N. H. 167, 20 Am. Rep. 131; McMerty v. Morrison, 62 Mo. 140; Goodman v. Munks, 8 Port. (Ala.) 84; Harrison v. Stacy, 6 Rob. (La.) 15; Baker v. Stonebraker's Adm'r, 36 Mo. 338; Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361. The law of the forum governs as to limitations. Barbour v. Erwin, 14 Lea, 716; Stirling v. Winter, 80 Mo. 141. See Chevrier v. Robert, 6 Mont. 319, 12 Pac. 702; Thompson v. Reed, 75 Me. 404. But the statute of limitations may be suspended for a period as to demands not already barred. Wardlaw v. Buzzard, 15 Rich. 158; Caperton v. Martin, 4 W. Va. 138, 6 Am. Rep. 270; Bender v. Crawford, 33 Tex. 745, 7 Am. Rep. 270; Pearsall v. Kenan, 79 N. C. 472, 28 Am. Rep. 336. A class of cases may be excepted from the operation of the statute, though barred when such excepting act was passed. Sturm v. Fleming, 31 W. Va. 701, 8 S. E. 263. [And see a peculiar case in Bates v. Cullum, 177 Pa. 633, 35 Atl. 861, 34 L. R. A. 440, 55 Am. St. 753.] The legislature may compel a county to pay a claim barred by the general statute. Caldwell Co. v. Harbert, 68 Tex. 321, 4 S. W. 607.

¹ Stearns v. Gittings, 23 Ill. 387, per Walker, J.; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 207, per Marshall, Ch. J. Pearce v. Patton, 7 B. Monr. 162; Griffin v. McKenzie, 7 Ga. 163; Colman v. Holmes, 44 Ala. 124.

² Stearns v. Gittings, 23 Ill. 387; Hill v. Kricke, 11 Wis. 442.

been held that a statute which, after a lapse of five years, makes a recorded deed purporting to be executed under a statutory power conclusive evidence of a good title, could not be valid as a limitation law against the original owner in possession of the land. Limitation laws cannot compel a resort to legal proceedings by one who is already in the complete enjoyment of all he claims.¹

All statutes of limitation, also, must proceed on the idea that the party has full opportunity afforded him to try his right in the courts. A statute could not bar the existing right of claimants without affording this opportunity: if it should attempt to do so, it would be not a statute of limitations, but an unlawful attempt to extinguish rights arbitrarily, whatever might be the purport of its provisions. It is essential that such statutes allow a reasonable time after they take effect for the commencement of suits upon existing causes of action;² though what shall be considered

¹ Groesbeck v. Seely, 13 Mich. 329. In Case v. Dean, 19 Mich. 12, it was held that this statute could not be enforced as a limitation law in favor of the party in possession, inasmuch as it did not proceed on the idea of limiting the time for bringing suit, but by a conclusive rule of evidence sought to pass over the property to the claimant under the statutory sale in all cases, irrespective of possession. See also Baker v. Kelly, 11 Minn. 450; Edridge v. Kuehl, 27 Iowa, 130, 175; Monk v. Corbin, 58 Iowa, 503, 12 N. W. 571; Farrar v. Clark, 85 Ind. 449; Dingey v. Paxton, 60 Miss. 1938. The case of LeDingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 519, is contra. That case follows Wisconsin decisions. In the leading case of Hill v. Krieger, 11 Wis. 442, the holder of the original title was not in possession; and what was decided was that it was not necessary for the holder of the tax title to be in possession in order to claim the benefit of the statute; ejectment against a claimant being permitted by law when the lands were unoccupied. See also Barrett v. Holmes, 132 U. S. 351. To stop the running of the statute it is not necessary that the owner should be in continuous possession. Smith v. Sherry, 54 Wis. 114, 11 N. W. 435. This circumstance of possession or want of possession in the person whose right is to be extinguished seems to us of vital importance. How can a man justly be held guilty of laches in not asserting claims to property, when he already possesses and enjoys the property? The old maxim is, "That which was originally void cannot by mere lapse of time be made valid;" and if a void claim by force of an act of limitation can ripen into a conclusive title as against the owner in possession, the policy underlying that species of legislation must be something beyond what has been generally supposed.

² So held of a statute which took effect some months after its passage, and which, in its operation upon certain classes of cases, would have extinguished adverse claims unless asserted by suit before the act took effect. Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318. See also Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668; King v. Beecher, 30 S. C. 381, 9 S. E. 359; People v. Turner, 117 N. Y. 227, 22 N. E. 1022; Call v. Hagger, 8 Mass. 423; Proprietors, &c. v. Labaree, 2 Ma. 294; Society, &c. v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 141; Blackford v. Peltier, 1 Blackf. 30; Thornton v. Turner, 11 Minn. 335; State v. Messenger, 27 Minn. 119, 6 N. W. 457; Osborn v. Jaines, 17 Wis. 573; Morton v. Sharkey, McCauley (Kan.), 113; Berry v. Ransdell, 4 Met. (Ky.) 202; Ludwig v. Stewart, 32 Mich. 27; Hart v. Bostwick, 14 Fla. 162. In the case last cited it was held that a statute which only allowed thirty days in which to bring action on an existing demand was unreasonable and void. And see what is said in And v. Butcher, 2 Kan. 165. Compare Davidson v. Lawrence, 49 Ga. 365, Kimbro v. Bank of Fulton, 49 Ga. 413. In Terry v. Ander-

a reasonable time must be settled by the judgment of the legislature, and the courts will not inquire into the wisdom of its decision in establishing the period of legal bar, unless the time allowed is manifestly so insufficient that the statute becomes a denial of justice.¹

Alterations in the Rules of Evidence.

It must also be evident that a right to have one's controversies determined by existing rules of evidence is not a vested right. These rules pertain to the remedies which the State provides for its citi-

son, 95 U. S. 326, a statute which as to the demand sued upon limited the time to ten and a half months was held not unreasonable. In Kroese v. Kroese, 37 Mich. 308, the limitation which was supported was to one year where the general law gave six. In Perdross v. Watertown, 5 Biss. 72, Judge Hopkins, U. S. District Judge, decided that a limitation of one year for bringing suits on municipal securities of a class generally sold abroad was unreasonable and void. But a statute giving a new remedy against a railroad company for an injury, may limit to a short time, e. g. six months, the time for bringing suit. O'Bannon v. Louisville, &c. R. R. Co., 8 Bush. 348. So the remedy by suit against stockholders for corporate debts, it is held, may be limited to one year. Adamson v. Davis, 47 Mo. 268. [Six months is not an unreasonably short time to which to limit the assertion of all then existing claims to lands hitherto sold for non-payment of taxes. Turner v. New York, 105 U. S. 99, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38. Nine months is not an unreasonably short time to allow for bringing suit upon a judgment rendered nearly twelve years before. Osborne v. Lindstrom, 2 N. D. 1, 81 N. W. 72, 40 L. R. A. 715. That statute must expressly provide a reasonable time to be open, after it goes into effect and not merely after it is enacted, see Gilbert v. Ackerman, 159 N. Y. 118, 63 N. E. 753, 45 L. R. A. 118; contra, Osborne v. Lindstrom, above.] It is always competent to extend the time for bringing suit before it has expired. Keith v. Keith, 23 Kan. 27. [Lawton v. Waite, 103 Wis. 244, 79 N. W. 321, 45 L. R. A. 616.] A statute fixing a time for taking out a sheriff's deed after sale applies to a prior sale if a reasonable time is left. Ryhiner v. Frank, 105 Ill. 326.

² Stearns v. Gittings, 23 Ill. 389; Call v. Hagger, 8 Mass. 423; Smith v. Morrison, 22 Pick. 490; Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318; De Moss v. Newton, 31 Ind. 219. [Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76, and note in 34 L. ed. U. S. 659.] But see Berry v. Ransdell, 4 Met. (Ky.) 252.

It may be remarked here, that statutes of limitation do not apply to the State unless they so provide expressly. Gibson v. Chateau, 13 Wall. 92; State v. Pollard, 81 Mo. 519; State v. School Dist., 34 Kan. 237, 8 Pac. 208. [Nor is the defence of laches or stale claim good as against a State or the United States. United States v. Dalles Military Road Co., 149 U. S. 549, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988. But a creditor of the State cannot take advantage of the State's exemption where he seeks to subject debts due the State to the satisfaction of his claim by means of garnishment proceedings. Cressey v. Meyer, 138 U. S. 525, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.] And State limitation laws do not apply to the United States. United States v. Hoar, 2 Mas. 811; People v. Gilbert, 18 Johns. 227; Rabb v. Supervisors, 62 Mas. 589; United States v. Nashville, &c. Ry. Co., 118 U. S. 120, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1003. [Although the United States may take advantage of them. Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.] Nor to suits for the infringement of patents. May v. Logan Co., 60 Fed. Rep. 250. And it has been held that the right to maintain a public nuisance cannot be acquired under the statute. State v. Franklin Falls Co., 49 N. H. 210.

zens; and generally in legal contemplation they neither enter into and constitute a part of any contract, nor can be regarded as being of the essence of any right which a party may seek to enforce. Like other rules affecting the remedy, they must therefore at all times be subject to modification and control by the legislature;¹ and the changes which are enacted may lawfully be made applicable to existing causes of action, even in those States in which retrospective laws are forbidden. For the law as changed would only prescribe rules for presenting the evidence in legal controversies in the future; and it could not therefore be called retrospective even though some of the controversies upon which it may act were in progress before. It has accordingly been held in New Hampshire that a statute which removed the disqualification of interest, and allowed parties in suits to testify, might lawfully apply to existing causes of action.² So may a statute which modifies the common-law rule excluding parol evidence to vary the terms of a written contract;³ and a statute making the protest of a promissory note evidence of the facts therein stated.⁴ These and the like cases will sufficiently illustrate the general rule, that the whole subject is under the control of the legislature, which prescribes such rules for the trial and determination as well of existing as of future rights and controversies as in its judgment will most completely subserve the ends of justice.⁵

A strong instance in illustration of legislative control over evidence will be found in the laws of some of the States in regard to conveyances of lands upon sales to satisfy delinquent taxes. Independent of special statutory rule on the subject, such conveyances would not be evidence of title. They are executed under a statutory power; and it devolves upon the claimant under them to show that the successive steps which under the statute lead to such conveyance have been taken. But it cannot be doubted that this rule may be so changed as to make a tax-deed prima facie evi-

¹ Kendall v. Kingston, 5 Mass. 524; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 218, 349; Per Marshall, Ch. J.; Fales v. Wadsworth, 23 Me. 553; Karney v. Paisley, 13 Iowa, 89; Commonwealth v. Williams, 6 Gray. 1; Hickox v. Tallman, 38 Barb. 608; Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576; Pratt v. Jones, 25 Vt. 303. [Pennsylvania Co. v. McCann, 64 Ohio St. 10, 42 N. E. 768, 31 L. R. A. 661.] See ante, p. 400, and note.

² Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304. A very full and satisfactory examination of the whole subject will be found in this case. To the same effect is Southwick

v. Southwick, 49 N. Y. 510. And see Cowan v. McCutchen, 43 Miss. 207; Carothers v. Hurly, 41 Miss. 71. The right to testify existing when a contract is made may be taken away. Goodlett v. Kelly, 74 Ala. 218.

³ Gibbs v. Gale, 7 Md. 73.

⁴ Fales v. Wadsworth, 23 Me. 553.

⁵ Per Marshall, Ch. J., in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 218, 249; Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576; Delaplaine v. Cook, 7 Wis. 44; Kendall v. Kingston, 5 Mass. 524; Towler v. Chatterton, 6 Bing. 258; Himmelman v. Carpentier, 47 Cal. 42.

dence that all the proceedings have been regular, and that the purchaser has acquired under them a complete title.¹ The burden of proof is thereby changed from one party to the other; the legal presumption which the statute creates in favor of the purchaser being sufficient, in connection with the deed, to establish his case, unless it is overcome by countervailing testimony. Statutes making defective records evidence of valid conveyances are of a similar nature; and these usually, perhaps always, have reference to records before made, and provide for making them competent evidence where before they were merely void.² But they divest no title, and are not even retrospective in character. They merely establish what the legislature regards as a reasonable and just rule for the presentation by the parties of their rights before the courts in the future.

But there are fixed bounds to the power of the legislature over this subject which cannot be exceeded. As to what shall be evidence, and which party shall assume the burden of proof in civil cases, (a) its authority is practically unrestricted, so long as its regulations are impartial and uniform; but it has no power to establish rules which, under pretence of regulating the presentation of evidence, go so far as altogether to preclude a party from exhibiting his rights. Except in those cases which fall within the familiar doctrine of estoppel at the common law, or other cases resting upon the like reasons, it would not, we apprehend, be in the power of the legislature to declare that a particular item of evidence should preclude a party from establishing his rights in opposition to it. In judicial investigations the law of the land requires an opportunity for a trial;³ and there can be no trial if only one party is suffered to produce his proofs. The most formal conveyance may be a fraud or a forgery; public officers may connive with rogues to rob the citizen of his property; witnesses may testify or officers certify falsely, and records may be collusively manufactured for dishonest purposes; and that legislation which would rule once established may be abolished, even as to existing deeds. Hickox v. Tallman, 38 Barb. 608; Strode v. Washer, 17 Oreg. 50, 16 Pac. 920; Gage v. Caraher, 125 Ill. 447, 17 N. E. 777.

¹ Hand v. Ballou, 12 N. Y. 541; Forbes v. Halsey, 23 N. Y. 53; Delaplaine v. Cook, 7 Wis. 44; Allen v. Armstrong, 16 Iowa, 508; Adams v. Beale, 19 Iowa, 81; Amberg v. Rogers, 9 Mich. 532; Lumsden v. Cross, 10 Wis. 232; Lacey v. Davis, 4 Mich. 149; Wright v. Dunham, 13 Mich. 414; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 102, 46 Mo. 291. [Marx v. Hawthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.] The

² See Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576.

³ Tift v. Griffin, 5 Ga. 185; Lenz v. Charlton, 23 Wis. 478; Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82; ante, p. 523, note; post, pp. 579-585, and notes.

(a) [And in criminal cases the doing of a certain act may be made prima-facie evidence of criminal intent. Meadowcroft v. People, 163 Ill. 68, 45 N. E. 303, 35 L. R. A. 178, 54 Am. St. 447.]

preclude the fraud or wrong being shown, and deprive the party wronged of all remedy, has no justification in the principles of natural justice or of constitutional law. A statute, therefore, which should make a tax-deed conclusive evidence of a complete title, and preclude the owner of the original title from showing its invalidity, would be void, because being not a law regulating evidence, but an unconstitutional confiscation of property.¹ And a statute which should make the certificate or opinion of an officer conclusive evidence of the illegality of an existing contract would be equally nugatory;² though perhaps if parties should enter into

¹ Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 829; Case v. Dean, 16 Mich. 12; White v. Flynn, 23 Ind. 46; Corbin v. Hill, 21 Iowa, 70; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 132, 46 Mo. 291; Dingey v. Paxton, 60 Miss. 1038. [Wilson v. Wood, 10 Okla. 279, 61 Pac. 1045.] And see the well-reasoned case of McCready v. Sexton, 29 Iowa, 856; Little Rock, &c. R. R. Co. v. Payne, 33 Ark. 816, 34 Am. Rep. 65. Also Wright v. Cradlebaugh, 3 Nev. 341. As to how far the legislature may make the tax-deed conclusive evidence that mere irregularities have not intervened in the proceedings, see Smith v. Cleveland, 17 Wis. 353; Allen v. Armstrong, 18 Iowa, 593. It may be conclusive as to matters not essential and jurisdictional. Matter of Lake, 40 La. Ann. 142, 3 So. 479; Elsign v. Barse, 107 N. Y. 329, 14 N. E. 400, 16 N. E. 401. Undoubtedly the legislature may dispense with mere matters of form in the proceedings as well after they have taken place as before; but this is quite a different thing from making tax-deeds conclusive on points material to the interest of the property owner. See further, Wantlan v. White, 19 Ind. 470; People v. Mitchell, 45 Barb. 212; McCready v. Sexton, supra. It is not competent for the legislature to compel an owner of land to redeem it from a void tax sale as a condition on which he shall be allowed to assert his title against it. Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82; Hart v. Henderson, 17 Mich. 218; Wilson v. McKenna, 52 Ill. 43; Reed v. Tyler, 66 Ill. 288; Dean v. Borchsenius, 30 Wis. 236. But it seems that if the tax purchaser has paid taxes and made improvements, the payment for these may be made a condition precedent to a suit in ejectment against him. Hope v. Macon, 23 Ark. 644. See cases ante, 518, note 1. In Wright v. Cradlebaugh, 3 Nev. 341, 340, Beatty, C. J., says: "We apprehend that it is beyond the power of the legislature to restrain a defendant in any suit from setting up a good defence to an action against him. The legislature could not directly take the property of A. to pay the taxes of B. Neither can it indirectly do so by depriving A. of the right of setting up in his answer that his separate property has been jointly assessed with that of B., and asserting his right to pay his own taxes without being encumbered with those of B. . . . Due process of law not only requires that a party shall be properly brought into court, but that he shall have the opportunity when in court to establish any fact which, according to the usages of the common law or the provisions of the constitution, would be a protection to him or his property." See Taylor v. Miles, 5 Kan. 493, 7 Am. Rep. 558. [Certificate of a public weigh-master cannot be made conclusive. Vega Steamship Co. v. Cons. Elevator Co., 75 Minn. 308, 77 N. W. 923, 43 L. R. A. 843.]

² Young v. Beardsley, 11 Paige, 63. See also Howard Co. v. State, 120 Ind. 282, 22 N. E. 255. But a provision that six months after the passage of the act certain tax-deeds made on past sales should be conclusive evidence, has been upheld. People v. Turner, 117 N. Y. 227, 22 N. E. 1022. An act to authorize persons whose sheep are killed by dogs, to present their claim to the selectmen of the town for allowance and payment by the town, and giving the town after payment an action against the owner of the dog for the amount so paid, is void, as taking away trial by jury, and as author-a contract in view of such a statute then existing, its provisions might properly be regarded as assented to and incorporated in their contract, and therefore binding upon them.¹

Retrospective Laws. (a)

Regarding the circumstances under which a man may be said to have a vested right to a defence against a demand made by another, it is somewhat difficult to lay down a comprehensive rule which the authorities will justify. It is certain that he who has satisfied a demand cannot have it revived against him, and he who has become released from a demand by the operation of the statute of limitations is equally protected.² In both cases the demand is gone, and to restore it would be to create a new contract for the parties, — a thing quite beyond the power of legislation.³ So he who was never bound, either legally or equitably, cannot have a demand created against him by mere legislative enactment.⁴ But there are many cases in which, by existing laws, defences based upon mere informalities are allowed in suits upon contracts, or in respect to legal proceedings, in some of which a regard to substantial justice would warrant the legislature in interfering to take away the defence if it possesses the power to do so.

izing the selectmen to pass upon one's rights without giving him an opportunity to be heard. East Kingston v. Towle, 48 N. H. 57, 2 Am. Rep. 174.

¹ See post, p. 581, note.

² Ibid., p. 521, note, and cases cited.

³ Albertson v. Landon, 42 Conn. 203.

⁴ In Medford v. Learned, 16 Mass. 215, it was held that where a pauper had received support from the parish, to which by law he was entitled, a subsequent legislative act could not make him liable by suit to refund the cost of the support. This case was approved and followed in People v. Supervisors of Columbia, 48 N. Y. 180. See ante, p. 518, and note; Towle v. Eastern R. R., 18 N. H. 547. A right of action may not be given against a husband to a creditor of the wife upon her contract. Addams v. Marx, 50 N. J. L. 253, 12 A. 600. A railroad company cannot be made responsible for the coroner's inquest and burial of persons dying on the cars, or killed by collision or other accident occurring to the cars, &c., irrespective of any wrong or negligence of the company or its servants. Ohio & M. R. R. Co. v. Lackey, 78 Ill. 55. Absolute liability, irrespective of negligence, cannot be imposed on a railroad company for stock killing. Caterill v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 2 Idaho, 540, 21 Pac. 419; Bienberg v. Montana N. Ry. Co., 8 Mont. 271, 20 Pac. 814. In Atchison, &c. R. R. Co. v. Bate, 6 Neb. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 556, it is held incompetent to make a railroad company liable to double the value of stock accidentally injured or destroyed on the railroad track. But the contrary was held in Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110. In such cases attorney's fees may be allowed. Peoria, D. & E. Ry. Co. v. Duggan, 109 Ill. 337. But see Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. Ry. Co., 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289. See cases on above points, post, 841, note 1.

(a) [Upon retroactive laws, vested rights, &c., see note to 41 L. ed. 94. An inheritance-tax law, void for lack of provision for notice, may be corrected in this regard, and is then applicable to property not yet distributed, although the testator died before the law was amended. Ferry v. Campbell, 110 Iowa, 230, 81 N. W. 604, 50 L. R. A. 92.]

In regard to these cases, we think investigation of the authorities will show that a party has no vested right in a defence based upon an informality not affecting his substantial equities. (a) And this brings us to a particular examination of a class of statutes which is constantly coming under the consideration of the courts, and which are known as retrospective laws, by reason of their reaching back to and giving to a previous transaction some different legal effect from that which it had under the law when it took place.

There are numerous cases which hold that retrospective laws are not obnoxious to constitutional objection, while in others they have been held to be void. The different decisions have been based upon diversities in the facts which make different principles applicable. There is no doubt of the right of the legislature to pass statutes which reach back to and change or modify the effect of prior transactions, provided retrospective laws are not forbidden, eo nomine, by the State constitution, and provided further that no other objection exists to them than their retrospective character.¹ Nevertheless, legislation of this character is exceedingly liable to abuse; and it is a sound rule of construction that a statute should have a prospective operation only, unless its terms show clearly a legislative intention that it should operate retrospectively.² And some of the States have

¹ Thornton v. McGrath, 1 Duval, 349; Aldridge v. Railroad Co., 2 Stew. & Port. 189, 25 Am. Dec. 307; State v. Squires, 26 Iowa, 340; Beach v. Walker, 6 Conn. 120; Schenley v. Commonwealth, 33 Pa. St. 37; Shook v. Brown, 61 Pa. St. 320; Late v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407. [Miller v. Hixson, 64 Ohio, 39, 59 N. E. 749.]

² Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. 477; 5 Am. Dec. 281; Sayre v. Wisner, 8 Wend. 261; Watkins v. Haight, 18 Johns. 138; Bay v. Gage, 36 Barb. 447; Norris v. Beyer, 13 N. Y. 273; Drake v. Gilmore, 62 N. Y. 389; Quackenbush v. Danks, 1 Denio, 128; Hapgood v. Whitman, 13 Mass. 464; Medford v. Learned, 16 Mass. 215; Gerry v. Stoneham, 1 Allen, 319; Riley v. Boston, & C. R. R. Co., 135 Mass. 468; Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Conn. 558. 18 Am. Dec. 120; Plumb v. Sawyer, 21 Conn. 331; Hubbard v. Brainard, 35 Conn. 563; Sturgis v. Hull, 48 Vt. 392; Briggs v. Hubbard, 19 Vt. 84; Hastings v. Lane, 15 Me. 134; Torrey v. Corliss, 32 Me. 333; Atkinson v. Dunlop, 50 Me. 111; Rogers v. Greenbush, 58 Me. 395; Guard v. Rowan, 3 Ill. 429; Garrett v. Doe, 2 Ill. 355; Thompson v. Alexander, 11 Ill. 54; Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82; In re Tuiler, 79 Ill. 93; Knight v. Begole, 56 Ill. 122; McHaney v. Trustees of Schools, 68 Ill. 140; Hatcher v. Toledo, & C. R. R. Co., 62 Ill. 477; Harrison v. Metz, 17 Mich. 377; Thomas v. Collins, 58 Mich. 64, 24 N. W. 553; Danville v. Pace, 25 Gratt. 1; Cumberland, & C. R. R. Co. v. Washington Co. Court, 10 Bush, 664; State v. Barbee, 3 Ind. 268; State v. Atwood, 11 Wis. 422; Bartruff v. Remy, 15 Iowa, 257; Knickton v. Kedenbaugh, 49 Iowa, 114; Almyer v. State, 10 Ohio St. 588; Colony v. Dublin, 32 N. H. 432; Ex parte Graham, 13 Rich. 277; Garrett v. Beaumont, 24 Miss. 377; Clark v. Baltimore, 20 Md. 277; Williams v. Johnson, 39 Md. 500; State v. The Auditor, 41 Mo. 25; State v. Ferguson, 52 Mo. 77; Merwin v. Ballard, deemed it just and wise to forbid such laws altogether by their constitutions.¹

(a) [Danforth v. Groton Water Co., 178 Mass. 472, 59 N. E. 1013, 85 Am. St. 495. See Dunbar v. Boston, & P. Ry. Co., 151 Mass. 583, 63 N. E. 912.]

A retrospective statute curing defects in legal proceedings where they are in their nature irregularities only, and do not extend to matters of jurisdiction, is not void on constitutional grounds, unless expressly forbidden. Of this class are the statutes to cure irregularities in the assessment of property for taxation and the levy of taxes thereon;² irregularities in the 65 N. C. 308; Tyson v. School Directors, 51 Pa. St. 10; Haley v. Philadelphia, 38 Pa. St. 43, 8 Am. Rep. 154; Baldwin v. Newark, 38 N. J. 158; Warsong v. Hunt, 47 N. J. L. 259; Merriam v. State Treasurer, 37 La. Ann. 150; State v. Pinckney, 22 S. C. 484; Richmond v. Supervisors, 83 Va. 20, 2 S. E. 25. This doctrine applies to amendments of statutes. Ely v. Hilton, 15 N. Y. 595. If no vested right is disturbed, a retroactive effect may be given a statute, though the language does not render it necessary, provided such is the clear intent. People v. Spicer, 96 N. Y. 225, 1 N. E. 680.

¹ See the provision in the Constitution of New Hampshire, considered in Wornt v. Winnick, 2 N. H. 473, 14 Am. Dec. 584; Clark v. Clark, 10 N. H. 389; Willard v. Harvey, 24 N. H. 244; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; and Simpson v. Savings Bank, 55 N. H. 405; and that in the Constitution of Texas, in De Cordova v. Galveston, 4 Tex. 473; and that in the Constitution of Missouri, in State v. Hermann, 70 Mo. 441; State v. Green, 78 Mo. 188. The provision covers only civil, not criminal cases. State v. Johnson, 81 Mo. 60. A statute, passed after a municipality has levied a tax, may annul it before it becomes due and put the right to levy it in another body. State v. St. Louis & Ry. Co., 73 Mo. 429. The Constitution of Ohio provides that "the General Assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws, or laws impairing the obligation of contracts; provided, however, that the General Assembly may, by general laws, authorize the courts to carry into effect the manifest intention of parties and officers, by curing omissions, defects, and errors in instruments and proceedings arising out of their want of conformity with the laws of this State, and upon such terms as shall be just and equitable." Under this clause it was held competent for the General Assembly to pass an act authorizing the courts to correct mistakes in deeds of married women previously executed, whereby they were rendered ineffectual. Gisborn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641. An act for the payment of bounties for past services was held not retrospective, in State v. Richland, 20 Ohio St. 323. [An act "for refunding taxes erroneously paid" is bad as applied to past transactions. Hamilton Co. Comm'rs v. Basche, 59 Ohio St. 163, 33 N. E. 408, 19 L. R. A. 684.] Under a provision in the Constitution of Tennessee that no retrospective law shall be passed, it has been held that a statute passed after a death cannot allow for the first time a recovery for the loss suffered by the children of deceased from the death. Railroad v. Pennell, 11 Lea, 127. But a law authorizing a bill to be filed by slaves, by their next friend, to emancipate them, although it applied to cases which arose before its passage, was held not a retrospective law within the meaning of this clause. Fisher's Negroes v. Dobbs, 6 Yerg. 110. So of a law making a judgment against the principal conclusive upon the surety. Pickett v. Boyd, 11 Lea, 495. See further, Society v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 135; Officer v. Young, 5 Yerg. 320, 20 Am. Dec. 208. Under like provision in the Colorado Constitution a statute is void which allows a writ of error on a judgment in respect to which an appeal was barred. Willoughby v. George, 6 Col. 60. Legislation may be ordered to take immediate effect notwithstanding retrospective laws are forbidden. Thomas v. Scott, 23 La. Ann. 386.

That the legislature cannot retrospectively construe statutes and bind parties thereby, see ante, p. 184 et seq.

² Butler v. Tieda, 5 Ohio St. 225; Strachan v. Shoemaker, 1 W. & S. 166; organization or elections of corporations;¹ irregularities in the votes or other action by municipal corporations, or the like, where a statutory power has failed of due and regular execution through the carelessness of officers, or other cause;² irregular proceedings in court, &c.³

The rule applicable to cases of this description is substantially the following: If the thing wanting or which failed to be done, and which constitutes the defect in the proceedings, is something the necessity for which the legislature might have dispensed with by prior statute, then it is not beyond the power of the legislature to dispense with it by subsequent statute. And if the irregularity consists in doing some act, or in the mode or manner of doing some act, which the legislature might have made immaterial by prior law, it is equally competent to make the same immaterial by a subsequent law. (a) McCay v. Miehew, 7 W. & S. 386; Montgomery v. Meredith, 17 Pa. St. 42; Dinden v. Snodgrass, 18 Pa. St. 151; Williamson v. Calkett, 9 Pa. St. 38; Boardman v. Beckwith, 18 Iowa, 292; The Iowa R. R. Land Co. v. Super, 39 Iowa, 112; Lennon v. New York, 55 N. Y. 361; Smith v. Eard, 59 Vt. 13, 8 Atl. 317. Officers may be authorized to extend inquiries over years preceding; no new liability is imposed upon the taxpayer. Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014. It is not unconstitutional to prohibit the vacating of assessments for irregularities. Astor v. New York, 62 N. Y. 580. The limit of power in validating assessments is very clearly shown by McKesson, Jr., in People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15. And see Walter v. Biron, 8 Mass. 468; Loike v. Dane, 9 Mass. 360; Patterson v. Philbrook, 9 Mass. 151; Trustees v. McCaughey, 2 Ohio St. 152. Compare Forster v. Forster, 129 Mass. 559. Acts of officers void for jurisdictional defects cannot be validated. Housenian v. Kent Circ. Judge, 35 Mich. 354, 25 N. W. 302; Bartlett v. Wilson, 59 Vt. 23, 8 At. 321. Nor can irregularities be cured after a suit is brought to recover money received by a township on a sale of land for an illegal tax. Davidson v. Wintertown, 61 Mich. 514, 28 N. W. 673. The right to provide for a reassessment of taxes irregularly levied is undoubted.

See Brevoort v. Detroit, 24 Mich. 322; State v. Newark, 34 N. J. 239; Muselman v. Logansport, 29 Ind. 533; Street Railroad Co. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S. W. 348; Redwood Co. v. Winona, & Co., 49 Minn. 512, 41 N. W. 465. But, of course, if the vice is in the nature of the tax itself, it will continue and be fatal, however often the process of assessment may be repeated. See post, p. 545.

¹ Syracuse Bank v. Davis, 15 Barb. 183; Mitchell v. Deeds, 43 Ill. 416; People v. Plank Road Co., 83 N. Y. 1.

² See Menges v. Wertman, 1 Pa. St. 218; Yost's Report, 17 Pa. St. 524; Bennett v. Fisher, 25 Iowa, 497; Allen v. Archer, 40 Ma. 546; Commonwealth v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 328; State v. Union, 35 N. J. 550; State v. Guttenberg, 38 N. J. 419; Mat. Ben. Life Ins. Co. v. Elizabeth, 42 N. J. 235; Rogers v. Stephens, 86 N. Y. 623; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 447. By the Constitution of Missouri, the legislature is forbidden to legalize the unauthorized or invalid acts of any officer or agent of the State, or of any country or municipality. Art. 4, § 53.

³ Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 467; Tilton v. Swift, 49 Iowa, 78; Supervisors v. Wisconsin Cent. R. R. Co., 121 Mass. 461; Cookery v. Dungan, 87 Ind. 362; Murele Nat. Bank v. Miller, 91 Ind. 441; Johnson v. Chambers Wells Co., 107 Ind. 15, 8 N. E. 1. See cases post, 546, note 2.

(a) [But this rule must be applied with discretion; e.g., the legislature could not provide, after a sale had been made under notice not sufficiently long to satisfy the

A few of the decided cases will illustrate this principle. In *Kearney v. Taylor*¹ a sale of real estate belonging to infant tenants in common had been made by order of court in a partition suit, and the land bid off by a company of persons, who proposed subdividing and selling it in parcels. The sale was confirmed in their names, but by mutual arrangement the deed was made to one only, for convenience in selling and conveying. This deed failed to convey the title, because not following the sale. The legislature afterwards passed an act providing that, on proof being made to the satisfaction of the court or jury before which such deed was offered in evidence that the land was sold fairly and without fraud, and the deed executed in good faith and for a sufficient consideration, and with the consent of the persons reported as purchasers, the deed should have the same effect as though it had been made to the purchasers. That this act was unobjectionable in principle was not denied; and it cannot be doubted that a prior statute, authorizing the deed to be made to one for the benefit of all and with their assent, would have been open to no valid objection.²

In certain Connecticut cases it was insisted that sales made of real estate on execution were void, because the officer had included in the amount due, several small items of fees not allowed by law. It appeared, however, that, after the sales were made, the legislature had passed an act providing that no levy should be deemed void by reason of the officer having included greater fees than were by law allowable, but that all such levies, not in other respects defective, should be valid and effectual to transmit the title of the real estate levied upon. The liability of the officer

¹ 15 How. 424. And see Boyce v. Sinclair, 3 Bush, 221; Weed v. Donovan, 111 Mass. 181.

² See Davis v. State Bank, 7 Ind. 316; and Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41, for decisions under statutes curing irregular sales by guardians and executors. In many of the States general laws will be found providing that such sales shall not be defeated by certain specified defects and irregularities.

statute then in existence, that the shorter notice should be sufficient, though it might originally have made the shorter period sufficient. See Finlayson v. Peterson, 5 N. D. 357, 67 N. W. 553, 53 L. R. A. 332, 57 Am. St. 584; also Lowe v. Harris, 112 N. C. 472, 17 S. E. 509, 22 L. R. A. 375, and note. Nor can the legislature supersede the necessity for allowing a party a hearing before decreeing a sale of his property. Roeder v. Waters, 72 Md. 294, 19 Atl. 535, 7 L. R. A. 593. While the legislature may validate a levy of taxes void for some irregularity, as insufficient notice, &c., it cannot validate a sale and tax deed based upon such void levy. Dever v. Cornwell, 19 N. D. 123, 86 N. W. 227. Where an election was void for lack of authority to hold it, the legislature cannot subsequently empower a board of education to borrow money with the assent of two-thirds of the voters voting at an election, and declare the preceding election sufficient, although that precise proposition was the one submitted. Berkley v. Bd. of Education, 22 Ky. 698, 58 S. W. 503.]

for receiving more than his legal fees was at the same time left unaffected. In the leading case the court say: "The law, undoubtedly, is retrospective; but is it unjust? All the charges of the officer on the execution in question are perfectly reasonable, and for necessary services in the performance of his duty; of consequence they are eminently just, and so is the act confirming the levies. A law, although it be retrospective, if conformable to entire justice, this court has repeatedly decided is to be recognized and enforced."¹

In another Connecticut case it appeared that certain marriages had been celebrated by persons in the ministry who were not empowered by the State law to perform that ceremony, and that the marriages were therefore invalid. The legislature had afterwards passed an act declaring all such marriages valid, and the court sustained the act. It was assailed as an exercise of the judicial power; but this it clearly was not, as it purported to settle no controversies, and merely sought to give effect to the desire of the parties, which they had ineffectually attempted to carry out by means of the ceremony which proved insufficient. And while it was not claimed that the act was void in so far as it made effectual the legal relation of matrimony between the parties, it was nevertheless insisted that rights of property dependent upon that relation could not be affected by it, inasmuch as, in order to give such rights, it must operate retrospectively. The court in disposing of the case are understood to express the opinion that, if the legislature possesses the power to validate an imperfect marriage, still more clearly does it have power to affect incidental rights. "The man and the woman were unmarried, notwithstanding the formal ceremony which passed between them, and free in point of law to live in celibacy, or contract marriage with any other persons at pleasure. It is a strong exercise of power to compel two persons to marry without their consent, and a palpable perversion of strict legal right. At the same time the retrospective law thus far directly operating on vested rights is admitted to be unquestionably valid, because it is manifestly just."²

¹ Beach v. Walker, 6 Conn. 190, 197. See Booth v. Booth, 7 Conn. 350; Mather v. Chapman, 6 Conn. 54; Norton v. Pettibone, 7 Conn. 819; Welch v. Wadsworth, 80 Conn. 149; Smith v. Merchand's Ex'rs, 7 S. & R. 260; Underwood v. Lilly, 10 S. & R. 97; Beakney v. Bank of Greencastle, 17 S. & R. 64; Menges v. Wertman, 1 Pa. St. 218; Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. St. 474; Ahl v. Gleim, 52 Pa. St.

482; Selsby v. Redlon, 19 Wis. 17; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 231. [A statute giving a bona fide occupant of lands the right to allowance for the value of improvements made on the lands is valid as to improvements made before the enactment of the statute. So held in Lay v. Sheppard, 112 Ga. 111, 37 S. E. 132.]

² Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 203, 221, 10 Am. Dec. 121, per Hosmer, J. And

It is not to be inferred from this language that the court understood the legislature to possess power to select individual members of the community, and force them into a relation of marriage with each other against their will. That complete control which the legislature is supposed to possess over the domestic relations can hardly extend so far. The legislature may perhaps divorce parties, with or without cause, according to its own view of justice or public policy; but for the legislature to marry parties against their consent, we conceive to be decidedly against "the law of the land." The learned court must be understood as speaking here with exclusive reference to the case at bar, in which the legislature, by the retrospective act, were merely removing a formal defect in certain marriages which the parties had assented to, and which they had attempted to form. Such an act, unless special circumstances conspired to make it otherwise, would certainly be "manifestly just," and therefore might well be held "unquestionably valid." And if the marriage was rendered valid, the legal incidents would follow of course. In a Pennsylvania case the validity of certain grading and paving assessments was involved, and it was argued that they were invalid for the reason that the city ordinance under which they had been made was inoperative, because not recorded as required by law. But the legislature had passed an act to validate this ordinance, and had declared therein that the omission to record the ordinance should not affect or impair the lien of the assessments against the lot owners. In passing upon the validity of this act, the court express the following views: "Whenever there is a right, though imperfect, the constitution does not prohibit the legislature from giving a remedy. In Hepburn v. Curtis,¹ it was said, 'The legislature, provided it does not violate the constitutional provisions, may pass retrospective laws, such as in their operation may affect suits pending, and give to a party a remedy which he did not previously possess, or modify an existing remedy, or remove an impediment in the way of legal proceedings.' What more has been done in this case? . . . While (the ordinance) was in force, contracts to do the work were made in pursuance of it, and the liability of the city was incurred. But it was suffered see State v. Adams, 65 N. C. 537, where it was held that the act validating the previous marriages of slaves was effectual, and a subsequent marriage in disregard of it would be bigamy. The legislature may remove after a marriage a disability created by its former action. Baity v. Cranell, 91 N. C. 293. That the legislature may legitimize children, see Andrews v. Page, 3 Heisk. 653. The power to validate void marriages held not to exist in the legislature where, by the constitution, the whole subject was referred to the courts. White v. White, 106 Mass. 825.

¹ 7 Watts, 300.

to become of no effect by the failure to record it. Notwithstanding this, the grading and paving were done, and the lots of the defendants received the benefit at the public expense. Now can the omission to record the ordinance diminish the equitable right of the public to reimbursement? It is at most but a formal defect in the remedy provided, — an oversight. That such defects may be cured by retroactive legislation need not be argued."¹

On the same principle legislative acts validating invalid contracts have been sustained. When these acts go no farther than to bind a party by a contract which he has attempted to enter into, but which was invalid by reason of some personal inability on his part to make it, or through neglect of some legal formality, or in consequence of some ingredient in the contract forbidden by law, the question which they suggest is one of policy, and not of constitutional power. (a)

By statute of Ohio, all bonds, notes, bills, or contracts negotiable or payable at any unauthorized bank, or made for the purpose of being discounted at any such bank, were declared to be void. While this statute was in force a note was made for the purpose of being discounted at one of these institutions, and was actually discounted by it. Afterwards the legislature passed an act, reciting that many persons were indebted to such bank, by bonds, bills, notes, &c., and that owing, among other things, to doubts of its right to recover its debts, it was unable to meet its own obligations, and had ceased business, and for the purpose of winding up its affairs had made an assignment to a trustee; therefore the said act authorized the said trustee to bring suits on the said bonds, bills, notes, &c., and declared it should not be lawful for the defendants in such suits "to plead, set up, or insist upon, in defence, that the notes, bonds, bills, or other written evidences of such indebtedness are void on account of being contracts against or in violation of any statute law of this State, or on account of their being contrary to public policy." This law was sustained as a law "that contracts may be enforced," and as in furtherance of equity and good morals.² The original invalid-

¹ Schenley v. Commonwealth, 39 Pa. St. 29, 57. See also State v. Newark, 27 N. J. 185; Den v. Downam, 13 N. J. 135; People v. Seymour, 16 Cal. 332; Grim v. Weissenburg School District, 37 Pa. St. 433; State v. Union, 33 N. J. 350. The legislature has the same power to ratify and confirm an illegally appointed corporate body that it has to create a new one. Mitchell v. Deeds, 49 Ill. 416.

² Lewis v. McElvain, 13 Ohio. 347. But where an act is forbidden by statute under penalty, and therefore illegal, the mere repeal of the statute will not legality was only because of the statute, and that statute was founded upon reasons of public policy which had either ceased to be of force, or which the legislature regarded as overborne by countervailing reasons. Under these circumstances it was reasonable and just that the makers of such paper should be precluded from relying upon such invalidity.¹

(a) [Utter v. Franklin, 172 U. S. 416, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183. See also Erskine v. Nelson Co., 4 N. D. 66, 58 N. W. 548, 27 L. R. A. 636, and note; Snodds v. Clifton H. Land Co., 94 Tenn. 123, 28 S. W. 658, 26 L. R. A. 503, 45 Am. St. 790.]

By a statute of Connecticut, where loans of money were made, and a bonus was paid by the borrower over and beyond the interest and bonus permitted by law, the demand was subject to a deduction from the principal of all the interest and bonus paid. A construction appears to have been put upon this statute by business men which was different from that afterwards given by the courts; and a large number of contracts of loan were in consequence subject to the deduction. The legislature then passed a "healing act," which provided that such loans theretofore made should not be held, by reason of the taking of such bonus, to be usurious, illegal, or in any respect void; but that, if otherwise legal, they were thereby confirmed, and declared to be valid, as to principal, interest, and bonus. The case of *Goshen v. Stonington*² was regarded as sufficient authority in support of this act; and the principle to be derived from that case was stated to be "that where a statute is expressly retroactive, and the object and ize it. Rohy v. West, 4 N. H. 285, 17 Am. Dec. 423.

¹ Trustees v. McCaughy, 2 Ohio St. 152; Johnson v. Bentley, 16 Ohio, 97. See also Syracuse Bank v. Davis, 13 Barb. 158. By statute, notes issued by unincorporated banking associations were declared void. This statute was afterwards repealed, and action was brought against bankers on notes previously issued. Objection being taken that the legislature could not validate the void contracts, the judge says: "I will consider this case on the broad ground of the contract having been void when made, and of no new contract having arisen since the repealing act. But by rendering the contract void it was not annihilated. The object of the [original] act was not to vest any right in any unlawful banking association, but directly the reverse. The motive was not to create a privilege, or shield them from the payment of their just debts, but to restrain them from violating the law by destroying the credit of their paper, and punishing those who received it. How then can the defendants complain? As unauthorized bankers they were violators of the law, and objects not of protection but of punishment. The repealing act was a statutory pardon of the crime committed by the receivers of this illegal medium. Might not the legislature pardon the crime, without consulting those who committed it? . . . How can the defendants say there was no contract, when the plaintiff produces their written engagement for the performance of a duty, binding in conscience if not in law? Although the contract, for reasons of policy, was so far void that an action could not be sustained on it, yet a moral obligation to perform it, whenever those reasons ceased, remained; and it would be going very far to say that the legislature may not add a legal sanction to that obligation, on account of some fancied constitutional restriction." Hess v. Werts, 4 S. & R. 356, 351. See also Blankney v. Bank of Greenock, 17 S. & R. 64; Menges v. Wertman, 1 Pa. St. 218; Boyce v. Sinclair, 3 Bush, 264.

² 4 Conn. 209, 224, 10 Am. Dec. 121. See ante, pp. 532-534.

effect of it is to correct an innocent mistake, remedy a mischief, execute the intention of the parties, and promote justice, then, both as a matter of right and of public policy affecting the peace and welfare of the community, the law should be sustained."¹

After the courts of the State of Pennsylvania had decided that the relation of landlord and tenant could not exist in that State under a Connecticut title, a statute was passed which provided that the relation of landlord and tenant "shall exist and be held as fully and effectually between Connecticut settlers and Pennsylvania claimants as between other citizens of this Commonwealth, on the trial of any case now pending or hereafter to be brought within this Commonwealth, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding." In a suit which was pending and had been once tried before the statute was passed, the statute was sustained by the Supreme Court of that State, and afterwards by the Supreme Court of the United States, into which last-mentioned court it had been removed on the allegation that it violated the obligation of contracts. As its purpose and effect was to remove from contracts which the parties had made a legal impediment to their enforcement, there would seem to be no doubt, in the light of the other authorities we have referred to, that the conclusion reached was the only just and proper one.²

In the State of Ohio, certain deeds made by married women were ineffectual for the purposes of record and evidence, by reason of the omission on the part of the officer taking the acknowledgment to state in his certificate that, before and at the time of the grantor making the acknowledgment, he made the contents known to her by reading or otherwise. An act was afterwards passed which provided that "any deed heretofore executed pursuant to law, by husband and wife, shall be received in evidence in any of the courts of this State, as conveying the estate of the wife, although the magistrate taking the acknowledgment of such deed shall not have certified that he read or made known the contents of such deed before or at the time she acknowledged the execution thereof." This statute, though with some hesitation at first, was held to be unobjectionable. The deeds with the defective acknowledgments were regarded by the legislature and by the court as being sufficient for the purpose of conveying at least the grantor's equitable estate; and if sufficient for this purpose, no vested rights would be disturbed, or wrong be done, by making them receivable in evidence as conveyances.¹

¹ Savings Bank v. Allen, 28 Conn. 97, 102. See also Savings Bank v. Bates, 8 Conn. 605; Andrews v. Russell, 7 Blackf. 474; Grimes v. Doe, 8 Blackf. 371; Thompson v. Morgan, 6 Minn. 242; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 331. In Curtis v. Leavitt, 17 Barb. 399, and 16 N. Y. 9, and in Woodruff v. Scruggs, 27 Ark. 26, 11 Am. Rep. 777, a statute forbidding the interposition of the defence of usury was treated as a statute repealing a penalty. See further, Lewis v. Foster, 1 N. H. 61; Wilson v. Hardesty, 1 Md. Ch. 60; Welch v. Wadsworth, 50 Conn. 149; Wood v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68; Washburn v. Franklin, 35 Barb. 603; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 331; Danville v. Pace, 25 Gratt. 1. The case of Gilliland v. Phillips, 1 S. C. 152, is contra;

but it discusses the point but little, and makes no reference to these cases. The legislature may impose interest at an increased rate on a debt past due, when the act takes effect. Cummings v. Howard, 63 Cal. 503. [Building and loan associations may be exempted from the operation of usury laws. Iowa Savings & L. Assn. v. Heldt, 107 Iowa. 297, 77 N. W. 1050, 43 L. R. A. 689, 70 Am. St. 197.]

² Satterlee v. Mathewson, 13 S. & R. 169, and 2 Pet. 380. And see Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88; Gross v. U.S. Mtge. Co., 108 U. S. 477, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Lessee of Dulany v. Tilgman, 6 G. & J. 401; Payne v. Treadwell, 13 Cal. 220; Maxey v. Wise, 25 Ind. 1.

Other cases go much farther than this, and hold that, although the deed was originally ineffectual for the purpose of conveying the title, the healing statute may accomplish the intent of the parties by giving it effect.² At first sight these cases may seem

¹ Chestnut v. Shane's Lessee, 16 Ohio, 599, overruling Connell v. Connell, 6 Ohio, 353; Good v. Zercher, 12 Ohio, 394; Medlock v. Williams, 12 Ohio, 377; and Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio, 116. Of the dissenting opinion in the last case, which the court approve in 16 Ohio, 600-610, they say: "That opinion stands upon the ground that the act operates only upon that class of deeds where enough had been done to show that a court of chancery ought, in each case, to render a decree for a conveyance, assuming that the certificate was not such as the law required. And where the title in equity was such that a court of chancery ought to interfere and decree a good legal title, it was within the power of the legislature to confirm the deed, without subjecting an indefinite number to the useless expense of unnecessary litigation." See also Lessee of Dulany v. Tighman, 6 G. & J. 461; Journey v. Gibson, 56 Pa. St. 57; Grove v. Todd, 41 Md. 633, 20 Am. Rep. 76; Montgomery v. Hobson, Meigs, 437. [May validate a defective acknowledgment. Summer v. Mitchell, 20 Fed. 179, 10 So. 592, 14 L. R. A. 815, 30 Am. St. 105.] But the legislature, it has been declared, has no power to legalize and make valid the deed of an insane person. Routson v. Wolf, 35 Mo. 174. In Illinois it has been decided that a deed of release of dower executed by a married woman, but not so acknowledged as to be effectual, cannot be validated by retrospective statute, because to do so would be to take from the woman a vested right. Russell v. Rumsey, 35 Ill. 332.

² Lessee of Walton v. Bailey, 1 Binn. 470; Underwood v. Lilly, 10 S. & R. 87; Barnet v. Barnet, 15 S. & R. 72, 16 Am. Dec. 618; Tate v. Stooltzfoos, 16 S. & R. 35, 16 Am. Dec. 546; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88; Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456; Davis v. State Bank, 7 Ind. 316; Estate of Sticknoth, 7 Nev. 227; Ferguson v. Williams, 58 Iowa, 717, 13 N. W. 49; Johnson v. Taylor, 60 Tex. 360; Johnson v. Richardson, 44 Ark. 355; Goshorn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641. In the last case the court say: "The act of the married woman may, under the law, have been void and inoperative; but in justice and equity it did not leave her right to the property untouched. She had capacity to do the act in a form prescribed by law for her protection. She intended to do the act in the prescribed form. She attempted to do it, and her attempt was received and acted on in good faith. A mistake subsequently discovered invalidates the act; justice and equity require that she should not take advantage of that mistake; and she has therefore no just right to the property. She has no right to complain if the law which prescribed forms for her protection shall interfere to prevent her reliance upon them to resist the demands of

to go beyond the mere confirmation of a contract, and to be at least technically objectionable, as depriving a party of property without an opportunity for trial, inasmuch as they proceed upon the assumption that the title still remained in the grantor, and that the healing act was required for the purpose of divesting him of it, and passing it over to the grantee.¹ Apparently, therefore, there would seem to be some force to the objection that such a statute deprives a party of vested rights. But the objection is more specious than sound. If all that is wanting to a valid contract or conveyance is the observance of some legal formality, the party may have a legal right to avoid it; but this right is coupled with no equity, even though the case be such that no remedy could be afforded the other party in the courts. The right which the healing act takes away in such a case is the right in the party to avoid his contract, — a naked legal right which it is usually unjust to insist upon, and which no constitutional provision was ever designed to protect.² As the point is put by Chief Justice Parker of Massachusetts, a party cannot have a vested right to do wrong;³ or, as stated by the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "Laws curing defects which would otherwise operate to frustrate what must be presumed to be the desire of the party affected, cannot be considered as taking away vested rights. Courts do not regard rights as vested contrary to the justice and equity of the case."⁴

The operation of these cases, however, must be carefully restricted to the parties to the original contract, and to such other justice." Similar language is employed in the Pennsylvania cases. See further, Dentzel v. Waldie, 30 Cal. 138; Skel-lenger v. Smith, 1 Wash. Ter. 389.

¹ This view has been taken in some similar cases. See Russell v. Rumsey, 85 Ill. 362; Alabama, &c. Ins. Co. v. Boy-kin, 38 Ala. 510; Orton v. Noonan, 23 Wis. 102; Dale v. Medcalf, 9 Pa. St. 108.

² In Gibson v. Hibbard, 13 Mich. 214, a check, void at the time it was given for want of a revenue stamp, was held valid after being stamped as permitted by a subsequent act of Congress. A similar ruling was made in Harris v. Rutledge, 19 Iowa. 237. The case of State v. Nor-wood, 12 Md. 195, is still stronger. The curative statute was passed after judgment had been rendered against the right claimed under the defective instrument, and it was held that it must be applied by the appellate court. See post, p. 544.

³ Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245. See also Lycoming v. Union, 15 Pa. St. 166, 170. There is no vested right in the statutory defence that a contract was made on Sunday. Berry v. Clary, 77 Me. 482, 1 Atl. 860.

⁴ State v. Newark, 25 N. J. 185, 197. Compare Blount v. Janesville, 31 Wis. 648; Brown v. New York, 63 N. Y. 239; Hughes v. Cannon, 2 Humph. 594. A law merely taking away an unconscionable defence is valid. Read v. Platts- worth, 107 U. S. 595, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108. In New York, &c. R. R. Co. v. Van Horn, 57 N. Y. 473, the right of the legislature to validate a void contract was denied on the ground that to validate it would be to take the property of the contracting party without due process of law. The cases which are contra are not examined in the opinion, or even referred to.

persons as may have succeeded to their rights with no greater equities. A subsequent bona fide purchaser cannot be deprived of the property which he has acquired, by an act which retrospectively deprives his grantor of the title which he held when the purchase was made. Conceding that the invalid deed may be made good as between the parties, yet if, while it remained invalid, and the grantor still retained the legal title to the land, a third person has purchased and received a conveyance, with no notice of any fact which should preclude his acquiring an equitable as well as a legal title thereby, it would not be in the power of the legislature to so confirm the original deed as to divest him of the title he has acquired. The position of the case is altogether changed by this purchase. The legal title is no longer separated from equities, but in the hands of the second purchaser is united with an equity as strong as that which exists in favor of him who purchased first. Under such circumstances even the courts of equity must recognize the right of the second purchaser as best, and as entitled to the usual protection which the law accords to vested interests.¹

If, however, a grantor undertakes to convey more than he possesses, or contrary to the conditions or qualifications which, for the benefit of others, are imposed upon his title, or in fraud of the rights of others whose representative or agent he is, so that the defect in his conveyance consists not in any want of due formality, nor in any disability imposed by law, it is not in the power of the legislature to validate it retrospectively; and we may add, also, that it would not have been competent to authorize it in advance. In such case the rights of others intervene, and they are entitled to protection on the same grounds, though for still stronger reasons, which exist in the case of the bona fide purchasers above referred to.²

¹ Brinton v. Seever, 12 Iowa, 389; Southard v. Central R. R. Co., 29 N. J. 13; Thompson v. Morgan, 8 Minn. 292; Meighen v. Strong, 6 Minn. 177; Norman v. Heist, 5 W. & S. 171; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; Les Bois v. Bramell, 4 How. 449; McCarthy v. Hoffman, 23 Pa. St. 507; Sherwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex. 498; Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 452. See Fogg v. Holcomb, 64 Iowa, 621, 21 N. W. 111; McGehee v. McKenzie, 43 Ark. 153. The legislature cannot validate an invalid trust in a will, by act passed after the death of the testator, and after title vested in the heirs. Hilliard v. Miller, 10 Pa. St. 323. See Snyder v. Bull, 17 Pa. St. 54; McCarthy v. Hoffman, 23 Pa. St. 507; Bolton v. Johns, 5 Pa. St. 145; State v. Warren, 28 Md. 338. The cases here cited must not be understood as establishing any different principle from that laid down in Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209, where it was held competent to validate a marriage, notwithstanding the rights of third parties would be incidentally affected. Rights of third parties are liable to be incidentally affected more or less in any case in which a defective contract is made good; but this is no more than might happen in enforcing a contract or decreeing a divorce. See post p. 548. Also Tallman v. Janesville, 17 W. s. 71.

² In Shouk v. Brown, 61 Pa. St. 327,

We have already referred to the case of contracts by municipal corporations which, when made, were in excess of their authority, but subsequently have been confirmed by legislative action. If the contract is one which the legislature might originally have authorized, the case falls within the principle above laid down, and the right of the legislature to confirm it must be recognized.¹

the facts were that a married woman held property under a devise, with an express restraint upon her power to alienate. She nevertheless gave a deed of the same, and a legislative act was afterwards obtained to validate this deed. Held valid. Agnew, J.: "Many cases have been cited to prove that this legislation is merely confirmatory and valid, beginning with Barnet v. Barnett, 15 S. & R. 72 and ending with Journey v. Gibson, 55 Pa. St. 57. The most of them are cases of the defective acknowledgments of deeds of married women. But there is a marked difference between them and this. In all of them there was a power to convey, and only a defect in the mode of its exercise. Here there is an absolute want of power to convey in any mode. In ordinary cases a married woman has both the title and the power to convey or to mortgage her estate, but is restricted merely in the manner of its exercise. This is a restriction it is competent for the legislature to remove, for the defect arises merely in the form of the proceeding, and not in any want of authority. Those to whom her estate descends, because of the omission of a prescribed form, are really not injured by the validation. It was in her power to cut them off, and in truth and conscience she did so, though she failed at law. They cannot complain, therefore, that the legislature intervenes to do justice. But the case before us is different. [The grantor] had neither the right nor the power during coverture to cut off her heirs. She was forbidden by the law of the gift, which the donor impressed upon it to suit his own purposes. Her title was qualified to this extent. Having done an act she had no right to do, there was no moral obligation for the legislature to enforce. Her heirs have a right to say, . . . 'The legislature cannot take our estate and vest it in another who bought it with notice on the face of his title that our mother could not convey to him.'" "The true principle on which retrospective laws are supported was stated long ago by Duncan, J., in Underwood v. Lilly, 19 S. & R. 101; to wit, where they impair no contract, or disturb no vested right, but only vary remedies, cure defects in proceedings otherwise far, which do not vary existing obligations contrary to their situation when entered into and when prosecuted." In White Mountains R. R. Co. v. White Mountains R. R. Co. of N. H., 56 N. H. 50, it was decided that the legislature had no power, as against non-assenting parties, to validate a fraudulent sale of corporate property. In Altier's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 241, 5 Am. Rep. 403, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania declared it incompetent for the legislature, after the death of a party, to empower the courts to correct a mistake in his will which rendered it inoperative, — the title having already passed to his heirs. But where it was not known that the decedent left heirs, it was held competent, as against the State, to cure defects in a will after the death, and thus prevent an escheat. Estate of Sticknoth, 7 Nev. 223.

¹ See Shaw v. Norfolk R. R. Corp., 5 Gray, 162, in which it was held that the legislature might validate an unauthorized assignment of a franchise. Also May v. Holdridge, 23 Wis. 93, and cases cited, in which statutes authorizing the reassessment of irregular taxes were sustained. In this case, Paine, J., says: "This rule must of course be understood with its proper restrictions. The work for which the tax is sought to be assessed must be of such a character that the legislature is authorized to provide for it by taxation. The method adopted must be one liable to no constitutional objection. It must be such as the legislature might originally have authorized had it seen fit. With these restrictions, where work of this character has been done, I think it convenient for the legislature to supply a defect of authority in the original proceedings, to adopt and ratify the im-

This principle is one which has very often been acted upon in the case of municipal subscriptions to works of internal improvement, where the original undertaking was without authority of law, and the authority given was conferred by statute retrospectively.¹

It has not usually been regarded as a circumstance of importance in these cases, whether the enabling act was before or after the corporation had entered into the contract in question; and if the legislature possesses that complete control over the subject of taxation by municipal corporations which has been declared in many cases, it is difficult to perceive how such a corporation can successfully contest the validity of a special statute, which only sanctions a contract previously made by the corporation, and which, though at the time ultra vires, was nevertheless for a public and local object, and compels its performance through an exercise of the power of taxation.²

improvement, and provide for a reassessment of the tax to pay for it." And see Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; Kunkle v. Franklin, 13 Minn. 127; Bayce v. Sinclair, 3 Bush. 201; Dean v. Borchgoms, 30 Wis. 233; Stuart v. Warren, 37 Conn. 225. A city ordinance may be validated retrospectively. Truchent v. Charleston, 1 N. & McC. 227; Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 728. Otherwise where the city had no power to annex territory as it tried to do. Strosser v. Fort Wayne, 169 Ind. 443.

¹ See, among other cases, McMillan v. Bay, 65 Iowa 294; Gould v. Sterling, 23 N. Y. 431; Thompson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. 227; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Board of Commissioners v. Bright, 18 Ind. 363; Gibbons v. Mobile, 36 R. R. Co. 36 Ala. 417.

² In Hasthornek v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37, it appeared that the city of Milwaukee had been authorized to contract for the construction of a harbor, at an expense not to exceed $100,000. A contract was entered into by the city providing for a larger expenditure; and a special legislative act was afterwards obtained to ratify it. The court held that the subsequent legislative ratification was not sufficient, proprio vigore, and without evidence that such ratification was procured with the assent of the city, or had been subsequently acted upon or confirmed by it, to make the contract obligatory upon the city. The court say, per Dodge, C. J.: "The question is, can the legislature, by recognizing the existence of a previously void contract, and authorizing its discharge by the city, or in any other way, coerce the city against its will into a performance of it, or does the law require the assent of the city, as well as of the legislature, in order to make the obligation binding and efficacious? I must say that, in my opinion, the latter act, as well as the former, is necessary for that purpose and that without it the obligation cannot be enforced. A contract void for want of capacity in one or both of the contracting parties to enter into it is as no contract; it is as if no attempt at an agreement had ever been made. And to admit that the legislature, of its own choice, and against the wishes of either or both of the contracting parties, can give it life and vigor, is to admit that it is within the scope of legislative authority to 'divest settled right of property, and to take the property of one individual or corporation and transfer it to another.' This reasoning is of course to be understood in the light of the particular case before the court: that is to say, a case in which the contract was to do something not within the ordinary functions of local government. See the case explained and defended by the same eminent judge in Mills v. Carlton, 29 Wis. 406. Compare Fisk v. Kenosha, 26 Wis. 23, 53; Klapp v. Grant, 27 Wis. 147; and Single v. Supervisors of Marathon, 38 Wis. 363, in which the right to validate a contract which might originally have been author-

Nor is it important in any of the cases to which we have referred, that the legislative act which cures the irregularity, defect, or want of original authority, was passed after suit brought, in which such irregularity or defect became matter of importance. The bringing of suit vests in a party no right to a particular decision;¹ and his case must be determined on the law as it stands, not when the suit was brought, but when the judgment is rendered.² It has been held that a statute allowing amend-ized was fully affirmed. And see Marshall v. Silliman, 61 Ill. 218, 226, opinion by Chief Justice Lawrence, in which, after referring to Harward v. St. Clair, &c. Drainage Co., 51 Ill. 130; People v. Mayor of Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; Hessler v. Drainage Comrs., 53 Ill. 105; and Livingston v. Wilder, 53 Ill. 302, it is said, "These cases show it to be the settled doctrine of this court, that, under the constitution of 1848, the legislature could not compel a municipal corporation to incur a debt for merely local purposes, against its own wishes, and this doctrine, as already remarked, has received the sanction of express enactment in our existing constitution. That was the effect of the curative act under consideration, and it was thereby void." The cases of Guilford v. Supervisors of Chenango, 16 Barb. 515, and 13 N. Y. 143; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; and Thomas v. Leland, 24 Wend. 55, especially, go much further than is necessary to sustain the text. See also Bartholomew v. Harwinton, 34 Conn. 48; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551; Barbours v. Camden, 51 Me. 608; Weister v. Hade, 32 Pa. St. 474; State v. Sullivan, 45 Ill. 412; Johnson v. Campbell, 49 Ill. 233. In Brewster v. Syracuse, parties had constructed a sewer for the city at a stipulated price which had been fully paid to them. The charter of the city forbade the payment of extra compensation to contractors in any case. The legislature afterwards passed an act empowering the Common Council of Syracuse to assess, collect, and pay over the further sum of $200 in addition to the contract price; and this act was held unconstitutional. In Thomas v. Leland, certain parties had given bond to the State, conditioned to pay into the treasury a certain sum of money as an inducement to the State to connect the Chenango Canal with the Erie at Utica, instead of at Winstown as originally contemplated, —the sum mentioned being the increased expense in consequence of the change. Afterwards the legislature, deeming the debt thus contracted by individuals unreasonably partial and onerous, passed an act, the object of which was to levy the amount on the owners of real estate in Utica. This act seemed to the court unobjectionable. "The general purpose of raising the money by tax was to construct a canal, a public highway, which the legislature believed would be a benefit to the city of Utica as such; and independently of the bond, the case is the ordinary one of local taxation to make or improve a highway. If such an act be otherwise constitutional, we do not see how the circumstance that a bond had before been given securing the same money can detract from its validity. Should an individual volunteer to secure a sum of money, in itself properly leviable, by way of tax on a town or county, there would be nothing in the nature of such an arrangement which would preclude the legislature from resorting by way of tax, to those who are primarily and more justly liable. Even should he pay the money, what is there in the constitution to preclude his being reimbursed by a tax?" Here, it will be perceived, the corporation was compelled to assume an obligation which it had not even attempted to incur, but which private persons, for considerations which seemed to them sufficient, had taken upon their own shoulders. We have expressed doubts of the correctness of this decision, ante, p. 508, note, where a number of cases are cited, bearing upon the point.

¹ Bacon v. Callender, 6 Mass. 363; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Ill. 24; Cowell v. Long, 15 Ill. 202; Miler v. Graham, 17 Ohio St. 1; State v. Squires, 25 Iowa, 319; Butterworth v. Peabody, 3, 9 Mass. 151.

² Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88; Matter v. Chapman, 6 Conn. 54; People v. Su- ments to indictments in criminal cases might constitutionally be applied to pending suits;¹ and even in those States in which retrospective laws are forbidden, a cause must be tried under the rules of evidence existing at the time of the trial, though different from those in force when the suit was commenced.² And if a case is appealed, and pending the appeal the law is changed, the appellate court must dispose of the case under the law in force when its decision is rendered.³

But the healing statute must in all cases be confined to validating acts which the legislature might previously have authorized. It cannot make good retrospectively acts or contracts which it peritors, &c., 20 Mich. 95; Satterlee v. Matthews, 19 S. & R. 163, and 2 Pet. 580; Exchange Mfg. Co. v. Keyser, 62 Miss. 145; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 63 Miss. 641; McLane v. Bonn, 70 Iowa, 752, 20 N. W. 478; Johnson v. Richardson, 44 Ark. 355. See cases, p. 333, note 1, ante. A statute giving a wife a right to recover in her own name for personal injury, may apply to a pending action. McLennan v. Lancaster, 63 Wis. 590, 23 N. W. 381, following Weldon v. Winslow, L. R. 14 Q. B. D. 784. But an act which is penurious to a plaintiff cannot apply to a pending suit. Powers v. Wright, 62 Miss. 35. After an appeal bond was signed by an attorney, the court held such bonds void, and then the legislature attempted to validate all existing bonds so signed. This was held bad as against the appellee in the case. Andrews v. Beane, 15 R. I. 451, 8 Atl. 540. See Thweatt v. Bank, 81 Ky. 1. [Judgment correct when rendered on account of invalidity of law under which action was brought, may be reversed upon appeal when in the interim the statute has been corrected by amendment providing for proper notice to parties interested. Ferry v. Campbell, 110 Iowa, 260, 81 N. W. 664, 50 L. R. A. 92.]

¹ State v. Manning, 14 Tex. 402.

² Rick v. Flinders, 59 N. H. 394.

³ State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 195. Corbett v. Wright v. Graham, 42 Ark. 140. In Yeaton v. United States, 5 Cranch, 281, a vessel had been condemned in admiralty, and pending an appeal the act under which the condemnation was declared was repealed. The court held that the cause must be considered as if no sentence had been pronounced, and if no sentence had been pronounced then, after the expiration or repeal of the law, no penalty could be enforced or punishment inflicted for a violation of the law committed while it was in force, unless some special provision of statute was made for that purpose. See also Schouler v. United States, 6 Cranch, 329; Commonwealth v. Duane, 1 Binney, 601; United States v. Passmore, 4 Dall. 372; Commonwealth v. Marshall, 11 Pick. 350; Commonwealth v. Kimball, 21 Pick. 373; Hartung v. Peuple, 22 N. Y. 95; Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. 327; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. 429; Insurance Co. v. Kinchloe, 5 Wall. 541; Ex parte McCordie, 7 Wall. 505; United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88; Engle v. Shurts, 1 Mich. 150. In the McCordie case the appellate jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court in certain cases was taken away while a case was pending. Per Chase, Ch. J.: "Jurisdiction is power to declare the law; and when it ceases to exist, the only function remaining to the court is that of announcing the fact and dismissing the cause. And this is not less clear upon authority than upon principle." But where a State has jurisdiction of a subject, e. g. pilotage, until Congress establishes regulations, and penalties are incurred under a State act, and afterwards Congress legislates on the subject, this does not repeal, but only suspends the State law; and a penalty previously incurred may still be collected. Sturges v. Spafford, 45 N. Y. 445. And see People v. Hobson, 48 Mich. 27, 11 N. W. 771. [Refusal to pay alimony may be by statute made a contempt of court, punishable by imprisonment, and as this affects the remedy only it may operate retrospectively. Judd v. Judd, 125 Mich. 228, 84 N. W. 134.]

had and could have no power to permit or sanction in advance.¹ There lies before us at this time a volume of statutes of one of the States, in which are contained acts declaring certain tax-rolls valid and effectual, notwithstanding the following irregularities and imperfections: a failure in the supervisor to carry out separately, opposite each parcel of land on the roll, the taxes charged upon such parcel, as required by law; a failure in the supervisor to sign the certificate attached to the roll; a failure in the voters of the township to designate, as required by law, in a certain vote by which they had assumed the payment of bounty moneys, whether they should be raised by tax or loan; corrections made in the roll by the supervisor after it had been delivered to the collector; the including by the supervisor of a sum to be raised for township purposes without the previous vote of the township, as required by law; adding to the roll a sum to be raised which could not lawfully be levied by taxation without legislative authority; the failure of the supervisor to make out the roll within the time required by law; and the accidental omission of a parcel of land which should have been embraced by the roll. In each of these cases, except the last, the act required by law, and which failed to be performed, might by previous legislation have been dispensed with; and perhaps in the last case there might be question whether the roll was rendered invalid by the omission referred to, and, if it was, whether the subsequent act could legalize it.² But if township officers should assume to do acts under the power of taxation which could not lawfully be justified as an exercise of that power, no subsequent legislation could make them good. If, for instance, a part of the property in a taxing district should be assessed at one rate, and a part at another, for a burden resting equally upon all, there would be no such apportionment as is essential to taxation, and the roll would be beyond the reach of curative legislation.³ And if persons or property

¹ Kimball v. Rosendale, 42 Wis. 407; Maxwell v. Goetschius, 40 N. J. 383, 20 Am. Rep. 242.

² See Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242; Dean v. Gleason, 16 Wis. 1; post, p. 742, note.

³ This is clearly shown by McKinstry, J., in People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15. And see Billings v. Dotten, 15 Ill. 218, Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82, and Thames Manufacturing Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 550, for cases where curative statutes were held not effectual to reach defects in tax proceedings. As to what defects may or may not be cured by subsequent legislation, see Allen v. Armstrong, 16 Iowa, 506; Smith v. Cleveland, 17 Wis. 556, and Abbott v. Linderbower, 42 Mo. 182. In Tallman v. Jonesville, 17 Wis. 71, the constitutional authority of the legislature to cause an irregular tax to be reassessed in a subsequent year, where the rights of bona fide purchasers had intervened, was disputed; but the court sustained the authority as "a salutary and highly beneficial feature of our systems of taxation," and "not to be abandoned because in some instances it produces individual hardships." Certainly bona fide purchasers, as between themselves and the State, should be assessed for taxation in a district which did not include them, not only would the assessment be invalid, but a healing statute would be ineffectual to charge them with the burden.¹ In such a case there would be a fatal want of jurisdiction; and even in judicial proceedings, if there was originally a failure of jurisdiction, no subsequent law can confer it.²

Statutory Privileges and Exemptions.

The citizen has no vested right in statutory privileges and exemptions. Among these may be mentioned, — exemptions from the performance of public duties upon juries, or in the militia, and the like; exemptions of property or person from assessment for the purposes of taxation; exemptions of property from being seized on attachment, or execution, or for the payment of taxes; exemption from highway labor, and the like. All these rest upon reasons of public policy, and the laws are changed as the varying circumstances seem to require. The State demands the performance of military duty by those persons only who are within certain specified ages; but if, in the opinion of the legislature, the public exigencies should demand military service from all other persons capable of bearing arms, the privilege of exemption might be recalled, without violation of any constitutional principle.

must take their purchases subject to all public burdens justly resting upon them. The case of Conway v. Cable is instructive. It was there held, among other things, — and very justly, as we think, — that the legislature could not make good a tax sale effected by fraudulent combination between the officers and the purchasers. The general rule is undoubted, that a sale for illegal taxes cannot be validated. Slisbee v. Stockel, 44 Mich. 521, 7 N. W. 160, 367; Brady v. King, 53 Cal. 44; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 223. In Miller v. Graham, 17 Ohio St. 1, a statute validating certain ditch assessments was sustained, notwithstanding the defects covered by it were not mere irregularities; but that statute gave the parties an opportunity to be heard as to these defects.

¹ See Well's v. Weston, 22 Mo. 334; People v. Supervisors of Chenango, 11 N. Y. 563; Hughley's Lessee v. Horner, 2 Ohio, 231; Coxington v. Southgate, 15 B. Monr. 411; Morford v. Unger, 5 Iowa, 82; post, pp. 718-721.

² So held in McDaniel v. Correll, 19

Ill. 223, where a statute came under consideration which assumed to make valid certain proceedings in court which were void for want of jurisdiction of the persons concerned. A void appeal bond cannot be validated so as to give to an appellate court jurisdiction which has failed by reason of such defective bond. Andrews v. Beane, 15 R. I. 451, 8 Atl. 549. See also Israel v. Arthur, 7 Col. 5, 1 Pac. 438; Yeatman v. Day, 79 Ky. 189; Roche v. Waters, 72 Md. 264, 19 Atl. 555; Denny v. Mattcon, 2 Allen, 331; Nelson v. Rountree, 23 Wis. 337; Griffin's Ex'r v. Cunningham, 20 Gratt. 31, 109, per Jones, J.; Richards v. Rote, 68 Pa. St. 248; State v. Doherty, 60 Me. 604; Pryor v. Downey, 50 Cal. 358; 19 Am. Rep. 655. If land is assessed for taxation in a town where it does not lie, it is not competent to make the tax-deed evidence of title. Smith v. Sherry, 54 Wis. 114, 11 N. W. 465. Compare Waipole v. Elliott, 18 Ind. 258, in which there was not a failure of jurisdiction, but an irregular exercise of it.

The fact that a party had passed the legal age under an existing law, and performed the service demanded by it, could not protect him against further calls, when public policy or public necessity was thought to require them.¹ In like manner, exemptions from taxation are always subject to recall, when they have been granted merely as a privilege, and not for a consideration received by the public; as in the case of exemption of buildings for religious or educational purposes, and the like.² So, also, are exemptions of property from execution.³ So, a license to carry on a particular trade for a specified period, may be recalled before the period has elapsed.⁴ So, as before stated, a penalty given by statute may be taken away by statute at any time before judgment is recovered.⁵ So, an offered bounty may be recalled, except as to so much as was actually earned while the offer was a continuing one; and the fact that a party has purchased property or incurred expenses in preparation for earning the bounty cannot preclude the recall.⁶ A franchise granted by the State with a reservation of a right of repeal must be regarded as a mere privilege while it is suffered to continue, but the legislature may take it away at any time, and the grantees must rely for the perpetuity and integrity of the franchises granted to them solely upon ¹ Commonwealth v. Bird, 12 Mass. 443; Swindle v. Brooks, 34 Ga. 67; Mayer, Ex parte, 27 Tex. 715; Bragg v. People, 78 Ill. 328; Moore v. Cass, 10 Kan. 288; Murphy v. People, 37 Ill. 447; State v. Miller, 2 Blackf. 35; State v. Quimby, 61 Me. 395; State v. Wright, 53 Me. 528; State v. Forshner, 43 N. H. 89; Dunlap v. State, 70 Ala. 450; Ex parte Thompson, 20 Fla. 887. And see Dale v. The Governor, 3 Stew. 387.

² See ante, pp. 393, 396, and notes. All the cases concede the right in the legislature to recall an exemption from taxation, when not resting upon contract. The subject was considered in People v. Roper, 35 N. Y. 629, in which it was decided that a limited immunity from taxation, tendered to the members of voluntary military companies, might be recalled at any time. It was held not to be a contract, but "only an expression of the legislative will for the time being, in a matter of mere municipal regulation." And see Christ Church v. Philadelphia, 24 How. 390; Lord v. Litchfield, 36 Conn. 116; East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 259; s. c. in error, 13 Wall. 373. [Citizens' Saving Bank v.

Owensboro, 173 U. S. 633, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590, 571.]

³ Bell v. Conroe, 13 Wis. 233.

⁴ See ante, pp. 393-401, notes.

⁵ Oriental Bank v. Freeze, 18 Me. 109. The statute authorized the plaintiff, suing for a breach of a prison bond, to recover the amount of his judgment and costs. This was regarded by the court as in the nature of a penalty; and it was therefore held competent for the legislature, even after breach, to so modify the law as to limit the plaintiff's recovery to his actual damages. See ante, p. 516, note 2, and cases cited.

⁶ East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 259, 2 Ann. Rep. 82, and 13 Wall. 373. But as to so much of the bounty as was actually earned before the change in the law, the party earning it has a vested right which cannot be taken away. People v. Auditor-General, 9 Mich. 327. And it has been held competent in changing a country seat to provide by law for compensation, through taxation, to the residents of the old site. Wilkinson v. Cheatham, 43 Ga. 258.

the faith of the sovereign grantor.¹ A statutory right to have causes reviewed on appeal may be taken away, by a repeal of the statute, even as to causes which had been previously appealed.² A mill-dam act which confers upon the person erecting a dam the right to maintain it, and flow the lands of private owners on paying such compensation as should be assessed for the injury done, may be repealed even as to dams previously erected.³ These illustrations must suffice under the present head.

Consequential Injuries.

It is a general rule that no one has a vested right to be protected against consequential injuries arising from a proper exercise of rights by others.⁴ This rule is peculiarly applicable to injuries resulting from the exercise of public powers. Under the police power the State sometimes destroys, for the time being, and perhaps permanently, the value to the owner of his property, without affording him any redress. The construction of a new way or the discontinuance of an old one may very seriously affect the value of adjacent property; the removal of a county or State capital will often reduce very largely the value of all the real estate of the place from whence it was removed; but in neither case can the parties whose interests would be injuriously affected, enjoin the act or claim compensation from the public.⁵ The general laws of the State may be so changed as to transfer, from one town to another, the obligation to support certain individuals, who may become entitled to support as paupers, and the constitution will present no impediment.⁶ The granting of a charter to a new corporation may sometimes render valueless the franchise of an existing corporation; but unless the State by contract has precluded itself from such new grant, the incidental injury can con-

¹ Per Smith, J., in Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603, 611. See post, pp. 837-840.

² Ex parte McCordle, 7 Wall. 503. See State v. Slevin, 15 Mo. App. 541. And that the right to an appeal, if not expressly given by constitution, need not be provided for. Kurdinger v. Saginaw, 59 Mich. 325, 28 N. W. 634; Minneapolis v. Wilkin, 30 Minn. 140, 14 N. W. 581; La Croix v. Co. Com'rs, 50 Conn. 321. Time may be shortened during a period of disability, in which one may bring an appeal after such disability is removed. Rupert v. Martz, 116 Ind. 72, 18 N. E. 381.

³ Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603. But if the party maintaining the dam had paid to the other party for the permanent flowing of his land a compensation assessed under the statute, it might be otherwise.

⁴ For the doctrine damnum absque injuria, see Broom's Maxims, 185; Sedgwick on Damages, 20, 112; Cooley on Torts, 93.

⁵ See ante, p. 293, and cases cited in note. Also Wilkinson v. Chestham, 43 Ga. 258; Fearing v. Irwin, 55 N. Y. 486; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548; Howes v. Grush, 131 Mass. 207; Heller v. Atchison, &c. R. R. Co., 28 Kan. 625.

⁶ Goshen v. Richmond, 4 Allen, 458; Bridgewater v. Plymouth, 97 Mass. 382.

stitute no obstacle.¹ But indeed it seems idle to specify instances, inasmuch as all changes in the laws of the State are liable to inflict incidental injury upon individuals, and, if every citizen was entitled to remuneration for such injury, the most beneficial and necessary changes in the law might be found impracticable of accomplishment.

We have now endeavored to indicate what are and what are not to be regarded as vested rights, and to classify the cases in which individual interests, in possession or expectancy, are protected against being divested by the direct interposition of legislative authority. Some other cases may now be considered, in which legislation has endeavored to control parties as to the manner in which they should make use of their property, or has permitted claims to be created against it through the action of other parties against the will of the owners. We do not allude now to the control which the State may possess through an exercise of the police power, — a power which is merely one of regulation with a view to the best interests and the most complete enjoyment of rights by all; — but to that which, under a claim of State policy, and without any reference to wrongful act or omission by the owner, would exercise a supervision over his enjoyment of undoubted rights, or which, in some cases, would compel him to recognize and satisfy demands upon his property which have been created without his assent.

In former times sumptuary laws were sometimes passed, and they were even deemed essential in republics to restrain the luxury so fatal to that species of government.² But the ideas which resulting injury was incidental to the exercise of an undoubted right by the State, and as all the vested rights of the first corporation still remained, though reduced in value by the new grant, the case was one of damage without legal injury. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 7 Pick. 344, and 11 Pet. 420. See also Turnpike Co. v. State, 3 Wall. 210; Miscanqua Bridge v. New Hampshire Bridge, 7 N. H. 35; Hillister v. Union Co., 9 Conn. 433; 25 Am. Dec. 30; English v. New Haven, &c. Co., 62 Conn. 240; Binghamton Bridge Case, 27 N. Y. 87, and 3 Wall. 51; Lehigh Valley Water Co's App., 102 Pa. St. 515; Rockland Water Co. v. Camden & R. W. Co., 80 Me. 544; 13 Atl. 783; Montjoy v. Pillow, 64 Mass. 705; 2 So. 105. See cases cited ante, p. 236, note 1.

¹ The State of Massachusetts granted to a corporation the right to construct a toll-bridge across the Charles River, under a charter which was to continue for forty years, afterwards extended to seventy, at the end of which period the bridge was to become the property of the Commonwealth. During the term the corporation was to pay 2000 annually to Harvard College. Forty-two years after the bridge was opened for passengers, the State incorporated a company for the purpose of erecting another bridge over the same river, a short distance only from the first, and which would accommodate the same passengers. The necessary effect would be to decrease greatly the value of the first franchise, if not to render it altogether worthless. But the first charter was not exclusive in its terms; no contract was violated in granting the second; the

² Montesquieu's Spirit of the Laws,

suggested such laws are now exploded utterly, and no one would seriously attempt to justify them in the present age. The right of every man to do what he will with his own, not interfering with the reciprocal right of others, is accepted among the fundamentals of our law. The instances of attempt to interfere with it have not been numerous since the early colonial days. A notable instance of an attempt to substitute the legislative judgment for that of the proprietor, regarding the manner in which he should use and employ his property, may be mentioned. In the State of Kentucky at an early day an act was passed to compel the owners of wild lands to make certain improvements upon them within a specified time, and it declared them forfeited to the State in case the statute was not complied with. It would be difficult to frame, consistently with the general principles of free government, a plausible argument in support of such a statute. It was not an exercise of the right of eminent domain, for that appropriates property to some specific public use on making compensation. It was not taxation, for that is simply an apportionment of the burden of supporting the government. It was not a police regulation, for that could not go beyond preventing an improper use of the land with reference to the due exercise of rights and enjoyment of legal privileges by others. It was purely and simply a law to forfeit a man's property, if he failed to improve it according to a standard which the legislature had prescribed. To such a power, if possessed by the government, there could be no limit but the legislative discretion; and if defensible on principle, then a law which should authorize the officer to enter a man's dwelling and seize and confiscate his furniture if it fell below, or his food if it exceeded an established legal standard, would be equally so. But in a free country such laws when mentioned are condemned instinctively.¹

But cases may sometimes present themselves in which improvements actually made by one man upon the land of another, even though against the will of the owner, ought on grounds of strict

B. 7. Such laws, though common in some countries, have never been numerous in England. See references to the legislation of this character, 4 B. Com. 170. Some of these statutes prescribed the number of courses permissible at dinner or other meals, while others were directed to restraining extravagance in dress. See Hamam, Mod. Ages, c. 9, pt. II.; and as to Roman sumptuary laws, Encyc. Metrop. Vol. X, p. 119. Adam Smith said of such laws, "It is the highest impertinence and presumption in kings and ministers to pretend to watch over the economy of private people, and to restrain their expense, either by sumptuary laws, or by prohibiting the importation of foreign luxuries." Wealth of Nations, B. 2, c. 3. As to prohibitory Liquor Laws, see post, pp. 845-851.

¹ The Kentucky statute referred to was declared unconstitutional in Gaines v. Buford, 1 Dana, 484. See also Violet v. Violet, 2 Dana, 325.

equity to constitute a charge upon the land improved. If they have been made in good faith, and under a reasonable expectation on the part of the person making them, that he was to reap the benefit of them, and if the owner has stood by and suffered them to be made, but afterwards has recovered the land and appropriated the improvements, it would seem that there must exist against him at least a strong equitable claim for reimbursement of the expenditures, and perhaps no sufficient reason why provision should not be made by law for their recovery.

Accordingly in the several States statutes will be found which undertake to provide for these equitable claims. These statutes are commonly known as betterment laws; and as an illustration of the whole class, we give the substance of that adopted in Vermont. It provided that after recovery in ejectment, where he or those through whom he claimed had purchased or taken a lease of the land, supposing at the time that the title purchased was good, or the lease valid to convey and secure the title and interest therein expressed, the defendant should be entitled to recover of the plaintiff the full value of the improvements made by him or by those through whom he claimed, to be assessed by jury, and to be enforced against the land, and not otherwise. The value was ascertained by estimating the increased value of the land in consequence of the improvements; but the plaintiff at his election might have the value of the land without the improvements assessed, and the defendant should purchase the same at that price within four years, or lose the benefit of his claim for improvements. But the benefit of the law was not given to one who had entered on land by virtue of a contract with the owner, unless it should appear that the owner had failed to fulfil such contract on his part.¹

This statute, and similar ones which preceded it, have been adjudged constitutional by the Supreme Court of Vermont, and have frequently been enforced. In an early case the court explained the principle of these statutes as follows: "The action for betterments, as they are termed in the statute, is given on the supposition that the legal title is found to be in the plaintiff in ejectment, and is intended to secure to the defendant the fruit of his labor, and to the plaintiff all that he is justly entitled to, which is his land in as good a situation as it would have been if no labor had been bestowed thereon. The statute is highly equitable in all its provisions, and would do exact justice if the value either of the improvements or of the land was always correctly estimated. The principles upon which it is founded are taken from the civil law, where ample provision was made for reimbursing to the bona fide possessor the expense of his improvements, if he was removed from his possession by the legal owner. It gives to the possessor not the expense which he has laid out on the land, but the amount which he has increased the value of the land by his betterments thereon; or, in other words, the difference between the value of the land as it is when the owner recovers it, and the value if no improvement had been made. If the owner takes the land together with the improvements, at the advanced value which it has from the labor of the possessor, what can be more just than that he should pay the difference? But if he is unwilling to pay this difference, by giving a deed as the statute provides, he receives the value as it would have been if nothing had been done thereon. The only objection which can be made is, that it is sometimes compelling the owner to sell when he may have been content with the property in its natural state. But this, when weighed against the loss to the bona fide possessor, and against the injustice of depriving him of the fruits of his labor, and giving it to another, who, by his negligence in not sooner enforcing his claim, has in some measure contributed to the mistake under which he has labored, is not entitled to very great consideration."¹

¹ Revised Statutes of Vermont of 1822, p. 215.

The last circumstance stated in this opinion — the negligence of the owner in asserting his claim — is evidently deemed important in some States, whose statutes only allow a recovery for improvements by one who has been in possession a certain number of years. But a later Vermont case dismisses it from consideration as not being a necessary ground on which to base the right of recovery. "The right of the occupant to recover the value of his improvements," say the court, "does not depend upon the question whether the real owner has been vigilant or negligent in the assertion of his rights. It stands upon a principle of natural justice and equity; viz., that the occupant in good faith, believing himself to be the owner, has added to the permanent value of the land by his labor and his money; is in equity entitled to such added value; and that it would be unjust that the owner of the land should be enriched by acquiring the value of such improvements without compensation to him who made them. This principle of natural justice has been very widely — we may say universally — recognized."²

¹ Brown v. Storm, 4 Vt. 37. This class of legislation was a so elaborately examined and later cited by Townshend, J., in Boss v. Irving, 14 Ill. 171, and in some of the other cases referred to in the succeeding note. See also Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story, 478; 2 Story, 605.

² Whitney v. Richardson, 31 Vt. 300,

Betterment laws, then, recognize the existence of an equitable right, and give a remedy for its enforcement where none had existed before. It is true that they make a man pay for improvements which he has not directed to be made; but this legislation presents no feature of officious interference by the government with private property. The improvements have been made by one person in good faith, and are now to be appropriated by another. The parties cannot be placed in statu quo, and the statute accomplishes justice as nearly as the circumstances of the case will admit, when it compels the owner of the land, who, if he declines to sell, must necessarily appropriate the betterments made by another, to pay the value to the person at whose expense they have been made. The case is peculiar; but a statute cannot be void as an unconstitutional interference with private property which adjusts the equities of the parties as nearly as possible according to natural justice.¹

306. For other cases in which similar laws have been held constitutional, see Armstrong v. Jackson, 1 Blackf. 374; Fowler v. Gilbert, 4 Blib. 54; Withington v. Corey, 2 N. H. 115; Bacon v. Callender, 6 Mass. 304; Pacquette v. Pickness, 18 Wis. 219; Childs v. Shower, 18 Iowa, 231; Squire v. Mather, 14 Tex. 235; Saunders v. Wilson, 19 Tex. 104; Brackett v. Nierross, 1 Ma. 80; Hunt's Lessee v. McManis, 5 O. c. 132; Longworth v. Worthington, 6 Ohio, 9; Stump v. Hornbaker, 34 Mo. 29; 3 S. W. 356. See further, James v. Carter, 12 Mass. 314; Coney v. Owen, 9 Watts, 436; Steele v. Spruance, 22 Pa. St. 256; Lynch v. Brudie, 63 Pa. St. 200; Dodrage v. Stuart, 35 Mo. 231; Fenwick v. Gil, 38 Mo. 510; Howard v. Zeyer, 18 La. Ann. 407; Pope v. Mason, 23 Ark. 344; Mariow v. Adams, 24 Ark. 169; Ormond v. Martin, 37 Ala. 578; Love v. Shorttzer, 31 Cal. 487; Griswold v. Bragg, 48 Conn. 577, 18 Blatch. 202; Gould v. Kell, 48 Mich. 307, 12 N. W. 158. [Lay v. Steppard, 112 Ga. 111, 37 S. E. 132.] For a contrary ruling see Nelson v. Allen, 1 Yerg. 399, in which, however, Judge Crisa in a note says the question was really not involved. Mr. Justice Stor held in Society, &c. v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 105, that such a law could not constitutionally be made to apply to improvements made before its passage; but this decision was made under the New Hampshire Constitution, which forbade retrospective laws.

The principles of equity upon which such legislation is sustained would seem not to depend upon the time when the improvements were made. See Davis's Lessee v. Powell, 13 Ohio, 308. In Childs v. Shower, 18 Iowa, 231, it was held that the legislature could not constitutionally make the value of the improvements a personal charge against the owner of the land, and authorized a personal judgment against him. The same ruling was had in McCoy v. Granly, 3 Ohio St. 463. A statute had been passed authorizing the occupying claimant at his option, after judgment rendered against him for the recovery of the land, to demand payment from the successful claimant of the full value of his lasting and valuable improvements, or to pay to the successful claimant the value of the land without the improvements, and retain it. The court say: "The occupying claimant act, in securing to the occupant a compensation for his improvements as a condition precedent to the restitution of the lands to the owner, goes to the utmost stretch of the legislative power touching this subject. And the statute . . . providing for the transfer of the fee in the land to the occupying claimant, without the consent of the owner, is a palpable invasion of the right of private property, and clearly in conflict with the Constitution."

¹ In Harris v. Inhabitants of Marblehead, 10 Gray, 49, it was held that the betterment law did not apply to a town

Unequal and Partial Legislation.

In the course of our discussion of this subject, it has been seen that some statutes are void though general in their scope, while others are valid though establishing rules for single cases only. An enactment may therefore be the law of the land without being a general law. And this being so, it may be important to consider in what cases constitutional principles will require a statute to be general in its operation, and in what cases, on the other hand, it may be valid without being general. We speak now in reference to general constitutional principles, and not to any peculiar rules which may have become established by special provisions in the constitutions of individual States.

The cases relating to municipal corporations stand upon peculiar grounds from the fact that those corporations are agencies of government, and as such are subject to complete legislative control. Statutes authorizing the sale of property of minors and other persons under disability are also exceptional, in that they are applied for by the parties representing the interests of the owners, and are remedial in their character. Such statutes are supported by the presumption that the parties in interest would consent if capable of doing so; and in law they are to be considered as assenting in the person of the guardians or trustees of their rights. And perhaps in any other case, if a party petitions for legislation and avails himself of it, he may justly be held estopped from disputing its validity;¹ so that the great bulk of private legislation which is adopted from year to year may at once be dismissed from this discussion.

Laws public in their objects may, unless express constitutional provision forbids,² be either general or local in their application; which had appropriated private property for the purposes of a school-house, and erected the house thereon. The law, it was said, did not apply "where a party is taking land by force of the statute, and is bound to see that all the steps are regular. If it did, the party taking the land might in fact compel a sale of the land, or compel the party to buy the school-house, or any other building erected upon it." But as a matter of constitutional authority, we see no reason to doubt that the legislature might extend such a law even to the cases of this description.

¹ This doctrine was applied in Ferguson v. Landrum, 5 Bush, 200, to parties who had obtained a statute for the levy of a tax to refund bounty moneys, which statute was held void as to or persons. And see Motz v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 495; Dewhurst v. Ahagheny, 95 Pa. St. 427; Andrus v. Board of Police, 41 La. Ann. 697, 6 So. 663. A man may be bound by his assent to an act changing the rules of descent in his particular case, though it would be void if not assented to. Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210.

² See ante, pp. 116-18, notes, and cases cited. To make a statute a public law of general obligation, it is not necessary that it should be equally applicable to all parts of the State. All that is required is that it shall apply equally to all per-they may embrace many subjects or one, and they may extend to all citizens, or be confined to particular classes, as minors or married women, bankers or traders, and the like.¹ The authority that legislates for the State at large must determine whether particular rules shall extend to the whole State and all its citizens, or, on the other hand, to a subdivision of the State or a single class of its citizens only. The circumstances of a particular locality, or the prevailing public sentiment in that section of the State, may require or make acceptable different police regulations from those demanded in another, or call for different taxation, and a different application of the public moneys. The legislature may therefore prescribe or authorize different laws of police, allow the right of eminent domain to be exercised in different cases and through different agencies, and prescribe peculiar restrictions upon taxation in each distinct municipality, provided the State constitution does not forbid.² These discriminations are made constantly; and the fact that the laws are of local or special operation only is not supposed to render them obnoxious in principle. The legislature may also deem it desirable to prescribe peculiar rules for the several occupations, and to establish distinctions in the rights, obligations, duties, and capacities of citizens.³ The business of common carriers, for instance, sons within the territorial limits described in the act. State v. County Commissioners of Baltimore, 29 Md. 516. See Pollock v. McClurken, 42 Ill. 370; Haskel v. Burlington, 30 Iowa, 232; Unity v. Barrage, 103 U. S. 447. Liquor sales may be forbidden in the country and permitted in the towns. State v. Berlin, 21 S. C. 262; Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 324. See Marmet v. State, 45 Ohio St. 63, 12 N. E. 463. Compare Hatcher v. State, 12 Lea, 368. An act may be made a misdemeanor in certain counties only. Davis v. State, 68 Ala. 58; State v. Moore, 104 N. C. 714, 10 S. E. 143. But a law is void which makes pool selling innocent under certain circumstances, while it is generally an offence. Daly v. State, 13 Lea, 228. [An act requiring repayment of taxes erroneously paid cannot be made applicable to a single county. Hamilton Co. Com'rs v. Rasche, 50 Ohio St. 106, 23 N. E. 408, 10 L. R. A. 584.]

¹ See the Iowa R. R. Land Co. v. Super, 80 Iowa, 112; Matter of Goodell, 39 Wis. 232, 20 Am. Rep. 42; Commonwealth v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., 120 Mass. 383.

² The constitutional requirement of equal protection of the laws does not make necessary the same local regulations, municipal powers, or judicial organization or jurisdiction. Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 23. See Strauder v. W. Virginia, 100 U. S. 303; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339.

³ The prohibition of special legislation for the benefit of individuals does not preclude laws for the benefit of particular classes; as, for example, mechanics and other laborers. Davis v. State, 3 Lea, 375. But under it peculiar provisions as to liens cannot be made applicable to but two counties. Woodard v. Brien, 14 Lea, 520. [When the laws already provide for the inspection of grain, live-stock, and dressed meats, an exception of dealers in such products from the provisions of an act requiring commission merchants in cities of specified size to take out licenses is not void on account of arbitrariness. Locher v. People, 183 Ill. 229, 55 N. E. 696, 47 L. R. A. 802, 75 Am. St. 193.] A statute exempting from taxation property to the amount of $500 of widows and maids or of bankers, may require special statutory regulations for the general benefit, and it may be matter of public policy to give laborers in one business a specific lien for their wages, when it would be impracticable or impolitic to do the same for persons engaged in some other employments. (a) If the laws be otherwise unobjectionable, all that can be required in these cases is, that they be general in their application to the class or locality to which they apply; and they are then public in character, and of their propriety and policy the legislature must judge. (b)

But a statute would not be constitutional which should prescribe a class or a party for opinion's sake,¹ or which should held unconstitutional because unequal. State v. Indianapolis, 69 Ind. 375, 35 Am. Rep. 223; Warner v. Curran, 75 Ind. 309. [A statute forbidding contracts between railway companies and their employees, and exempting such companies from liability for damages for personal injuries, is void as class legislation and as an unreasonable restraint upon freedom of contract. Slaver v. Pennsylvania Ry. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 831.]

It is not competent to except from right to recover for injury from defective sidewalk and who do not reside in States where similar injuries constitute right of action. Pearson v. Portland, 99 Me. 278, 31 Am. Rep. 273. The rule of non-liability of the master to a servant for injury suffered through a fellow-servant's negligence may be abrogated as to railroad companies. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Mackeye, 33 Kan. 298, 6 Pac. 201. A police regulation, affecting all railroads, to enforce a quicker delivery of freight is valid. Little Rock & C. Ry. Co. v. Hanniford, 49 Ark. 291, 5 S. W. 294. [A statute rendering telegraph companies liable for mental anguish caused by failure to promptly transmit and deliver messages does not deprive them of property without due process of law or deny them the equal protection of the law.

Simmons v. West, U. Tel. Co., 63 S. C. 425, 41 S. E. 521, 57 L. R. A. 607.] So one forbidding burying an animal killed by a train. Bannon v. State, 93 Ark. 167, 4 S. W. 655. An attorney fee, as a penalty, may be allowed for non-compliance with fencing law if animal is so killed. Peoria, D. & E. Ry. Co. v. Daggan, 136 Ill. 537. Contra, Wilder v. Chicago, & C. Ry. Co., 76 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 283; South & C. R. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; as class legislation. [See in addition upon statutes allowing attorney's fees in particular classes of cases. Gano v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 114 Iowa, 713, 87 N. W. 714, 55 L. R. A. 269, and cases cited. Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 56 Ohio St. 12, 41 N. E. 293, 29 L. R. A. 680; Vogel v. Pekoe, 157 Ill. 303, 42 N. E. 383, 36 L. R. A. 491; Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 60 Minn. 109, 31 N. W. 814, 31 L. R. A. 553; Title Guaranty Co. v. Wrenn, 35 Oreg. 62, 56 Pac. 271, 76 Am. St. 454.]

¹ The sixth section of the Metropolitan Police Law of Baltimore (1859) provided that "no Black Republican, or indorser or supporter of the Helper book, shall be appointed to any office" under the Board of Police which it established. This was claimed to be unconstitutional, as introducing into legislation the princi-

(a) [The classification underlying such legislation must be a reasonable one. If arbitrary or unreasonable, the courts do not hesitate to declare the legislation void. Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 36 S. W. 607, 33 L. R. A. 589. A statute providing for the treatment of inebriates at the expense of the county, and limiting the operation of such legislation to counties having a population of fifty thousand or more, is void as being unreasonable to so restrict its application. Murray v. Board of Co. Com'rs, 81 Mich. 259, 84 N. W. 103, 83 Am. St. 579, 51 L. R. A. 828.]

(b) [But see People v. Coolidge, 124 Mich. 661, 83 N. W. 594, 50 L. R. A. 493, apparently contra.]

select particular individuals from a class or locality, and subject them to peculiar rules, or impose upon them special obligations or burdens from which others in the same locality or class are exempt.¹

ple of proscription for the sake of political opinion, which was directly opposed to the cardinal principles on which the Constitution was founded. The court dismissed the objection in the following words: "That portion of the sixth section which relates to Black Republicans, &c., is obnoxious to the objection urged against it, if we are to consider that class of persons as proscribed on account of their political or religious opinions. But we cannot understand, officially, who are meant to be affected by the proviso, and therefore cannot express a judicial opinion on the question." Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376, 428, 484. This does not seem to be a very satisfactory disposition of so grave a constitutional objection to a legislative act. That courts may take judicial notice of the fact that the electors of the country are divided into parties with well-known designations cannot be doubted; and when one of these is proscribed by a name familiarly applied to it by its opponents, the inference that it is done because of political opinion seems to be too conclusive to need further support than that which is found in the act itself. And we know no reason why courts should decline to take notice of these facts of general notoriety, which, like the names of political parties, are a part of the public history of the times. A statute requiring causes in which the venue has been changed to be remanded on the affidavits of three unconditional Union men, that justice can be had in the courts where it originated, held void, on the principles stated in the text, in Brown v. Haywood, 4 Helsk. 357.

It has been decided that State laws forbidding the intermarriage of whites and blacks are such police regulations as are entirely within the power of the States, notwithstanding the provisions of the new amendments to the federal Constitution. State v. Jackson, 80 Mo. 175; State v. Gibson, 38 Ind. 389, 19 Am. Rep. 42; State v. Hairston, 63 N. C. 451; State v. Kenny, 78 N. C. 251, 22 Am. Rep. 683; Ellis v. State, 42 Ala. 525; Green v. State, 58 Ala. 160, 29 Am. Rep. 733; Kinney's Case, 30 Gratt. 838; Frasher v. State, 8 Tex. App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131; Lonas v. State, 3 Helsk. 287, 1 Green, Cr. R. 452; Ex rel. Hobbs & Johnson, 1 Woods. 537; Ex parte Kinney, 3 Hughes, 9; Ex parte Francois, 2 Woods. 367. [The exclusion of colored persons from a jury on account of color violates the constitutional provision for the protection of civil rights. State v. Peoples, 131 N. C. 784, 42 S. E. 814.] It is also said colored children may be required to attend separate schools, if impartial provision is made for their instruction. State v. Duffy, 7 Nev. 342, 8 Am. Rep. 713; Cory v. Carter, 48 Ind. 327; Ward v. Flood, 48 Cal. 36; State v. McCann, 21 Ohio St. 198; People v. Gallagher, 93 N. Y. 438; Bertonneau v. School Directors, 3 Woods. 177. But some States forbid this. People v. Board of Education, 18 Mich. 490; Clark v. Board of Directors, 24 Iowa, 266; Dove v. School District, 41 Iowa, 689; Chase v. Stephenson, 71 Ill. 883; People v. Board of Education of Quincy, 101 Ill. 308; Board of Education v. Tinnon, 26 Kan. 1; Pierce v. Union Dist., 43 N. J. L. 78; Kaine v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 490. See Dawson v. Lee, 83 Ky. 42. And when separate schools are not established for colored children, they are entitled to admission to the other public schools. State v. Duffy, supra. Where separate schools are allowed, property of whites cannot be taxed for white schools alone, and of negroes for negro schools. Puitt v. Com'rs. 94 N. C. 709; Claybrook v. Owensboro, 16 Fed. Rep. 297.

¹ Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 534; Brown v. Haywood, 4 Helsk. 357. A San Francisco ordinance required every male person imprisoned in the county jail to have his hair cut to an uniform length of one inch. This was held invalid, as being directed specially against the Chinese. Ah Kow v. Nonan, 5 Sawyer 552. See Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004. [A statute defining a "tramp" and prescribing a heavier punishment for certain criminal conduct

The legislature may suspend the operation of the general laws of the State; but when it does so the suspension must be general, and cannot be made for individual cases or for particular localities.¹ Privileges may be granted to particular individuals when by so doing the rights of others are not interfered with; disabilities may be removed; the legislature as parens patriæ, when not forbidden, may grant authority to the guardians or trustees of incompetent persons to exercise a statutory control over their estates for their assistance, comfort, or support, or for the dis-of such persons than is attached to similar conduct of others is not invalid for that reason. It is uniform in its application to all within the class. State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio, 202, 58 N. E. 672, 52 L. R. A. 833. See post, 837, a. Upon question of special legislation see Arms v. Ayer, 192 Ill. 601, 81 N. E. 551, 85 Am. St. 357.] In Louisiana an ordinance forbidding the sale of goods on Sunday, but excepting from its operation those keeping their places of business closed on Saturday, was held partial and therefore unconstitutional. Shreveport v. Levy, 26 La. Ann. 671, 21 Am. Rep. 553. A Sunday closing law is not unequal because it excepts certain business as necessary. Lieberman v. State, 26 Neb. 484, 42 N. W. 419. A liquor seller may not be forbidden to sign the bond of another liquor seller. Kuhn v. Common Council, 70 Mich. 534, 38 N. W. 470. Nor may the right to sell liquor, where a lawful business, be made dependent on the caprice or private judgment of the board which approves the sellers' bond. People v. Haug, 68 Mich. 649, 37 N. W. 21. Keeping open after legal hours cannot be declared a breach of the peace for which an arrest may be made without a warrant. Id. There is no reason, however, why the law should not take notice of peculiar views held by some classes of people, which unfit them for certain public duties, and excuse them from the performance of such duties; as Quakers are excused from military duty, and persons denying the right to inflict capital punishment are excluded from juries in capital cases. There, however, are in the nature of exemptions, and they rest upon considerations of obvious necessity. [A fire tax upon property is void as to railroads unless their property is accorded equality of opportunity with other property taxed to be protected by the measures provided out of the proceeds of such taxes. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Clark, 60 Kan. 826, 68 Pac. 477, 47 L. R. A. 77. The recent "department store" legislation enacted in some form in several of the States has been before the courts in several cases, and has generally been overturned as an arbitrary and unreasonable restraint upon the freedom to contract, as an attempt to use the police power of the State where there is no occasion for its exercise, and as denying property rights to one class in the community, permitted to others. Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 104, 55 N. E. 707, 75 Am. St. 93; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 55 S. W. 627, 77 Am. St. 765, 48 L. R. A. 235.]

¹ The statute of limitations cannot be suspended in particular cases while allowed to remain in force generally. Hollden v. James, 11 Mass. 389; Davison v. Johnnot, 7 Met. 388. See ante, p. 527, note. The general exemption laws cannot be varied for particular cases or localities. Bull v. Conroe, 13 Wis. 253, 254. The legislature, when forbidden to grant divorces, cannot pass special acts authorizing the courts to grant divorces in particular cases for causes not recognized in the general law. Telf. v. Telf., 3 Mich. 67; Simonds v. Simonds, 103 Mass. 572. See, for the same principle, Alter's Appeal, 67 Pa. St. 341. The authority in emergencies to suspend the civil laws in a part of the State only, by a declaration of martial law, we do not call in question by anything here stated. Nor in what we have here said do we have any reference to suspensions of the laws generally, or of any particular law, under the extraordinary circumstances of rebellion or war.

charge of legal or equitable liens upon their property; but every one has a right to demand that he be governed by general rules, and a special statute which, without his consent, singles his case out as one to be regulated by a different law from that which is applied in all similar cases, would not be legitimate legislation, but would be such an arbitrary mandate as is not within the province of free governments. Those who make the laws "are to govern by promulgated, established laws, not to be varied in particular cases, but to have one rule for rich and poor, for the favorite at court and the countryman at plough."¹ This is a maxim in constitutional law, and by it we may test the authority and binding force of legislative enactments.²

¹ Locke on Civil Government, § 142; State v. Duffy, 7 Nev. 349; Strauder v. W. Virginia, 100 U. S. 303; Bernier v. Russell, 80 Ill. 60. [This principle is not to be carried so far as to put all persons on an equality as to rights which are not natural rights. So though there be a statute providing that the masculine shall include all genders, a woman is not entitled to admission to the bar under a statute providing that "any male citizen," possessing certain qualifications, shall be admitted, and such statute is valid. Re Maddox, 83 Md. 727, 50 Atl. 487, 55 L. R. A. 268, and cases cited in note.]

² In Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 320, the validity of a statute granting an appeal from a decree of the Probate Court in a particular case came under review. The court says: "On principle it can never be within the bounds of legitimate legislation to enact a special law, or pass a resolve dispensing with the general law in a particular case, and granting a privilege and indulgence to one man, by way of exemption from the operation and effect of such general law, leaving all other persons under its operation. Such a law is neither just nor reasonable in its consequences. It is our boast that we live under a government of laws, and not of men; but this can hardly be deemed a blessing, unless these laws have for their immovable basis the great principles of constitutional equality. Can it be supposed for a moment that if the legislature should pass a general law, and add a section by way of proviso, that it never should be construed to have any operation or effect upon the persons, rights, or property of Archelaus Lewis or John

Gordon, such a proviso would receive the sanction or even the countenance of a court of law? And how does the supposed case differ from the present? A resolve passed after the general law can produce only the same effect as such proviso. In fact, neither can have any legal operation." See also Durham v. Lewiston, 4 Me. 140; Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 336; Piquet, Appellant, 5 Pick. 65; Budd v. State, 3 Humph. 483; Van Zante v. Wadell, 2 Yerg. 200; People v. Frisbie, 26 Cal. 165; Davis v. Menasha, 21 Wis. 491; Lancaster v. Barr, 25 Wis. 560; Brown v. Haywood, 4 Hoisk. 357; Wally's Heirs v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511. In the last case it is said: "The rights of every individual must stand or fall, by the same rule or law that governs every other member of the body politic, or land, under similar circumstances; and every partial or private law, which directly proposes to destroy or affect individual rights, or does the same thing by affording remedies leading to similar consequences is unconstitutional and void. Were it otherwise, odious individuals and corporations would be governed by one law; the mass of the community and those who made the law, by another; whereas the like general law affecting the whole community equally could not have been passed." Special burdens cannot be laid upon a particular class in the community. Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 264, 7 N. E. 931. Miners and manufacturers alone cannot be forbidden to pay in store orders. State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 10 S. E. 285. See, also, Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. St. 431, 6 Atl. 354; State v. Fire Creek, &c. Co.,

Special courts cannot be created for the trial of the rights and obligations of particular parties;¹ and those cases in which legislative acts granting new trials or other special relief in judicial proceedings, while they have been regarded as usurpations of judicial authority, have also been considered obnoxious to the objection that they undertook to suspend general laws in special cases. The doubt might also arise whether a regulation made for any one class of citizens, entirely arbitrary in its character, and restricting their rights, privileges, or legal capacities in a manner before unknown to the law, could be sustained, notwithstanding its 33 W. Va. 188, 10 S. E. 288. [Statute attempting to give laborers, employed by any corporation that fails to pay its laborers monthly, "a lien on all the property of said corporation . . . which lien shall take preference over all other liens except duly recorded mortgages or deeds of trust," and in addition "a reasonable attorney's fee" upon suit brought thereunder, is void as involving an unconstitutional discrimination. Johnson v. Goodyear Mining Co., 127 Cal. 4, 53 Pac. 804, 47 L. R. A. 338; and see other cases pro and con in notes on equal protection on pp. 15 and 550, ante and post. A statute making it unlawful to prevent or attempt to prevent an employee from joining any lawful labor organization, or to discharge a laborer because of his connection with such organization, is void as violating the constitutional guarantee against depriving any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Gilespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 68 N. E. 1007, 52 L. R. A. 263; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 124, 31 S. W. 781, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. 443.] Recovery against newspaper publishers for libel cannot be limited to actual damage, provided a retraction is published and the libel was published in good faith. Park v. Detroit Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 568, 40 N. W. 781. Otherwise in Minnesota. Allen v. Pioneer Press Co., 40 Minn. 117, 41 N. W. 936. See further, Officer v. Young, 5 Yerg. 329; Griffin v. Cunningham, 20 Gratt. 31 (an instructive case); Dorsey v. Dorsey, 37 Md. 64, 11 Am. Rep. 628; Trustees v. Bailey, 10 Fla. 238; Lawson v. Jeffries, 47 Miss. 686, 12 Am. Rep. 342; Arnold v. Kelley, 5 W. Va. 446; ante, pp. 137-139. But an act was sustained in Minnesota which gave one individual a right of appeal from the legal tribunal and denied it to others. Dike v. State, 38 Minn. 366, 38 N. W. 35. [The legislature cannot restrict the power of the courts to determine whether the facts in a case coming before the court amount to negligence or not, nor can it make the failure of a railroad commissioner to require a flagman to be stationed at a railway crossing conclusive that the failure of the railway company to station one there is not negligence. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679.] And physicians who have not a diploma and have not practised a certain time in the State may be required to take out a license. State v. Green, 112 Ind. 422, 14 N. E. 822; People v. Phippen, 70 Mich. 6, 37 N. W. 866. Contra in New Hampshire, State v. Pennoyer, 65 N. H. 113, 18 Atl. 578; State v. Hinman, 65 N. H. 103, 18 Atl. 194. See further cases, p. 560, note 2, post.

¹ As, for instance, the debtors of a particular bank. Bank of the State v. Cooper, 2 Yerg. 699, 24 Am. Dec. 517. Compare Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464, in which it was declared that a special exemption of the city of Janesville from the payment of costs in any proceeding against it to set aside a tax or tax sale was void. And see Memphis v. Fisher, 9 Bax. 240. In Matter of Nicholas, 8 R. I. 50, a special act admitting a tort debtor committed to jail to take the poor debtor's oath and be discharged, was held void. The legislature cannot confer upon a corporation privileges or exemptions which it could not confer constitutionally upon a private person. Gordon v. Bundling Association, 12 Bush, 110. As to what is not a violation of this principle, see United States v. Union Pac. R. R. Co., 98 U. S. 689.

generality. Distinctions in these respects must rest upon some reason upon which they can be defended, — like the want of capacity in infants and insane persons; and if the legislature should undertake to provide that persons following some specified lawful trade or employment should not have capacity to make contracts, or to receive conveyances, or to build such houses as others were allowed to erect, or in any other way to make such use of their property as was permissible to others, it can scarcely be doubted that the act would transcend the due bounds of legislative power, even though no express constitutional provision could be pointed out with which it would come in conflict. (a) To forbid to an individual or a class the right to the acquisition or enjoyment of property in such manner as should be permitted to the community at large, would be to deprive them of liberty in particulars of primary importance to their "pursuit of happiness;"¹ and those who should claim a right to do so ought to be able to show a specific authority there-

¹ Burlamaqui (Polit. Law, c. 3, § 15) defines natural liberty as the right which nature gives to all mankind of disposing of their persons and property after the manner they judge most consonant to their happiness, on condition of their acting within the limits of the law of nature, and so as not to interfere with an equal exercise of the same rights by other men. See 1 Bl. Com. 125. Lieber says: "Liberty of social man consists in the protection of unrestrained action in as high a degree as the same claim of protection of each individual admits of, or in the most efficient protection of his rights, claims, interests, as a man or citizen, or of his humanity manifested as a social being." Civil Liberty and Self-Government. "Legal Liberty," says Mackintosh, in his essay on the Study of the Law of Nature and of Nations, "consists in every man's security against wrong."

(a) [Act requiring commission-merchants engaged in the sale of farm produce to give bonds in specified sum conditioned upon faithful performance of contracts, held bad in People v. Coolidge, 124 Mich. 664, 83 N. W. 594, 50 L. R. A. 493, 83 Am. St. 562. On the other hand, such legislation was sustained in State v. Wagener, 77 Minn. 483, 80 N. W. 633, 778, 1134, 46 L. R. A. 442, 77 Am. St. 681, and in Lasher v. People, 183 Ill. 226, 55 N. E. 663, 75 Am. St. 103, 47 L. R. A. 802. The exemption of real-estate dealers and contractors whose business does not amount to $1,000 per annum, from the operation of an ordinance imposing a license tax for the transaction of business, is unconstitutional. Com. v. Clark, 135 Pa. 634, 43 Atl. 296, 57 L. R. A. 648. A statute providing for the inspection of coal mines is not void for exempting mines not employing more than five men. Consol. Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 22 Sup. Ct. Repl. 616; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 544, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Brown & Allen v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co., 115 Ga. 429, 41 So. 553, 57 L. R. A. 547. An ordinance giving a monopoly to union labor by providing that all city contracts shall provide that none but union labor shall be employed, is unconstitutional as class legislation. Fiske v. State, 183 Ill. 206, 58 N. E. 985, 52 L. R. A. 201. A statute requiring persons before practising osteopathy to study four years, and pass certain examinations, while not requiring equivalent preparation of those practising according to other schools of medicine, is unconstitutional. State v. Gravette, 65 Ohio, 289, 62 N. E. 325, 87 Am. St. 605, 35 L. R. A. 701. See also Cook v. Marshall Co., — Iowa, —, 92 N. W. 372; Verges v. Milwaukee Co., — Wis., —, 92 N. W. 44.]

for, instead of calling upon others to show how and where the authority is negatived.

Equality of rights, privileges, and capacities unquestionably should be the aim of the law; and if special privileges are granted, or special burdens or restrictions imposed in any case, it must be presumed that the legislature designed to depart as little as possible from this fundamental maxim of government.¹

¹ In the Case of Monopolies, Darcy v. Allain, 11 Rep. 84, the grant of an exclusive privilege of making playing cards was adjudged void, inasmuch as "the sole trade of any mechanical artifice, or any other monopoly, is not only a damage and prejudice to those who exercise the same trade, but also to all other subjects; for the end of all these monopolies is for the private gain of the patentees." And see Norwich Gas Light Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co., 25 Conn. 19; State v. Cincinnati, &c. Gas Co., 18 Ohio St. 222. Compare with these, State v. Milwaukee Gas Light Co., 20 Wis. 454. On this ground it has been denied that the State can exercise the power of taxation on behalf of corporations who undertake to make or to improve the thoroughfares of trade and travel for their own benefit. The State, it is said, can no more tax the community to set one class of men up in business than another; can no more subsidize one occupation than another; can no more make donations to the men who build and own railroads in consideration of expected incidental benefits, than it can make them to the men who build stores or manufactories in consideration of similar expected benefits. People v. Township Board of Salem, 20 Me. 452. See further, as to monopolies, Chicago v. Rumruff, 45 Ill. 29; Case v. Kalamazoo, 28 Mich. 344. In State v. Mayor, &c. of Newark, 35 N. J. 157, 10 Am. Rep. 223, the doctrine of the text was applied to a case in which by statute the property of a society had been exempted from "taxes and assessments;" and it was held that only the ordinary municipal taxes were meant, and the property might be subjected to local assessments for municipal purposes. State grants are not exclusive unless made so in express terms. Tuckahoe Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 11 La. 26, 42, 39 Am. Dec. 374; Gaines v. Centes, 51 Miss. 335; Wright v. Nagel, 11 U. S. 101. Where monopolies are forbidden, it is nevertheless competent to give exclusive rights to a water company to supply a city for a term of years. Memphis v. Water Co., 5 Heisk. 435. A corporation formed under a general law allowing formation of gas companies cannot as part of its corporate purposes include the purchase and holding of shares of existing gas companies, thus creating a monopoly. People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 180 Ill. 298, 22 N. E. 798. See People v. Redding Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 400. [City council's grant of exclusive right to remove garbage from all places within city limits, was sustained in Walker v. Jamieson, 149 Ind. 501, 59 N. E. 809, 28 L. R. A. 879, 49 Am. St. 222; and in Snellay v. McDonald, 42 Neb. 5, 63 N. W. 353, 27 L. R. A. 540, 47 Am. St. 684; but not in De Lowe, 34 Kan. 737, 29 Pac. 719, 27 L. R. A. 545; upon such contracts, see note in 27 L. R. A. 540. The question of equality of protection and privilege under the Constitution was before the Supreme Court of the United States in Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 549, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, and in speaking of an anti-trust statute of Illinois which exempted from its operation producers of agricultural products and raisers of live stock, that court said: "The difficulty is not met by saying that generally speaking the State, when enacting laws, may, in its discretion, make a classification of firms, corporations, and associations in order to subserve public objects. For this court has held that classification must always rest upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed and can never be made arbitrarily and without any such basis. . . . But arbitrary selection never be justified by calling it classification. The equal protection demanded by the Fourteenth Amendment forbids this. . . . No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the

The State, it is to be presumed, has no favors to bestow, and designs to inflict no arbitrary deprivation of rights. Special privileges are always obnoxious, and discriminations against persons or classes are still more so; and, as a rule of construction, it is to be presumed they were probably not contemplated or designed. It has been held that a statute requiring attorneys to render services in suits for poor persons without fee or reward, was to be confined strictly to the cases therein prescribed, and if by its terms it expressly covered civil cases only, it could not be extended to embrace defences of criminal prosecutions.¹ So enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the security of free government. . . . It is apparent that the mere fact of classification is not sufficient to relieve a statute from the reach of the equality clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and that in all cases it must appear, not only that a classification has been made, but also that it is one based upon some reasonable ground — some difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification, and is not a mere arbitrary selection." The Connolly case is followed in People v. Butler St. F. & I. Co., — 111. —, 66 N. E. 342. The prior cases on the validity of legislation affecting different classes differently are cited in the opinion, and certain of them distinguished, particularly Magoun v. Illinois Trust & S. B. Co., 170 U. S. 283, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524, and American Sugar R. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43. See also Iowa Life Ins. Co. v. Lewis, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, upon the right of a State to provide for the recovery of damages and attorney's fees against life and health insurance companies for failure to pay losses when they mature, against the objection of class legislation. In the opinion, Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Assn. v. Meier, 185 U. S. 308, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602, is relied upon and followed, the court holding the act valid. In Magoun v. Illinois, etc., supra, the court made the following declaration of the principles applicable to the determination of questions of classification of objects for purposes of legislation: "The State may distinguish, select, and classify objects of legislation, and necessarily the power must have a wide range of discretion, and this because of the function of legislation and the purposes to which it is addressed. Classification for such purposes is not invalid, because not depending on scientific or marked differences in things or persons or their relations. It suffices if it is practical, and is not reviewable unless palpably arbitrary." In Boorum v. Connelly, 88 N. J. L. 197, 48 Atl. 553, 88 Am. St. 409, it is held, upon the authority of Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 123, and Rutgers v. Mayor of Brunswick, 42 N. J. L. 51, that "a law framed in general terms, restricted to no locality, and operating equally upon all of a group of objects which, having regard to the purpose of the legislation, are distinguished by characteristics sufficiently marked and important to make them a class by themselves, is not a special or local law, but a general law, without regard to the consideration that, within this State, there happens to be but one individual of that class, or one place where it produces effect."

¹ Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 13. [Legislature cannot confine the use of low-test petroleum oil for lighting purposes to apparatus of one maker, where there are others adapted to the same use. State v. Santee, 111 Iowa, 1, 82 N. W. 445, 53 L. R. A. 763, 82 Am. St. 189. It may be noted that this case is not authority for the doctrine that a State may not under any circumstances create a monopoly. A statute requiring a larger course of study as a condition to the obtaining of a limited certificate for the practice of "osteopathy" than is required of those contemplating the regular practice of medicine, is void for inequality. State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 281, 62 N. E. 325, 35 L. R. A. 791, 87 Am. St. 365; a statute for the regulation of the practice of medicine excluded from its operation, where a constitutional provision confined the elective franchise to "white male citizens," and it appeared that the legislation of the State had always treated of negroes, mulattoes, and other colored persons in contradistinction to white, it was held that although quadroons, being a recognized class of colored persons, must be excluded, yet that the rule of exclusion would not be carried further.¹ So a statute making parties witnesses against themselves cannot be construed to compel them to disclose facts which would subject them to criminal punishment.² And a statute which authorizes summary process in favor of a bank against debtors who have by express contract made their obligations payable at such bank, being in derogation of the ordinary principles of private right, must be subject to strict construction.³ These cases are only illustrations of a rule of general acceptance.⁴

There are unquestionably cases in which the State may grant privileges to specified individuals without violating any constitutional principle, because, from the nature of the case, it is impossible they should be possessed and enjoyed by all;⁵ and if it is important that they should exist, the proper State authority must be left to select the grantees.⁶ Of this class are grants of the franchise to be a corporation.⁷ Such grants, however, which conoste-paths, dentists, and non-residents called in consultation or engaged in practice adjacent to the State line, and was upheld as a reasonable classification. Marks v. State, — Ind. —, 64 N. E. 822. An act imposing a penalty upon the failure of an insurance company to pay its losses as provided in its contracts, is not unconstitutional, as not applicable to the obligations of all persons. New York Life Ins. Co. v. English, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 70 S. W. 440. Decided on authority of Association v. Mottier, 155 U. S. 305, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.]

¹ People v. Dean, 14 Mich. 403. See Bailey v. Fiske, 34 Me. 77; Monroe v. Collins, 17 Ohio St. 255. The decisions in Ohio were still more liberal and raked as white persons and who had a preponderance of white blood. Gray v. State, 4 Ohio, 233; Jeffes v. Ankony, 11 Ohio, 372; Trucker v. Hawk, 11 Ohio, 373; Anders v. v. Millikin, 9 Ohio St. 568. But see Van Cleave v. Board of Education, 9 Ohio St. 493. Happily all such questions are now disposed of by constitutional amendments. It seems, however, in the opinion of the Supreme Court of California, that these amendments do not preclude a State denying to a race, e. g. the Chinese, the right to testify against other persons. People v. Brady, 49 Cal. 198, 5 Am. Rep. 604.

² Broadbent v. State, 7 M. 413. See Knowles v. People, 15 Mich. 408.

³ Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235.

⁴ See 1 Bl. Com. 89, and note.

⁵ Mason v. Bridge Co., 17 W. Va. 390. But a franchise is not necessarily exclusive so long as there is nothing to prevent granting like power to another corporation. Matter of Union Ferry Co., 98 N. Y. 139.

⁶ In Gordon v. Building Association, 12 Bush. 110, it is decided that a special privilege granted to a particular corporation to take an interest on its loans greater than the regular interest allowed by law is void; it not being granted in consideration of any obligation assumed by the corporation to serve the public.

⁷ That proper grants of this sort are not to be regarded as partial legislation, see Tipton v. Locomotive Works, 103 U. S. 623, 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 517; North and S. Ala. R. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193.

fer upon a few persons what cannot be shared by the many, and which, though supposed to be made on public grounds, are nevertheless frequently of great value to the corporators, and therefore sought with avidity, are never to be extended by construction beyond the plain terms in which they are conferred. No rule is better settled than that charters of incorporation are to be construed strictly against the corporators.¹ The just presumption in every such case is, that the State has granted in express terms all that it designed to grant at all. "When a State," says the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, "means to clothe a corporate body with a portion of her own sovereignty, and to disarm herself to that extent of the power which belongs to her, it is so easy to say so, that we will never believe it to be meant when it is not said. . . . In the construction of a charter, to be in doubt is to be resolved; and every resolution which springs from doubt is against the corporation. If the usefulness of the company would be increased by extending [its privileges], let the legislature see to it, but let it be remembered that nothing but plain English words will do it."² This is sound doctrine, and should be vigilantly observed and enforced.

¹ Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 544; Perrine v. Chesapeake & Delaware Canal Co., 9 How. 172; Richmond & Co. R. R. Co. v. Louisa R. R. Co., 13 How. 71; Bradley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 21 Conn. 294; Parker v. Sunbury & Erie R. R. Co., 19 Pa. St. 211; Wales v. Stetson, 2 Mass. 143; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co., 27 N. Y. 87, and 8 Wall. 51; State v. Krebs, 64 N. C. 604. [Stein v. Bienville Water S. Co., 141 U. S. 67, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's P. C. Co., 139 U. S. 24, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Skaneateles Water-works Co. v. Skaneateles, 181 N. Y. 154, 55 N. E. 562, 46 L. R. A. 687.]

² Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Canal Commissioners, 21 Pa. St. 9, 22. And see Commonwealth v. Pittsburg & Co. R. R. Co., 24 Pa. St. 159; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co., 27 N. Y. 87, 93, per Wright, J.; Baltimore v. Baltimore & Co. R. R. Co., 21 Md. 50; Tuckahoe Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 11 Leigh. 42, 36 Am. Dec. 374; Richmond v. Richmond & Danville R. R. Co., 21 Gratt. 604; Holyoke Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500; Delancey v. Insurance Co., 52 N. H.

581; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111; Gaines v. Coates, 51 Miss. 335. We quote from the Supreme Court of Connecticut in Bradley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 21 Conn. 294, 296: "The rules of construction which apply to general legislation, in regard to those subjects in which the public at large are interested, are essentially different from those which apply to private grants to individuals, of powers or privileges designed to be exercised with special reference to their own advantage, although involving in their exercise incidental benefits to the community generally. The former are to be expounded largely and beneficially for the purposes for which they were enacted, the latter liberally, in favor of the public, and strictly as against the grantees. The power in the one case is original and inherent in the State or sovereign power, and is exercised solely for the general good of the community; in the other it is merely derivative, is special if not exclusive in its character, and is in derogation of common right, in the sense that it confers privileges to which the members of the community at large are not entitled. Acts of the former kind,

And this rule is not confined to the grant of a corporate franchise, but it extends to all grants of franchises or privileges by the State to individuals, in the benefits of which the people at large cannot participate. "Private statutes," says Parsons, Ch. J., "made for the accommodation of particular citizens or corporations, ought not to be construed to affect the rights or privileges of others, unless such construction results from express words or from necessary implication."¹ And the grant of ferry rights, or the right to erect a toll-bridge, and the like, is not only to be being dictated solely by a regard to the benefit of the public generally, attract none of that prejudice or jealousy towards them which naturally would arise towards those of the other description, from the consideration that the latter were obtained with a view to the benefit of particular individuals, and the apprehension that their interests might be promoted at the sacrifice or to the injury of those of others whose interests should be equally regarded. It is universally understood to be one of the implied and necessary conditions upon which men enter into society and form governments, that sacrifices must sometimes be required of individuals for the general benefit of the community, for which they have no rightful claim to specific compensation; but, as between the several individuals composing the community, it is the duty of the State to protect them in the enjoyment of just and equal rights. A law, therefore, enacted for the common good, and which there would ordinarily be no inducement to pervert from that purpose, is entitled to be viewed with less jealousy and distrust than one enacted to promote the interests of particular persons, and which would constantly present a motive for encroaching on the rights of others."

¹ Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 140. See also Dyer v. Tuscaloosa Bridge Co., 2 Part. (Ala.) 296, 27 Am. Dec. 656; Grant v. Leach, 20 La. Ann. 329. In Sprague v. Birdsall, 2 Cow. 419, it was held that one embarking upon the Cayuga Lake six miles from the bridge of the Cayuga Bridge Co., and crossing the lake in an oblique direction, so as to land within sixty rods of the bridge, was not liable to pay toll under a provision in the charter of said company which made it unlawful for any person to cross within three miles of the bridge without paying toll. In another case arising under the same charter, which authorized the company to build a bridge across the lake or the outlet thereof, and to rebuild in case it should be destroyed or carried away by the ice, and prohibited all other persons from erecting a bridge within three miles of the place where a bridge should be erected by the company, it was held, after the company had erected a bridge across the lake and it had been carried away by the ice, that they had no authority afterwards to rebuild across the outlet of the lake, two miles from the place where the first bridge was built, and that the restricted limits were to be measured from the place where the first bridge was erected. Cayuga Bridge Co. v. Magee, 2 Paige, 116, 6 Wend. 85. In Chapin v. The Paper Works, 30 Conn. 461, it was held that statutes giving a preference to certain creditors over others should be construed with reasonable strictness, as the law favored equality. In People v. Lambier, 5 Denio, 9, it appeared that an act of the legislature had authorized a proprietor of lands lying in the East River, which is an arm of the sea, to construct wharves and bulkheads in the river, in front of his land, and there was at the time a public highway through the land, terminating at the river. Held, that the proprietor could not, by filling up the land between the shore and the bulkhead, obstruct the public right of passage from the land to the water, but that the street was, by operation of law, extended from the former terminus over the newly made land to the water. Compare Commissioners of Inland Fisheries v. Holyoke Water Power Co., 104 Mass. 416, 6 Am. Rep. 247; Kingsland v. Mayor, &c., 25 Hun, 458; Backus v. Detroit, 49 Mich. 110, 13 N. W. 380.

construed strictly against the grantees, but it will not be held to exclude the grant of a similar and competing privilege to others, unless the terms of the grant render such construction imperative.¹

The Constitution of the United States contains provisions which are important in this connection. One of these is, that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States,² and all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to its jurisdiction, are declared to be citizens thereof, and of the State wherein they reside.³ The States are also forbidden to make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States,⁴ or to deprive any person of life, liberty, ¹ Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica & S. R. R. Co., 6 Paige, 554; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co., 27 N. Y. 87, 3 Wall. 51; Montjoy v. Pellow, 64 Miss. 705, 2 So. 108. See cases, ante, p. 549, note 1. Compare Hackett v. Wilson, 12 Oreg. 25, 8 Pac. 652. A ferry franchise may be limited to carrying one way, and another granted for carrying the other. Power v. Athens, 97 N. Y. 502, 2 N. E. 609. An exclusive ferry franchise over a river within certain limits does not prevent carrying up and down the river from a point within the limits. Broadnax v. Baker, 91 N. C. 675. See Hunter v. Moore, 44 Ark. 184.

² Const. of United States, art. 4, § 2. See ante, pp. 37, 38.

³ Const. of United States, 14th Amendment.

⁴ "The line of distinction between the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States and those of citizens of the several States must be traced along the boundary of their respective spheres of action, and the two classes must be as different in their nature as are the functions of the respective governments. A citizen of the United States, as such, has the right to participate in foreign and interstate commerce, to have the benefit of the postal laws, to make use in common with others of the navigable waters of the United States, and to pass from State to State, and into foreign countries, because over all these subjects the jurisdiction of the United States extends, and they are covered by its laws. Story on Const. 4th ed. § 1937. These, therefore, are among the privileges of citizens of the United States. So every citizen may petition the federal authorities which are set over him, in respect to any matter of public concern; may examine the public records of the federal jurisdiction; may visit the seat of government without being subjected to the payment of a tax for the privilege; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35; may be purchaser of the public lands on the same terms with others; may participate in the government if he comes within the conditions of suffrage, and may demand the care and protection of the United States when on the high seas or within the jurisdiction of a foreign government. Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 83. The privileges suggest the immunities. Wherever it is the duty of the United States to give protection to a citizen against any harm, inconvenience, or deprivation, the citizen is entitled to an immunity which pertains to federal citizenship.

"One very plain and unquestionable immunity is exemption from any tax, burden, or imposition under State laws, as a condition to the enjoyment of any right or privilege under the laws of the United States. A State, therefore, cannot require one to pay a tax as importer, under the laws of Congress, of foreign merchandise; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 103; nor impose a tax upon travellers passing by public conveyances out of the State; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35; nor impose conditions to the right of citizens of other States to sue its citizens in the federal courts. Insurance Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445. These instances sufficiently indicate the general rule. Whatever one may claim as of right or property, without due process of law, or to deny to any person within their jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.¹ Al-

under the Constitution and laws of the United States by virtue of his citizenship, is a privilege of a citizen of the United States. Whatever the Constitution and laws of the United States entitle him to exemption from, he may claim an immunity in respect to. Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 39. And such a right or privilege is abridged whenever the State law interferes with any legitimate operation of the federal authority which concern his interest, whether it be an authority actively exerted, or resting only in the express or implied command or assurance of the federal Constitution or Laws." Cooley, Principles of Const. Law, 213. See United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214; United States v. Croikshank, 92 U. S. 542; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 489; Kirkland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 471. "[It is a privilege of a citizen of the United States to inform the proper United States officer of any infraction of the laws of the United States, and any conspiracy to prevent the exercise of this privilege is a crime. Re Quarles, 158 U. S. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599. But not to practise law before a State Court. Ex parte Lockwood, 154 U. S. 110, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1082. A citizen of the United States while in custody of a Federal marshal, is entitled as such citizen to protection from unlawful violence. Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617. Right to vote for a United States representative is a privilege of a properly qualified citizen. Wiley v. Sinkler, 179 U. S. 58, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17. So, to use the United States flag in any way not prohibited by Congress. Rohstrat v. People, 185 Ill. 133, 57 N. E. 41, 49 L. R. A. 381, 79 Am. St. 39. But not the right to purchase or receive as gift, intoxicating liquors. People v. Bray, 105 Cal. 344, 35 Pac. 731, 27 L. R. A. 138.]

¹ Const. of United States, 14th Amendment. See cases pp. 14-18, ante. The fourteenth amendment is violated by a statute which allows the overseers of the poor to commit paupers and vagrants to the work-house without trial. Portland v. Bangor, 65 Me. 120; Dunn v. Burleigh, 62 Me. 24. It does not confer the right of suffrage upon females. Van Valken- burgh v. Brown, 43 Cal. 43; Bradwell v. State, 16 Wall. 139; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162. See note, pp. 555, 557, notes.

Granting licenses for the sale of intoxicating drinks to males only does not violate a constitutional provision which forbids the grant of special privileges or immunities. Blair v. Kilpatrick, 40 Ind. 315. [State may require a licensed pharmacist to procure from the county officers a druggist's license for the sale of spirituous liquors before he can use them in the preparation of pharmacists' compounds. Gray v. Connecticut, 150 U. S. 74, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985. Upon constitutionality of laws regulating sale of liquors, see note to 28 L. ed. U. S. 630. State may compel one person to submit his property to inspection of another for purpose of procuring evidence to add that other in enforcing his rights. Montana Co. v. St. Louis Mining and Milling Co., 152 U. S. 150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; but a court cannot. Martin v. E. Hart, 103 Mich. 130, 63 N. W. 958, 21 L. R. A. 139. With regard to inspection of person to procure evidence, see note 4, page 423, ante. But a State cannot deny the right of a seller of merchandise to give with the thing sold a trading-stamp which entitles the purchaser to something of value upon presentation to a third person. State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 77, 46 Atl. 231, 48 L. R. A. 775. Though it may impose a license tax upon dealers using trading stamps, and so may a city, authorized to require licenses for any lawful purpose. Fleetwood v. Read, 21 Wash. 547, 58 Pac. 625, 47 L. R. A. 235. An act prohibiting payment of laborers in scrip, truck, &c., and made applicable only to trusts and corporations employing ten or more persons is void as denying the equal protection of the laws. State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 149, 59 Pac. 349, 47 L. R. A. 369. But see State v. Brown & S. Mfg. Co., 18 R. I. 10, 25 Atl. 245, 17 L. R. A. 859; and Com. v. Hillsdale Coal Co., 22 Ky. L. 559, 58 S.W. 441 (Sept. 27, 1900), both of which are contra. A statute which requires railroads to transport cattle in car-load lots at the usual rates, and in addition to furnish the shipper free transportation to and from the point of destination of the though the precise meaning of "privileges and immunities" is not very conclusively settled as yet, it appears to be conceded

cattle, is void as denying the equal protection of the laws. Atkinson, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 61 Kan. 439, 60 Pac. 1091, 48 L. R. A. 251. The defendant cannot claim that he is denied the equal protection of the laws simply because he is one of a class expressly excepted from the shield of a statute of limitations. Norton v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 122 N. C. 856, 29 S. E. 356, 40 L. R. A. 415. Statute providing that where corporation neglects to file list of officers upon whom process against it may be served, copies of such process may be left with register of deeds of county in which is the principal office of corporation, is invalid as not providing due process. Pinney v. Providence L. & Inv. Co., 106 Wis. 383, 82 N. W. 308, 50 L. R. A. 577, and note. Where defendant in a divorce suit denies that plaintiff is his wife, no decree for temporary alimony can issue against him until this question has been determined adversely to him. Hite v. Hite, 124 Cal. 329, 37 Pac. 227, 45 L. R. A. 703, 71 Am. St. 82. Due process of law is satisfied where persons yet unborn are represented by a guardian ad litem. Loring v. Hildreth, 170 Mass. 328, 49 N. E. 552, 40 L. R. A. 127, 64 Am. St. 301. Prohibition to sell trout, or to have them for purpose of sale, does not deprive of property without due process, so long as owner is permitted to eat them or give them away. State v. Schuman, 36 Oreg. 12, 58 Pac. 661, 47 L. R. A. 133. Commission merchants dealing in farm produce may be compelled to take out licenses, and submit their business to inspection, and give bonds to secure the faithful performance of their duties to their consignors. State v. Wagener, 77 Minn. 485, 80 N. W. 653, 778, 1184, 46 L. R. A. 442, 76 Am. St. 681; contra, People v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 124 Mich. 664, 83 N. W. 304, 50 L. R. A. 433, 83 Am. St. 552. See other cases ante, 561, note a. Statute prohibiting officers of railroad and mining corporations from having any interest in mercantile business in a certain county, but not prohibiting those of other corporations, is void. Lowan v. Hitchins Bros. Co., 90 Md. 14, 44 Atl. 1051, 45 L. R. A. 343. An act regarding employers of unnaturalized foreign-born persons to pay a per-diem tax for each such employee, and deduct the same from his wages, is a denial of the equal protection of the laws. Juniata Limestone Co. v. Fagley, 157 Pa. 193, 40 Atl. 677, 42 L. R. A. 442. A creditor whose debt is secured by mortgage cannot be restricted in his remedy to the property mortgaged. Such a restriction imposed upon freedom of contract is an arbitrary and unwarranted infringement of the liberty of the citizen. Dennis v. Moses, 18 Wash. 537, 52 Pac. 383, 40 L. R. A. 302. Nor can the right to contract for payment in gold coin be taken away by State statute. 79. Temporary confinement of a person duly alleged to be insane, made during pendency of determination of question of insanity, is not an unwarranted deprivation of liberty. Porter v. Ritch, 70 Conn. 235, 39 Atl. 199, 39 L. R. A. 353. Denial of right to make defence in contempt proceedings is a denial of due process. McClatchy v. Superior Court of Sacramento Co., 110 Cal. 413, 51 Pac. 590, 39 L. R. A. 681; and striking out defendant's answer in proceedings for contempt renders void any judgment thereafter entered against him, in the action. Hovey v. Elliott, 145 N. Y. 123, 39 N. E. 841, 39 L. R. A. 449, aff. in 167 U. S. 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841. Employer is not unlawfully deprived of his property when he has entrusted it to his travelling salesman, and an innkeeper seizes it from such salesman to enforce payment of hotel bill. Brown Shoe Co. v. Hunt, 103 Iowa, 556, 72 N. W. 765, 39 L. R. A. 291, 64 Am. St. 198. Non-residents may be partially or wholly exempted from penalties for allowing stock to run at large within the limits of the city. Broadfoot v. Fayetteville, 121 N. C. 418, 28 S. E. 515, 39 L. R. A. 245, 61 Am. St. 603; Jones v. Dunsan, 127 N. C. 118, 37 S. E. 135. An act for the registration of land titles, making such registration conclusive evidence in certain cases, was held void because it did not provide for actual notice to claimants within the State, attempting to make a constructive notice sufficient. State v. Gilbert, 56 Ohio, 375, 47 N. E. 551, 58 L. R. A. 519, 60 Am. St. 756. Service that the Constitution secures in each State to the citizens of all other States the right to remove to, and carry on business

upon the highest officer or agent within the jurisdiction, where the party is a non-resident joint-stock association, is sufficient. State v. Adams Express Co., 66 Minn. 271, 68 N. W. 1085, 38 L. R. A. 225. Equal protection of the laws is denied by a statute requiring citizens of all other counties to secure licenses before fishing in two specified counties, none being required of citizens of those counties. State v. Higgins, 51 S. C. 51, 28 S. E. 15, 38 L. R. A. 581. Warrant of arrest not supported either by oath or affirmation is void. Id. A State may limit the liability of a railroad company for fires caused by sparks from its locomotives, in the entire absence of negligence, to the uninsured value of the property burned, and the insurer whose contract subrogated him to the rights of the insured against the tortfeasor cannot complain that he is denied the equal protection of the law or deprived of property without due process. Leavitt v. Canadian P. R. Co., 50 Me. 153, 37 Atl. 586, 38 L. R. A. 152. A statute abolishing the fellow-servant rule as to railway employees, held constitutional in Callahan v. St. Louis M. B. T. Co., — Mo. —, 71 S. W. 208, following Tullis v. Railway Co., 175 U. S. 348, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139. Statute authorizing administration of property of person who has disappeared and not been heard of for seven years is void. Carr v. Brown, 20 R. I. 216, 38 Atl. 9, 58 L. R. A. 294. So is a statute providing for an ante mortem probate of a will. Lloyd v. Chambers, 59 Mich. 233, 23 N. W. 28. After verdict of guilty, due process will not prevent denial of request for investigation of sanity of prisoner. Baughin v. State, 109 Ga. 554, 28 S. E. 68, 38 L. R. A. 577; upon insanity after commission of criminal act, see note to this case in L. R. A. Law prescribing eight hour day for work in underground mines is valid. Holden v. Hardy, 14 Utah, 71, 43 Pac. 759, 37 L. R. A. 103; see this case in Supreme Court of the United States, 159 U. S. 270, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, where the judgment of the State Court is affirmed. Contra, Re Morgan, 26 Col. 415, 38 Pac. 1071, 47 L. R. A. 52, and see Ritchie v. People, 135 Ill. 98, 40 N. E. 454, 462, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St.

215, denying validity of an act providing that no woman should be employed in any clothing manufactory more than eight hours per day. See also Low v. Rees Printing Co., 41 Neb. 127, 58 N. W. 362, 24 L. R. A. 702, 43 Am. St. 670. Wages cannot be required to be computed upon weight of coal as it comes from mine before it is sorted. Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 52 N. E. 364, 17 L. R. A. 853; Re Preston, 63 Ohio St. 428, 59 N. E. 101; contra, Peck Splint Coal Co. v. State, 36 W. Va. 592, 15 S. E. 1000, 17 L. R. A. 385. Statute forbidding payment of employees in anything but money is void. State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 143, 59 Pac. 540. In People v. Hill, 163 Ill. 188, 46 N. E. 796, 36 L. R. A. 634, a law compelling a person financially able, to support his pauper sister was sustained. It is not clear, however, upon what ground such a law can be sustained. The support of a pauper is either a public or a private purpose. If the former, it would seem that money to be used therefor should be raised by taxation, and to saddle the support of such pauper upon a person of whose family she is not a member, and who is by no act or neglect of his own chargeable with her creation and existence, is to violate the uniformity and equality necessary to legitimate taxation. If the purpose is private, the case against the validity of the law is still stronger. That service of process by publication may be made sufficient in case no officers or agents of a domestic corporation can be found within the State, see Bernhardt v. Brown, 118 N. C. 769, 119 N. C. 596, 24 S. E. 527, 715, 26 S. E. 162, 36 L. R. A. 492. Statute permitting certain agents of humane societies to kill neglected, abandoned, or diseased animals without notice to owner, is void. Loesch v. Kuehler, 144 Ind. 278, 41 N. E. 825, 35 L. R. A. 682. Where State's lien for taxes had expired by limitation, the State cannot arbitrarily seize the property. Owner must have notice and opportunity to defend. Kipp v. Elwell, 65 Minn. 525, 68 N. W. 195, 33 L. R. A. 435. Parties to be affected by location of section-corners must have notice of the time at which such location is to be determined.

therein; the right by the usual modes to acquire and hold property, and to protect and defend the same in the law; the right to

Davis v. St. Louis County Comr's, 65 Mo. 319, 37 N. W. 937, 33 L. R. A. 432. Private property cannot be taken for private use, nor can fishermen be authorized by law to cross private property against the will of the owner in order to reach public fishing grounds. New England Tr. & S. Club v. Mather, 68 Vt. 313, 35 Atl. 323, 33 L. R. A. 569. See also Priewer v. Wisconsin State L. & Imp. Com. 93 Wis. 534, 57 N. W. 918, 33 L. R. A. 645. Denial of dramsop license to a person who does not bring petition signed by requisite number of residents is not denial of equal protection, &c. Swift v. People, 162 Ill. 534, 44 N. E. 528, 33 L. R. A. 470. Arbitrarily to single out a certain class of men (e. g. barbers) and deny to them the right to pursue their ordinary vocation upon Sunday deprives them of property without due process. Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 206, 43 N. E. 1108, 32 L. R. A. 553, 52 Am. St. 355. Granting the right of appeal to resident land-holders in annexation proceedings, and not to non-resident land-holders, is not a denial of the equal protection of the laws. Tazzart v. Claypole, 145 Ind. 590, 44 N. E. 18, 32 L. R. A. 586. Nor is a discrimination between different localities and between different kinds of fish in game laws. Nor is a summary seizure and destruction of nets, used in violation of such laws. Bittenhaus v. Johnston, 92 Wis. 588, 56 N. W. 805, 32 L. R. A. 380. Statute may allow successful plaintiff in certain cases reasonable attorney's fees, without allowing successful defendant in same cases his attorney's fees. Cameron v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co., 68 Minn. 384, 65 N. W. 852, 31 L. R. A. 553; Vogel v. Pekoc, 157 Ill. 339, 42 N. E. 389, 29 L. R. A. 491; see also Union C. Life Ins. Co. v. Chowning, 86 Tex. 654, 23 S. W. 982, 24 L. R. A. 504; Perkins v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co., 103 Mo. 52, 15 S. W. 329, 11 L. R. A. 426; contra, Hacking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 12, 41 N. E. 253, 29 L. R. A. 386; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Hart, 112 Ga. 765, 38 S. E. 67, and see also Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Archison, T., etc. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609. Railroads cannot arbitrarily be required to haul freight over long lines connecting certain points at same rates as are charged for hauling over short lines connecting those points. State v. Sioux City, O. & W. R. Co., 46 Neb. 682, 65 N. W. 766, 791, 31 L. R. A. 47. Notice by letter and by publication is sufficient when the defendant cannot be found and that fact is established by affidavit. Bickerdike v. Allen, 157 Ill. 95, 41 N. E. 740, 29 L. R. A. 782. Making any person who drives a herd of animals over a hillside road liable for all damage done by them, does not discriminate against him. Brim v. Jones, 11 Utah, 209, 39 Pac. 825, 29 L. R. A. 97; aff. in 165 U. S. 180, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282. Refractory witness before grand jury may be summarily imprisoned by justice of peace upon complaint of the grand jury. Re Clark, 65 Conn. 17, 31 Atl. 522, 28 L. R. A. 242. Statute authorizing a probate judge to declare a turnpike road abandoned and vacated, no provision being made for jury trial or for right of appeal, is valid. Salt Creek V. T. Co. v. Parks, 50 Ohio St. 588, 35 N. E. 804, 28 L. R. A. 769. Statute authorizing execution against members of limited partnership to extent of unpaid subscriptions in satisfaction of debts of partnership is valid if amount unpaid is subject to judicial ascertainment. Rouse, H. & Co. v. Donovan, 104 Mich. 234, 62 N. W. 859, 27 L. R. A. 577, 53 Am. St. 457. Where tenement-house owner is entitled to trial before any penalty can be assessed against him, he is not entitled to be heard before board of health can issue order requiring him to furnish city water on each floor of tenement house. Health Dept. v. Rector of Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 39 N. E. 833, 27 L. R. A. 710, 45 Am. St. 578. Held, that a statute authorizing a road supervisor to enter without notice upon private lands, and take therefrom gravel needed in repairing highways, is valid so long as it contains provisions whereby land-owner is permitted to sue and recover from the county his damages. Branson v. Gee, 25 Ore. 482, 38 Pac. 527, 24 L. R. A. 355. State may compel corporations to pay employees at time of discharge, although the usual remedies for the collection of debts and the enforcement

regular pay day has not yet arrived, but cannot prevent deduction for damages caused by employee's breach of contract resulting in his discharge. Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co., 58 Ark. 407, 25 S. W. 75, 41 Am. St. 199, 23 L. R. A. 234. Where property receives no benefit whatever from a local improvement, collection of an assessment thereon would amount to a taking without due process, and will be enjoined. Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Portland, 25 Oreg. 229, 35 Pac. 452, 22 L. R. A. 713. A statute attempting to compel the issue of interchangeable railway mileage tickets, and their acceptance by other roads in payment of fare, without giving any lien on tangible property, or providing any fund for their redemption, is void. Att.-Gen. v. Old Colony R. Co., 160 Mass. 62, 35 N. E. 252, 22 L. R. A. 112. Attempted vacation of portion of street solely for private benefit is void. Smith v. McDowell, 148 Ill. 51, 35 N. E. 141, 22 L. R. A. 333. Statute attempting to deprive lot-owners of right to build out to street line, without providing compensation for such deprivation, is void. St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 527, 22 S. W. 861, 21 L. R. A. 226. Ship and truck act sustained. Peel Spirit Coal. Co. v. State, 36 W. Va. 862, 15 S. E. 1691, 17 L. R. A. 385; Harcock v. Yaden, 125 Ind. 309, 23 N. E. 253, 6 L. R. A. 572, 16 Am. St. 356; contra, Frerer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 21 N. E. 663, 18 L. R. A. 492; State v. Goodwill, 35 W. Va. 179, 10 S. E. 285, 6 L. R. A. 321, 25 Am. St. 333; State v. Fire Creek C. & C. Co., 35 W. Va. 185, 10 S. E. 288, 6 L. R. A. 359, 25 Am. St. 391. Statute restricting right of banking to corporations is bad. State v. Scougal, 3 S. D. 55, 31 N. W. 863, 15 L. R. A. 475, and note, 44 Am. St. 759; contra, State v. Woodmanse, 1 N. D. 215, 40 N. W. 979, 11 L. R. A. 426. So is one forbidding employer to levy fine upon employee for defective work. Comm. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 28 N. E. 1126, 14 L. R. A. 325, and note, 31 Am. St. 693. So in one requiring judgment debtor, at whose suit execution sale is set aside, to repay to purchaser in such sale the money paid by purchaser. Gilman v. Tucker, 128 N. Y. 196, 28 N. E. 1646, 13 L. R. A. 304, 26 Am. St. 434. Except as expressly provided in the Constitution, the right to appeal is subject to legislative regulation. Sullivan v. Harg, 82 Mich. 548, 46 N. W. 765, 10 L. R. A. 263. State may absolutely prohibit the taking of opium into the human body. Territory v. Ah Lim, 1 Wash. 159, 24 Pac. 588, 9 L. R. A. 395. In Chavannes v. Priestly, 80 Iowa, 315, 45 N. W. 766, 9 L. R. A. 193, it was held that a person may be adjudged insane without notice to him, and thereupon may be confined as an insane person,— certainly a most unusual declaration; contra, Re Gannon, 18 R. I. 126, 19 Atl. 331, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note. But where a writ of habeas corpus issues, directing the sheriff to seize the body of the alleged lunatic, give him notice of the inquisition about to be held, and have him before the court at the trial, if not inconsistent with his health and safety, and a guardian ad litem is duly appointed and acts, the proceedings will not, merely because the sheriff returns that it is inconsistent with the health and safety of the alleged lunatic to have him before the court, be adjudged void in the absence of allegation and proof that he requested to be permitted to appear at the trial, and was denied that right. Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835, aff. 118 Ala. 325, 24 So. 280. See also Bumpus v. French, 159 Mass. 181, 60 N. E. 414; State v. Billings, 56 Minn. 447, 57 N. W. 236, 764, 43 Am. St. 525. Chief Justice, speaking for the court, says: "To the person charged with being insane to a degree requiring the interposition of the authorities and the restraint provided for, there must be given notice of the proceeding, and also an opportunity to be heard in the tribunal which is to pass judgment upon his right to his personal liberty in the future. There must be a trial before judgment can be pronounced, and there can be no proper trial unless there is guaranteed the right to produce witnesses and submit evidence. The question here is not whether the tribunal may proceed in and with some regard to the rights of the person before it, but rather is the right to have it so proceed absolutely secured? Any statute having for its object the deprivation of the liberty of a person cannot be upheld

of other personal rights; and the right to be exempt, in property

unless this right is secured, for the object may be attained in defiance of the Constitution, and without due process of law." See extended note to this case in 43 Am. St. 541-541, on "due process of law," as applied to lunatics. Service of summons upon resident defendants who can be found within the State is insufficient, if made by publication only. Barstow v. Anderson, 44 Minn. 97, 46 N. W. 513, 9 L. R. A. 152. Ordinance authorizing arrest and incarceration without warrant or hearing, upon mere refusal to "move on," when so commanded by police officer, is void. State v. Hunter, 100 N. C. 150 11 S. E. 360, 8 L. R. A. 524, and note. Statute penalizing the sending or taking of any note, bond, account, or chose in action out of the State for the purpose of suing and issuing garnishment or like process thereon, against any resident of the State, is void as depriving creditor of property without due process of law. Re Flukes, 157 Mo. 125, 57 S. W. 345, 51 L. R. A. 176. Statute restricting the number of persons a lodging-house keeper may allow to sleep in a single room, but making no provision concerning innkeepers, is void for arbitrary discrimination. Barley v. People, 100 Ill. 28, 65 N. E. 98. New Pen cannot be made superior to an elder lien without opportunity to older lienor to be heard. Fisher v. Wineman, 125 Mich. 642, 84 N. W. 1111, 62 L. R. A. 192. In Gillespie v. People, 158 Ill. 176, 58 N. E. 1907, it was held that a statute which made it a criminal offense to intimidate by discharge or threats of discharge any employee from joining a labor union, was void as being a deprivation of liberty without due process of law. And in People v. Coker, 166 N. Y. 159 N. E. 710, 82 Am. St. 695, it was held that an act requiring that contracts hereafter entered into for the construction of public works should bind the contractor to pay his laborers the prevailing rates of wages, was void as an undue deprivation of his liberty. See also, in this connection, People v. Coker, 166 N. Y. 1, 68 N. E. 776. No distinction can be made between aliens and citizens in regard to occupations which may be carried on of common right. State v. Montgomery, 54 Me. 192, 47 Atl. 165. Determination of insufficiency of a pauper's support cannot be made by a commission which has no power to administer oaths nor to examine witnesses. Church v. South Kingstown, 22 R. I. 381, 48 Atl. 8. Taxing holders of mortgages issued by individuals, and exempting those of mortgages issued by quasi-public corporations, is a denial of equal protection. Russell v. Croy, 154 Mo. 68, 63 S. W. 849. A statute of Nebraska making combinations in restraint of trade illegal, and exempting labor unions, is held valid in Cleland v. Anderson, — Neb. —, 92 N. W. 599. The same statute is declared of no validity for violation of the rule of equal privileges and equal protection in Niagara Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 119 Fed. Rep. 818. The sale, by the State, of ice accumulating on navigable waters, violates the 14th Amendment guaranty of equal protection and privileges. Rossmiller v. State, 114 Wis. 109, 89 N. W. 839, 58 L. R. A. 68. In Connolly v. Union Sewer-Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451, the court says: "As the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, anything in the Constitution or statutes of the State to the contrary notwithstanding, a statute of a State, even when avowedly enacted in the exercise of the police powers, must yield to that law. . . . 'The nullity of any act inconsistent with the Constitution is produced by the declaration that the Constitution is the supreme law of the land.' The State has undoubtedly the power by appropriate legislation to protect the public morals, the public health, and the public safety, but if by their necessary operation its regulations looking to either of those ends amount to a denial to persons within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws, they must be deemed unconstitutional and void." In Otis & Gassman v. Parker, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, a provision of the Constitution of California was before the court upon the objection that it violated the 14th Amendment. The provision reads: "All contracts for the sales of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association on margin or to be delivered at a future day shall be void," and further that any money paid and person, from taxes or burdens which the property, or persons, of citizens of the same State are not subject to.¹ To this extent, at least, discriminations could not be made by State laws against them. But it is unquestionable that many other rights and privileges may be made—as they usually are—to depend upon actual residence: such as the right to vote, to have the benefit of exemption laws, to take fish in the waters of the State, and the like. And the constitutional provisions are not violated by a statute which allows process by attachment against a debtor not a resident of the State, notwithstanding such process is not admissible against a resident.² The protection by due process of law has already been considered. It was not within the power on such contracts may be recovered back. It was held by a divided court that the provision was not in conflict with the Federal Constitution, against the contentions, that it destroyed the values of this class of property without due process of law, and that it unduly discriminated against this class of property while other familiar objects of speculation, such as cotton or grain, were not touched. It would seem that the prohibition, unless the contract provides for immediate delivery, of sales of such property as the law recognizes, is certainly carrying the police power to its boundary line. For other cases upon due process, equal protection, &c., see Wadsworth v. Union P. R. Co., 18 Col. 690, 33 Pac. 515, 23 L. R. A. 512, 36 Am. St. 509; People v. Yorkers, 140 N. Y. 1, 35 N. E. 329, 23 L. R. A. 481; Attorney-General v. Judham, 99 Mich. 358, 58 N. W. 611, 23 L. R. A. 609, 41 Am. St. 695; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 69, 35 N. E. 62, 22 L. R. A. 349, 37 Am. St. 206; Morton v. New York, 140 N. Y. 207, 35 N. E. 490, 22 L. R. A. 241; Schultz v. Roenitz, 89 Wis. 31, 56 N. W. 194, 21 L. R. A. 483, 39 Am. St. 878; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 807, 22 S. W. 359, 21 L. R. A. 789; State v. Weller, 58 Minn. 135, 54 N. W. 1965, 19 L. R. A. 783, 39 Am. St. 582; Jenkins v. Ballantyne, 8 Utah, 245, 59 Pac. 759, 16 L. R. A. 689; Andert v. Milwaukee, 82 Wis. 279, 52 N. W. 95, 15 L. R. A. 824; Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 92 Ky. 253, 17 S. W. 537, 14 L. R. A. 578, and extensive note on constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection; Burdett v. Allen, 85 W. Va. 247, 13 S. E. 1012, 14 of the States before the adoption of the fourteenth amendment, to deprive citizens of the equal protection of the laws; but there were servile classes not thus shielded, and when these were made freemen, there were some who disputed their claim to citizenship, and some State laws were in force which established discriminations against them. To settle doubts and preclude all such laws, the fourteenth amendment was adopted; and the same securities which one citizen may demand, all others are now entitled to.

L. R. A. 337; State v. Burgberfer, 107 Mo. 1, 17 S. W. 649, 14 L. R. A. 846; Re Bonds Madera Irrigation District, 92 Cal. 236, 341, 28 Pac. 272, 675, 14 L. R. A. 755, 27 Am. St. 109; Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 94, 59 N. W. 631, 14 L. R. A. 478, and note on establishment of dock lines, 28 Am. St. 276. Re Clayton, 59 Conn. 519, 21 Atl. 1093, 13 L. R. A. 66, 21 Am. St. 125; Lelew v. Brumfield, 103 Mo. 545, 15 S. W. 765, 11 L. R. A. 828, 23 Am. St. 895; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Wallace, 155 Ill. 87, 23 N. E. 493, 11 L. R. A. 787 (horticulture calendar); State v. Robbins, 124 Ind. 508, 24 N. E. 975, 8 L. R. A. 435; State v. Santee, 111 Iowa, 1, 82 N. W. 445; State v. Warren, 118 N. C. 683, 18 S. E. 495; Attorney General v. Boston & A. Ry. Co., 139 Mass. 62, 35 N. E. 252, 22 L. R. A. 112; State v. Eby, — Mo. —, 71 S. W. 52; State v. Mitchell, — Me. —, 53 Atl. 887. In which last case a hawk's and poulterer's act requiring those paying less than $25.00 in taxes on stock to pay a license fee, and exempting those paying that amount or more of taxes on stock, was held invalid as violating the right of equal protection.]

¹ Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. 389; Campbell v. Morris, 3 H. & McH. 574; Crandall v. State, 10 Conn. 636; Oliver v. Wasington Mills, 11 Allen, 208.

² Campbell v. Morris, 3 H. & McH. 574; State v. Medbury, 3 R. I. 128. And see generally the cases cited supra, p. 57, note. Exemption from garnishment does not apply to a non-resident debtor except by express provision. Kile v. Montgomery, 79 Ga. 337.

Judicial Proceedings.

Individual citizens require protection against judicial action as well as against legislative; and perhaps the question, what constitutes due process of law, arises as often when judicial action is in question as in any other cases. But it is not so difficult here to arrive at satisfactory conclusions, since the bounds of the judicial authority are much better defined than those of the legislative, and each case can generally be brought to the test of definite and well-settled rules of law.

The proceedings in any court are void if it wants jurisdiction of the case in which it has assumed to act. (a) Jurisdiction is, first, of the subject-matter; and, second, of the persons whose rights are to be passed upon.¹

A court has jurisdiction of any subject-matter, if, by the law of its organization, it has authority to take cognizance of, try, and determine cases of that description. If it assumes to act in a case over which the law does not give it authority, the proceeding and judgment will be altogether void, and rights of property cannot be divested by means of them.

It is a maxim in the law that consent can never confer jurisdiction;² by which is meant that the consent of parties cannot

¹ Jurisdiction is a power constitutionally conferred upon a court, a single judge, or a magistrate, to take cognizance and decide causes according to law, and to carry their sentence into execution. The tract of land within which a court, judge, or magistrate has jurisdiction is called his territory; and his power in relation to his territory is called his territorial jurisdiction.—3 Bony. Inst. 71.

² Cutlin v. Tracy, 3 Cairnes, 129; Blin v. Campbell, 14 Johns. 432; Cayler v.

Rochester, 12 Wend. 155; Dudley v. Mayhew, 3 N. Y. 9; Preston v. Boston, 12 Pick. 7; Chapman v. Morgan, 2 Greene (Iowa), 374; Thompson v. Steamboat Morton, 2 Ohio St. 25; Gililand v. Administrator of Sellers, 2 Ohio St. 225; Dicks v. Hatch, 10 Iowa, 389; McCall v. Peachey, 1 Cal. 55; Bents v. Graves, 3 McCord, 287; Overstreet v. Brown, 4 McCord, 79; Green v. Collins, 6 Fed. 139; Boswick v. Perkins, 4 Ga. 47; Georgia R. R. & Co. v. Harris, 5 Ga. 527; State v. Bontey, 34 empower a court to act upon subjects which are not submitted to its determination and judgment by the law. The law creates courts, and upon considerations of general public policy defines and limits their jurisdiction; and this can neither be enlarged nor restricted by the act of the parties.

[An act taken by a court in the absence of the facts upon which its jurisdiction fully rests is void, and may be collaterally impeached. Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1168, rev. 5 Wash. 363, 31 Pac. 873, 34 Am. St. 603.]

Accordingly, where a court by law has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of a controversy, a party whose rights are sought to be affected by it is at liberty to repudiate its proceedings and refuse to be bound by them, notwithstanding he may once have consented to its action, either by voluntarily commencing the proceeding as plaintiff, or as defendant by appearing and pleading to the merits, or by any other formal or informal action. This right he may avail himself of at any stage of the case; and the maxim that requires one to move promptly who would take advantage of an irregularity does not apply here, since this is not mere irregular action, but a total want of power to act at all. Consent is sometimes implied from failure to object; but there can be no waiver of rights by laches in a case where consent would be altogether nugatory.¹

In regard to private controversies, the law always encourages voluntary arrangements;² and the settlements which the parties may make for themselves, it allows to be made for them by arbitrators mutually chosen. But the courts of a country cannot have those controversies referred to them by the parties which the law-making power has seen fit to exclude from their cognizance. If the judges should sit to hear such controversies, they would not sit as a court; at the most they would be arbitrators only, and their action could not be sustained on that theory, unless it appeared that the parties had designed to make the judges their arbitrators, instead of expecting from them valid judicial action as an organized court. Even then the decision could not be binding as a judgment, but only as an award; and a mere neglect by either party to object to the want of jurisdiction could not make the decision binding upon him either as a judgment or as an award. Still less could consent in a criminal case bind the defendant; since criminal charges are not the subject of arbitration, and any infliction of criminal punishment upon an

Me 223; Little v. Fitts, 33 Ala. 343; Ginn v. Rogers, 9 Ill. 131; Null v. Keese, 5 Tex. 23; Ames v. Boland, 1 Minn. 395; Brady v. Richardson, 18 Ind. 1; White v. Buchanan, 6 Cold. 32; Andrews v. Wheaton, 23 Conn. 112; Collamer v. Page, 35 Vt. 387.

¹ Bostwick v. Perkins, 4 Ga. 47; Hill

v. People, 16 Mich. 351; White v. Buchanan, 6 Cold. 32; Collins v. Collins, 37 Pa. St. 387; Green v. Creighton, 18 Miss. 159.

² Moore v. Detroit Locomotive Works, 14 Mich. 203; Coyner v. Lynde, 10 Ind. 282.

individual, except in pursuance of the law of the land, is a wrong done to the State, whether the individual assented or not. Those cases in which it has been held that the constitutional right of trial by jury cannot be waived are strongly illustrative of the legal view of this subject.¹

If the parties cannot confer jurisdiction upon a court by consent, neither can they by consent empower any individual other than the judge of the court to exercise its powers. Judges are chosen in such manner as shall be provided by law; and a stipulation by parties that any other person than the judge shall exercise his functions in their case would be nugatory, even though the judge should vacate his seat for the purposes of the hearing.²

Sometimes jurisdiction of the subject-matter will depend upon considerations of locality, either of the thing in dispute or of the parties. At law certain actions are local, and others are transitory. The first can only be tried where the property which is the subject of the controversy, or in respect to which the controversy has arisen, is situated. The United States courts take cognizance of certain causes by reason only of the fact that the parties are residents of different States or countries.³ The question of jurisdiction in these cases is sometimes determined by the common law, and sometimes is matter of statutory regulation. But there is a class of cases in respect to which the courts of the several States of the Union are constantly being called upon to exercise authority, and in which, while the jurisdiction is conceded to rest on considerations of locality, there has not, unfortunately, at all times been entire harmony of decision as to what shall confer jurisdiction. We refer now to suits for divorce from the bonds of matrimony.

The courts of one State or country have no general authority to grant divorce, unless for some reason they have control over the particular marriage contract which is sought to be annulled. But what circumstance gives such control? Is it the fact that the marriage was entered into in such country or State? Or that force, because the court had not jurisdiction in respect to the plaintiff. Vose v. Morton, 4 Cush 27. As to third persons, a judgment against an individual may sometimes be treated as void, when he was not suable in that court or in that manner, notwithstanding he may have so submitted himself to the jurisdiction as to be personally bound. See Georgia R. R. & N. v. Harris, 5 Ga. 527; Hinchman v. Town, 10 Mich. 508.

¹ Brown v. State, 8 Blackf. 561; Work v. Ohio, 2 Ohio St. 296; Caneemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128; People v. Smith, 9 Mich. 193; Hill v. People, 10 Mich. 351; Whorton v. Morange, 62 Ala. 201; Fleishman v. Walker, 91 Ill. 318; Shissler v. People, 93 Ill. 472. See also State v. Turner, 1 Wright, 20.

² Winchester v. Ayres, 4 Greene (Iowa), 104. See post, 689, note.

³ See a case where a judgment of a United States court was treated as of no

the alleged breach of the marriage bond was within that jurisdiction? Or that the parties resided within it either at the time of the marriage or at the time of the offence? Or that the parties now reside in such State or country, though both marriage and offence may have taken place elsewhere? Or must marriage, offence, and residence, all or any two of them, combine to confer the authority? These are questions which have frequently demanded the thoughtful attention of the courts, who have sought to establish a rule at once sound in principle, and that shall protect as far as possible the rights of the parties, one or the other of whom, unfortunately, under the operation of any rule which can be established, it will frequently be found has been the victim of gross injustice.

We conceive the true rule to be that the actual, bona fide residence of either husband or wife within a State will give to that State authority to determine the status of such party, and to pass upon any questions affecting his or her continuance in the marriage relation, irrespective of the locality of the marriage, or of any alleged offence; and that any such court in that State as the legislature may have authorized to take cognizance of the subject may lawfully pass upon such questions, and annul the marriage for any cause allowed by the local law. But if a party goes to a jurisdiction other than that of his domicile for the purpose of procuring a divorce, and has residence there for that purpose only, such residence is not bona fide, and does not confer upon the courts of that State or country jurisdiction over the marriage relation, and any decree they may assume to make would be void as to the other party.¹

¹ There are a number of cases in which this subject has been considered. In Inhabitants of Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227, instructions to a jury were sustained, that if they were satisfied the husband, who had been a citizen of Massachusetts, removed to Vermont merely for the purpose of procuring a divorce, and that the pretended cause for divorce arose, if it ever did arise, in Massachusetts, and that the wife was never within the jurisdiction of the court of Vermont, then and in such case the decree of divorce which the husband had obtained in Vermont must be considered as fraudulently obtained, and that it could not operate so as to dissolve the marriage between the parties. See also Vischer v. Vischer, 12 Barb. 649; and McGiffert v. McGiffert, 31 Barb. 69. In Chase v. Chase,

8 Gray, 157, the same ruling was had as to a foreign divorce, notwithstanding the wife appeared in and defended the foreign suit. In Clark v. Clark, 8 N. H. 21, the court refused a divorce on the ground that the alleged cause of divorce (adultery), though committed within the State, was so committed while the parties had their domicile abroad. This decision was followed in Greenlaw v. Greenlaw, 12 N. H. 200. The court say: "If the defendant never had any domicile in this State, the libellant could not come here, bringing with her a cause of divorce over which this court had jurisdiction. If at the time of the [alleged offence] the domicile of the parties was in Maine, and the facts furnished no cause for a divorce there, she could not come here and allege those matters which had already occurred, as a ground for a divorce under the laws of this State. Should she under such circumstances obtain a decree of divorce here, it must be regarded as a mere nullity elsewhere." In Frary v. Frary, 10 N. H. 61, importance was attached to the fact that the marriage took place in New Hampshire; and it was held that the court had jurisdiction of the wife's application for a divorce, notwithstanding the offence was committed in Vermont, but during the time of the wife's residence in New Hampshire. See also Kimball v. Kimball, 13 N. H. 222; Batchelder v. Batchelder, 14 N. H. 380; Payson v. Payson, 34 N. H. 518; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 35 N. H. 474; Foss v. Foss, 58 N. H. 283; Norris v. Norris, 64 N. H. 523, 15 Atl. 19. See Trevino v. Trevino, 64 Tex. 231. In Wilcox v. Wilcox, 10 Ind. 436, it was held that the residence of the libellant at the time of the application for a divorce was sufficient to confer jurisdiction, and a decree dismissing the bill because the cause for divorce arose out of the State was reversed. And see Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. 407. Compare Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. 424; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 229; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. 121; Bradshaw v. Heath, 13 Wend. 407. In any of these cases the question of actual residence will be open to inquiry whenever it becomes important, notwithstanding the record of proceedings is in due form, and contains the affidavit of residence required by the practice. Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20. And see McGiffert v. McGiffert, 31 Barb. 69; Todd v. Kerr, 42 Barb. 317; Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 36; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247; Reed v. Reed, 52 Mich. 117, 17 N. W. 720; Gregory v. Gregory, 78 Me. 187, 3 Atl. 280; Neff v. Beauchamp, 74 Iowa, 92, 32 N. W. 195; Chaney v. Bryan, 15 Lea, 580. [A recital in proceedings for divorce of the facts necessary to give jurisdiction may be contradicted in a suit in another State between the same parties. Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 351; Andrews v. Andrews, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237. An injunction may issue against setting up a pretended judgment fraudulently obtained in another State in bar of divorce proceedings. Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.] In a purely collateral civil action, jurisdiction is conclusively presumed. Waldo v. Waldo, 52 Mich. 94, 17 N. W. 709. And see Van Orsdal v. Van Orsdal, 67 Iowa, 35, 24 N. W. 579. The Pennsylvania cases agree with those of New Hampshire, in holding that a divorce should not be granted unless the cause alleged occurred while the complainant had domicile within the State. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 7 Watts, 349; Holliester v. Holliester, 6 Pa. St. 449; McDermott's Appeal, 8 W. & S. 251. And they hold also that the injured party in the marriage relation must seek redress in the forum of the defendant, unless where such defendant has removed from what was before the common domicile of both. Calvin v. Reed, 35 Pa. St. 376; Elder v. Reel, 62 Pa. St. 308, 1 Am. Rep. 414. If a divorce is procured on publication in another State from that of the husband's domicile, where the offence was committed, it is a nullity in the latter State. Flower v. Flower, 42 N. J. Eq. 152. See Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195, 44 N. W. 33, 443. If one is in good faith a resident, his motive in coming to the State is immaterial. Colburn v. Colburn, 70 Mich. 647, 38 N. W. 607; Gregory v. Gregory, 70 Me. 535. But residence must be actual, not merely legal. Tipton v. Tipton, 87 Ky. 243, 8 S. W. 440. For cases supporting to a greater or less extent the doctrine stated in the text, see Harding v. Alden, 9 Greenl. 140; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87; Pawling v. Bird's Ex'rs, 13 Johns. 192; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Harrison v. Harrison, 13 Ala. 499; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12; Cooper v. Cooper, 7 Ohio, 594; Mansfield v. McIntyre, 10 Ohio, 28; Smith v. Smith, 4 Greene (Iowa), 250; Yates v. Yates, 13 N. J. Eq. 280; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana, 181; Waltz v. Waltz, 18 Ind. 440; Hull v. Hull, 2 Strobl. Eq. 174; Manley v. Manley, 4 Chand. 97; Hubell v. Hubell, 3 Wis. 632; Gleason v. Gleason, 4 Wis. 64; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355; D'Auvilliers v. De Livaudais, 32 La. Ann. 605; Gettys v. Gettys, 3 interested, be subjected to the process of the court. Certain cases are said to proceed in rem, because they take notice rather of the thing in controversy than of the persons concerned; and the process is served upon that which is the object of the suit, without specially noticing the interested parties; while in other cases the parties themselves are brought before the court by process. Of the first class, admiralty proceedings are an illustration; the court acquiring jurisdiction by seizing the vessel or other thing

But to render the jurisdiction of a court effectual in any case, it is necessary that the thing in controversy, or the parties in-

Lea, 260; Smith v. Smith, 10 Neb. 709, 28 N. W. 290. And see Story, Conf. Laws, § 239 a; Bishop on Mar. and Div. (1st ed.) § 727 et seq.; Ibid. (4th ed.) Vol. II. § 155 et seq.. The cases of Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 39, 7 Am. Rep. 299; Eller v. Reel, 62 Pa. St. 398, 1 Am. Rep. 414; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247; Strait v. Strait, 3 McArthur, 415; State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 22; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 23 Am. Rep. 299; Hood v. State, 58 Ind. 263, 26 Am. Rep. 21; Lutovich v. Lutovich, 19 Kan. 451, 27 Am. Rep. 145; [Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551,] are very explicit in declaring that where neither party is domiciled within a particular State, its courts can have no jurisdiction in respect to their marital status, and any decree of divorce made therein must be nugatory. A number of the cases cited hold that the wife may have a domicile separate from the husband, and may therefore be entitled to a divorce, though the husband never resided in the State. These cases proceed upon the theory that, although in general the domicile of the husband is the domicile of the wife, yet that if he be guilty of such act or dereliction of duty in the relation as entitles her to have it partially or wholly dissolved, she is at liberty to establish a separate jurisdictional domicile of her own. — Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87; Harling v. Allen, 6 Me. 146; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana, 181; Holister v. Holister, 6 Pa. St. 449; Derby v. Derby, 14 Ill. App. 645. The doctrine in New York seems to be, that a divorce obtained in another State, without personal service of process or appearance of the defendant, is absolutely valid. — Vischer v. Vischer, 12 Barb. 310; McGiffert v. McGiffert, 31 Barb. 39; Todd v. Kerr, 42 Barb. 317; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 22 Am. Rep. 274; Cross v. Cross, 108 N. Y. 628, 15 N. E. 333; though there is actual notice. O'Dea v. O'Dea, 161 N. Y. 23, 4 N. E. 110. So in Ontario, Magurn v. Magurn, 11 Ont. App. 178. See Cox v. Cox, 16 Ohio St. 392, 2 Am. Rep. 415; [Matter of Christensen, 17 Utah, 412, 53 Pac. 1603, 41 L. R. A. 504, 70 Am. St. 794,] An appearance by defendant afterwards for the purposes of a motion to set aside the decree, which motion was defeated on technical grounds, will not affect the question. Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 39, 7 Am. Rep. 299.

Upon the whole subject of jurisdiction in divorce suits no case in the books is more full and satisfactory than that of Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, which reviews and comments upon a number of the cases cited, and particularly upon the Massachusetts cases of Barber v. Root, 16 Mass. 260; Inhabitants of Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227; Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. 181; and Lyon v. Lyon, 2 Gray, 267. The divorce of one party divorces both. — Cooper v. Cooper, 7 Ohio, 594. And will leave both at liberty to enter into new marriage relations, unless the local statute expressly forbids the guilty party from contracting a second marriage. See Commonwealth v. Putnam, 1 Pick. 133; Baker v. People, 2 Hill, 325. [A divorce was decreed and prohibited marriage within a limited period. A marriage was consummated in another State within the period of prohibition, and this marriage upheld in Jure Wood's Estate. — Cal. —, 54 Pac. 900.] A party who has gone into another State and procured a divorce will not be heard to allege his own fraud to impeach it. Elliott v. Wohlfrom, 55 Cal. 384. A divorce good at the place of domicile will be sustained in England though the cause would not sustain a divorce there. Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 8 App. Cas. 43; Turner v. Thompson, L. R. 13 P. D. 37.

to which the controversy relates. In cases within this class, notice to all concerned is required to be given, either personally or by some species of publication or proclamation; and if not given, the court which had jurisdiction of the property will have none to render judgment.¹ Suits at the common law, however, proceed against the parties whose interests are sought to be affected; and only those persons are concluded by the adjudication who are served with process, or who voluntarily appear.² Some cases also partake of the nature both of proceedings in rem and of personal actions, since, although they proceed by seizing property, they also contemplate the service of process on defendant parties. Of this class are the proceedings by foreign attachment, in which the property of a non-resident or concealed debtor is seized and retained by the officer as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered against him, but at the same time process is issued to be served upon the defendant, and which must be served, or some substitute for service had, before judgment can be rendered.

In such cases, as well as in divorce suits, it will often happen that the party proceeded against cannot be found in the State, and personal service upon him is therefore impossible, unless it is allowable to make it wherever he may be found abroad. But any

¹ Doughty v. Hope, 3 Denio, 594. See Matter of Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 204, 205; Blackwell on Tax Titles, 213.

² Jack v. Thompson, 41 Miss. 49. As to the right of an attorney to notice of proceedings to disbar him, see notes to pp. 481, 482, and 523. "Notice of some kind is the vital breath that animates judicial jurisdiction over the person. It is the primary element of the application of the judicatory power. It is of the essence of a cause. Without it there cannot be parties, and without parties there may be the form of a sentence, but no judgment obligating the person." See Bragg's Case, 11 Coke, 99a; Rex v. Chancellor of Cambridge, 1 Str. 567; Conper v. Board of Works, 14 C. B. n. s. 164; Meade v. Deputy Marshal, 1 Brock. 324; Goetcheus v. Mathewson, 61 N. Y. 420; Underwood v. McVeigh, 23 Gratt. 400; McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 279; Littletton v. Richardson, 34 N. H. 179; Black v. Black, 4 Br. & S. Sur. Rep. 174, 205; Mund v. Larkin, 65 Ala. 87; Succession of Townsend, 30 La. Ann. 447. [A statute permitting commitment to a hospital for the insane without any provision for notice to the person alleged to be insane, is unconstitutional. Re Lambert, 134 Cal. 629, 65 Pac. 851, 55 L. R. A. 856; see, a statute contemplating proceedings in lunacy in the absence of the alleged lunatic, construed in Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.] Where, however, a statute provides for the taking of a certain security, and authorizes judgment to be rendered upon it on motion, without process, the party entering into the security must be understood to assent to the condition, and to waive process and consent to judgment. Lewis v. Garrett's Adm'r, 6 Miss. 434; People v. Van Eps, 4 Wend. 387; Chappee v. Thomas, 5 Mich. 53; Gildersleeve v. People, 10 Barb. 35; People v. Lott, 21 Barb. 130; Pratt v. Donovan, 10 Wis. 378; Murray v. Hoboken Land Co., 18 How. 272; Philadelphia v. Commonwealth, 52 Pa. St. 451; Whitehurst v. Coleen, 53 Ill. 247. [Decree based upon constructive service of summons against a dead man is absolutely void. Greenstreet v. Thornton, 60 Ark. 309, 30 S. W. 347, 27 L. R. A. 735.]

such service would be ineffectual. No State has authority to invade the jurisdiction of another, and by service of process compel parties there resident or being to submit their controversies to the determination of its courts; and those courts will consequently be sometimes unable to enforce a jurisdiction which the State possesses in respect to the subjects within its limits, unless a substituted service is admissible. A substituted service is provided by statute for many such cases; generally in the form of a notice, published in the public journals, or posted, as the statute may direct; the mode being chosen with a view to bring it home, if possible, to the knowledge of the party to be affected, and to give him an opportunity to appear and defend. The right of the legislature to prescribe such notice, and to give it effect as process, rests upon the necessity of the case, and has been long recognized and acted upon.¹

¹ "It may be admitted that a statute which should authorize any debt or damages to be adjudged against a person upon purely ex parte proceedings, without a pretence of notice, or any provision for defending, would be a violation of the constitution, and be void; but where the legislature has presented a kind of notice by which it is reasonably probable that the party proceeded against will be apprised of what is going on against him, and an opportunity is afforded him to defend, I am of opinion that the courts have not the power to pronounce the proceeding illegal." Doubt, J., in Matter of Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199, 215. See also, per Morgan, J., in Rockwell v. Nearing, 35 N. Y. 302, 314; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 165; Beard v. Beard, 21 Ind. 321; Mason v. Messenger, 17 Iowa, 261; Cupp v. Commissioners of Seneca Co., 13 Ohio St. 173; Campbell v. Evers, 45 N. Y. 353; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 513; Jones v. Driskell, 64 Mo. 150, 7 S. W. 111; Palmer v. McCormick, 28 Fed. Rep. 641; Traylor v. Lile, 7 S. W. 58 (Tex.). If an absent defendant returns pending publication, he need not be personally served. Duché v. Voisin, 18 Abb. N. C. 558. Jurisdiction cannot be acquired by ordering goods of a non-resident for the mere purpose of attaching them. Copas v. Anglo-Am. Prov. Co., 73 Mich. 541, 41 N. W. 690. In Burnham v. Commonwealth, 1 Duv. 210, a personal judgment against the absconding officers of the provisional government was sustained. But in the case of constructive notice, if the party appears, he has a right to be heard, and this cannot be denied him, even though he be a rebel. McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259, 267. [So a court cannot deprive a party of the right to be heard upon an application for an injunction because guilty of a previous contempt. Harley v. Montana O. P. Co., — Mont. —, 71 Pac. 407 (Jan. 28, 1903). There is no valid service upon a foreign corporation where the service is merely upon the president, and he is in the State purely upon private business, and the corporation is not and has not been doing business within the State. Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 137 U. S. 98, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; but if thereafter the corporation appears in court by its attorneys, and goes to the trial of the case upon its merits, the invalidity of service is waived. Id. A statute providing for service upon the agent of a non-resident doing business in the State, is void. Cabanne v. Graf, — Minn. —, 92 N. W. 461. Upon the sufficiency of notice by registered letter to last known address of party, in proceedings to determine priority of water rights, see Farm Ins. Co. v. Carpenter, 9 Wyo. 110, 61 Pac. 258, 50 L. R. A. 747; in determining title to lands under the Torrens Land Registration system, Tyler v. Bd of Registration, 175 Mass. 71, 55 N. E. 812, 51 L. R. A. 433. A judgment creating a preference for a labor debt over pre-existing lien without notice and opportunity to be heard given

But such notice is restricted in its legal effect, and cannot be made available for all purposes. It will enable the court to give effect to the proceeding so far as it is one in rem, but when the res is disposed of, the authority of the court ceases. The statute may give it effect so far as the subject-matter of the proceeding is within the limits, and therefore under the control, of the State; but the notice cannot be made to stand in the place of process, so as to subject the defendant to a valid judgment against him personally. In attachment proceedings, the published notice may be sufficient to enable the plaintiff to obtain a judgment which he can enforce by sale of the property attached, but for any other purpose such judgment would be ineffectual. The defendant could not be followed into another State or country, and there have recovery against him upon the judgment as an established demand. The fact that process was not personally served is a conclusive objection to the judgment as a personal claim, unless the defendant caused his appearance to be entered in the attachment proceedings.¹ Where a party has property in a State, and resides elsewhere, his property is justly subject to all valid claims that may exist against him there; but beyond this, due the lien holder, is void. Fisher v. Weinmar, 125 Mich. 342, 84 N. W. 1111, 52 L. R. A. 192; sale of property to pay license fee without notice is void sale. Chauvin v. Valiton, 8 Mont. 451, 20 Pac. 668.]

¹ Pawling v. Willson, 18 Johns. 192; Heirs of Eohman v. Bank of Norfolk, 12 Ala. 399; Curtis v. Gibbs, 1 Penn. 399; Miller's Ex'r v. Miller, 1 Bailey, 242; Cone v. Cotton, 2 Blackf. 82; Kilburn v. Woodworth, 5 Johns. 37; Robinson v. Ward's Ex'r, 8 Johns. 86; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. 252; Bartlett v. Knight, 1 Mass. 401; St. Albans v. Bush, 4 Vt. 58; Fenton v. Garrick, 5 Johns. 194; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462, 5 Am. Dec. 88; Denison v. Hyde, 3 Conn. 508; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 370, 10 Am. Dec. 151; Hoxie v. Wright, 2 Vt. 263; Prosser v. Warner, 47 Vt. 657, 19 Am. Rep. 132; Newell v. Newton, 10 Pick. 470; Starbuck v. Murray, 5 Wend. 148, 21 Am. Dec. 172; Armstrong v. Harshaw, 1 Dev. 157; Bradshaw v. Heath, 13 Wend. 407; Bates v. Delavan, 5 Paige, 293; Webster v. Reid, 11 How. 437; Gleason v. Dodd, 4 Met. 333; Green v. Custard, 23 Haw. 484; Ellot v. McCormick, 144 Mass. 10, 10 N. E. 705. A personal judgment on such service when sued on is no basis for recovery. Needham v. Thayer, 147 Mass. 530, 18 N. E. 429; Eastman v. Dearborn, 63 N. H. 364. But see Everhart v. Holloway, 55 Iowa, 179, 7 N. W. 503. A personal judgment cannot be based on service by publication or personal service out of the State. Denny v. Ashley, 12 Cal. 165, 20 Pac. 331. Service by publication may suffice for a decree of partition of land, but not to create a personal demand for costs. Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155. So if notice is served in another State. Cloyd v. Trotter, 178 Ill. 391. A judgment in personam declaring bonds void does not bind a non-resident holder where the only notice was constructive by publication. Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704. In Ex parte Heyfron, 8 Miss. 127, it was held that an attorney could not be stricken from the rolls without notice of the proceeding and opportunity to be heard. And see ante, p. 481, note. Leaving notice with one's family is not equivalent to personal service. Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 329. At least after defendant has himself left the State. Amsbaugh v. Exchange Bank, 33 Kan. 190, 5 Pac. 384. And see 3 Meier v. Dawson, 5 Ill. 533.

process of law would require appearance or personal service before the defendant could be personally bound by any judgment rendered. (a)

The same rule applies in divorce cases. The courts of the State where the complaining party resides have jurisdiction of the subject-matter; and if the other party is a non-resident, they must be authorized to proceed without personal service of process. The publication which is permitted by the statute is sufficient to justify a decree in these cases changing the status of the complaining party, and thereby terminating the marriage;¹ and it might be sufficient also to empower the court to pass upon the question of the custody and control of the children of the marriage, if they were then within its jurisdiction. But a decree on this subject could only be absolutely binding on the parties while the children remained within the jurisdiction; if they acquire a domicile in another State or country, the judicial tribunals of that State or country would have authority to determine the question of their guardianship there.²

But in divorce cases, no more than in any other, can the court make a decree for the payment of money by a defendant not served with process, and not appearing in the case, which shall be binding upon him personally. It must follow, in such a case, that the wife, when complainant, cannot obtain a valid decree for alimony, nor a valid judgment for costs. If the defendant had property within the State, it would be competent to provide by law for the seizure and appropriation of such property, under the ¹ Hull v. Hull, 2 Strob. Eq. 174; Manley v. Manley, 4 Chand. 97; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 8 Wis. 662; Mansfield v. McIntyre, 19 Ohio, 28; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87; Harrison v. Harrison, 19 Ala. 499; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12; Harding v. Allen, 9 Me. 149, 23 Am. Dec. 549; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana, 181; Hawkins v. Raggsdale, 80 Ky. 353. It is immaterial in these cases whether notice was actually brought home to the defendant or not. And see Hicks v. Holman v. Bank of Norfolk, 12 Ala. 393. But see Conner v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; O'Dea v. O'Dea, 191 N. Y. 23, 4 N. E. 119; Magurn v. Magurn, 11 Ont. App. 178; Flower v. Fowler, 42 N. J. Eq. 152, 7 Atl. 394.

² This must be so on general principles, as the appointment of guardians for minors is of local force only. See Morrell v. Dickey, 1 Johns. Ch. 153; Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen, 321; Potter v. Hiscox, 30 Conn. 598; Kraft v. Wickey, 4 G. & J. 322, 23 Am. Dec. 569. In Kline v. Kline, 37 Iowa, 386, 10 N. W. 825, an order awarding custody of children was held inoperative when at the time the children were in another State; and in People v. Allen, 40 Hun, 611, an order made where all parties resided was held binding in another State. The case of Townsend v. Kendall, 4 Minn. 412, appears to be contra, but some reliance is placed by the court on the statute of the State which allows the foreign appointment to be recognized for the purposes of a sale of the real estate of a ward.

(a) [Statute providing for service by publication in actions in rem is due process. See note, 87 Am. St. Rep. 330.]

decree of the court, to the use of the complainant; but the legal tribunals elsewhere would not recognize a decree for alimony or for costs not based on personal service or appearance. The remedy of the complainant must generally, in these cases, be confined to a dissolution of the marriage, with the incidental benefits springing therefrom, and to an order for the custody of the children, if within the State.¹

When the question is raised whether the proceedings of a court may not be void for want of jurisdiction, it will sometimes be important to note the grade of the court, and the extent of its authority. Some courts are of general jurisdiction, by which is meant that their authority extends to a great variety of matters; while others are only of special and limited jurisdiction, by which it is understood that they have authority extending only to certain specified cases. The want of jurisdiction is equally fatal in the proceedings of each; but different rules prevail in showing it. It is not to be assumed that a court of general jurisdiction has in any case proceeded to adjudge upon matters over which it had no authority; and its jurisdiction is to be presumed, whether there are recitals in its records to show it or not. On the other hand, no such intendment is made in favor of the judgment of a court of limited jurisdiction, but the recitals contained in the minutes of proceedings must be sufficient to show that the case was one which the law permitted the court to take cognizance of, and that the parties were subjected to its jurisdiction by proper process.²

There is also another difference between these two classes of ¹ See Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. 424; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 23 Am. Dec. 648; Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Barb. 285; Crane v. Meginnis, 1 Gil. & J. 463; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana. 181, 19 Am. Dec. 237; Townsend v. Griffin, 4 Harr. 449; Sowers v. Edmunds, 76 Ind. 123. In Beard v. Beard, 21 Ind. 321, Perkins, J., after a learned and somewhat elaborate examination of the subject, expresses the opinion that the State may permit a personal judgment for alimony in the case of a resident defendant, on service by publication only, though he conceded that there would be no such power in the case of non-residents. Upon a California divorce a wife is not entitled to dower in Oregon lands, which in such case is allowed in Oregon, although the California court had jurisdiction. Barrett v. Failing, 111 U. S. 523, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

² See Dakin v. Hudson, 6 Cow. 221; Cleveland v. Rogers, 6 Wend. 433; Peo- ple v. Koeber, 7 Hill, 39; Shelden v. Wright, 5 N. Y. 467; Clark v. Holmes, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 390; Cooper v. Sunderland, 5 Iowa. 114; Wall v. Trumbull, 16 Mich. 228; Denning v. Corwin, 11 Wend. 647; Bridge v. Ford, 4 Mass. 641; Smith v. Rice, 11 Mass. 507; Barrett v. Crane, 16 Vt. 246; Tift v. Griffin, 4 Ga. 155; Jennings v. Stafford, 1 Ired. 404; Perrine v. Farr, 22 N. J. 356; State v. Metzger, 26 Mo. 65; Owen v. Jordan, 27 Ala. 608; Hill v. Pride, 4 Cal. 107; Sullivan v. Blackwell, 28 Miss. 737. If without the aid of parol evidence a justice's judgment is void, it cannot be aided by filing a transcript of it in a court of general jurisdiction. Barron v. Dent, 17 S. C. 75. If a court of general jurisdiction exercises special powers in a proceeding not after the course of the common law, the essential jurisdictional facts must appear of record. Furgeson v. Jones, 20 Pac. 842 (Oreg.).

tribunals in this, that the jurisdiction of the one may be disproved under circumstances where it would not be allowed in the case of the other. A record is not commonly suffered to be contradicted by parol evidence; but wherever a fact showing want of jurisdiction in a court of general jurisdiction can be proved without contradicting its recitals, it is allowable to do so, and thus defeat its effect.¹ But in the case of a court of special and limited authority, it is permitted to go still further, and to show a want of jurisdiction even in opposition to the recitals contained in the record.² This we conceive to be the general rule, though there are apparent exceptions of those cases where the jurisdiction may be said to depend upon the existence of a certain state of facts, which must be passed upon by the courts themselves, and in respect to which the decision of the court once rendered, if there was any evidence whatever on which to base it, must be held final and conclusive in all collateral inquiries, notwithstanding it may have erred in its conclusions.³

¹ See this subject considered at some length in Wilcox v. Kassick, 2 Mich. 165. The record cannot be contradicted by parol. Littleton v. Smith, 119 Ind. 299, 21 N. E. 883; Turner v. Malone, 24 S. C. 338; Boyd v. Roane, 49 Ark. 397, 5 S. W. 704; Harris v. McClanahan, 11 Lea, 181. General recitals may be contradicted by more specific ones in the same record. Cloud v. Pierce City, 86 Mo. 457. And see Adams v. Cowles, 95 Mo. 501, 8 S. W. 711; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 329; Bimeler v. Dawson, 5 Ill. 536; Webster v. Reid, 11 How. 437.

² Sheldon v. Wright, 5 N. Y. 497; Dyckman v. Mayor, &c. of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 434; Clark v. Holmes, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 390; Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa, 114; Sears v. Terry, 26 Conn. 273; Brown v. Foster, 6 R. I. 534; Fawcett v. Fowles, 1 Man. & R. 102. But see Facey v. Fuller, 13 Mich. 527, where it was held that the entry in the docket of a justice that the parties appeared and proceeded to trial was conclusive. And see Selin v. Snyder, 7 S. & R. 172.

³ Britain v. Kinnaird, 1 B. & B. 432. Conviction under the Bumboat Act. The record was fair on its face, but it was insisted that the vessel in question was not a "boat" within the intent of the fact. Dallas, Ch. J.: "The general principle applicable to cases of this description is perfectly clear: it is established by all the ancient, and recognized by all the modern decisions; and the principle is, that a conviction by a magistrate, who has jurisdiction over the subject-matter, is, if no defects appear, on the face of it, conclusive evidence of the facts stated in it. Such being the principle, what are the facts of the present case? If the subject-matter in the present case were a boat, it is agreed that the boat would be forfeited; and the conviction stated it to be a boat. But it is said that in order to give the magistrate jurisdiction, the subject-matter of his conviction must be a boat; and that it is competent to the party to impeach the conviction by showing that this was not a boat. I agree, that if he had not jurisdiction, the conviction signifies nothing. Had he then jurisdiction in this case? By the act of Parliament he is empowered to search for and seize gunpowder in any boat on the river Thames. Now, allowing, for the sake of argument, that 'boat' is a word of technical meaning, and somewhat different from a vessel, still, it was a matter of fact to be made out before the magistrate, and on which he was to draw his own conclusion. But it is said that a jurisdiction limited as to person, place, and subject-matter is stinted in its nature, and cannot be lawfully exceeded. I agree; but upon the inquiry before the magistrate, does not the person form a question to be decided by evidence? Does not the place, does not the subject-

When it is once made to appear that a court has jurisdiction both of the subject-matter and of the parties, the judgment which it pronounces must be held conclusive and binding upon the parties thereto and their privies, notwithstanding the court may have proceeded irregularly, or erred in its application of the law to the case before it. It is a general rule that irregularities in the course of judicial proceedings do not render them void.¹ An matter, form such a question? The possession of a boat, therefore, with gunpowder on board, is part of the offence charged; and how could the magistrate decide but by examining evidence in proof of what was alleged? The magistrate, it is urged, could not give himself jurisdiction by finding that to be a fact which did not exist. But he is bound to inquire as to the fact, and when he has inquired, his conviction is conclusive of it. The magistrates have inquired in the present instance, and they find the subject of conviction to be a boat. Much has been said about the danger of magistrates giving themselves jurisdiction; and extreme cases have been put, as of a magistrate seizing a ship of seventy-four guns, and calling it a boat. Suppose such a thing done, the conviction is still conclusive, and we cannot look out of it. It is urged that the party is without remedy; and so he is, without civil remedy, in this and many other cases; his remedy is by proceeding criminally; and if the decision were so gross as to call a ship of seventy-four guns a boat, it would be good ground for a criminal proceeding. Formerly the rule was to intend everything against a stinted jurisdiction: that is not the rule now; and nothing is to be intended but what is fair and reasonable, and it is reasonable to intend that magistrates will do what is right." Richardson, J., in the same case, states the real point very clearly: "Whether the vessel in question were a boat or no was a fact on which the magistrate was to decide; and the fallacy lies in assuming that the fact which the magistrate has to decide is that which constitutes his jurisdiction. If a fact decided as this has been might be questioned in a civil suit, the magistrate would never be safe in his jurisdiction. Suppose the case for a conviction under the game laws of having partridges in possession; could the magistrate, in an action of trespass, be called on to show that the bird in question was really a partridge? and yet it might as well be urged, in that case, that the magistrate had no jurisdiction unless the bird were a partridge, as it may be urged in the present case that he has none unless the machine be a boat. So in the case of a conviction for keeping dogs for the destruction of game without being duly qualified to do so; after the conviction had found that the offender kept a dog of that description, could he, in a civil action, be allowed to dispute the truth of the conviction? In a question like the present we are not to look to the inconvenience, but at the law; but surely if the magistrate acts bona fide, and comes to his conclusion as to matters of fact according to the best of his judgment, it would be highly unjust if he were to have to defend himself in a civil action; and the more so, as he might have been compelled by a mandamus to proceed on the investigation. Upon the general principle, therefore, that where the magistrate has jurisdiction his conviction is conclusive evidence of the facts stated in it, I think this rule must be discharged." See also Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & C. 648; Fawcett v. Fowles, 7 B. & C. 394; Ashcroft v. Bourne, 3 B. & Ad. 684; Mather v. Hodd, 8 Johns. 44; Mackaboy v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 270; Ex parte Kellogg, 6 Vt. 509; State v. Scott, 1 Bailey, 204; Facey v. Fuller, 13 Mich. 527; Wall v. Trumbull, 16 Mich. 228; Sheldon v. Wright, 5 N. Y. 437; Wanzer v. Howland, 10 Wis. 10; Ricketts v. Spraker, 77 Ind. 371; Fanning v. Krapf, 68 Iowa, 244, 26 N. W. 133; Schee v. La Grange, 78 Iowa, 101, 42 N. W. 616; Sims v. Gay, 103 Ind. 501, 9 N. E. 120; Epping v. Robinson, 21 Fla. 36; Freeman on Judgments, § 523, and cases cited.

¹ Ex parte Kellogg, 6 Vt. 509; Edgerton v. Hart, 8 Vt. 208; Carter v. Walker, 2 Ohio St. 339; White v. Crow, 110 U. S.

irregularity may be defined as the failure to observe that particular course of proceeding which, conformably with the practice of the court, ought to have been observed in the case;¹ and if a party claims to be aggrieved by this, he must apply to the court in which the suit is pending to set aside the proceedings, or to give him such other redress as he thinks himself entitled to; or he must take steps to have the judgment reversed by removing the case for review to an appellate court, if any such there be. Wherever the question of the validity of the proceedings arises in any collateral suit, he will be held bound by them to the same extent as if in all respects the court had proceeded according to law. An irregularity cannot be taken advantage of collaterally; that is to say, in any other suit than that in which the irregularity occurs, or on appeal or process in error therefrom. And even in the same proceeding an irregularity may be waived, and will commonly be held to be waived if the party entitled to complain of it shall take any subsequent step in the case inconsistent with an intent on his part to take advantage of it.²

We have thus briefly indicated the cases in which judicial action may be treated as void because not in accordance with the law of the land. The design of the present work does not permit an enlarged discussion of the topics which suggest themselves in this connection, and which, however interesting and important, do not specially pertain to the subject of constitutional law.

183, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Fox v. Cottage, &c. Ass. 81 Va. 677; King v. Bardett, 28 W. Va. 601; Levan v. McHolland, 114 Pa. St. 43, 7 Atl. 194; Weiss v. Guérineau, 109 Ind. 435, 9 N. E. 379; Rosenheim v. Hartsock, 90 Mo. 357, 2 S. W. 473; Head v. Daniels, 38 Kan. 1, 15 Pac. 911; Spillman v. Williams, 91 N. C. 483; Freeman on Judgments, § 135. See Matthews v. Deansmore, 199 U. S. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Bonney v. Bowman, 63 Miss. 190. Compare Seamster v. Blackstock, 83 Va. 223, 2 S. E. 39. Even if a court, after acquiring jurisdiction, were to render judgment without trial or an opportunity for hearing, the judgment would not be void, but only erroneous. Clark v. County Court, 55 Cal. 160. [Mere errors in the administration of the law do not constitute want of due process of law. Lent v. Tilton, 140 U. S. 310, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825.]

A judge cannot perform any judicial act when he is beyond the limits of his State; not even the granting of a certiorari. Buchanan v. Jones, 12 Ga. 312.

¹ "The doing or not doing that in the conduct of a suit at law, which, conformably to the practice of the court, ought or ought not to be done." Bouv. Law Dic. See Dick v. McLaurin, 63 N. C. 155.

² Robinson v. West, 1 Sandf. 19; Malone v. Clark, 2 Hill, 657; Wood v. Randall, 4 Hill, 264; Baker v. Kerr, 13 Iowa, 384; Loomis v. Wadhams, 8 Gray, 357; Warren v. Glynn, 37 N. H. 340. A strong instance of waiver is where, on appeal from a court having no jurisdiction of the subject-matter to a court having general jurisdiction, the parties going to trial without objection are held bound by the judgment. Randolph Co. v. Rafis, 18 Ill. 20; Wells v. Scott, 4 Mich. 347; Tower v. Lamb, 6 Mich. 362. If an objection to proceeding with a jury of less than twelve is overruled, it is not waived by moving for judgment on the findings of such jury. Eshelman v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 67 Iowa, 296, 25 N. W. 251.

But a party in any case has a right to demand that the judgment of the court be given upon his suit, and he cannot be bound by a delegated exercise of judicial power, whether the delegation be by the courts or by legislative act devolving judicial duties on ministerial officers.¹ Proceedings in any such case would be void; but they must be carefully distinguished from those cases in which the court has itself acted, though irregularly. All the State constitutions preserve the right of trial by jury, (a) for civil

¹ Hall v. Marke, 24 Ill. 868; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 499. It is not competent to provide by statute that the judge may call a member of the bar to sit in his place in a special case. "The legislature has no power to authorize a district judge to place his judicial robe upon the shoulders of any man." Winchester v. Ayres, 4 Greene (Iowa), 104. See Wright v. Bion, 2 Greene (Iowa), 458; Mestas v. Hinc, 3 Greene (Iowa), 470; Smith v. Frisbie, 7 Iowa, 480. To allow it would be to provide a mode for choosing judges different from that prescribed by the Constitution. State v. Phillips, 27 La. Ann. 263; State v. Fritz, 27 La. Ann. 689. Even the consent of parties would not give the judge this authority. Hoagland v. Creed, 81 Ill. 506; Andrews v. Beck, 23 Tex. 455; Haverly L. M. Co. v. Howatt, 6 Col. 674. In Missouri there is statutory provision for a special judge. State v. Hosmer, 85 Mo. 553. Under the Tennessee statute a special judge can act only in civil cases. Neil v. State, 2 Lea, 674. It is competent to send a case to referees or to a master for investigation of accounts. Underwood v. McDuffee, 15 Mich. 321; Hard v. Burton, 79 Ill. 504. All the issues in a case involving accounts may be referred. Horton v. Wadsworth, 5 Col. 213. But it is not competent to give the referee powers of final decision. Johnson v. Wallace, 7 Onto. 842; King v. Hopkins, 57 N. H. 334; St. Paul, &c. R. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 122, 18 Am. Rep. 314. A decree for the payment of money must specify the precise amount to be paid, and not leave it to subsequent computation. Aldrich v. Sharp, 4 Ill. 281; Smith v. Trimble, 27 Ill. 152. For the general principle that judicial power cannot be delegated, see further, Gough v. Dorsey, 27 Wis. 119; Milwaukee Indus- trial School v. Supervisors, 40 Wis. 328; Allor v. County Auditors, 43 Mich. 73, 4 N. W. 492; Ward v. Farwell, 97 Ill. 563. [The indeterminate sentence law giving authority to the prison board to determine the term of imprisonment within limits fixed by the judgment of the court is not in violation of the rule against the delegation of judicial power. Muler v. State, 149 Ind. 607, 49 N. E. 894, 40 L. R. A. 103. Dreyer v. People, 188 Ill. 40, 58 N. E. 620. Conner, in Michigan, People v. Cummings, 88 Mich. 249, 50 N. W. 310. See also, 9 Yale Law Jour. 17.] A justice having power to issue writs at the commencement of suit, cannot issue them in blank to be filled up by parties or by ministerial officers. Pierce v. Hubbard, 10 Johns. 435; Craighead v. Martin, 25 Minn. 41. But a writ will not necessarily be quashed because filled up by an unauthorized person. Kinne v. Hinman, 68 N. H. 368. The clerk of a court of record may be authorized to enter up judgment in vacation against a defendant whose indebtedness is admitted of record: Lathrop v. Snyder, 17 Wis. 110; but not in other cases. See Grattan v. Matteson, 54 Iowa, 229, 6 N. W. 298; Keith v. Kellogg, 97 Ill. 147. Such an entry not authorized or approved by the court is void. Bain v. Nunn, 63 Iowa, 641, 19 N. W. 810; Mitchell v. St. John, 98 Ind. 308. For the distinction between judicial and ministerial action, see Fournoy v. Jeffersonville, 17 Ind. 100; People v. Bennett, 29 Mich. 451. [Statute providing for charging a town with maintenance of a pauper upon report of a commission whose members are not required to take an oath, or to administer oaths to witnesses, or to pronounce judgment, violates provision for due process of law. Church v. South Kingstown, 22 R. I. 351, 48 Atl. 3, 53 L. R. A. 789.]

(a) [Upon extent of this right, see note to 41 L. ed. U. S. 113.]

as well as for criminal cases, with such exceptions as are specified, and which for the most part consist in such cases as are of small consequence, and are triable in inferior courts. The constitutional provisions do not extend the right; they only secure it in the cases in which it was a matter of right before.¹ But in doing this, they preserve the historical jury of twelve men,² with all its incidents, unless a contrary purpose clearly appears. The party is therefore entitled to examine into the qualifications and im-

¹ Backus v. Lebanon, 11 N. H. 19; Opinions of Judges, 41 N. H. 550; Dane Co. v. Dunning, 20 Wis. 210; Stillwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461; Mead v. Walker, 17 Wis. 189; Commissioners v. Seabrook, 2 Strob. 600; Tabor v. Cook, 15 Mich. 322; Lake Erie, &c. R. R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558; Byers v. Commonwealth, 42 Pa. St. 89; State v. Peterson, 41 Vt. 504; Jane Hackett, 53 Vt. 334; Buffalo, &c. R. R. Co. v. Ferris, 26 Tex. 688; Sands v. Kimbark, 27 N. Y. 147; Howell v. Fry, 19 Ohio St. 566; Guile v. Brown, 38 Conn. 237; Howe v. Plainfield, 37 N. J. 145; Commissioners v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178. These provisions do not apply to equitable causes or proceedings: Flaherty v. McCormick, 113 Ill. 538; State v. Churchill, 48 Ark. 426, 5 S. W. 852, 880; Mahan v. Cavender, 77 Ga. 118; Jane Burrows, 83 Kan. 675, 7 Pac. 148; Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67 Iowa, 619, 25 N. W. 832; McKinsey v. Squires, 52 W. Va. 41, 9 S. E. 65; not even to enjoining and abating a building as a liquor nuisance: Carleton v. Rugg, 149 Mass. 580, 22 N. E. 55; [Kansas v. Ziebold, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Littleton v. Fritz, 65 Iowa, 488, 22 N. W. 341;] nor to special statutory drainage proceedings: Lipes v. Hand, 104 Ind. 503, 1 N. E. 871, 4 N. E. 100; nor to proceedings to determine lunacy: County of Black Hawk v. Springer, 58 Iowa, 417, 10 N. W. 791; Crocker v. State, 60 Wis. 558, 19 N. W. 435; nor to summary landlord and tenant proceedings: Frazee v. Beattie, 28 S. C. 348, 2 S. E. 125; nor to a hearing as to damages on default in tort: Seeley v. Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 1, 22 Atl. 1317; nor to insolvency proceedings: Weston v. Leyland, 80 Minn. 221, 14 N. W. 892; contra, Risser v. Hayn, 53 Mich. 185, 18 N. W. 611. Nor do they prevent a court from denying a new trial unless plaintiff

remits a part of the verdict. Arkansas V. L. & Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458. [Nor directing a verdict, Treat Mfg. Co. v. Standard Steel and Iron Co., 157 U. S. 674, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.] Nor summary distress for rent if a jury may be had, by replevying property seized. Blanchard v. Ruiner, 20 Fla. 457. They do prevent making the findings of appraisers conclusive evidence of value, ownership, and injury, where stock is killed by a railroad. Graves v. Nor. Pac. R. R. Co., 5 Mont. 566, 6 Pac. 16. That notwithstanding jury trial is preserved, the jurisdiction of justices to try petty cases without jury may be extended, see Beers v. Beers, 4 Conn. 535, 10 Am. Dec. 156; Keddie v. Moore, 2 Murph. 41, 6 Am. Dec. 518. [That length and complication of accounts will not warrant compulsory reference to a master and denial of jury in New York, see Steck v. Colorado F. & I. Co., 142 N. Y. 256, 37 N. E. 1, 25 L. R. A. 67, and see note hereto in L. R. A. on compulsory reference and right to jury trial.]

* See ante, p. 458. And see the general examination of the subject historically in Hagarty v. Cohen, 29 Ohio St. 82; and Copp v. Henniker, 55 N. H. 179. A statute allowing less than twelve to sit if a juror is sick is bad. Eshelman v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 67 Iowa, 246, 25 N. W. 251. But a jury of six may be allowed in inferior courts. Higgins v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 60 Iowa, 50, 14 N. W. 118. One of less than twelve may act in statutory highway proceedings. McManus v. McDonough, 107 Ill. 95. [And judgment may be given upon a special verdict, even though such verdict is inconsistent with the general verdict. Walker v. Southern P. Railroad, 165 U. S. 583, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421.]

partiality of jurors;¹ and to have the proceedings public;² and no conditions can be imposed upon the exercise of the right that shall impair its value and usefulness.³ It has been held, however, in many cases, that it is competent to deny to parties the privilege of a trial in a court of first instance, provided the right is allowed on appeal.⁴ It is undoubtedly competent to create new tribunals without common-law powers, and to authorize them to proceed without a jury; but a change in the forms of action will not authorize submitting common-law rights to a tribunal in which no jury is allowed.⁵ In any case, we suppose a failure to award

¹ Palmore v. State, 29 Ark. 249; Paul v. Detroit, 32 Mich. 108.

² Watertown Bank, &c. v. Mix, 51 N. Y. 558.

³ Greene v. Briggs, 1 Curt. C. C. 311; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; Norristown, &c. Co. v. Burket, 28 Ind. 53; State v. Gurney, 37 Me. 156; Copp v. Henniker, 55 N. H. 179. It is not inadmissible, however, to require of a party demanding a jury that he shall pay the jury fee. Randall v. Kehler, 60 Me. 37; Connors v. Burlington, &c. Ry. Co., 74 Iowa, 383, 37 N. W. 966; Conneau v. Geis, 73 Cal. 176, 14 Pac. 580.

⁴ Emerick v. Harris, 1 Binn. 416; Biddle v. Commonwealth, 13 S. & R. 405; McDonald v. Schell, 6 S. & R. 240; Keddie v. Moore, 2 Murph. 41; Wilson v. Simonton, 1 Hawks, 482; Monford v. Barney, 8 Yerg. 444; Beers v. Beers, 4 Conn. 535, 10 Am. Dec. 185; State v. Brennan's Liquors, 25 Conn. 278; Curtis v. Gill, 34 Conn. 49; Reckner v. Warner, 22 Ohio St. 275; Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 329; Hapgood v. Doherty, 8 Gray, 373; Flint River, &c. Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194; State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa, 203; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328, 309; Steuart v. Baltimore, 7 Md. 500; Commonwealth v. Whitney, 108 Mass. 5; Maxwell v. Comrs Fulton Co., 119 Ind. 20, 19 N. E. 617, 21 N. E. 453; Helverstine v. Yantes, 88 Ky. 695, 11 S. W. 811; Beasley v. Beckley, 28 W. Va. 81; State v. Fitzpatrick, 16 R. I. 54, 60, 11 Atl. 797, 773; [Brown v. Epps, 91 Va. 726, 21 S. E. 119, 27 L. R. A. 676; Re Jahn, 55 Kan. 634, 41 Pac. 850. Contra, State v. Gerry, 48 N. H. 495, 38 Atl. 272, 33 L. R. A. 228.] But the recognizance to the lower court on appeal must not be burdened with unreasonable conditions. Liquors of Me-

Sorley, 15 R. I. 608, 10 Atl. 659. Compare In re Marron, 60 Vt. 199, 12 Atl. 523. But that this could not be admissible in criminal cases was held in Matter of Dana, 7 Benedict, 1, by Judge Blatchford, who very sensibly remarks, "In my judgment the accused is entitled, not to be first convicted by a court, and then to be acquitted by a jury, but to be convicted or acquitted in the first instance by a jury." On a charge of criminal conspiracy, a prisoner has a right to jury trial, "from the first moment and in whatever court he is put on trial for the offence charged." Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301. If in a lower court one has had a jury trial and appeals to a higher nisi prius court, he cannot be deprived of a jury there. McGinty v. Carter, 48 N. J. L. 113, 3 Atl. 78. That the right to jury trial in civil cases may be waived by failure to demand it, see Gleason v. Keteltas, 17 N. Y. 461; Baird v. Mayor, 74 N. Y. 382; Garrison v. Hollins, 2 Lea, 634; Foster v. Morse, 132 Mass. 354. That it is competent to provide that the failure to file an affidavit of defence shall entitle the plaintiff to judgment, see Hoffman v. Locke, 19 Pa. St. 57; Lawrance v. Born, 86 Pa. St. 225; Dortic v. Lockwood, 61 Ga. 293.

⁵ See Rhines v. Clark, 51 Pa. St. 68. Compare Haines v. Levin, 51 Pa. St. 412; Haines Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 169. [Wiggins & Johnson v. Williams, 39 Fla. 637, 18 So. 859, 30 L. R. A. 754.] Whether jury trial is of right in quo warrant cases, see State v. Allen, 5 Kan. 213; State v. Johnson, 25 Ark. 281; Williamson v. Lane, 52 Tex. 355; State v. Vail, 53 Mo. 97; State v. Lupton, 64 Mo. 415, 27 Am. Rep. 253; People v. Cirott, 13 Mich. 283; People v. Railroad Co., 37

a jury on proper demand would be an irregularity merely, rendering the proceedings liable to reversal, but not making them void.

There is also a maxim of law regarding judicial action which may have an important bearing upon the constitutional validity of judgments in some cases. No one ought to be a judge in his own cause; and so inflexible and so manifestly just in this rule, that Lord Coke has laid it down that "even an act of Parliament made against natural equity, as to make a man a judge in his own case, is void in itself; for jura naturæ sunt immutabilia, and they are leges legum."¹

This maxim applies in all cases where judicial functions are to be exercised, and excludes all who are interested, however remotely, from taking part in their exercise. It is not left to the discretion of a judge, or to his sense of decency, to decide whether he shall act or not; all his powers are subject to this absolute limitation; and when his own rights are in question, he has no authority to determine the cause.² Nor is it essential that the judge be a party named in the record; if the suit is brought or defended in his interest, or if he is a corporator in a corporation which is a party, or which will be benefited or damnified by the judgment, he is equally excluded as if he were the party named.³

N. Y. 181; Royal v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. 130, 26 Am. Rep. 335; and cases, p. 938, note 2, post.

¹ Co. Lit. § 212. See Day v. Savadge, Hobart, 85. We should not venture to predict, however, that even in a case of this kind, if one could be imagined to exist, the courts would declare the act of Parliament void; though they would never find such an intent in the statute, if any other could possibly be made consistent with the words.

² Washington Ins. Co. v. Price, Hopk. Ch. 2; Sigourney v. Sibley, 21 Pick. 101; Freeman on Judgments, § 144. A judge of probate cannot act upon an estate of which he is executor; Bedell v. Bailey, 58 N. H. 62; or creditor, Burks v. Bennett, 32 Tex. 271. Compare Master of Hancock, 61 N. Y. 284. A justice may sit, although he has received for collection the note in suit. Moon v. Stevens, 53 Mich. 144, 18 N. W. 600.

³ Washington Ins. Co. v. Price, Hopk. Ch. 1; Dimes v. Proprietors of Grand Junction Canal, 5 House of Lords Cases, 759; Pearce v. Atwood, 18 Mass. 324; Kentish Artillery v. Gardiner, 15 R. I. 295; 3 At. 362; Peck v. Freeholders of Essex, 20 N. J. 457; Commonwealth v. McLane, 4 Gray, 427; Dively v. Cedar Falls, 21 Iowa, 565; Clark v. Lamb, 2 Allen, 396; Stockwell v. White Lake, 22 Mich. 341; Petition of New Boston, 49 N. H. 323. If the property of a judge from its situation will be affected like complainant's by his ruling he cannot sit. North Bloomfield G. M. Co. v. Keyser, 68 Cal. 315. [Owner of property subject to tax to pay bonded indebtedness of city cannot sit as judge in a case in which validity of such indebtedness is involved. Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 102, 113, 53 Pac. 434, 1128, 41 L. R. A. 702, 56 Am. St. 22. Nor can one who has theretofore been an attorney in the case, although the relation of attorney and client has ceased. State v. Hocker, 34 Fla. 25, 15 So. 581, 25 L. R. A. 114, and note. Nor if he is a vestryman can he act in a case involving the interests of his church. State v. Young, 31 Fla. 594, 12 So. 673, 19 L. R. A. 636, 34 Am. St. 41.] As to disqualification by relationship, see Russell v. Belcher, 78 Me. 501; Patterson v. Collier, 75 Ga. 419; Jordan v. Moore, 65 Tex. 303; Hume v. Commercial Bank, 10 Lea, 1.

Accordingly, where the Lord Chancellor, who was a shareholder in a company in whose favor the Vice-Chancellor had rendered a decree, affirmed this decree, the House of Lords reversed the decree on this ground, Lord Campbell observing: "It is of the last importance that the maxim that 'no man is to be a judge in his own cause' should be held sacred. And that is not to be confined to a cause in which he is a party, but applies to a cause in which he has an interest." "We have again and again set aside proceedings in inferior tribunals, because an individual who had an interest in a cause took a part in the decision. And it will have a most salutary effect on these tribunals, when it is known that this high court of last resort, in a case in which the Lord Chancellor of England had an interest, considered that his decree was on that account a decree not according to law, and was set aside. This will be a lesson to all inferior tribunals to take care, not only that in their decrees they are not influenced by their personal interest, but to avoid the appearance of laboring under such an influence."¹

It is matter of some interest to know whether the legislatures of the American States can set aside this maxim of the common law, and by express enactment permit one to act judicially when interested in the controversy. The maxim itself, it is said, in some cases, does not apply where, from necessity, the judge must proceed in the case, there being no other tribunal authorized to act;² but we prefer the opinion of Chancellor Sandford of New York, that in such a case it belongs to the power which created such a court to provide another in which this judge may be a party; and whether another tribunal is established or not, he at least is not entrusted with authority to determine his own rights, or his own wrongs.³

It has been held that where the interest was that of corporator in a municipal corporation, the legislature might provide that it should constitute no disqualification where the corporation was a party. But the ground of this ruling appears to be, that the creditor was held void. And see People v. Gies, 25 Mich. 83. [In Florida a judge is disqualified to sit in a cause in which the husband of a niece of the judge is a party. State v. Wall, 41 Fla. 463, 26 So. 1929, 49 L. R. A. 548. A judge whose wife is a stockholder in a corporation cannot sit in the trial of a cause to which it is party. First Nat. Bank v. McGuire, 12 S. D. 226, 80 N. W. 1074, 47 L. R. A. 413, 76 Am. St. 598.]

¹ Dimes v. Proprietors of Grand Junction Canal, 3 House of Lords Cases, 759, 798.

² Ranger v. Great Western R., 5 House of Lords Cases, 72, 88; Stuart v. Mechanics' & Farmers' Bank, 12 Johns. 496.

³ Washington Insurance Co. v. Price, Hopk. Ch. 1. This subject was considered in Hall v. Thayer, 135 Mass. 219, and an appointment by a judge of probate of his wife's brother as administrator of an estate of which her father was a principal

interest is so remote, trifling, and insignificant, that it may fairly be supposed to be incapable of affecting the judgment or of influencing the conduct of an individual.¹ And where penalties are imposed, to be recovered only in a municipal court, the judges or jurors in which would be interested as corporators in the recovery, the law providing for such recovery must be regarded as precluding the objection of interest.² And it is very common, in a certain class of cases, for the law to provide that certain township and county officers shall audit their own accounts for services rendered the public; but in such case there is no adversary party, unless the State, which passes the law, or the municipalities, which are its component parts and subject to its control, can be regarded as such.

But except in cases resting upon such reasons, we do not see how the legislature can have any power to abolish a maxim which is among the fundamentals of judicial authority. The people of the State, when framing their constitution, may possibly establish so great an anomaly, if they see fit;³ but if the legislature is entrusted with apportioning and providing for the exercise of the judicial power, we cannot understand it to be authorized, in the execution of this trust, to do that which has never been recognized as being within the province of the judicial authority. To empower one party to a controversy to decide it for himself is not within the legislative authority, because it is not the establishment of any rule of action or decision, but is a placing of the other party, so far as that controversy is concerned, out of the protection of the law, and submitting him to the control of one whose interest it will be to decide arbitrarily and unjustly.⁴

¹ Commonwealth v. Reed, 1 Gray, 475; Justices v. Fennimore, 1 N. J. 190; Commissioners v. Little, 3 Ohio, 289; Minneapolis v. Wilson, 30 Minn. 140, 14 N. W. 581. See Foreman v. Marianna, 43 Ark. 324, case of annexing territory; Sauls v. Freeman, 24 Fla. 203, 225, 4 So. 525, 577, case of changing county seat. [And a judge who is member of a State bar association may pass upon disbarment proceedings brought by the association, although, if the proceedings fail, costs will go against the association. Ex parte Bar Association, 92 Ala. 113, 8 So. 738, 12 L. R. A. 134.]

² Commonwealth v. Ryan, 5 Mass. 90; Hill v. Wells, 6 Pick. 164; Commonwealth v. Emery, 11 Cush. 403; State v. Craig, 80 Mo. 85, 13 Atl. 129; In re Guerrero, 69 Cal. 88, 10 Pac. 291.

³ Matter of Leefe, 2 Barb. Ch. 39. Even this must be deemed doubtful since the adoption of the fourteenth article of the amendments to the Federal Constitution, which denies to the State the right to deprive one of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

⁴ See Ames v. Port Huron Log-Driving and Booming Co., 11 Mich. 189; Hall v. Thayer, 105 Mass. 219; State v. Crane, 36 N. J. 394; Cypress Pond Draining Co. v. Hooper, 2 Met. (Ky.) 350; Scuffletown Fence Co. v. McAllister, 12 Bush, 312; Reams v. Kearns, 6 Cold. 217. No power to make a municipal corporation party and judge in the same controversy can constitutionally be given. Lanfear v. Mayor, 4 La. 97, 23 Am. Dec. 477.

Nor do we see how the objection of interest can be waived by the other party. If not taken before the decision is rendered, it will avail in an appellate court; and the suit may there be dismissed on that ground.¹ The judge acting in such a case is not simply proceeding irregularly, but he is acting without jurisdiction. And if one of the judges constituting a court is disqualified on this ground, the judgment will be void, even though the proper number may have concurred in the result, not reckoning the interested party.²

Mere formal acts necessary to enable the case to be brought before a proper tribunal for adjudication, an interested judge may do;³ but that is the extent of his power.

¹ Richardson v. Welcome, 6 Cush. 332; Dimes v. Proprietors of Grand Junction Canal, 8 H. L. Cas. 759. And see Sigourney v. Sibley, 21 Pick. 101; Oakley v. Aspinwall, 3 N. Y. 547. But it is held in Pettigrew v. Washington Co., 43 Ark. 33, that after judgment it is too late to object that relationship to a party disqualified a judge. But see succeeding note.

² In Queen v. Justices of Hertfordshire, 6 Q. B. 753, it was decided that, if any one of the magistrate hearing a case at sessions was interested, the court was improperly constituted, and an order made in the case should be quashed. It was also decided that it was no answer to the objection that there was a majority in favor of the decision without reckoning the interested party, nor that the interested party withdrew before the decision, if he appeared to have joined in discussing the matter with the other magistrates. See also the Queen v. Justices of Suffolk, 18 Q. B. 416; The Queen v. Justices of London, 18 Q. B. 421; Peninsula R. R. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

³ Richardson v. Boston, 1 Curt. C. C. 250; Washington Insurance Co. v. Price, Hopk. Cir. 1; Buckingham v. Davis, 9 Md. 324; Heydenfeldt v. Towns, 27 Ala. 423; State v. Judge, 37 La. Ann. 253. If the judge who renders judgment in a cause had previously been attorney in it, the judgment is a nullity. Reams v. Kearns, 5 Cold. 217; Slaven v. Wheeler, 55 Tex. 23. [Or if he has advised one of the parties upon his rights in regard to any fact involved in the case. Tampa St. R. & P. Co. v. Tampa Suburban R. Co., 30 Fla. 595, 11 So. 562, 17 L. R. A. 681.] So though the case in suit is not precisely the one in which he has been consulted. Newcome v. Light, 68 Tex. 141.

CHAPTER XII.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

THE first amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides, among other things, that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. The privilege which is thus protected against unfriendly legislation by Congress, is almost universally regarded not only as highly important, but as being essential to the very existence and perpetuity of free government. The people of the States have therefore guarded it with jealous care, by provisions of similar import in their several constitutions, and a constitutional principle is thereby established which is supposed to form a shield of protection to the free expression of opinion in every part of our land.¹

¹ The following are the constitutional provisions: Mass.: Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of this liberty. No law shall be passed regulating or restraining the freedom of the press; and, in prosecutions for any publication respecting the official conduct of men in public capacity, or the qualifications of those who are candidates for the suffrages of the people, or where the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libel, the jury, after having received the direction of the court, shall have a right to determine, at their discretion, the law and the fact. Declaration of Rights, § 4. — New Hampshire: The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a State; it ought, therefore, to be inviolably preserved. Bill of Rights, § 22. — Vermont: That the people have a right to freedom of speech, and of writing and publishing their sentiments concerning the transactions of government; therefore the freedom of the press ought not to be restrained. Declaration of Rights, Art. 13. — Massachusetts: The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a State; it ought not, therefore, to be restrained in this Commonwealth. Declaration of Rights, Art. 10. — Rhode Island: The liberty of the press being essential to the security of freedom in a State, any person may publish his sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty; and in all trials for libel, both civil and criminal, the truth, unless published from malicious motives, shall be sufficient defence to the person charged. Art. 1, § 20. — Connecticut: No law shall ever be passed to curtail or restrain the liberty of speech or of the press. In all prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth may be given in evidence, and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court. Art. 1, §§ 6 and 7. — New York: Every person may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or the press. In all criminal prosecutions or indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was pub-

It is to be observed of these several provisions, that they recognize certain rights as now existing, and seek to protect and perlished with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted, and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Art. 1, § 5. — New Jersey: Every person may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right. No law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Art. 1, § 5. — Pennsylvania: That the printing-press shall be free to every person who may undertake to examine the proceedings of the legislature, or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen may freely speak, write, and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. No conviction shall be had in any prosecution for the publication of papers, relating to the official conduct of officers or men in public capacity, or to any other matter proper for public investigation or information, where the fact that such publication was not maliciously or negligently made shall be established to the satisfaction of the jury. and in all indictments for libels, the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court, as in other cases. Art. 1, § 7. — Delaware: The press shall be free to every citizen who undertakes to examine the official conduct of men acting in public capacity, and any citizen may print on any such subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. In prosecutions for publications investigating the proceedings of officers, or where the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libels, the jury may determine the facts and the law, as in other cases. Art. 1, § 5. — Maryland: That the liberty of the press ought to be inviolably preserved; that every citizen of the State ought to be allowed to speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that privilege. Declaration of Rights, Art. 40. — West Virginia: No law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press shall be passed; but the legislature may provide for the restraint and punishment of the publishing and vending of obscene books, papers, and pictures, and of libel and defamation of character, and for the recovery in civil action by the aggrieved party of suitable damages for such libel or defamation. Attempts to justify and uphold an armed invasion of the State, or an organized insurrection therein during the continuance of such invasion or insurrection, by publicly speaking, writing, or printing, or by publishing, or circulating such writing or printing, may be by law declared a misdemeanor, and punished accordingly. In prosecutions and civil suits for libel, the truth may be given in evidence; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives, and for justifiable ends, the verdict shall be for the defendant. Art. 2, §§ 4 and 5. — Kentucky: That printing-presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the General Assembly, or any branch of the government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen may freely speak, write, and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. In all prosecutions for the publication of papers investigating the official conduct of officers or men in a public capacity, or where the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libels, the jury shall have a right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court, as in other cases. Art. 13, §§ 9 and 10. — Tennessee: Nearly the same as Pennsylvania. Art. 1, § 19. — Ohio:

petuate them, by declaring that they shall not be abridged, or that they shall remain inviolate. They do not assume to create

Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of the right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted. Art. 1, § 11. — Iowa: Art. 1, § 7, and Nevada: Art. 1, § 9. Substantially same as Ohio. — Illinois: Every person may freely speak, write, and publish on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty; and in all trials for libel, both civil and criminal, the truth, when published with good motives and for justifiable ends, shall be a sufficient defence. Art. 2, § 4. — Indiana: No law shall be passed restraining the free interchange of thought and opinion, or restricting the right to speak, write, or print freely on any subject whatever, but for the abuse of that right every person shall be responsible. In all prosecutions for libel, the truth of the matters alleged to be libellous may be given in justification. Art. 1, §§ 9 and 10. — Michigan: In all prosecutions for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted. The jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Art. 6, § 25. — Wisconsin: Same as New York. Art. 1, § 3. — Minnesota: The liberty of the press shall forever remain inviolate, and all persons may freely speak, write, and publish their sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right. Art. 1, § 3. — Oregon: No law shall be passed restraining the free expression of opinion, or restricting the right to speak, write, or print freely on any subject whatever; but every person shall be responsible for the abuse of this right. Art. 1, § 8. — California: Same as New York. Art. 1, § 9. — Kansas: The liberty of the press shall be inviolate, and all persons may freely speak, write, or publish their sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right; and in all civil or criminal actions for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear that the alleged libellous matter was published for justifiable ends, the accused party shall be acquitted. Bill of Rights, § 11. — Missouri: That no law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech; that every person shall be free to say, write, or publish whatever he will on every subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty; and that in all prosecutions for libel, the truth thereof may be given in evidence, and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact. Art. 2, § 14. — Nebraska: Same as Illinois. Art. 1, § 5. — Arkansas: The liberty of the press shall forever remain inviolate. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and all persons may freely speak, write, and publish their sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right. In all criminal prosecutions for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted. Art. 1, § 2. — Florida: Every person may freely speak and write his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right, and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or the press. In all criminal prosecutions and civil actions for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it appear that the matter charged as libellous is true, and was published with good motives, the party shall be acquitted or exonerated. Declaration of Rights, § 10. — Georgia: No law shall ever be passed to curtail or restrain the liberty of speech or of the press: any person may speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. Art. 1, § 1, par. 15. — Louisiana: No law shall be passed . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. Bill of Rights, Art. 4. — North Carolina: The freedom of new rights, but their purpose is to protect the citizen in the enjoyment of those already possessed. We are at once, therefore, turned back from these provisions to the pre-existing law, in order that we may ascertain what the rights are which are thus protected, and what is the extent of the privileges they undertake to assure.

At the common law, however, it will be found that liberty of the press was neither well protected nor well defined. The art of printing, in the hands of private persons, has, until within a comparatively recent period, been regarded rather as an instrument of mischief, which required the restraining hand of the government, than as a power for good, to be fostered and encouraged. Like a vicious beast it might be made useful if properly harnessed and restrained. The government assumed to itself the right to determine what might or might not be published; and censors were appointed without whose permission it was criminal to publish a book or paper upon any subject. Through all the changes the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and therefore ought never to be restrained; but every individual shall be held responsible for the abuse of the same. Declaration of Rights, § 20. — South Carolina: All persons may freely speak, write, and publish their sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no laws shall be enacted to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In prosecutions for the publication of papers investigating the official conduct of officers or men in public capacity, or when the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libel the jury shall be judges of the law and the facts. Art. 1, §§ 7 and 8. — Alabama: That any citizen may speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. That in prosecutions for the publication of papers investigating the official conduct of officers or men in public capacity, or when the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and that in all indictments for libels, the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court. Art. 1, §§ 5 and 18. — Mississippi: The freedom of speech and of the press shall be held sacred; and in all indictments for libel, the jury shall determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court. Art. 1, § 4. — Texas: Every citizen shall be at liberty to speak, write, or publish his opinions on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that privilege; and no law shall ever be passed curtailing the liberty of speech or of the press. In prosecutions for the publication of papers, investigating the official conduct of officers or men in a public capacity, or when the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all prosecutions for libels, the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court, as in other cases. Art. 1, §§ 5 and 6. — Virginia: That the freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and can never be restrained but by despotic governments, and any citizen may speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. Art. 1, § 14. — Colorado: That no law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech; that every person shall be free to speak, write, or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty; and that [in] all suits and prosecutions for libel, the truth thereof may be given in evidence, and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact. Art. 2, § 10.

of government, this censorship was continued until after the Revolution of 1688, and there are no instances in English history of more cruel and relentless persecution than for the publication of books which now would pass unnoticed by the authorities. To a much later time the press was not free to publish even the current news of the day where the government could suppose itself to be interested in its suppression. Many matters, the publication of which now seems important to the just, discreet, and harmonious administration of free institutions, and to the proper observation of public officers by those interested in the discharge of their duties, were treated by the public authorities as offences against good order, and contempts of their authority. By a fiction not very far removed from the truth, the Parliament was supposed to sit with closed doors. No official publication of its debates was provided for, and no other was allowed.¹ The brief sketches which found their way into print were usually disguised under the garb of discussions in a fictitious parliament, held in a foreign country. Several times the Parliament resolved that any such publication, or any intermeddling by letter-writers, was a breach of their privileges, and should be punished accordingly on discovery of the offenders. For such a publication in 1747 the editor of the "Gentleman's Magazine" was brought to the bar of the House of Commons for reprimand, and only discharged on expressing his contrition. The general publication of parliamentary debates dates only from the American Revolution, and even then was still considered a technical breach of privilege.²

The American Colonies followed the practice of the parent country.³ Even the laws were not at first published for general

¹ In 1641, Sir Edward Deering was expelled and imprisoned for publishing a collection of his own speeches, and the book was ordered to be burned by the common hangman. See May's Const. Hist. c. 7.

² See May's Constitutional History, c. 7, 9, and 10, for a complete account of the struggle between the government and the press, resulting at last in the complete enfranchisement and protection of the latter in the publication of all matters of public interest, and in the discussion of public affairs. Freedom to report proceedings and debates was due at last to Wilkes, who, worthless as he was, proved a great public benefactor in his obstinate defence of liberty of the press and security from arbitrary search and arrest. A fair publication of a debate is now held to be privileged; and comments on public legislative proceedings are not actionable, so long as a jury shall think them honest and made in a fair spirit, and such as are justified by the circumstances. Wasen v. Walter, Law Rep. 4 Q. B. 72.

³ The General Court of Massachusetts "appointed two persons, in October, 1692, licensers of the press, and prohibited the publishing any books or papers which should not be supervised by them; and in 1698 the supervisors having allowed of the printing 'Thomas à Kempis de Imitatione Christi,' the court interposed, 'it being wrote by a popish minister, and containing some things less safe to be infused among the people,' and therefore they commended to the licensers a more full revision, and ordered the press to stop in the mean time." 1 Hutchinson's Mass circulation, and it seemed to be thought desirable by the magistrates to keep the people in ignorance of the precise boundary between that which was lawful and that which was prohibited, as more likely to make them avoid all doubtful actions. The magistrates of Massachusetts, when compelled by public opinion to suffer the publication of general laws in 1649, permitted it under protest, as a hazardous experiment. For publishing the laws of one session in Virginia, in 1682, the printer was arrested and put under bonds until the king's pleasure could be known, and the king's pleasure was declared that no printing should be allowed in the Colony.¹ There were not wanting instances of the public burning of books, as offenders against good order. Such was the fate of Elliot's book in defence of unmixed principles of popular freedom,² and Calef's book against Cotton Mather, which was given to the flames at Cambridge.³ A single printing-press was introduced into the Colony so early as 1639;⁴ but the publication even of State documents did not become free until 1719, when, after a quarrel between Governor Shute and the House, he directed that body not to print one of their remonstrances, and, on their disobeying, sought in vain to procure the punishment of their printer.⁵ When Dongan was sent out as Governor of New York in 1683, he was expressly instructed to suffer no printing,⁶ and that Colony obtained its first press in 1692, through a Philadelphia printer being driven thence for publishing an address from a Quaker, in which he accused his brethren in office of being inconsistent with their principles in exercising political authority.⁷ So late as 1671, Governor Berkeley of Virginia expressed his thankfulness that neither free schools nor printing were introduced in the Colony, and his trust that these breeders of disobedience, heresy, and sects, would long be unknown.⁸

The public bodies of the united nation did not at once invite publicity to their deliberations. The Constitutional Convention of 1787 sat with closed doors, and although imperfect reports

237, 2d ed. See 1 Tyler, Hist. of Am. Literature, 112, 113. A license is given in Mass. Hist. Col. 3d Ser. vol. 7, p. 171.

¹ 1 Hildreth, History of the United States, 561.

² 1 Hutchinson's Mass. (2d ed.) 211; 2 Bancroft, 73; 1 Hildreth, 452; 2 Palfrey's New England, 511, 512.

³ 1 Bancroft, 97; 2 Hildreth, 166.

⁴ The press was actually brought over in 1638, but not set up until the following year, and nothing but the Freeman's Oath and an almanac printed until 1640. 1 Thomas, Hist. of Printing, 149; Mass. Hist. Col. 4th Ser. vol. 6, pp. 22, 276. There is a "Narrative of Newspapers in New England" in Mass. Hist. Col. 1st Ser. vol. 5, p. 208.

⁵ 2 Hildreth, 298.

⁶ 2 Hildreth, 77.

⁷ 2 Hildreth, 171.

⁸ 1 Hildreth, 528; 2 Hen. Stat. 517; 1 Tyler, Hist. of Am. Literature, 80; Wise's Seven Decades of the Union, 310.

of the debates have since been published, the injunction of secrecy upon its members was never removed. The Senate for a time followed this example, and the first open debate was had in 1793, on the occasion of the controversy over the right of Mr. Gallatin to a seat in that body.¹ The House of Representatives sat with open doors from the first, tolerating the presence of reporters,—over whose admission, however, the Speaker assumed control,—and refusing in 1796 the pittance of two thousand dollars for full publication of debates.

It must be evident from these historical facts that liberty of the press, as now understood and enjoyed, is of very recent origin;² and commentators seem to be agreed in the opinion that the term itself means only that liberty of publication without the previous permission of the government, which was obtained by the abolition of the censorship. In a strict sense, Mr. Hallam says, it consists merely in exemption from a licenser.³ A similar view is expressed by De Lolme. "Liberty of the press," he says, "consists in this: that neither courts of justice, nor any other judges whatever, are authorized to take notice of writings intended for the press, but are confined to those which are actually printed."⁴ Blackstone also adopts the same opinion,⁵ and it has been followed by American commentators of standard authority as embodying correctly the idea incorporated in the constitutional law of the country by the provisions in the American Bill of Rights.⁶

It is conceded on all sides that the common-law rules that subjected the libeller to responsibility for the private injury, or the public scandal or disorder occasioned by his conduct, are not abolished by the protection extended to the press in our constitutions. The words of Ch. J. Parker of Massachusetts on this subject have been frequently quoted, generally recognized as sound in principle, and accepted as authority. "Nor does our constitu-

¹ "This broke the spell of deliberations in secret conclave; and a few days afterwards, on the 20th of the same month, a general resolution was adopted by the Senate, that, after the end of the present annual session, its proceedings in its legislative capacity should be with open doors, unless in special cases which, in the judgment of the body, should require secrecy." Life of Madison, by River, Vol. III. p. 371.

The first legislative body in America to throw open its debates to the public was the General Court of Massachusetts, in 1786, on the motion of Otis. Tudor's Life of Otis, 252.

² It is mentioned neither in the English Petition of Rights nor in the Bill of Rights; of so little importance did it seem to those who were seeking to redress grievances in those days.

³ Hallam's Const. Hist. of England, c. 15.

⁴ De Lolme, Const. of England, 254.

⁵ 4 Bl. Com. 151.

⁶ Story on Const. § 1889; 2 Kent, 17 et seq.; Rawle on Const. c. 10.

tion or declaration of rights," he says, speaking of his own State, "abrogate the common law in this respect, as some have insisted. The sixteenth article declares that 'liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a State; it ought not therefore to be restrained in this Commonwealth.' The liberty of the press, not its licentiousness: this is the construction which a just regard to the other parts of that instrument, and to the wisdom of those who founded it, requires. In the eleventh article it is declared that 'every subject of the Commonwealth ought to find a certain remedy, by having recourse to the laws, for all injuries or wrongs which he may receive in his person, property, or character;' and thus the general declaration in the sixteenth article is qualified. Besides, it is well understood and received as a commentary on this provision for the liberty of the press, that it was intended to prevent all such previous restraints upon publications and has been practised by other governments, and in early times here, to stifle the efforts of patriots towards enlightening their fellow-subjects upon their rights and the duties of rulers. The liberty of the press was to be unrestrained, but he who used it was to be responsible in case of its abuse; like the right to keep firearms, which does not protect him who uses them for annoyance or destruction."¹

But while we concede that liberty of speech and of the press does not imply complete exemption from responsibility for every thing a citizen may say or publish, and complete immunity to ruin the reputation or business of others so far as falsehood and de- X traction may be able to accomplish that end, it is nevertheless believed that the mere exemption from previous restraints cannot be all that is secured by the constitutional provisions, inas- much as of words to be uttered orally there can be no previous prohibiting any public speech or address on Boston Common. Com. v. Davis, 162 Mass. 619, 39 N. E. 113, 26 L. R. A. 712, 44 Am. St. 389; aff. 167 U. S. 173, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731. Nor a statute against wrongful and wilful acts seriously endangering the public peace, and making such misdemeanors, and punishable as such. So held in People v. Most, 171 N. Y. 423, 64 N. E. 176. In which case Most was convicted of publishing an article advocating wholesale murder of government officials. An order to State officers not to engage in politics, and not to make public speeches, is void. Loethan v. Com., 79 Va. 196.] censorship, and the liberty of the press might be rendered a mockery and a delusion, and the phrase itself a byword, if, while every man was at liberty to publish what he pleased, the public authorities might nevertheless punish him for harmless publications.

¹ Commonwealth v. Blanding, 3 Pick. 304, 313. See charge of Chief Justice McKean, 5 Hildreth (Pa.), 166; Wharton's State Trials, 323; State v. Lehre, 2 Rep. Const. Court, 809; Respublica v. Dennie, 4 Yeates, 267, 2 Am. Dec. 402; Jones v. Townsend, 21 Fla. 431. [An enactment that "every person who shall sell, offer to sell, give, or lend any book, magazine, pamphlet, or paper devoted wholly or principally to the publication of criminal news, or pictures and stories of deeds of bloodshed, lust, or crime, shall be fined," does not infringe the liberty of speech or of the press. State v. McKee, 73 Conn. 18, 48 Atl. 409, 49 L. R. A. 542, 84 Am. St. 124. Nor does an ordinance

An examination of the controversies which have grown out of the repressive measures resorted to for the purpose of restraining the free expression of opinion will sufficiently indicate the purpose of the guaranties which have since been secured against such restraints in the future. Except so far as those guaranties relate to the mode of trial, and are designed to secure to every accused person the right to be judged by the opinion of a jury upon the criminality of his act, their purpose has evidently been to protect parties in the free publication of matters of public concern, to secure their right to a free discussion of public events and public measures, and to enable every citizen at any time to bring the government and any person in authority to the bar of public opinion by any just criticism upon their conduct in the exercise of the authority which the people have conferred upon them. To guard against repressive measures by the several departments of the government, by means of which persons in power might secure themselves and their favorites from just scrutiny and condemnation, was the general purpose; and there was no design or desire to modify the rules of the common law which protected private character from detraction and abuse, except so far as seemed necessary to secure to accused parties a fair trial. The evils to be prevented were not the censorship of the press merely, but any action of the government by means of which it might prevent such free and general discussion of public matters as seems absolutely essential to prepare the people for an intelligent exercise of their rights as citizens.

The constitutional liberty of speech and of the press, as we understand it, implies a right to freely utter and publish whatever the citizen may please, and to be protected against any responsibility for so doing, except so far as such publications, from their blasphemy, obscenity, or scandalous character, may be a public offence, or as by their falsehood and malice they may injuriously affect the standing, reputation, or pecuniary interests of individuals. (a) Or, to state the same thing in somewhat different words,

(a) [Statute may make it a crime to send an offensive dun or a letter threatening to publish the debtor as a "dead beat." State v. McCabe, 135 Mo. 450, 87 S. W. 123, 84 L. R. A. 127, 68 Am. St. 389. Upon constitutional freedom of speech and of press, see note in 32 L. R. A. 823. In Wallace v. Georgia C. & N. Ry. Co., 94 Ga. 732, 22 S. E. 579, it was held that this constitutional provision not only secured the we understand liberty of speech and of the press to imply not only liberty to publish, but complete immunity from legal censure and punishment for the publication, so long as it is not harmful in its character, when tested by such standards as the law affords. For these standards we must look to the common-law rules which were in force when the constitutional guaranties were established, and in reference to which they have been adopted.

At the common law an action would lie against any person publishing a false and malicious communication tending to disgrace or injure another. Falsehood, malice, and injury were the elements of the action; but as the law presumed innocence of crime or misconduct until the contrary was proved, the falsity of an injurious publication was presumed until its truth was averred and substantiated by the defendant; and if false, malice in the publication was also presumed unless the publication was privileged under rules to be hereafter stated. There were many cases, also, where the law presumed injury, and did not call upon the complaining party to make any other showing that he was damaged than such implication as arose from the character of the communication itself. One of these was where the words imputed a crime involving moral turpitude, and subjecting the guilty party to an infamous punishment;¹ and it was not important that the liberty to speak, but by implication the liberty to refrain from speaking, and applied the principle to a statute requiring employers to assign the reason for discharging an employee, holding such statute invalid.]

¹ Brooker v. Coffin, 5 Johns. 189, 4 Am. Dec. 337; Alexander v. Alexander, 6 Wend. 141; Young v. Mider, 3 Hill, 21; Davis v. Brown, 27 Ohio St. 326; Todd v. Rough, 10 S. & R. 18; Beck v. Stitzel, 21 Pa. St. 522; Stitzel v. Reynolds, 67 Pa. St. 54; Klumph v. Dunn, 66 Pa. St. 141; Shipp v. McGraw, 3 Murph. 463, 9 Am. Dec. 611; Hoag v. Hutch, 23 Conn. 555; Billings v. Wing, 7 Vt. 439; Harrington v. Miles, 11 Kan. 480, 15 Am. Rep. 355; Montgomery v. Deeley, 8 Wis. 739; Filber v. Daulterman, 26 Wis. 518; Perdue v. Burnett, Minor, 138; McCuen v. Latham, 17 N. J. 12; Gage v. Shelton, 3 Rich. 242; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 255; Wagaman v. Byers, 17 Md. 185; Candleberry v. Kelly, 26 Ga. 606; Burton v. Burton, 3 Greene (Iowa), 519; Simmons v. Holster, 13 Minn. 249; Soler v. Jenkins, 97 Ind. 430; Campbell v. Campbell, 54 Wis. 90, 11 N. W. 459; Lemons v. Wells, 73 Ky. 117; Brooks v. Harrison, 91 N. Y. 83; Bacon v. Mich. Centr. R. R. Co., 55 Mich. 224, 21 N. W. 824; Boogher v. Knapp, 76 Mo. 457. Words imputing a non-indictable offence are thus actionable. Webb v. Beavan, L. R. 11 Q. B. D. 609. A simple charge of drunkenness is not, though an ordinance punishes public indecent intoxication. Seery v. Viell, 16 R. I. 517, 17 Atl. 552. See Melvin v. Weiant, 26 Ohio St. 184; Pollock v. Hastings, 88 Ind. 248; Sterling v. Jugenheimer, 69 Iowa, 210, 28 N. W. 559; Christal v. Craig, 80 Mo. 367, for other illustrations of charges not actionable per se. If, however, the words, though seeming to charge a crime, are equivocal, and may be understood in an innocent sense, they will not be actionable without the proper averment to show the sense in which they were used; as, for instance, where one is charged with having sworn falsely; which may or may not be a crime. Gilman v. Lowell, 8 Wend. 373; Steele v. Biggs, 2 Har. & J. 364, 3 Am. Dec. 552; Brown v. Hanson, 53 Ga. 632; Cross v.

charge imported a crime already punished, or for which a prosecution was barred by limitation of time.¹ Another was where one was charged with contagious disease; the effect of the charge, if believed, being to exclude him from the society of his fellows.² Another was where the charge affected the party in his business, office, or means of livelihood, as where it was said of a postmaster that he would rob the mail;³ or of a trader, to whom credit is important, that he is insolvent;⁴ and the like. Still another was where any injurious charge holding a party up to public contempt, scorn, or ridicule was propagated by printing, writing, signs, burlesques, &c.⁵ And although it was formerly held that to charge a Angell, 14 Mich. 340; Bricker v. Potts, 12 Pa. St. 200; Casselman v. Winship, 8 Dak. 262, 10 N. W. 412. It is not necessary, however, that technical words be employed; if the necessary inference, taking the words together, is a charge of crime, it is sufficient. Morgan v. Livingston, 2 Rich. 573; True v. Plumley, 23 Me. 466; Curtis v. Curtis, 10 Bing. 477; Stroebel v. Whitney, 31 Minn. 384, 18 N. W. 38. Campbell v. Campbell, 54 Wis. 90, 11 N. W. 459; Rea v. Harrington, 58 Vt. 181, 2 Atl. 475. Compare Pollock v. Hastings, 88 Ind. 248; Fawcett v. Clark, 45 Md. 484. But to say of one "He has stolen my land" is not actionable per se, land not being the subject of larceny. Ogden v. Riley, 14 N. J. 180; Underhill v. Welton, 32 Vt. 40; Ayers v. Grider, 15 Ill. 37; Edgerly v. Swain, 32 N. H. 475; Traub v. Mays, 3 Dana, 138; Perry v. Man, 1 R. I. 263; Wright v. Lindsay, 20 A. a. 428; Cock v. Weatherby, 13 Mass. 344. See, as to charge of stealing fixtures, Trimble v. Foster, 67 Mo. 40.

¹ Carpenter v. Tarrant, Cas. temp. Hardw. 329; Smith v. Stewart, 5 Pa. St. 372; Halley v. Burgess, 9 Ala. 728; Van Ankin v. Westfall, 14 Johns. 233; Krebs v. Oliver, 12 Gray, 239; Baum v. Clause, 6 Hill, 169; Utley v. Campbell, 5 T. B. Morr. 396; Indianapolis Sun v. Horrell, 53 Ind. 527; Boegner v. Knapp, 8 Mo. App. 591; Leyman v. Latimer, L. R. 3 Ex. D. 652.

² Taylor v. Hall, 2 Stra. 1389; Carlisle v. Mariadoram, 2 T. R. 473; Watson v. McCarthy, 2 Kelly, 57; Nichols v. Guy, 2 Ind. 82; Irens v. Field, 9 R. I. 216; Kaucher v. Blinn, 21 Ohio, s. s. 62.

³ Craig v. Brown, 5 Blackf. 44. For other illustrations the following cases may be referred to: Gottshuet v. Hubachek, 26 Wis. 515; Robbins v. Treadway, 2 J. J. Marsh. 540; Hook v. Hackney, 18 S. & R. 385; Harris v. Terry, 98 N. C. 131, 3 S. E. 745; De Pew v. Robinson, 95 Ind. 109; Pratt v. Pioneer Press Co., 35 Minn. 251, 28 N. W. 798; Ludwig v. Cramer, 53 Wis. 193, 10 N. W. 81; Franklin v. Browne, 67 Ga. 272; Hartford v. State, 96 Ind. 451. See also Steketee v. Kimm, 48 Mich. 322, 12 N. W. 177; Singer v. Bender, 64 Wis. 169, 24 N. W. 903; Dooling v. Budget Pub. Co., 144 Mass. 258, 10 N. E. 809.

⁴ Brown v. Smith, 18 C. B. 596; Lindsey v. Smith, 7 Johns. 359; Mott v. Comstock, 7 Cow. 654; Lewis v. Hawley, 2 Day, 496; Nelson v. Borchenius, 52 Ill. 236; Orr v. Skoffield, 56 Me. 183; Weiss v. Whittemore, 28 Mich. 366; Newell v. How, 31 Minn. 235, 17 N. W. 383; Williams v. Smith, L. R. 22 Q. B. D. 134. [That blacklisting is sometimes libel, even when party blacklisted is in debt, see Weston v. Barnicoat, 175 Mass. 454, 56 N. E. 619, 49 L. R. A. 612; upon blacklisting as libel, see note to this case in L. R. A.]

⁵ Janson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748; Van Ness v. Hamilton, 19 Johns. 349; Clegg v. Laffer, 10 Bing. 250; Steele v. Southwick, 9 Johns. 214; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225; Massuere v. Dickens, 70 Wis. 83, 35 N. W. 349; State v. Smily, 37 Ohio St. 30; Stewart v. Swift Spec. Co., 76 Ga. 250; Johnson v. Com., — Pa. St. —, 14 Atl. 425; Bettner v. Holt, 70 Cal. 270, 11 Pac. 713; Smith v. Smith, 73 Mich. 445, 41 N. W. 429. For illustrations of charges held not within this rule, see Trimble v. Anderson, 79 Ala. 514; Allen v. Cape Fear, &c. Ry. Co., 100 N. C.

female verbally with want of chastity was not actionable without proof of special damage,¹ yet of late a disposition has been exhibited to break away from this rule in favor of one more just and sensible,² and the statutes of several of the States have either made adultery and incontinence punishable as crimes, whereby to charge them becomes actionable per se under the common-law rule, or else in express terms have declared such a charge actionable without proof of special damage.³

But in any other case a party complaining of a false, malicious, and disparaging communication might maintain an action therefor, on averment and proof of special damage;⁴ though the truth

897, 8 S. E. 105, and cases in Cooley on Torts. 242, note 4.

¹ Gaseign v. Ambler, 2 Ld. Raym. 1004; Graves v. Blanchet, 2 Salk. 696; Wibby v. Elston, 8 C. B. 142; Buye v. Gillespie, 2 Johns. 115, 3 Am. Dec. 404; Brooker v. Coffin, 5 Johns. 182, 4 Am. Dec. 337; Bradt v. Towsley, 13 Wend. 253; Dyer v. Morris, 4 Mo. 214; Stanfield v. Boyer, 6 H. & J. 245; Woodbury v. Thompson, 3 N. H. 194; Berry v. Carter, 4 Stew. & Port. 387, 24 Am. Dec. 732; Elliot v. Ailsbury, 2 Bibb, 473, 5 Am. Dec. 631; Linney v. Maton, 13 Tex. 419; Underhill v. Welton, 32 Vt. 40; Castleberry v. Kelly, 26 Ga. 606.

² See the cases of Sexton v. Todd, Wright, 317; Wilson v. Runyan, Wright, 651; Malone v. Stewart, 15 Ohio, 319; Barnett v. Ward, 36 Ohio St. 107, 38 Am. Rep. 561; Klein v. Bauman, 63 Wis. 244; Moherly v. Preston, 8 Mo. 462; Sidgreaves v. Myatt, 22 Ala. 617; Terry v. Bright, 4 Md. 430; Spencer v. McMasters, 16 Ill. 105.

³ See Friskie v. Fowler, 2 Conn. 707; Page v. Merwin, 64 Conn. 429, 8 Atl. 675; Miller v. Parish, 8 Pick. 384; Robbins v. Fletcher, 191 Mass. 115; Pledger v. Hathcock, 1 Ga. 550; Smally v. Anderson, 2 T. B. Monr. 53, 15 Am. Dec. 121; Williams v. Bryant, 4 Ala. 44; Dailey v. Reynolds, 4 Greene (Iowa), 354; Symonds v. Carter, 32 N. H. 458; McBrayer v. Hall, 4 Ired. 136; Morris v. Barkley, 1 Lit. 64; Phillips v. Wiley, 2 Lit. 155; Watta v. Greenlee, 2 Dev. 115; Drummond v. Leslie, 5 Blackf. 453; Worth v. Butler, 7 Blackf. 251; Richardson v. Roberts, 23 Ga. 215; Burford v. Wible, 52 Pa. St. 95; Freeman v. Price, 2 Bailey, 115; Regnier v. Cabot, 7 Ill. 34;

Ranger v. Goodrich, 17 Wis. 78; Adams v. Rankin, 1 Duvall, 58; Downing v. Wilson, 36 Ala. 717; Cox v. Bunker Morris, 269; Smith v. Silence, 4 Iowa, 321; Truman v. Taylor, 4 Iowa, 424; Beardsley v. Bridgeman, 17 Iowa, 290; Patterson v. Wilkinson, 56 Me. 42; Mayer v. Schleichter, 29 Wis. 646; Kelly v. Flaherty, 16 R. I. 234, 14 Atl. 878; Reitan v. Goebel, 38 Minn. 151, 22 N. W. 291; Barnett v. Ward, 36 Ohio St. 107; Kedroviansky v. Niebaum, 70 Cal. 216, 11 Pac. 641. The injustice of the common-law rule is made prominent in those cases where it has been held that an allegation that, in consequence of the charge, the plaintiff had fallen into disgrace, contempt, and infamy, and lost her credit, reputation, and peace of mind (Woodbury v. Thompson, 3 N. H. 194), and that she is shunned by her neighbors (Beach v. Ranney, 2 Hill, 810), was not a sufficient allegation of special damage to support the action. In the following States, and perhaps some others, to impute unchastity to a female is actionable per se by statute: Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

⁴ Kelley v. Partington, 3 Nev. & M. 117; Steele v. Southwick, 9 Johns. 214; Ballock v. Miller, 2 Barb. 630; Powers v. Dubois, 17 Wend. 63; Weed v. Foster, 11 Barb. 203; Cooper v. Greeley, 1 Denio, 847; Stone v. Cooper, 2 Denio, 293; Wilson v. Cottman, 65 Md. 190, 3 Atl. 890. The damage, however, must be of a pecuniary character. Beach v. Ranney, 2 Hill, 809. But very slight damage has been held sufficient to support considerable recoveries. Williams v. Hill, 19 Wend. 305; Bradt v. Towsley, 13 Wend.

of the charge, if pleaded and established, was generally a complete defence.¹

In those cases in which the injurious charge was propagated by printing, writing, signs, burlesques, &c., there might also be a criminal prosecution, as well as a suit for private damages. The criminal prosecution was based upon the idea that the tendency of such publications was to excite to a breach of the public peace;² and it might be supported, in cases where the injurious publication related to whole classes or communities of people, without singling out any single individual so as to entitle him to a private remedy.³ On similar grounds to publish injurious

253; Olmsted v. Miller, 1 Wend. 506; Moore v. Meagher, 1 Taunt. 39; Knight v. Gibbs, 1 Ad. & El. 43.

¹ See Heard on Libel and Slander, § 131; Townsend on Libel and Slander, § 74; Bourland v. Ellison, 8 Gratt. 27; Scott v. McKinnish, 15 Ala. 632; Porter v. Watkins, 50 Pa. St. 484; Hutchinson v. Wheeler, 35 Vt. 359; Thomas v. Dunaway, 39 Ill. 373; Huson v. Dale, 19 Mich. 17; Jarnigan v. Fleming, 43 Miss. 710; Knight v. Foster, 39 N. H. 576. [Upon truth as a defence, see note to 2 L. R. A. 602.]

² Commonwealth v. Clap, 4 Mass. 168, 3 Am. Dec. 212. State v. Lehre, 2 Brev. 446, 4 Am. Dec. 565.

³ In Palmer v. Concord, 48 N. H. 311, suit was brought against a town for the destruction of a printing press by a mob. The defence was, that plaintiff had caused the mob by libellous articles published in his paper reflecting upon the army. Sabb, J., says: "The first of these articles charges the United States forces in Virginia with cowardice, and holds them up as objects of ridicule therefore. The fourth article calls the army a 'mob;' and although the charges of murder and robbery may perhaps be considered as limited in their application, the charge of cowardice against the whole army is repeated. The fifth article in effect charges these bodies of soldiers who passed through, or occupied, Hampton, Martinsburg, Fairfax, or Germantown, with improper treatment of persons of all ages and sexes, in each of these places. If such charges had been made against a single soldier named in the articles, they would prima facie have constituted a libel. The tendency to expose him to contempt or ridicule could not be doubted, and the tendency to injure his professional reputation would be equally apparent. A soldier's character for courage or discipline is as essential to his good standing as a merchant's reputation for honesty, or a physician's reputation as to professional learning or skill, would be in their respective callings. And by military law, to which the soldier is amenable, we suppose cowardice would be regarded as a crime punishable by severe penalties. As these charges were made against a body of men, without specifying individuals, it may be that no individual soldier could have maintained a private action therefor. But the question whether the publication might not afford ground for a public prosecution is entirely different. Civil suits for libel are maintainable only on the ground that the plaintiff has individually suffered damage. Indictments for libel are sustained principally because the publication of a libel tends to a breach of the peace, and thus to the disturbance of society at large. It is obvious that a libellous attack on a body of men, though no individuals be pointed out, may tend as much, or more, to create public disturbances as an attack on one individual; and a doubt has been suggested whether 'the fact of numbers defamed does not add to the enormity of the act.' See 2 Bishop on Criminal Law (3d ed.), § 922; Holt on Libel, 246-247; Russell on Crimes (1st Am. ed.), 305-332. In Sumner v. Buel, 12 Johns. 475, where a majority of the court held that a civil action could not be maintained by an officer of a regiment, for a publication reflecting on the officers generally, unless there was an averment of special damage, charges against a foreign prince or ruler was also held punishable as a public offence, because tending to embroil the two nations, and to disturb the peace of the world.¹ These common-law rules are wholesome, and are still in force.

We are not so much concerned, however, with the general rules pertaining to the punishment of injurious publications, as with those special cases where, for some reason of general public policy, the publication is claimed to be privileged, and where, consequently, it may be supposed to be within the constitutional protection. It has always been held, notwithstanding the general rule that malice is to be inferred from a false and injurious publication, that there were some cases to which the presumption would not apply. These are the cases which are said to be privileged. The term "privileged" is applied to two classes of communications: First, those which, for reasons of State policy, the law will not suffer to be the foundation of a civil action; and, second, those in which the circumstances are held to rebut the Thompson, Ch. J., said, p. 478: 'The offender in such case does not go without punishment. The law has provided a fit and proper remedy, by indictment; and the generality and extent of such libels make them more peculiarly public offences.' In Ryckman v. Delavan, 25 Wend. 186, Walworth, Chancellor. — who held, in opposition to the majority of the Court of Errors, that the plaintiff could not maintain a civil suit, because the publication reflected upon a class of individuals, and not upon the plaintiff personally, — said, pp. 195-196: 'There are many cases in the books where the writers and publishers of defamatory charges, reflecting upon the conduct of particular classes or bodies of individuals, have been proceeded against by indictment or information, although no particular one was named or designated therein to whom the charge had a personal application. All those cases, however, whether the libel is upon an organized body of men, as a legislature, a court of justice, a church, or a company of soldiers, or upon a particular class of individuals, proceed upon the ground that the charge is a misdemeanor, although it has no particular personal application to the individual of the body or class libelled; because it tends to excite the angry passions of the community either in favor of or against the body or class in reference to the conduct of which the charge is made, or because it tends to impair the confidence of the people in their government or in the administrations of its laws.' In the course of his opinion the chancellor mentions a Scotch case (Shearlock v. Beardsworth, 1 Murray's Report of Jury Cases) where a civil suit was maintained, which was 'brought by a lieutenant-colonel, in behalf of his whole regiment, for defamation, in calling them a regiment of cowards and blackguards.' In Rex v. Hector Campbell, King's Bench, Hil. Term, 1808 (cited in Holt on Libel, 246, 250), an information was granted for a libel on the College of Physicians; and the respondent was convicted and sentenced. Cases may be supposed where publications, though of a defamatory nature, have such a wide and general application that, in all probability, a breach of the peace would not be caused thereby; but it does not seem to us that the present publication belongs to that class.

"Our conclusion is that the jury should have been instructed that the first, fourth, and fifth articles were per se libellous; and that the publication of those articles must be regarded as 'illegal conduct,' unless justified or excused by facts sufficient to constitute a defence to an indictment for libel."

¹ 27 State Trials, 627; 2 May, Const. History of England, c. 9.

legal inference of malice, and to throw upon the plaintiff the burden of offering some evidence of its existence beyond the mere falsity of the charge.¹ The first class is absolutely privileged; it embraces but few cases, which for the most part concern the administration of the government in some of its branches (a); the second is conditionally privileged, and the cases falling within it are more numerous. They are generally cases in which a party has a duty to discharge which requires that he should be allowed to speak freely and fully that which he believes; or where he is himself directly interested in the subject-matter of the communication, and makes it with a view to the protection or advancement of his own interest, or where he is communicating confidentially with a person interested in the communication, and by way of advice or admonition.² Many such cases suggest themselves which are purely of private concern: such as answers to inquiries into the character or conduct of one formerly employed by the person to whom the inquiry is addressed, and of whom the information is sought with a view to guiding the inquirer in his own action in

¹ Lewis v. Chapman, 16 N. Y. 339, 373, per Seiden, J.; Townsend on Libel and Slander, § 200. "It properly signifies this and nothing more: that the excepted instances shall so far change the ordinary rule with respect to slanderous or libelous matter as to remove the regular and usual presumption of malice, and to make it incumbent on the party complaining to show malice." Davis, J., in White v. Nichols, 3 Haw. 280, 287. And see Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. 343; McIntyre v. McBean, 13 Q. B. (Ontario) 534.

² When a communication is made in confidence, either by or to a person interested in the communication, supposing it to be true, or by way of admonition or advice, it seems to be a general rule that malice (i. e. express malice) is essential to the maintenance of an action." 1 Starkie on Slander 321. See Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344; Somersville v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 583; Wright v. Woodgate, 2 Cr. M. & R. 576; Whiteley v. Adams, 45 C. B. s. s. 392. A paper signed by a number of parties agreeing to join in the expense of prosecuting others, who were stated therein to have

"robbed and swindled" them, is privileged. Klinck v. Colby, 46 N. Y. 427, 7 Am. Rep. 300. The statement in a report of an incorporated society cautioning the public against trusting a person who had formerly been employed in collecting subscriptions for them, is privileged. Gasset v. Gilbert, 6 Gray, 94. But see Holliday v. Ont. Farmers, &c. Co., 1 Ont. App. 483. And the communication by a merchant to a subsequent employer of a clerk whom he had recommended, of facts which caused him to change his opinion, is privileged. Fowles v. Bowen, 30 N. Y. 20. And so is a communication made in good faith by a person employed in a confidential relation. Atwell v. Mackintosh, 120 Mass. 177. So is one charging a child with stealing, made in answer to inquiry of the mother. Long v. Peters, 47 Iowa, 230. So is a statement of an investigating officer as to the worthiness of a person, to one interested in aiding him. Waller v. Loch, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 610. So is a statement by a vendor's servant to the vendee of cattle, of the former's fraud. Mott v. Dawson, 46 Iowa, 533.

(a) [Publication by a town of a report made to it by its investigating committee, upon manner in which a contract with the town has been performed, is privileged. Howland v. Maynard, 159 Mass. 434, 21 L. R. A. 600, 34 N. E. 515.]

determining upon employing the same person;¹ answers to inquiries by one tradesman of another as to the solvency of a person whom the inquirer has been desired to trust;² answers by a creditor to inquiries regarding the conduct and dealings of his debtor, made by one who had become surety for the debt;³ communications from an agent to his principal, reflecting injuriously upon the conduct of a third person in a matter connected with the agency;⁴ communications to a near relative respecting the character of a person with whom the relative is in negotiation for marriage;⁵ and as many more like cases as would fall within the same reasons.⁶ The rules of law applicable to these cases are

¹ Pattison v. Jones, 8 B. & C. 578; Elam v. Badger, 23 Ill. 498; Noonan v. Orton, 32 Wis. 106; Hatch v. Lane, 105 Mass. 374; Bradley v. Heath, 12 Pick. 103. Compare Fryer v. Kionersley, 15 C. B. n. s. 422. If the employer states his honest suspicion of the employee's guilt, the fact that he does not fully believe him guilty will not remove the privilege of the occasion. Billings v. Fairbanks, 130 Mass. 66, 20 N. E. 544.

² Smith v. Thomas, 2 Bing. N. C. 372; Storey v. Challands, 8 C. & P. 234. A statement made in honest belief to an inquirer as to credit of a person who has referred him to the speaker, is privileged. Fahr v. Hayes, 50 N. J. L. 275, 13 Atl. 261. But the reports of a mercantile agency, published and distributed to its customers without regard to their special interest in any particular case, are not privileged. Taylor v. Church, 8 N. Y. 452; Sunderlin v. Bradstreet, 40 N. Y. 188, 7 Am. Rep. 322; Beardsley v. Tappan, 5 Blatch. 497; King v. Patterson, 49 N. J. L. 417, 9 Atl. 705; Bradstreet Co. v. Gill, 72 Tex. 115, 9 S. W. 753. But reports in response to inquiries from those who have such special interest are privileged. Ormsby v. Douglass, 37 N. Y. 477; Trussell v. Scarlett, 18 Fed. Rep. 214; Erber v. Dun, 12 Fed. Rep. 525. See also State v. Lonsdale, 48 Wis. 348, 4 N. W. 390; Locke v. Bradstreet Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 771; Woodruff v. Bradstreet Co., 110 N. Y. 217, 22 N. E. 354; Johnson v. Bradstreet Co., 77 Ga. 172.

³ Dunman v. Bigg, 1 Campb. 269, note; White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 266.

⁴ Washburn v. Cooke, 3 Denio, 110. See Easley v. Morse, 9 Ala. 265.

⁵ Todd v. Hawkins, 8 C. & P. 88. But there is no protection to such a communication from a stranger. Joannes v. Bennett, 6 Allen, 170. Nor from a friend, unless it is in reply to a request for it. Byam v. Collins, 111 N. Y. 143, 19 N. E. 75.

⁶ As to whether a stranger volunteering to give information injurious to another, to one interested in the knowledge, is privileged in so doing, see Coxhead v. Richards, 2 M. G. & S. 569; and Bennett v. Deacon, 2 M. G. & S. 528. A letter volunteering to an employer information of his servant's untrustworthiness is not privileged when sent to effect the writer's purpose, and not in good faith to protect the employer. Over v. Schiffing, 102 Ind. 191, 20 N. E. 91. Where a confidential relation of any description exists between the parties, the communication is privileged; as where the tenant of a nobleman had written to inform him of his gamekeeper's neglect of duty. Cockagne v. Hodgkinson, 5 C. & P. 543. Where a son-in-law wrote to warn his mother-in-law of the bad character of a man she was about to marry. Todd v. Hawkins, 8 C. & P. 88. Where a banker communicated with his correspondent concerning a note sent to him for collection; the court saying that "all that is necessary to entitle such communications to be regarded as privileged is, that the relation of the parties should be such as to afford reasonable ground for supposing an innocent motive for giving the information, and to deprive the act of an appearance of officious intermeddling with the affairs of others." Lewis v. Chapman, 10 N. Y. 369, 375. Where one communicated to an employer his suspicions of dishonest conduct in a servant towards himself.

very well settled, and are not likely to be changed with a view to greater stringency.¹

Libels upon the Government.

At the common law it was indictable to publish anything against the constitution of the country, or the established system of government. The basis of such a prosecution was the tendency of publications of this character to excite disaffection with the government, and thus induce a revolutionary spirit. The law always, however, allowed a calm and temperate discussion of public events and measures, and recognized in every man a right to give every public matter a candid, full, and free discussion. It was only when a publication went beyond this, and tended to excite tumult, that it became criminal.² It cannot be doubted, however, that the common-law rules on this subject were administered in many cases with great harshness, and that the courts, in the interest of repression and at the instigation of the government, often extended them to cases not within their reasons. This was especially true during the long and bloody struggle with France, at the close of the last and beginning of the present century, and for a few subsequent years, until a rising public discontent with political prosecutions began to lead to acquittals, and finally to abandonment of all such attempts to restrain the free expression of sentiments on public affairs. Such prosecutions have now altogether ceased in England. Like the censorship of the press, they have fallen out of the British constitutional system. "When the press errs, it is by the press itself that its errors are left to be corrected. Repression has ceased to be the policy of rulers, and statesmen have at length fully realized the wise maxim of Lord Bacon, that 'the punishing of wits enhances their authority, and a forbidden writing is thought to be a certain

Amann v. Damm, 8 C. B. N. S. 597. Where a tradesman published in a newspaper that his servant had left his employ, and taken upon himself to collect the tradesman's bills. Hatch v. Lane, 105 Mass. 374. Compare Lawler v. Earle, 5 Allen, 22. [A publication by the officers of a church through their church paper, made after inquiry, that their pastor is unworthy of his position, and is insubordinate and unworthy of confidence, where such publication is made in good faith and without malice, is privileged. Relgate v. Roush, 61 Kan. 480, 69 Pac. 1366, 48 L. R. A. 236.]

¹ See further, Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344; Shipley v. Todhunter, 7 C. & P. 680; Lawler v. Earle, 5 Allen, 22; Grimes v. Coyle, 6 B. Monr. 361; Rector v. Smith, 11 Iowa, 302; Goslin v. Cannon, 1 Harr. 3; Joannes v. Bennett, 5 Allen, 169; State v. Burnham, 9 N. H. 34; Campbell v. Bannister, 70 Ky. 205; Beeler v. Jackson, 64 Md. 589, 2 Atl. 916; Bellings v. Fairbanks, 136 Mass. 177; Bacon v. Mich. Centr. R. R. Co., 66 Mich. 166, 33 N. W. 181.

² Regina v. Collins, 9 C. & P. 456, per Littledale, J. See the proceedings against Thomas Paine, 27 State Trials, 357.

spark of truth that flies up in the faces of them that seek to tread it out.'"¹

We shall venture to express a doubt if the common-law principles on this subject can be considered as having been practically adopted in the American States. It is certain that no prosecutions could now be maintained in the United States courts for libels on the general government, since those courts have no common-law jurisdiction,² and there is now no statute, and never was except during the brief existence of the Sedition Law, which assumed to confer any such power.

The Sedition Law was passed during the administration of the elder Adams, when the fabric of government was still new and untried, and when many men seemed to think that the breath of heated party discussions might tumble it about their heads. Its constitutionality was always disputed by a large party, and its impolicy was beyond question. It had a direct tendency to produce the very state of things it sought to repress; the prosecutions under it were instrumental, among other things, in the final overthrow and destruction of the party by which it was adopted, and it is impossible to conceive, at the present time, of any such state of things as would be likely to bring about its re-enactment, or the passage of any similar repressive statute.³

When it is among the fundamental principles of the government that the people frame their own constitution, and that in doing so they reserve to themselves the power to amend it from time to time, as the public sentiment may change, it is difficult to conceive of any sound principle on which prosecutions for libels on the system of government can be based, except when they are made in furtherance of conspiracy with the evident intent and purpose to excite rebellion and civil war.⁴ It is very easy to lay down a rule for the discussion of constitutional questions; that they are privileged, if conducted with calmness and temperance, and that they are not indictable unless they go beyond the bounds of fair discussion. But what is calmness and temperance, and what is fair in the discussion of supposed evils in the government? And if something is to be allowed "for a

¹ May, Constitutional History, c. 10.

² United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32. See ante, p. 46, and cases cited in note.

³ For prosecutions under this law, see Lyon's Case, Wharton's State Trials, 333; Cooper's Case, Wharton's State Trials, 659; Haswell's Case, Wharton's State Trials, 664; Callendar's Case, Wharton's

State Trials, 688. And see 2 Randall, Life of Jefferson, 417-421; 5 H. Areth, History of United States, 247, 305.

⁴ The author of the Life and Times of Warren very truly remarks that "the common-law offence of libelling a government is ignored in constitutional systems, as inconsistent with the genius of free institutions." P. 47.

little feeling in men's minds,"¹ how great shall be the allowance? The heat of the discussion will generally be in proportion to the magnitude of the evil as it appears to the party discussing it; must the question whether he has exceeded due bounds or not be tried by judge and jury, who may sit under different circumstances from those under which he has spoken, or at least after the heat of the occasion has passed away, and who, feeling none of the excitement themselves, may think it unreasonable that any one else should ever have felt it? The dangerous character of such prosecutions would be the more glaring if aimed at those classes who, not being admitted to a share in the government, attacked the constitution in the point which excluded them. Sharp criticism, ridicule, and the exhibition of such feeling as a sense of injustice engenders, are to be expected from any discussion in these cases; but when the very classes who have established the exclusion as proper and reasonable are to try as judges and jurors the assaults made upon it, they will be very likely to enter upon the examination with a preconceived notion that such assaults upon their reasonable regulations must necessarily be unreasonable. If any such principle of repression should ever be recognized in the common law of America, it might reasonably be anticipated that in times of high party excitement it would lead to prosecutions by the party in power, to bolster up wrongs and sustain abuses and oppressions by crushing adverse criticism and discussion. The evil, indeed, could not be of long continuance; for, judging from experience, the reaction would be speedy, thorough, and effectual; but it would be no less a serious evil while it lasted, the direct tendency of which would be to excite discontent and to breed a rebellious spirit. Repression of full and free discussion is dangerous in any government resting upon the will of the people. The people cannot fail to believe that they are deprived of rights, and will be certain to become discontented, when their discussion of public measures is sought to be circumscribed by the judgment of others upon their temperance or fairness. They must be left at liberty to speak with the freedom which the magnitude of the supposed wrongs appears in their minds to demand; and if they exceed all the proper bounds of moderation, the consolation must be, that the evil likely to spring from the violent discussion will probably be less, and its correction by public sentiment more speedy, than if the terrors of the law were brought to bear to prevent the discussion.

The English common-law rule which made libels on the constitution or the government indictable, as it was administered by the courts, seems to us unsuited to the condition and circumstances of the people of America, and therefore never to have been adopted in the several States. [If we are correct in this, it would not be in the power of the State legislatures to pass laws which should make mere criticism of the constitution or of the measures of government a crime, however sharp, unreasonable, and intemperate it might be. The constitutional freedom of speech and of the press must mean a freedom as broad as existed when the constitution which guarantees it was adopted, and it would not be in the power of the legislature to restrict it, unless it might be in those cases of publications injurious to private character, or public morals or safety, which come strictly within the reasons of civil or criminal liability at the common law, but in which, nevertheless, the common law as we have adopted it failed to provide a remedy. It certainly could not be said that freedom of speech was violated by a law which should make imputing the want of chastity to a female actionable without proof of special damage; for the charge is one of grievous wrong, without any reason in public policy demanding protection to the communication; and the case is strictly analogous to many other cases where the common law made the party responsible for his false accusations. The constitutional provisions do not prevent the modification of the common-law rules of liability for libels and slanders, but they would not permit bringing new cases within those rules when they do not rest upon the same or similar reasons.¹]

¹ Regina v. Collins, 3 C. & P. 466, 469, per Littledale, J.

¹ In Respublica v. Derric, 4 Yeates, 267, 2 Am. Dec. 402, the defendant was indicted in 1805 for publishing the following in a public newspaper: "A democracy is scarcely tolerated at any period of national history. Its omens are always sinister, and its powers are unpropitious. With all the lights of experience blazing before our eyes, it is impossible not to discover the futility of this form of government. It was weak and wicked at Athens, it was bad in Sparta and worse in Rome. It has been tried in France, and terminated in despotism. It was tried in England, and rejected with the utmost loathing and abhorrence. It is on its trial here, and its issue will be civil war, desolation, and anarchy. No wise man but discerns its imperfections, no good man but shudders at its miseries, no honest man but proclaims its fraud, and no brave man but draws his sword against its force. The institution of a scheme of polity so radically contemptible and vicious is a memorable example of what the villany of some men can devise, the folly of others receive, and both establish in spite of reason, reflection, and sensation." Judge Yeates charged the jury, among other things, as follows: "The seventh section of the ninth article of the constitution of the State must be our guide upon this occasion; it forms the solemn compact between the people and the three branches of the government, — the legislative, executive, and judicial powers. Neither of them can exceed the limits prescribed to them respectively. To this exposition of the public will every branch of the common law and of our municipal acts of assembly must conform; and if incompatible therewith, they must yield and give way. Judicial decisions cannot weigh against it when repugnant thereto. It runs thus: 'The printing-presses shall be free to every person who under-

Criticism upon Officers and Candidates for Office.

There are certain cases where criticism upon public officers, their actions, character, and motives, is not only recognized as takes to examine the proceedings of the legislature, or any branch of the government; and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man; and every citizen may freely speak, write, and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. In prosecutions for the publication of papers, investigating the official conduct of officers or men in a public capacity, or where the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and in all indictments for libels, the jury shall have a right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court, as in other cases.' Thus it is evident that legislative acts, or of any branch of the government, are open to public discussion; and every citizen may freely speak, write, or print on any subject, but is accountable for the abuse of that privilege. There shall be no licensers of the press. Publish as you please in the first instance, without control; but you are answerable both to the community and the individual if you proceed to unwarrantable lengths. No alteration is hereby made in the law as to private men affected by injurious publications, unless the discussion be proper for public information. But 'if one uses the weapon of truth wantonly for disturbing the peace of families, he is guilty of a libel.' Per General Hamilton, in Croswell's Trial, p. 70. The matter published is not proper for public information. The common weal is not interested in such a communication, except to suppress it.

'What is the meaning of the words "being responsible for the abuse of that liberty"? if the jury are interdicted from deciding on the case? Who else can constitutionally decide on it? The expressions relate to and pervade every part of the sentence. The objection that the determinations of juries may vary at different times, arising from their different political opinions, proves too much.

The same matter may be objected against them when party spirit runs high, in other criminal prosecutions. But we have no other constitutional mode of decision pointed out to us, and we are bound to use the method described.

"It is no infraction of the law to publish temperate investigations of the nature and forms of government. The day is long past since Algernon Sidney's celebrated treatise on government, cited on this trial, was considered as a treasonable libel. The enlightened advocates of representative republican government pride themselves in the reflection that the more deeply their system is examined, the more fully will the judgments of honest men be satisfied that it is the most conducive to the safety and happiness of a free people. Such matters are 'proper for public information.' But there is a marked and evident distinction between such publications and those which are plainly accompanied with a criminal intent, deliberately designed to unloosen the social band of union, totally to unhinge the minds of the citizens, and to produce popular discontent with the exercise of power by the known constituted authorities. These latter writings are subversive of all government and good order. 'The liberty of the press consists in publishing the truth, from good motives and for justifiable ends, though it reflects on government or on magistrates.' Per General Hamilton, in Croswell's Trial, pp. 63, 64. It disseminates political knowledge, and, by adding to the common stock of freedom, gives a just confidence to every individual. But the malicious publications which I have reprobated infect insidiously the public mind with a subtle poison, and produce the most mischievous and alarming consequences by their tendency to anarchy, sedition, and civil war. We cannot, consistently with our official duty, declare such conduct punishable. We believe that it is not justified by the words or meaning of our constitution. It is true it may not be easy in every instance to draw the exact distinguishing legitimate, but large latitude and great freedom of expression are permitted, so long as good faith inspires the communication. There are cases where it is clearly the duty of every one to speak freely what he may have to say concerning public officers, or those who may present themselves for public positions. Through the ballot-box the electors approve or condemn those who ask their suffrages; and if they condemn, though upon grounds the most unjust or frivolous, the law affords no redress. Some officers, however, are not chosen by the people directly, but designated through some other mode of appointment. But the public have a right to be heard on the question of their selection; and they have the right, for such reasons as seem to their minds sufficient, to ask for their dismissal afterwards. They have also the right to complain of official conduct affecting themselves, and line. To the jury it peculiarly belongs to decide on the intent and object of the writing. It is their duty to judge candidly and fairly, leaning to the favorable side when the criminal intent is not clearly and evidently ascertained.

"It remains, therefore, under our most careful consideration of the ninth article of the Constitution, for the jury to divest themselves of all political prejudices (if any such they have), and dispassionately to examine the publication which is the ground of the present prosecution. They must decide on their oaths, as they will answer to God and their country, whether the defendant, as a factious and seditious person, with the criminal intentions imputed to him, in order to accomplish the object stated in the indictment, did make and publish the writing in question. Should they find the charges laid against them in the indictment to be well founded, they are bound to find him guilty. They must judge for themselves on the plain import of the words, without any forced or strained construction of the meaning of the author or editor, and determine on the correctness of the innuendoes. To every word they will assign its natural sense, but will collect the true intention from the context, the whole piece. They will accurately weigh the probabilities of the charge against a literary man. Consequences they will wholly disregard, but firmly discharge their duty. Representative republican governments stand on immovable bases, which cannot be shaken by theoretical systems. Yet if the con-sciences of the jury shall be clearly satisfied that the publication was seditiously, maliciously, and wilfully aimed at the independence of the United States, the Constitution thereof, or of this State, they should convict the defendant. If, on the other hand, the production was honestly meant to inform the public mind, and warn them against supposed dangers in society, though the subject may have been treated erroneously, or that the censures on democracy were bestowed on pure unmixed democracy, where the people en masse execute the sovereign power without the medium of their representatives (agreeably to our forms of government), as have occurred at different times in Athens, Sparta, Rome, France, and England, then, however the judgments of the jury may incline them to think individually, they should acquit the defendant. In the first instance the act would be criminal; in the last it would be innocent. If the jury should doubt of the criminal intention, then also the law pronounces that he should be acquitted. 4 Burr. 2552, per Lord Mansfield." Verdict, not guilty. The fate of this prosecution was the same that would attend any of a similar character in this country, admitting its law to be sound, except possibly in cases of violent excitement, and when a jury could be made to believe that the defendant contemplated and was laboring to produce a change of government, not by constitutional means, but by rebellion and civil war.

to petition for a redress of grievances. A principal purpose is perpetuating and guarding the right of petition is to insure to the public the privilege of being heard in these and the like cases.

In New York a party was prosecuted for a libel contained in a petition signed by him and a number of other citizens of his county, and presented to the council of appointment, praying for the removal of the plaintiff from the office of district attorney of the county, which, the petition charged, he was prostituting to private purposes. The defendant did not justify the truth of this allegation, and the plaintiff had judgment. On error, the sole question was, whether the communication was to be regarded as privileged, that character having been denied to it by the court below. The prevailing opinion in the court of review characterized this as "a decision which violates the most sacred and unquestionable rights of free citizens; rights essential to the very existence of a free government; rights necessarily connected with the relations of constituent and representative; the right of petitioning for a redress of grievances, and the right of remonstrating to the competent authority against the abuse of official functions." The privilege of the petitioners was fully asserted and maintained, and it was decided that to support an action for libel upon the petition, the plaintiff must assume the burden of showing that it was malicious and groundless, and presented for the purpose of injuring his character.¹ Such a petition, it was said, although containing false and injurious aspersions, did not prima facie carry with it the presumption of malice.² A similar ruling was made by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, where a party was prosecuted for charges against a justice of the peace, contained in a deposition made to be presented to the governor.³ A subsequent New York case enlarged this rule somewhat, and required of the plaintiff, in order to sustain his action in any such case, to prove not only malice in the defendant, but also a want of probable cause for believing the injurious charges which the petition contained. The action for libel, in such a case, it was said, was in the nature of an action for malicious prosecution; and in that action malice and want of probable cause are both

¹ Thorn v. Blanchard, 5 Johns. 508, 528, per Clinton, Senator.

² Ibid. p. 526, per L'Honnédieu, Senator. A petition to the town council for the removal of a constable charging unfitness and misconduct is privileged unless express malice is shown. Kent v. Borgartz, 45 R. I. 72, 22 Atl. 1023.

³ Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. 22; Fisk

v. Soniat, 83 La. Ann. 1400. A remonstrance against the employment of a school teacher is privileged. Van Arsdale v. Lavery, 69 Pa. St. 103. For similar cases of privilege, see Larkin v. Noonan, 19 Wis. 82; Whitney v. Allen, 62 Ill. 472; Reid v. DeLorne, 2 Brv. 75; Decker v. Gaylord, 35 Hun, 584.

necessary ingredients.¹ And it has also been held that in such a case the court will neither compel the officer to whom it was addressed to produce the petition in evidence, nor suffer its contents to be proved by parol.²

The rule of protection which these cases lay down is generally conceded to be sound, and it has been applied in many other cases coming within the same reasons.³ To make it applicable,

¹ Howard v. Thompson, 21 Wend. 319. See Harris v. Huntington, 2 Tyler, 129, 4 Am. Dec. 728; Bodwell v. Osgood, 8 Pick. 379, 15 Am. Dec. 225; State v. Burnham, 9 N. H. 34, 31 Am. Dec. 217; Hill v. Miles, 9 N. H. 9; Cook v. Hill, 8 Sandf. 341; Whitney v. Allen, 62 Ll. 472; Forbes v. Johnson, 11 B. Monr. 48. But in Banner Pub. Co. v. State, 10 Lea, 176, it is held that false charges against State officers are not justified by probable cause and absence of malice.

² Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. 23. See Hare v. Mellor, 3 Lev. 188.

³ In Kershaw v. Bailey, 1 Exch. 743, the defendant was prosecuted for slander in a communication made by him to the vestry, imputing perjury to the plaintiff as a reason why the vestry should not return him on the list of persons qualified to serve as constables. The defendant was a parishioner, and his communication was held privileged. In O'Donaghue v. McGovern, 23 Wend. 26, a communication from a member of a church to his bishop, respecting the character, moral conduct, and demeanor of a clergyman of the church, was placed upon the same footing of privilege. And see Rehl v. Delorme, 2 Brev. 76; Chapman v. Calder, 14 Pa. St. 365; Vickers v. Stoneman, 78 Mich. 419, 41 N. W. 495. The proceedings of a church tribunal are quasi-judicial, and those who participate in its proceedings in good faith and within the scope of its authority are privileged in law. Farnsworth v. Storrs, 5 Cosh. 412; Fairchild v. Adams, 11 Cosh. 549; Remington v. Gargdon, 2 Pick. 310; Lucas v. Case, 9 Bush, 297; Kleizer v. Symmes, 40 Ind. 562; Servatius v. Pichel, 34 Wis. 202; Chapman v. Calder, 14 Pa. St. 365; Shurtleff v. Stevens, 51 Vt. 591, 21 Am. Rep. 998; York v. Pease, 2 Gray, 52; Dunn v. Winters, 2 Humph. 512; McMillan v. Birch, 1 Binn. 178, 2

Am. Dec. 426. Making charges to a church having authority to discipline is not actionable unless there is express malice: Dial v. Hater, 6 Ohio St. 228; Over v. Hildebrand, 92 Ind. 13; and words spoken between members of the same church in the course of discipline are privileged. Jarvis v. Hatheway, 3 Johns. 180; Landis v. Campbell, 19 Mo. 433. But an accusation by a church member against one who is not a church member cannot be considered privileged. Coombs v. Rose, 8 Blackf. 156. Nor accusations by a parishioner against a clergyman not made to church authorities. State v. Bienvenu, 36 La. Ann. 278. A letter to a member of a minister's association about another member written by one not a member is not privileged. Shurtleff v. Parker, 180 Mass. 293. The preferring of charges to a lodge of Odd Fellows by one member against another is privileged: Streety v. Wood, 15 Barb. 105; and reports made to a lodge of Odd Fellows and published with the minutes are privileged. Kirkpatrick v. Eagle Lodge, 26 Kan. 384. An affidavit as to the credibility of a witness at a masonic trial is not privileged where neither the witness nor affiant is a member of the lodge. Nix v. Caldwell, 81 Ky. 293. A communication is privileged if made in good faith with a view to recovering stolen goods. Grimes v. Coyle, 6 B. Monr. 601; Brow v. Hathaway, 13 Allen, 239; Eames v. Whittaker, 124 Mass. 542. An agreement by partners to prosecute persons suspected of robbing the firm is privileged. Klink v. Colby, 46 N. Y. 427, 7 Am. Rep. 390. And so is a communication advising a sheriff to prosecute a person for larceny, sent by a law student who was employed by the sheriff. Washburne v. Cooke, 3 Denio, 110. An advertisement warning the public against negotiable notes alleged to have been stolen is privileged. Commonwealth v.

however, it is essential that the petition or remonstrance be addressed to the body or officer having the power of appointment or removal, or the authority to give the redress or grant the relief which is sought; or at least that the petitioner should really and in good faith believe he is addressing himself to an authority possessing power in the premises.¹

Such being the rule of privilege when one is interested in the discharge of powers of a public nature is addressing himself to the body having the authority of appointment, supervision, or removal, the question arises whether the same reasons do not require the like privilege when the citizen addresses himself to Featherstone, 9 Phil. (Pa.) 594. Words spoken in good faith by a public officer in discharge of his official duties are privileged. Mayo v. Sample, 18 Iowa, 309; Bradley v. Heath, 12 Pick. 165, 22 Am. Dec. 418; Jure Invest. Com., 16 R. I. 751, 11 Atl. 429; Dewe v. Waterbury, 6 Can. S. C. R. 143. So is a communication in good faith by a school principal to the trustees of charges against the character of a subordinate. Halsestead v. Nelson, 38 Hun, 149. See O'Connor v. Sil., 69 Mich. 175, 27 N. W. 13. A remonstrance to the board of excise, against the granting of a license to the plaintiff, comes under the same rule of protection. Vanderzee v. McGregor, 12 Wend. 545. See also Kendillon v. Malby, 1 Car. & Marsh. 402; Woodward v. Lander, 6 C. & P. 548. So does a statement by a mayor to a council as to the unfitness of a city attorney for his post. Greenwood v. Cobbey, 26 Neb. 449, 42 N. W. 413. A report by officers to stockholders is privileged but not, it seems, the publication of it. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. 202. A statement of causes of discharge of an employee, given only to officers of the employing company, and of other like companies for their protection, is conditionally privileged. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Richmond, 73 Tex. 568, 11 S. W. 555.

¹ This is recognized in all the cases referred to. See also Fairman v. Ives, 5 B. & Ald. 942. In that case a petition addressed by a creditor of an officer in the army to the Secretary of War, long, 66 and with a view of obtaining through his interference the payment of a debt due, and containing a statement of facts which, though derogatory to the officer's

character, the creditor believed to be true, was held not to support an action. A letter to the Postmaster-General complaining of the conduct of a postmaster, with a view to the redress of grievances, is privileged. Woodward v. Lander, 5 C. & P. 548; Cook v. Hill, 8 Sandf. 341. A statement to a legislative committee in good faith as to a matter with which it had power to deal is privileged. Wright v. Lothrop, 149 Mass. 385, 21 N. E. 903. And a complaint to a master, charging a servant with a dishonest act which had been imputed to the complaining party, has also been held privileged. Coward v. Wellington, 7 C. & P. 531. And see, further, Hosmer v. Loveland, 19 Barb. 111. A petition is privileged while being circulated. Vanderzee v. McGregor, 12 Wend. 545; Streety v. Wood, 15 Barb. 105. If, however, a petition is circulated and exhibited, but never presented, the fact that the libelous charge has assumed the form of a petition will not give it protection. State v. Burnham, 9 N. H. 34. And see Hunt v. Bennett, 19 N. Y. 173; Van Wyck v. Aspinwall, 17 N. Y. 190. An address by citizens to an officer requesting his resignation on the ground of his corruption is not privileged. Cotulla v. Kerr, 74 Tex. 82, 11 S. W. 1658. [Mere conclusions stated unqualifiedly as facts, and without mention of the specific facts upon which they are based, are not privileged. Eikhoft v. Gilbert, 124 Mich. 553, 83 N. W. 113, 51 L. R. A. 451. But in South Dakota an elector may call a candidate for aldermanic honors a thief, if he makes the allegation to other electors and does it in good faith. Rosa v. Ward, 14 S. D. 240, 85 N. W. 182.]

his fellow-citizens in regard to the conduct of persons elevated to offices by their suffrages, or in regard to the character, capacity, or fitness of those who may present themselves, or be presented by their friends, — which always assumes their assent, — as candidates for public positions.

When Morgan Lewis was governor of the State of New York, and was a candidate for re-election, a public meeting of his opponents was called, at which an address was adopted reviewing his public conduct, and bringing various charges against him. Among other things he was charged with want of fidelity to his party, with pursuing a system of family aggrandizement in his appointments, with signing the charter of a bank, having notice that it had been procured by fraudulent practices, with publishing doctrines unworthy of a chief magistrate and subversive of the dearest interests of society, with attempting to destroy the liberty of the press by vexatious prosecutions, and with calling out the militia without occasion, thereby putting them to unnecessary trouble and expense. These seem to have been the more serious charges. The chairman of the meeting signed the address, and he was prosecuted by the governor for the libel contained therein. No justification was attempted upon the facts, but the defendant relied upon his constitutional privilege. His defence was not sustained. Said Mr. Justice Thompson, speaking for the court: —

“Where the act is in itself unlawful, the proof of justification or excuse lies on the defendant, and on failure thereof the law implies a criminal intent.¹ If a libel contains an imputation of a crime, or is actionable without showing special damage, malice is, prima facie, implied; and if the defendant claims to be exonerated, on the ground of want of malice, it lies with him to show it was published under such circumstances as to rebut this presumption of law.² The manner and occasion of the publication have been relied on for this purpose, and in justification of the libel. It has not been pretended but that the address in question would be libellous if considered as the act of an individual; but its being the act of a public meeting, of which the defendant was a member, and the publication being against a candidate for a public office, have been strenuously urged as affording a complete justification. The doctrine contended for by the defendant's counsel results in the position that every publication ushered forth under the sanction of a public political meeting, against a candidate for an elective office, is beyond the reach of legal inquiry. To such a proposition I can never yield my assent. Although it was urged by the defendant's counsel, I cannot discover any analogy whatever between the proceedings of such meetings and those of courts of justice, or any other organized tribunals known in our law for the redress of grievances. That electors should have a right to assemble, and freely and openly to examine the fitness and qualifications of candidates for public offices, and communicate their opinions to others, is a position to which I most cordially accede. But there is a wide difference between this privilege and a right irresponsibly to charge a candidate with direct specific and unfounded crimes. It would, in my judgment, be a monstrous doctrine to establish, that, when a man becomes a candidate for an elective office, he thereby gives to others a right to accuse him of any imaginable crimes with impunity. Candidates have rights as well as electors; and those rights and privileges must be so guarded and protected as to harmonize one with the other. If one hundred or one thousand men, when assembled together, undertake to charge a man with specific crimes, I see no reason why it should be less criminal than if each one should do it individually at different times and places. All that is required, in the one case or the other, is, not to transcend the bounds of truth. If a man has committed a crime, any one has a right to charge him with it, and is not responsible for the accusation; and can any one wish for more latitude than this? Can it be claimed as a privilege to accuse ad libitum a candidate with the most base and detestable crimes? There is nothing upon the record showing the least foundation or pretence for the charges. The accusations, then, being false, the prima facie presumption of law is, that the publication was malicious; and the circumstance of the defendant being associated with others does not per se rebut this presumption. How far this circumstance ought to affect the measure of damages is a question not arising on the record. It may in some cases mitigate, in others enhance, them. Every case must necessarily, from the nature of the action, depend on its own circumstances, which are to be submitted to the sound discretion of a jury. It is difficult, and perhaps impracticable, to prescribe any general rule on the subject."¹

¹ 5 Burr. 2667; 4 T. R. 127.

² 1 T. R. 110.

The difficulty one meets with in the examination of this opinion is in satisfying himself in what manner the privileges of electors, of which it speaks, are protected by it. It is not discovered that the citizen who publicly discusses the qualifications and fitness of the candidate for public office who challenges his suffrage is, by this decision, so far as suits for recovery of private damages are concerned, placed on any different footing in the law from that occupied by one who drags before the public the character of a private individual. In either case, if the publication proves to be false, the law, it seems, attaches to it a presumption of malice. Nothing in the occasion justifies or excuses the act in one case more than in the other. It is true, it is intimated that it may lie in the sound discretion of a jury to be moderate in the imposition of damages, but it is also intimated that the jury would be at liberty to consider the circumstances of the public meeting an aggravation. There is absolutely no privilege of discussion to the elector under such a rule; no right to canvass the character and conduct of candidates any more than the character and conduct of others. Whatever reasons he may give his neighbors for voting against a candidate, he must be prepared to support by evidence in the courts. In criminal prosecutions, if he can prove the truth of his charges, he may be protected in some cases where he would not be if the person assailed was not thus appealing to public favor; for when the State prosecutes, the accused must in all cases make a showing of a justifiable occasion for uttering even the truth, and this occasion for speaking the truth of a candidate the pending election may supply.

¹ Lewis v. Few, 5 Johns. 1, 35. See also Curtis v. Mussey, 6 Gray, 261; Aldrich v. Printing Co., 9 Minn. 163.

The case above quoted has the sanction of a subsequent decision of the Court for the Correction of Errors, which in like manner repudiated the claim of privilege.¹ The office then in question was that of Lieutenant-Governor, and the candidate was charged in public newspapers with habits of intoxication which unfitted him for the position. And this last decision has since been followed as authority by the Superior Court of New York; in a case which differs from it in the particular that the office which the plaintiff was seeking was not elective, but was to be filled by an appointing board.²

The case of *King v. Root*³ will certainly strike any one as remarkable when the evidence on which it was decided is considered. The Lieutenant-Governor was charged in the public press with intoxication in the Senate Chamber, exhibited as he was proceeding to take his seat as presiding officer of that body. When prosecuted for libel, the publishers justified the charge as true, and brought a number of witnesses who were present on the occasion, and who testified to the correctness of the statement. There was therefore abundant reason for supposing the charge to have been published in the full belief in its truth. If it was true, there was abundant reason, on public grounds, for making the publication. Nevertheless, the jury were of opinion that the preponderance of evidence was against the truth of the charge, and being instructed that the only privilege the defendants had was "simply to publish the truth and nothing more," and that the unsuccessful attempt at justification — which in fact was only the forming of such an issue, and supporting it by such evidence as showed the defendants had reason for making the charge — was in itself an aggravation of the offence, they returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with large damages. Throughout the instructions to the jury the judge presiding at the trial conceded to the defendant no privilege of discussion whatever as springing from the relation of elector and candidate, or of citizen and representative, but the case was considered and treated as one where the accusation must be defended precisely as if no public considerations were in any way involved.¹

¹ King v. Root, 4 Wend. 113, 21 Am. Dec. 102.

² Hunt v. Bennett, 4 E. D. Smith, 647; s. c. 19 N. Y. 173. See Duncombe v. Daniell, 8 C. & P. 213.

³ 4 Wend. 113, 21 Am. Dec. 102. See the same case in the Supreme Court, 7 Cow. 315. It has recently been followed in Illinois, in the case of Rearick v. Wilcox, 81 Ill. 77.

The law of New York is not placed by these decisions on a footing very satisfactory to those who claim the utmost freedom of discussion in public affairs. The courts of that State have treated this subject as if there were no middle ground between absolute immunity for falsehood and the application of the same strict rules which prevail in other cases. Whether they have duly considered the importance of publicity and discussion on all matters of general concern in a representative government must be left to the consideration of judicial tribunals, as these questions shall come before them in the future. It is perhaps safe to say that the general public sentiment and the prevailing customs allow a greater freedom of discussion, and hold the elector less

¹ See also Onslow v. Horne, 3 Wils. 177; Harwood v. Astley, 1 New Rep. 47. It is libellous to charge a candidate with dishonesty and corruption: Rearick v. Wilcox, 81 Ill. 77; Wheaton v. Beecher, 66 Mich. 307, 33 N. W. 503; with being under indictment: Jones v. Townsend, 21 Fla. 431; with being guilty of forgery: Bronson v. Bruce, 59 Mich. 437, 26 N. W. 671; with being a professional gambler, thief, and bully: Sweeney v. Baker, 13 W. Va. 158, 31 Am. Rep. 757; with bartering away a public improvement for his own private interests: Powers v. Dubois, 17 Wend. 61; to utter such falsehoods as will cause persons not to vote for him: Brewer v. Weakley, 2 Overt.

99, 5 Am. Dec. 656. Charges made through a newspaper against a candidate for an office filled by appointment do not, it seems, stand on the same footing as if the office were elective. Hunt v. Bennett, 19 N. Y. 173. It is no justification for a libel against a candidate that it was published by the order of a public meeting of citizens. Lewis v. Few, 5 Johns. 1. By an honest mistake the chairman of a political meeting read a letter charging a candidate with official misconduct, and it was held he was not liable, as the statement was conditionally privileged. Briggs v. Garrett, 111 Pa. St. 404, 2 Atl. 513.

strictly to what he may be able to justify as true, than is done by these decisions.¹

A much more reasonable rule—though still, we think, not sufficiently comprehensive and liberal—was indicated by Pollock, C. B., in a case where it was urged upon the court that a sermon, preached but not published, was the subject of criticism in the enlarged style of commentary which that word seems to introduce according to the decided cases; and that the conduct of a clergyman with reference to the parish charity, and especially to the rules governing it, justified any bona fide remarks, whether founded in truth in point of fact, or justice in point of commentary, provided only they were an honest and bona fide comment. “My brother Wilde,” he says, “urged upon the court the importance of this question; and I own I think it is a question of very grave and deep importance. He pressed upon us that, wherever the public had an interest in such a discussion, the law ought to protect it, and work out the public good by permitting public opinion, through the medium of the public press, to operate upon such transactions. I am not sure that so extended a rule is at all necessary to the public good. I do not in any degree complain; on the contrary, I think it quite right that all matters that are entirely of a public nature—conduct of ministers, conduct of judges, the proceedings of all persons who are responsible to the public at large—are deemed to be public property; and that all bona fide and honest remarks upon such persons and their conduct may be made with perfect freedom, and without being questioned too nicely for either justice or truth.”² But these remarks were somewhat aside from the case then before the learned judge, and though supported by similar remarks from his associates, yet one of those associates deemed it important to draw such a distinction as to detract very much from the value and an impartial posterity will not fail to render him justice. Those abuses of the freedom of speech are the excesses of liberty. They ought to be repressed; but to whom dare we commit the care of doing it? An evil magistrate, entrusted with power to punish for words, would be armed with a weapon the most destructive and terrible. Under pretence of pruning off the exuberant branches, he would be apt to destroy the tree.” Franklin, Works by Sparks, Vol. II. p. 285.

¹ “Freedom of speech is a principal pillar of a free government; when this support is taken away, the constitution of a free society is dissolved, and tyranny is erected on its ruins. Republics and limited monarchies derive their strength and vigor from a popular examination into the action of the magistrates; this privilege in all ages has been and always will be abused. The best of men could not escape the censure and envy of the times they lived in. Yet this evil is not so great as it might appear at first sight. A magistrate who sincerely aims at the good of society will always have the inclinations of a great majority on his side,

² Gathercole v. Mear, 15 M. & W. 319, 332. See Commonwealth v. Clap, 4 Mass. 153, 3 Am. Dec. 212, per Parsons, Ch. J.; Townsend on Libel and Slander, § 250.

of this privilege. "It seems," he says, "there is a distinction, although I must say I really can hardly tell what the limits of it are, between the comments on a man's public conduct and upon his private conduct. I can understand that you have a right to comment on the public acts of a minister, upon the public acts of a general, upon the public judgments of a judge, upon the public skill of an actor; I can understand that; but I do not know where the limit can be drawn distinctly between where the comment is to cease, as being applied solely to a man's public conduct, and where it is to begin as applicable to his private character; because, although it is quite competent for a person to speak of a judgment of a judge as being an extremely erroneous and foolish one, — and no doubt comments of that sort have great tendency to make persons careful of what they say, — and although it is perfectly competent for persons to say of an actor that he is a remarkably bad actor, and ought not to be permitted to perform such and such parts, because he performs them so ill, yet you ought not to be allowed to say of an actor that he has disgraced himself in private life, nor to say of a judge or of a minister that he has committed felony, or anything of that description, which is in no way connected with his public conduct or public judgment; and therefore there must be some limits, although I do not distinctly see where those limits are to be drawn. No doubt, if there are such limits, my brother Wilde is perfectly right in saying that the only ground on which the verdict and damages can go is for the excess, and not for the lawful exercise of the criticism."¹

The radical defect in this rule, as it seems to us, consists in its assumption that the private character of a public officer is something aside from, and not entering into or influencing, his public conduct; that a thoroughly dishonest man may be a just minister, and that a judge who is corrupt and debauched in private life may be pure and upright in his judgments; in other words, that an evil tree is as likely as any other to bring forth good fruits. Any such assumption is false to human nature, and contradictory to general experience; and whatever the law may say, the general public will still assume that a corrupt life will influence public

¹ Anderson, B., same case, p. 338. The publication of a false statement of specific acts of misconduct in office of a public man are not privileged. Davis v. Shepstone, L. R. 11 App. Cas. 187. Charges against the private character of a sheriff who has not announced himself as a candidate for re-election are not made on a privileged occasion. Com. v. Wardwell, 133 Mass. 164. [And publication of charges, when made outside the territory over which the officer's power extends, is not privileged.] State v. Haskins, 109 Iowa, 659, 80 N. W. 1963, 47 L. R. A. 223.]

conduct, and that a man who deals dishonestly with his fellows as individuals will not hesitate to defraud them in their aggregate and corporate capacity, if the opportunity shall be given him. They are therefore interested in knowing what is the character of their public servants, and what sort of persons are offering themselves for their suffrages. And if this be so, it would seem that there should be some privilege of comment; that that privilege could only be limited by good faith and just intention; and that of these it was the province of a jury to judge, in view of the nature of the charges made and the reasons which existed for making them.

The English cases allow considerable latitude of comment to publishers of public journals, upon subjects in the discussion of which the public may reasonably be supposed to have an interest, and they hold the discussions to be privileged if conducted within the bounds of moderation and reason.¹ A more recent case, however, limits the range of privilege somewhat, and suggests a distinction which we are not aware has ever been judicially pointed out in this country, and which we are forced to believe the American courts would be slow to adopt. The distinction is this: That if the officer or functionary whose conduct is in question is one in whose duties the general public, and not merely the local public, has an interest, then a discussion of his conduct is privileged; otherwise it is not. Thus the public journals are privileged to com-

¹ In Kelley v. Sherlock, Law Rep. 1 Q. B. 680, it was held that a sermon commenting upon public affairs — e. g. the appointment of chaplains for prisons and the election of a Jew for mayor — was a proper subject for comment in the papers. And in Kelly v. Tinning, Law Rep. 1 Q. B. 695, a church-warden, having written to the plaintiff, the incumbent, accusing him of having desecrated the church by allowing books to be sold in it during service, and by turning the vestry-room into a cooking-apartment, the correspondence was published without the plaintiff's permission in the defendant's newspaper, with comments on the plaintiff's conduct. Held, that this was a matter of public interest, which might be made the subject of public discussion; and that the publication was therefore not libelous, unless the language used was stronger than, in the opinion of the jury, the occasion justified.

In Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, the proprietor of the "London Times"

was prosecuted for comments in his paper upon a debate in the House of Lords. The plaintiff had presented a petition to that body, charging Sir Fitzroy Kelly with having, many years before, made a statement false to his own knowledge, in order to deceive a committee of the House of Commons; and praying inquiry, and his removal from an office he held, if the charge was found true. A debate ensued, and the charge was wholly refuted. Held, that this was a subject of great public concern, on which a writer in a public newspaper had full right to comment; and the occasion was therefore so far privileged that the comments would not be actionable so long as a jury should think them honest, and made in a fair spirit, and such as were justified by the circumstances disclosed in the debate. The opinion by Chief Justice Cockburn is very clear and pointed, and reviews all the previous decisions. See further, Fairchild v. Adams, 11 Cush. 549; Terry v. Fellows, 21 La. Ann. 375.

ment freely within the limits of good faith, on the manner in which a judge performs his duties, but they are not privileged in like manner in the case of an official charged with purely local duties, such, for instance, as the physician to a local public charity. We cannot believe there is any sufficient reason for allowing free discussion in the one case and not in the other; but the opinion is of sufficient importance to justify special attention being directed to it.¹ And in this country it has been held that where a charge against an officer or a candidate respects only his qualifications for the office, and does not impugn his character, it forms no basis for a recovery of damages. To address to the electors of a district letters charging that a candidate for office is of impaired understanding, and his mind weakened by disease, is presenting that subject to "the proper and legitimate tribunal to try the question." "Talents and qualifications for office are mere matters of opinion, of which the electors are the only competent judges."²

¹ Purcell v. Sowler, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 781. The plaintiff was medical officer of the Knutsford workhouse, and the alleged libel consisted in a report of an inquiry by the board in charge into his conduct and the treatment of the poor under him, and comments thereon. The following cases are commented upon and distinguished: Davis v. Duncan, 9 C. P. 336; Kelly v. Tinning, L. R. 1 Q. B. 639; Henwood v. Harrison, L. R. 7 C. P. 606; Watson v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73. It is clear that a trustee of a mining corporation is not such an officer as to be subjected to general criticism under the privilege of the press. Wilson v. Fitch, 41 Cal. 223. [Charges must have a better foundation than mere rumors in order to be privileged. State v. Ford, 82 Minn. 432, 85 N. W. 217.]

² Mayrant v. Richardson, 1 Nott & McComb 345, 9 Am. Dec. 707. It is not libelous to publish in good faith any charges against a candidate for office, affecting his qualifications and fitness for the office: Commonwealth v. Morris, 1 Va. Cases, 175, 5 Am. Dec. 515; Commonwealth v. Odell, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 443; Commonwealth v. Clapp, 4 Mass. 103, 3 Am. Dec. 212; Mott v. Dawson, 49 Iowa, 535; Blays v. Hunt, 60 Iowa, 251, 14 N. W. 785; State v. Balch, 31 Kan. 455, 2 Pac. 609; Marks v. Baker, 28 Minn. 162, 9 N. W. 678; Express Printing Co. v. Conchard, 64 Tex. 254; Posnett v. Marble, 62 Vt. 481, 20 Atl. 813, 11 L. R. A.

162, 22 Am. St. 125; Ross v. Ward, 14 S. D. 249, 85 N. W. 182;] to charge him with being idle, uneducated, and ignorant: Sweeney v. Baker, 13 W. Va. 158, 31 Am. Rep. 757. But see cases, ante, p. 624, note 1. [And see Belknap v. Ball, 83 Mich. 585, 47 N. W. 674, 11 L. R. A. 72, 21 Am. St. 522.] It is libelous to charge an officer with having taken a bribe: Hamilton v. Eno, 81 N. Y. 116; Wilson v. Noonan, 35 Wis. 321; with corruption or want of integrity: Gove v. Biethen, 21 Minn. 80, 18 Am. Rep. 350; Russell v. Anthony, 21 Kan. 456, 30 Am. Rep. 426; Littlejohn v. Greeley, 13 Abb. Pr. 41; Dole v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. Cas. 330; Negley v. Farrow, 60 Md. 158; Neeb v. Hope, 111 Pa. St. 145, 2 Atl. 598; [Augusta Evening News v. Ralford, 91 Ga. 434, 17 S. E. 612, 20 L. R. A. 533, 44 Am. St. 53;] with being intoxicated while in discharge of his official duties: King v. Root, 4 Wend. 113, 21 Am. Dec. 192; Gottbehuet v. Hubalek, 36 Wis. 515; to charge a judge with being destitute of capacity or attainments necessary for his station: Robbles v. Treadway, 2 J. J. Marsh. 549, 19 Am. Dec. 152; Spering v. Andrae, 45 Wis. 339, 50 Am. Rep. 744; to charge him with being disqualified and liable to impeachment: Richardson v. State, 68 Md. 265, 7 Atl. 43; see Cooper v. People, 13 Cal. 337, 373, 22 Pac. 790; to charge an officer with having done that which should remove him from his seat: Hook v. Hackney, 16 S. & R.

Statements in the Course of Judicial Proceedings.

Among the cases which are so absolutely privileged on reasons of public policy, that no inquiry into motives is permitted in an action for slander or libel, is that of a witness giving evidence in the course of judicial proceedings. It is familiar law that no action will lie against him at the suit of a party aggrieved by his false testimony, even though malice be charged.¹ The remedy against a dishonest witness is confined to the criminal prosecution for perjury.² So what a juror may say to his fellows in the jury-room while they are considering their verdict, concerning one of

385; Lansing v. Carpenter, 9 Wis. 540; to charge a sealer of weights and measures with "tampering with" and "doctoring" such weights and measures: Evison v. Cramer, 47 Wis. 659, 3 N. W. 392; to charge a city physician with causing the death of a patient by reckless treatment. Foster v. Scripps, 39 Mich. 376, 33 Am. Rep. 403. see Hart v. Von Gumpach, L. R. 4 Priv. C. 439; s. c. 4 Moak, 138; to call a member of Congress "a fawning sycophant, a misrepresentative in Congress, and a groveling office seeker." Thomas v. Crosswell, 7 Johns. 264, 5 Am. Dec. 268. It is not libellous to charge a judge with improprieties which would be no cause of impeachment: Robbins v. Treadway, 2 J. J. Marsh. 540, 19 Am. Dec. 152; nor with ordering unreasonable bail: Miner v. Detroit Post, & Co., 49 Mich. 368, 13 N. W. 772; or an officer with giving his wife work in a public office and paying her in her maiden name: Bell v. Sun Printing, & Co. Co., 42 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 567; and it is not libellous for a committee of a college of pharmacy to charge an inspector of drugs with gross violation of duty, in a report made in good faith which was presented to the Secretary of the Treasury. Van Wyck v. Aspinwall, 17 N. Y. 190, 4 Duer, 268. To charge corruption, intimidation, and fraud in an election is actionable per se. Tilton v. Robbins, 68 Me. 215, 28 Am. Rep. 50. See Barr v. Moore, 87 Pa. St. 385, 30 Am. Rep. 367. [For a case in which the candidate was charged with nearly all the crimes in the calendar. see Upton v. Hume, 24 Oreg. 429, 33 Pac. 810, 21 L. R. A. 493, 41 Am. St. 883.]

¹ Allen v. Crofoot, 2 Wend. 515, 20 Am. Dec. 647; Marsh v. Ellsworth, 50

N. Y. 309; Terry v. Fellows, 21 La. Ann. 375; Smith v. Howard, 28 Iowa, 61; Shock v. McChesney, 4 Yeates, 507, 2 Am. Dec. 415; Calkins v. Sumner, 13 Wis. 193; Barnes v. McCrate, 32 Me. 442; Dunlap v. Glidden, 31 Me. 435; Hutchinson v. Lewis, 75 Ind. 65; Verner v. Verner, 64 Miss. 321, 1 So. 479. See White v. Carroll, 42 N. Y. 161, 1 Am. Rep. 503. So of an answer to a legislative committee, though not under oath. Wright v. Lothrop, 149 Mass. 385, 21 N. E. 903. [So with relevant testimony before a committee of a board of aldermen having power to compel the same. Blakeslee v. Carroll, 64 Conn. 223, 29 Atl. 472, 25 L. R. A. 103.]

² But he is not protected if what is testified is not pertinent or material to the cause, and he has been actuated by malice in stating it. White v. Carroll, 42 N. Y. 160, 1 Am. Rep. 503; Barnes v. McCrate, 32 Me. 442; Kidder v. Parkhurst, 3 Allen, 294; Shadden v. McElwee, 86 Tenn. 146, 5 S. W. 692. But in Hunckel v. Voneiff, 69 Md. 179, 14 Atl. 500, 17 Atl. 1056, the privilege is held to cover reflections thrown out needlessly. He is not, however, to be himself the judge of what is pertinent or material when questions are put to him, and no objection or warning comes to him from court or counsel. Calkins v. Sumner, 13 Wis. 193. See also Warner v. Paine, 2 Sandf. 195; Garr v. Selden, 4 N. Y. 91; Jennings v. Paine, 4 Wis. 358; Perkins v. Mitchell, 31 Barb. 461; Revis v. Smith, 18 C. B. 126; Grove v. Brandenburg, 7 Blackf. 234; Cunningham v. Brown, 18 Vt. 123; Dunlap v. Glidden, 31 Me. 435; Steinecke v. Marx, 10 Mo. App. 580. See Liles v. Gaster, 42 Ohio St. 631.

the parties to the suit who has been a witness therein, cannot be the subject of an action for slander.¹ False accusations, however, contained in the affidavits or other proceedings, by which a prosecution is commenced for supposed crime, or in any other papers in the course of judicial proceedings, are not so absolutely protected. They are privileged,² but the party making them is liable to action, if actual malice be averred and proved.³ Preliminary information, furnished with a view to set on foot an inquiry into an alleged offence, or to institute a criminal prosecution, is, in like manner, privileged;⁴ but the protection only extends to those lingame v. Burlingame, 8 Cow. 141; Kidder v. Parkhurst, 3 Allen, 333; Dayle v. O'Doherty, 1 Car. & Marsh. 418; Wilson v. Collins, 5 C. & P. 273; Home v. Bentinck, 2 Brod. & Bing. 130; Jarvis v. Hathaway, 3 Johns. 180. In Goslin v. Cannon, 1 Harr. 3, it was held that where a crime had been committed, expressions of opinion founded upon facts within the knowledge of the party, or communicated to him, made prudently and in confidence to discreet persons, and made obviously in good faith with a view only to direct their watchfulness, and enlist their aid in recovering the money stolen, and detecting and bringing to justice the offender, were privileged. The cause, occasion, object, and end, it was said, was justifiable, proper, and legal, and such as should actuate every good citizen. If a party, in presenting his case to a court, wanders from what is material to libel another, the libel is not privileged. Wyatt v. Buell, 47 Cal. 624.

¹ Dunham v. Powers, 42 Vt. 1; Rector v. Smith, 11 Iowa, 302.

² Astley v. Younge, Burr. 807; Strauss v. Meyer, 48 Ill. 385; Vausse v. Lee, 1 Hill (S. C.), 197, 28 Am. Dec. 168; Buntton v. Worley, 4 Bibb, 38, 7 Am. Dec. 735; Sanders v. Rollinson, 2 Strobb. 447; Francis v. Wood, 75 Ga. 648; but not if spoken without bona fide intention of prosecuting: Marshall v. Gunter, 6 Rich. 419; or in a court which does not have jurisdiction of the case. Hosmer v. Loveland, 19 Barb. 111. All allegations in pleadings, if pertinent, are absolutely privileged. Strauss v. Meyer, 48 Ill. 385; Lea v. White, 4 Sneed, 111; Forbes v. Johnson, 11 B. Monr. 48; Vinas v. Merch. & Co., 33 La. Ann. 1265; Prescott v. Tousey, 53 N. Y. S. C. 59; Wilson v. Sullivan, 81 Ga. 238, 7 S. E. 274; Runge v. Franklin, 72 Tex. 585, 10 S. W. 721. See Lanning v. Christy, 30 Ohio St. 115. So, though the complaint is dismissed. Dada v. Piper, 41 Hun, 254. A petition alleging misconduct in office filed by a receiver against his co-receiver in the action in which they were appointed is privileged. Bartlett v. Christoff, 69 Md. 219, 14 Atl. 518. Charges made in the interest of his client by an attorney in opposition to the discharge of an insolvent debtor are absolutely privileged. Hollis v. Meux, 50 Cal. 625, 11 Pac. 218. But libelous words spoken of a third person in the pleadings, if relevant, are only conditionally privileged: Ruons v. Backer, 6 Heisk. 395, 12 Am. Rep. 398; Davis v. McNeas, 8 Humph. 49; and when not pertinent and material are not privileged. McLaughlin v. Cowley, 121 Mass. 319, 131 Mass. 79; Wyatt v. Buell, 47 Cal. 624.

³ Padmore v. Lawrence, 11 Ad. & El. 386; Kine v. Sewell, 3 M. & W. 257; Bur-

⁴ Grimes v. Coyle, 6 B. Monr. 361. The subject of communications privileged on grounds of public policy will be found considered, at some length and with ability, in the recent case of Dawkins v. Lord Paulet, Law Rep. 5 C. B. 64. The publication complained of was by a military officer to his superior concerning the qualifications and capacity of the plaintiff as a subordinate military officer under him; and it was averred that the words were published by the defendant of actual malice, and without any reasonable, probable, or justifiable cause, and not bona fide, or in the bona fide discharge of defendant's duty as superior officer. On demurrer, a majority of the court (Mellor and Lush, JJ.) held the action would not lie: planting themselves, in part, on communications which are in the course of the proceedings to bring the supposed offender to justice, or are designed for the purpose of originating or forwarding such proceedings; and communications not of that character are not protected, even although judicial proceedings may be pending for the investigation of the offence which the communication refers to.¹ Still less would a party be justified in repeating a charge of crime, after the person charged has been examined on his complaint, and acquitted of all guilt.²

Privilege of Counsel.

One of the most important cases of privilege, in a constitutional point of view, is that of counsel employed to represent a party in judicial proceedings. The benefit of the constitutional right to counsel depends very greatly on the freedom with which he is allowed to act, and to comment on the facts appearing in the case, and on the inferences deducible therefrom. The character, conduct, and motives of parties and their witnesses, as well as of other persons more remotely connected with the proceedings, enter very largely into any judicial inquiry, and must form the subject of comment, if they are to be usefully sifted and weighed. To make the comment of value, there must be the liberty to examine the case in every possible light, to advance theories, and to suggest to those having the power of decision any view of the facts and of the motives of actors which shall appear tenable or even plausible. It sometimes happens in criminal proceedings, that, while no reasonable doubt can exist that a crime has been com-grounds of public policy, and in part, also, on the fact that the military code provided a remedy for wrongs of the nature complained of; and quoting with approval Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544, and Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, 4 N. & F. 841. Cockburn, Ch. J., delivered an able dissenting opinion. The decision is criticised in Maurice v. Worden, 64 Md. 233, 39 Am. Rep. 354, where an analogous communication was held privileged conditionally, but not absolutely.

¹ Danaster v. Hewson, 2 M. & Ry. 173. Statements by a justice as to what was said by a person applying for a warrant but not as part of a judicial hearing are not privileged. McDermott v. Evening Journal Co., 43 N. J. L. 488.

² Burlingame v. Burlingame, 8 Cow. 141. In Mower v. Watson, 11 Vt. 536, an action was brought for slander in saying to a witness who was giving his testimony on a material point in a cause then on trial, to which defendant was a party, "That's a lie," and for repeating the same statement to counsel for the opposite party afterwards. The words were held not to be privileged. To the same effect are the cases of McClaghry v. Wetmore, 6 Johns. 82, and Kean v. McLaughlin, 2 S. & R. 429. See also Torrey v. Field, 10 Vt. 353; Gilbert v. People, 1 Denio. 41. A report made by a grand jury upon a subject which they conceive to be within their jurisdiction, but which is not, is nevertheless privileged. Rector v. Smith, 11 Iowa, 302. Matter inserted as part of a justice's official return is privileged, if believed by the justice to be material to the return. Aylesworth v. St. John, 25 Hun, 150.

mitted, there may be very grave doubt whether the prosecutor or the accused is the guilty party; and to confine the counsel for the defence to such remarks concerning the prosecutor as he might justify, if he had made them without special occasion, would render the right to counsel, in such cases, of little or no value. The law is not chargeable with the mockery of assuming to give a valuable privilege which, when asserted, is found to be so hampered and restricted as to be useless.

The rule upon this subject was laid down in these words in an early English case: "A counsellor hath privilege to enforce anything which is informed him by his client, and to give it in evidence, it being pertinent to the matter in question, and not to examine whether it be true or false; for a counsellor is at his peril to give in evidence that which his client informs him, being pertinent to the matter in question; but matter not pertinent to the issue, or the matter in question, he need not deliver; for he is to discern in his discretion what he is to deliver, and what not; and although it be false, he is excusable, it being pertinent to the matter. But if he give in evidence anything not material to the issue, which is scandalous, he ought to aver it to be true; otherwise he is punishable; for it shall be considered as spoken maliciously and without cause; which is a good ground for the action. . . . So if counsel object matter against a witness which is slanderous, if there be cause to discredit his testimony, and it be pertinent to the matter in question, it is justifiable, what he delivers by information, although it be false."¹ The privilege of counsel in these cases is the same with that of the party himself,² and the limitation upon it is concisely suggested in a Pennsylvania case, "that if a man should abuse his privilege, and, under pretence of pleading his cause, designedly wander from the point in question, and maliciously heap slander upon his adversary, I will not say that he is not responsible in an action at law."³ Chief Justice Shaw has stated the rule very fully and clearly: "We take the rule to be well settled by the authorities, that words spoken in the course of judicial proceedings, though they are such as impute crime to another, and therefore, if spoken elsewhere, would import malice and be actionable in themselves, are not actionable, if they ¹ Brook v. Montague, Cro. Jac. 90. See this case approved and applied in Hodgson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & Ald. 232. And see Mackay v. Ford, 5 H. & M. 792.

² Hoar v. Wood, 3 Met. 193, per Shaw, Ch. J.

³ McMillan v. Birch, 1 Binney, 178, 2 Am. Dec. 425, per Tigman, Ch. J.

For the liability of counsel for inserting irrelevant and injurious matter in the pleadings, see McLaughlin v. Cowley, 127 Mass. 316. The client is not answerable for the slanders of his counsel in managing his cause. Bayly v. Fourchy, 32 La. Ann. 136.

are applicable and pertinent to the subject of inquiry. The question, therefore, in such cases is, not whether the words spoken are true, not whether they are actionable in themselves, but whether they were spoken in the course of judicial proceedings, and whether they are relevant or pertinent to the cause or subject of inquiry. And in determining what is pertinent, much latitude must be allowed to the judgment and discretion of those who are entrusted with the conduct of a cause in court, and a much larger allowance made for the ardent and excited feelings with which a party, or counsel who naturally and almost necessarily identifies himself with his client, may become animated, by constantly regarding one side only of an interesting and animated controversy, in which the dearest rights of such party may become involved. And if these feelings sometimes manifest themselves in strong invectives, or exaggerated expressions, beyond what the occasion would strictly justify, it is to be recollected that this is said to a judge who hears both sides, in whose mind the exaggerated statement may be at once controlled and met by evidence and argument of a contrary tendency from the other party, and who, from the impartiality of his position, will naturally give to an exaggerated assertion, not warranted by the occasion, no more weight than it deserves. Still, this privilege must be restrained by some limit, and we consider that limit to be this: that a party or counsel shall not avail himself of his situation to gratify private malice by uttering slanderous expressions, either against a party, witness, or third person, which have no relation to the cause or subject-matter of the inquiry. Subject to this restriction, it is, on the whole, for the public interest, and best calculated to subserve the purposes of justice, to allow counsel full freedom of speech in conducting the causes and advocating and sustaining the rights of their constituents; and this freedom of discussion ought not to be impaired by numerous and refined distinctions."¹

¹ Hoar v. Wood, 3 Met. 193, 197. See also Padmore v. Lawrence, 11 Ad. & El. 389; Ring v. Wheeler, 7 Cow. 725; Mower v. Watson, 11 Vt. 536, 34 Am. Dec. 704; Gilbert v. People, 1 Denio, 41; Hastings v. Lusk, 22 Wend. 410, 34 Am. Dec. 380; Bradley v. Heath, 12 Pick. 163; Stackpole v. Hennen, 6 Mart. N. S. 481, 17 Am. Dec. 187; Sheffer v. Gooding, 2 Jones (N. C.), 175; Lea v. White, 4 Sneed, 111; Marshall v. Gunter, 6 Rich. 419; Ruohs v. Backer, 6 Heisk. 335; Jennings v. Paine, 4 Wis. 358; Lawson v. Hicks, 38 Ala. 279; Lester v. Thurmond, 51 Ga. 118; Mauleby v. Reifsnider, 69 Md. 143, 14

Atl. 595. In a unanimous opinion in both the Divisional and Appeal Courts it has been held recently in England that counsel stand on the same ground as witnesses and judges; that their statements when made in the course of a judicial proceeding, are absolutely privileged, even though they are false, malicious, and irrelevant to the issue in the case, and without reasonable and probable cause. Manster v. Lamb, L. R. 11 Q. B. D. 588. In Hastings v. Lusk, supra, it is said that the privilege of counsel is as broad as that of a legislative body; however false and malicious may be the Privilege of Legislators.

The privilege of a legislator in the use of language in debate is made broader and more complete than that of the counsel or party in judicial proceedings by constitutional provisions, which give him complete immunity, by forbidding his being questioned in any other place for anything said in speech or debate.¹ In an early case in Massachusetts, the question of the extent of this constitutional privilege came before the Supreme Court, and was largely discussed, as well by counsel as by the court. The constitutional provision then in force in that State was as follows: "The freedom of deliberation, speech, and debate in either house cannot be the foundation of any accusation or prosecution, action or complaint, in any other court or place whatsoever." The defendant was a member of the General Court, and was prosecuted for uttering slanderous words to a fellow-member in relation to the plaintiff. The member to whom the words were uttered had moved a resolution, on the suggestion of the plaintiff, for the appointment of an additional notary-public in the county where the plaintiff resided. The mover, in reply to an inquiry privately made by defendant, as to the source of his information that such appointment was necessary, had designated the plaintiff, and the defendant had replied by a charge against the plaintiff of a criminal offence. The question before the court was, whether this reply was privileged. The house was in session at the time, but the remark was not made in course of speech or debate, and had no other connection with the legislative proceedings than is above shown.

Referring to the constitutional provision quoted, the learned judge who delivered the opinion of the court in this case thus expressed his views: "In considering this article, it appears to me that the privilege secured by it is not so much the privilege of the house as an organized body, as of each individual member composing it, who is entitled to this privilege, even against the declared will of the house. For he does not hold this privilege at the pleasure of the house, but derives it from the will of the charge made by him affecting the reputation of another, an action of slander will not lie, provided what is said be pertinent to the question under discussion. And see Harlow v. Cumstock, 2 A. K. Marsh. 480, 12 Am. Dec. 123; Warner v. Paine, 2 Sandf. 135; Garr v. Selden, 4 N. Y. 51; Marsh v. Ellsworth, 50 N. Y. 369; Sparks v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289; Jennings v. Paine, 4 Wis. 558.

¹ There are provisions to this effect in every State Constitution except those of North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, Texas, California, and Nevada. Mr. Cushing, in his work on the Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies, § 602, has expressed the opinion that these provisions are unnecessary, and that the protection is equally complete without them.

people, expressed in the constitution, which is paramount to the will of either or both branches of the legislature. In this respect, the privilege here secured resembles other privileges attached to each member by another part of the constitution, by which he is exempted from arrest on mesne (or original) process, during his going to, returning from, or attending the General Court. Of these privileges, thus secured to each member, he cannot be deprived by a resolve of the house, or by an act of the legislature.

"These privileges are thus secured, not with the intention of protecting the members against prosecutions for their own benefit, but to support the rights of the people, by enabling their representatives to execute the functions of their office without fear of prosecutions civil or criminal. I therefore think that the article ought not to be construed strictly, but liberally, that the full design of it may be answered. I will not confine it to delivering an opinion, uttering a speech, or haranguing in debate, but will extend it to the giving of a vote, to the making of a written report, and to every other act resulting from the nature and in the execution of the office; and I would define the article as securing to every member exemption from prosecution for everything said or done by him, as a representative, in the exercise of the functions of that office, without inquiring whether the exercise was regular according to the rules of the house, or irregular and against their rules. I do not confine the member to his place in the house, and I am satisfied that there are cases in which he is entitled to this privilege when not within the walls of the representatives' chamber. He cannot be exercising the functions of his office as member of a body, unless the body be in existence. The house must be in session to enable him to claim this privilege, and it is in session notwithstanding occasional adjournments for short intervals for the convenience of its members. If a member, therefore, be out of the chamber, sitting in committee, executing the commission of the house, it appears to me that such member is within the reason of the article, and ought to be considered within the privilege. The body of which he is a member is in session, and he, as a member of that body, is in fact discharging the duties of his office. He ought, therefore, to be protected from civil or criminal prosecutions for everything said or done by him in the exercise of his functions as a representative, in committee, either in debating or assenting to or draughting a report. Neither can I deny the member his privilege when executing the duties of his office, in a convention of both houses, although the convention should be holden in the Senate Chamber." And after considering the hardships that might result to individuals in consequence of this privilege, he proceeds: "A more extensive construction of the privileges of the members secured by this article I cannot give, because it could not be supported by the language or the manifest intent of the article. When a representative is not acting as a member of the house, he is not entitled to any privileges above his fellow-citizens; nor are the rights of the people affected if he is placed on the same ground on which his constituents stand." And coming more particularly to the facts then before the court, it was shown that the defendant was not in the discharge of any official duty at the time of uttering the obnoxious words; that they had no connection or relevancy to the business then before the house, but might with equal pertinency have been uttered at any other time or place, and consequently could not, even under the liberal rule of protection which the court had laid down, be regarded as within the privilege.¹

Publication of Privileged Communications through the Press.

If now we turn from the rules of law which protect communications because of the occasion on which they are made, and the duty resting upon the person making them, to those rules which concern the spreading before the world the same communications, we shall discover a very remarkable difference. It does not follow because a counsel may freely speak in court as he believes or is instructed, that therefore he may publish his speech through the public press. The privilege in court is necessary to the complete discharge of his duty to his client; but when the suit is ended, that duty is discharged, and he is not called upon to appeal from the court and the jury to the general public.² Indeed such an appeal, while it could not generally have benefit to the client in view, would be unfair and injurious to the parties reflected upon by the argument, inasmuch as it would take only a partial and one-sided view of the case, and the public would not have, as the court and jury did, all the facts of the case as given in evidence before them, so that they might be in position to weigh the arguments fairly and understandingly, and reject injurious inferences not warranted by the evidence.

The law, however, favors publicity in legal proceedings, so far as that object can be attained without injustice to the persons immediately concerned. The public are permitted to attend nearly all judicial inquiries, and there appears to be no sufficient reason why they should not also be allowed to see in print the reports of trials, if they can thus have them presented as fully as they are exhibited in court, or at least all the material portion of the proceedings impartially stated, so that one shall not, by means of them, derive erroneous impressions, which he would not have been likely to receive from hearing the trial itself.

¹ Coffin v. Coffin, 4 Mass. 1, 27, 3 Am. Dec. 1-9. See Jefferson's Manual, § 8; Hosmer v. Loveland, 19 Barb. 111; State v. Barnhart, 9 N. H. 34.

² The publication of slanderous remarks of counsel during a trial is not privileged. Com. v. Godshalk, 13 Phila. 575.

It seems to be settled that a fair and impartial account of judicial proceedings, which have not been ex parte, but in the hearing of both parties, is, generally speaking, a justifiable publication.¹ But it is said that, if a party is to be allowed to publish what passes in a court of justice, he must publish the whole case, and not merely state the conclusion which he himself draws from the evidence.² A plea that the supposed libel was, in substance, a true account and report of a trial has been held bad;³ and a statement of the circumstances of a trial as from counsel in the case has been held not privileged.⁴ The report must also be strictly confined to the actual proceedings in court, and must contain no defamatory observations or comments from any quarter whatsoever, in addition to what forms strictly and properly the legal proceedings.⁵ And if the nature of the case is ¹ Hoare v. Silverlock, 9 C. B. 20; Lewis v. Levy, E. B. & E. 567; Ryalls v. Leader, Law Rep. 1 Exch. 296. And see Stanley v. Webb, 4 Sandf. 21; Cincinnati Gazette Co. v. Timberlake, 10 Ohio St. 548; Torrey v. Field, 10 Vt. 353; Fawcett v. Charles, 13 Wend. 473; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 403, 28 Am. Rep. 465. But it is held the report must not only be fair, but be without malice. Stevens v. Sampson, L. R. 5 Ex. D. 53. A fair report of a judgment without publishing the evidence is prima facie privileged. MacDougall v. Knight, L. R. 17 Q. B. D. 630. The privilege extends to the publication of testimony taken on an investigation by Congress. Terry v. Fellows, 21 La. Ann. 375. And of the proceedings on trials in voluntary organizations. Barrows v. Bell, 7 Gray, 301. There is no privilege in publishing the contents of a bill or petition merely filed before a hearing. Barber v. St. Louis, & Co., 3 Mo. App. 377; Cowley v. Pulsifer, 137 Mass. 392.

² Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 695.

³ Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 473. See Ludwig v. Cramer, 53 Wis. 193, 10 N. W. 81.

⁴ Saunders v. Mills, 6 Bing. 213; Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 473. And see Stanley v. Webb, 4 Sandf. 21; Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 695. A statement made by a newspaper, not purporting to be upon the authority of judicial proceedings, is not privileged. Storey v. Wallace, 50 Ill. 51. See Ludwig v. Cramer, 53 Wis. 193, 10 N. W. 81. And a publication of judicial proceedings is not privileged if it contain intrinsic evidence that it was not published for good motives, and for justifiable ends. Saunders v. Baxter, 6 Hesk. 309. The publication in a medical journal of an account of the proceedings of a medical society in the expulsion of a member for cause is privileged. Barrows v. Bell, 7 Gray, 301. And so is the publication in a denominational organ of resolutions of an association of ministers. Shurtleff v. Stevens, 51 Vt. 301, 31 Am. Rep. 638.

⁵ Stiles v. Nokes, 7 East. 423; Delegal v. Highley, 3 Bing. N. C. 950. And see Lewis v. Clement, 3 B. & Ald. 792; Pittock v. O'Neill, 63 Pa. St. 253, 3 Am. Rep. 544; Clark v. Binney, 2 Pick. 112; Scripps v. Reilly, 38 Mich. 10; Bathrick v. Detroit Post, & Co., 50 Mich. 6-9, 16 N. W.

such as to make it improper that the proceedings should be spread before the public because of their immoral tendency, or of the blasphemous or indecent character of the evidence exhibited, the publication, though impartial and full, will be a public offence, and punishable accordingly.¹

It has, however, been held, that the publication of ex parte proceedings, or mere preliminary examinations, though of a judicial character, is not privileged; and when they reflect injuriously upon individuals, the publisher derives no protection from their having already been delivered in court.² The reason for 172. Publication of a report of a judgment with a headline "Hotel Proprietors Embarrassed," is not privileged. Hayes v. Press Co., 127 Pa. St. 642, 18 Atl. 331. A statement that one was arrested after testifying, on account of his criminating evidence, is not privileged as a report of a judicial proceeding. Godshalk v. Metzgar, — Pa. St. — 17 Atl. 215.

¹ Rex v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 107; Rex v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273. [But a court has no inherent power to prohibit the publication of such testimony, nor to punish such publication as a contempt. As Shortridge, 99 Cal. 520, 34 Pac. 227, 21 L. R. A. 755, 37 Am. St. 78.]

² Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 556; Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 473; Clariton v. Watton, 6 C. & P. 385; Rex v. Lee, 5 Esp. 125; Rex v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563; Delegat v. Hightley, 3 Bing. N. C. 350; Behrens v. Allen, 3 Fost. & F. 355; Cincinnati Gazette Co. v. Timberlake, 10 Ohio, n. s. 548; Mathews v. Beach, 5 Sandf. 260; Huff v. Bennett, 4 Sandf. 120; Stanley v. Webb, 4 Sandf. 21; Usher v. Severance, 20 Me. 9, 37 Am. Dec. 33. It seems, however, that if the proceeding has resulted in the discharge of the person accused, or in a decision that no cause exists for proceeding against him, a publication of an account of it is privileged. In Curry v. Walter, 1 B. & P. 625, the Court of Common Pleas held that, in an action for libel, it was a good defence, under the plea of not guilty, that the alleged libel was a true account of what had passed upon a motion in the Court of King's Bench for an information against two magistrates for corruption in refusing to license an inn; the motion having been refused for want of a return to the magistrates. In Lew v. Levy, El. Bl. & El. 537, the publisher of a newspaper gave a full report of an examination before a magistrate on a charge of perjury, resulting in the discharge of the defendant; and the Court of Queen's Bench sustained the claim of privilege; distinguishing the case from those where the party was held for trial, and where the publication of the charges and evidence might tend to his prejudice on the trial. The opinion of Lord Campbell in the case, however, seems to go far towards questioning the correctness of the decisions above cited. See especially his quotation from the opinion of Lord Denman, delivered before a committee of the House of Lords, in the year 1843, on the law of libel: "I have no doubt that [police reports] are extremely useful for the detection of guilt by making facts notorious, and for bringing those facts more correctly to the knowledge of all parties interested in unravelling the truth. The public, I think, are perfectly aware that those proceedings are ex parte, and they become more and more aware of it in proportion to their growing intelligence; they know that such proceedings are only in course of trial, and they do not form their opinion until the trial is had. Perfect publicity in judicial proceedings is of the highest importance in other points of view, but in its effects on character I think it desirable. The statement made in open court will probably find its way to the ears of all in whose good opinion the party assailed feels an interest, probably in an exaggerated form, and the imputation may often rest upon the wrong person; both these evils are prevented by correct reports." In the case of Lewis v. Levy, it was insisted that the privilege of publication only extended to the proceedings of the superior courts of law, and equity; but the court gave no countedistinguishing these cases from those where the parties are heard is thus stated by Lord Ellenborough, in the early case of The King v. Fisher:¹ "Jurors and judges are still but men; they cannot always control feeling excited by inflammatory language. If they are exposed to be thus warped and misled, injustice must sometimes be done. Trial at law, fairly reported, although they may occasionally prove injurious to individuals, have been held to be privileged. Let them continue so privileged. The benefit they produce is great and permanent, and the evil that arises from them is rare and incidental. But these preliminary examinations have no such privilege. Their only tendency is to pre-judge those whom the law still presumes to be innocent, and to poison the sources of justice. It is of infinite importance to us all, that whatever has a tendency to prevent a fair trial should be guarded against. Every one of us may be questioned in a court of law, and called upon to defend his life and character. We would then wish to meet a jury of our countrymen with unbiassed minds. But for this there can be no security, if such publications are permitted." And in another case it has been said: "It is our boast that we are governed by that just and salutary rule upon which security of life and character often depends, that every man is presumed innocent of crimes charged upon him, until he is proved guilty. But the circulation of charges founded on ex parte testimony, of statements made, often under excitement, by persons smarting under real or fancied wrongs, may prejudice the public mind, and cause the judgment of conviction to be passed long before the day of trial has arrived. When that day of trial comes, the rule has been reversed, and the presumption of guilt has been substituted for the presumption of innocence. The chances of a fair and impartial trial are diminished. Suppose the charge to be utterly groundless. If every preliminary ex parte complaint which may be made before a police magistrate may, with entire impunity, be published and scattered broadcast over the land, then the character of the innocent, who may be the victim of a conspiracy, or of charges proved afterwards to have arisen entirely from misapprehension, may be cloven down, without any malice on the part of the publisher. The nance to any such distinction. See also Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 78; Terry v. Fellows, 21 La. Ann. 375.

¹ 2 Camp. 363. Compare with this and the cases cited in the preceding note, Ryalls v. Leader, L. R. 1 Exch. 265; Smith v. Scott, 2 C. & K. 569; Ackerman v. Jones, 37 N. Y. Sup. C. R. 42. I:

is clear that the report is not privileged, if accompanied with injurious comments. Stiles v. Nokes, 7 East, 49d; Commonwealth v. Blanding, 3 Pick. 364; 15 Am. Dec. 214; Usher v. Severance, 20 Me. 9, 37 Am. Dec. 31; Pittcock v. O'Neill, 63 Pa. St. 253, 3 Am. Rep. 544.

refutation of slander, in such cases, generally follows its propagation at distant intervals, and brings often but an imperfect balm to wounds which have become festered, and perhaps incurable. It is not to be denied that occasionally the publication of such proceedings is productive of good, and promotes the ends of justice. But, in such cases, the publisher must find his justification, not in privilege, but the truth of the charges."¹

Privilege of Publishers of News.

Among the inventions of modern times, by which the world has been powerfully influenced, and from which civilization has received a new and wonderful impulse, must be classed the newspaper. Beginning with a small sheet, insignificant alike in matter and appearance, published at considerable intervals, and including but few in its visits, it has become the daily vehicle, to almost every family in the land, of information from all quarters of the globe, and upon every subject. Through it, and by means of the electric telegraph, the public proceedings of every civilized country, the debates of the leading legislative bodies, the events of war, the triumphs of peace, the storms in the physical, and the agitations in the moral and mental world, are brought home to the knowledge of every reading person, and, to a very large extent, before the day is over on which the events have taken place. And not public events merely are discussed and described, but the actions and words of public men are made public property; and any person sufficiently eminent or notorious to become an object of public interest will find his movements chronicled in this index of the times. Every party has its newspaper organs; every shade of opinion on political, religious, literary, moral, industrial, or financial questions has its representative; every locality has its press to advocate its claims, and advance its interests, and even the days regarded as sacred have their special papers to furnish reading suitable for the time. The newspaper is also the medium by means of which all classes of the people communicate with each other concerning their wants and desires, and through which they offer their wares, and seek bargains. As

¹ Stanley v. Webb, 4 Sandf. 21, 30. See this case approved and followed in Cincinnati Gazette Co. v. Timberlake, 10 Ohio St. 618, where, however, the court are careful not to express an opinion whether a publication of the proceedings on preliminary examinations may not be privileged, where the accused is present with full opportunity of defence. See Rex v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563; Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 556; Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 473; Charlton v. Watton, 6 C. & P. 585; Behrens v. Allen, 3 F. & F. 185; Usher v. Severance, 20 Me. 9, 37 Am. Dec. 33.

it has gradually increased in value, and in the extent and variety of its contents, so the exactions of the community upon its conductors have also increased, until it is demanded of the newspaper publisher that he shall daily spread before his readers a complete summary of the events transpiring in the world, public or private, so far as those readers can reasonably be supposed to take an interest in them; and he who does not comply with this demand must give way to him who will.

The newspaper is also one of the chief means for the education of the people. The highest and the lowest in the scale of intelligence resort to its columns for information; it is read by those who read nothing else, and the best minds of the age make it the medium of communication with each other on the highest and most abstruse subjects. Upon politics it may be said to be the chief educator of the people; its influence is potent in every legislative body; it gives tone and direction to public sentiment on each important subject as it arises; and no administration in any free country ventures to overlook or disregard an element so pervading in its influence, and withal so powerful.

And yet it may be doubted if the newspaper, as such, has ever influenced at all the current of the common law, in any particular important to the protection of the publishers. The railway has become the successor of the king's highway, and the plastic rules of the common law have accommodated themselves to the new condition of things; but the changes accomplished by the public press seem to have passed unnoticed in the law, and, save only where modifications have been made by constitution or statute, the publisher of the daily paper occupies to-day the position in the courts that the village gossip and retailer of scandal occupied two hundred years ago, with no more privilege and no more protection.

We quote from an opinion by the Supreme Court of New York, in a case where a publisher of a newspaper was prosecuted for libel, and where the position was taken by counsel, that the publication was privileged: "It is made a point in this case, and was insisted upon in argument, that the editor of a public newspaper is at liberty to copy an item of news from another paper, giving at the same time his authority, without subjecting himself to legal responsibility, however libellous the article may be, unless express malice be shown. It was conceded that the law did not, and ought not, to extend a similar indulgence to any other class of citizens; but the counsel said that a distinction should be made in favor of editors, on the ground of the peculiarity of their occupation. That their business was to disseminate useful knowledge among the people; to publish such matters relating to the current events of the day happening at home or abroad as fell within the sphere of their observation, and as the public curiosity or taste demanded; and that it was impracticable for them at all times to ascertain the truth or falsehood of the various statements contained in other journals. We were also told that if the law were not thus indulgent, some legislative relief might become necessary for the protection of this class of citizens. Undoubtedly if it be desirable to pamper a depraved public appetite or taste, if there be any such, by the republication of all the falsehoods and calumnies upon private character that may find their way into the press, — to give encouragement to the widest possible circulation of these vile and defamatory publications by protecting the retailers of them, — some legislative interference will be necessary, for no countenance can be found for the irresponsibility claimed in the common law. That reprobates the libeller, whether author or publisher, and subjects him to both civil and criminal responsibility. His offence is there ranked with that of the receiver of stolen goods, the perjurer and suborner of perjury, the disturber of the public peace, the conspirator, and other offenders of like character." And again: "The act of publication is an adoption of the original calumny, which must be defended in the same way as if invented by the defendant. The republication assumes and indorses the truth of the charge, and when called on by the aggrieved party, the publisher should be held strictly to the proof. If he chooses to become the indorser and retailer of private scandal, without taking the trouble of inquiring into the truth of what he publishes, there is no ground for complaint if the law, which is as studious to protect the character as the property of the citizen, holds him to this responsibility. The rule is not only just and wise in itself, but if steadily and inflexibly adhered to and applied by courts and juries, will greatly tend to the promotion of truth, good morals, and common decency on the part of the press, by inculcating caution and inquiry into the truth of charges against private character before they are published and circulated throughout the community."¹

¹ Hotchkiss v. Orphant, 2 Hill, 510-513, per Nelson, Ch. J. And see King v. Root, 4 Wend. 113-138, 21 Am. Dec. 102, per Walworth, Chancellor. "It has been urged upon you that conductors of the public press are entitled to peculiar indulgences and have special rights and privileges. The law recognizes no such peculiar rights, privileges, or claims to indulgence. They have no rights but such as are common to all. They have just the same rights that the rest of the community have, and no more. They have the right to publish the truth, but no right to publish falsehood to the injury of others with impunity." Instructions approved in Sheckell v. Jackson, 10 Cush. 25. And see Palmer v. Concord, 48 N. H. 211. In People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 136, 16 Am. Rep. 528, a publication

If this strong condemnatory language were confined to the cases where private character is dragged before the public for detraction and abuse, to pander to a depraved appetite for scandal, its propriety and justice and the force of its reasons would be at once conceded. But a very large proportion of what the newspapers spread before the public relates to matters of public concern, in which, nevertheless, individuals figure, and must therefore be mentioned in any account or discussion. To a great extent, also, the information comes from abroad; the publisher can have no knowledge concerning it, and no inquiries which he could make would be likely to give him more definite information, unless he delays the publication until it ceases to be of value to his readers. Whatever view the law may take, the public sentiment does not brand the publisher of a newspaper as libeller, conspirator, or villain, because the telegraph despatches transmitted to him from all parts of the world, without any knowledge on his part concerning the facts, are published in his paper, in reliance upon the prudence, care, and honesty of those who have charge of the lines of communication, and whose interest it is to be vigilant and truthful. The public demand and expect accounts of every important meeting, of every important trial, and of all the events which have a bearing upon trade and business, or upon political affairs. It is impossible that these shall be given in all cases without matters being mentioned derogatory to individuals; and if the question were a new one in the law, it might be worthy of inquiry whether some line of distinction could not be drawn which would protect the publisher when giving in good faith such items of news as would be proper, if true, to spread before the public, and which he gives in the regular course of his employment, in pursuance of a public demand, and without any negligence, as they come to him from the usual and legitimate sources, which he has reason to rely upon; at the same time leaving him liable when he makes his columns the vehicle of private gossip, detraction, and malice.

regarding a pending cause calculated to bring public odium upon the court in respect to its treatment of the case, was punished as a contempt of court. See also Republica v. Oswald, 1 Dull. 313, 1 Am. Dec. 249; Republica v. Passmore, 3 Yeates. 441, 2 Am. Dec. 358; People v. Freer, 1 Caines, 518; Tenney's Case, 23 N. H. 102; Staroc's Case, 48 N. H. 428; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 384; State v. Frew, 24 W. Va. 410. But not publications as to a past proceeding. Cheadle v.

State, 110 Ind. 301, 11 N. E. 425. As to the power in England to punish the like conduct as a contempt, see The King v. Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 218; The Queen v. Lefroy, L. R. 8 Q. B. 134, 2 Moak, 250. But in Storey v. People, 79 Ill. 45, 22 Am. Rep. 158, it was held a publisher could not be punished as for contempt for an article reflecting on the grand jury, because, under the guaranty of freedom of the press in the Constitution of Illinois, he was entitled to jury trial.

The question, however, is not new, and when the authorities are examined it appears that they have generally held the proprietors of public journals to the same rigid responsibility with all other persons who publish what is injurious. If what they give as news proves untrue as well as damaging to individuals, malice in the publication is presumed.¹ It is no excuse that what was published was copied without comment from another paper,² or was given as a rumor merely,³ or that the source of the information was stated as a part of the publication,⁴ or that the publication was made in the paper without the knowledge of the proprietor, as an advertisement or otherwise,⁵ or that it is a correct and impartial account of a public meeting,⁶ or that it is the speech of a murderer at the gallows,⁷ or that it has to do with the conduct of the plaintiff as a public official.⁸ Criticisms

¹ Barnes v. Campbell, 59 N. H. 128; McAlister v. Detroit Free Press Co., 76 Mich. 358, 43 N. W. 431; Pratt v. Pioneer Press Co., 30 Minn. 41, 14 N. W. 62; Mallory v. Pioneer Press Co., 34 Minn. 521, 26 N. W. 694. See Bronson v. Bruce, 59 Mich. 467, 26 N. W. 671; Negley v. Farrow, 69 Md. 158. [Upton v. Hume, 24 Oreg. 420, 33 Pac. 810, 21 L. R. A. 433.]

² Hotchkiss v. Orphant, 2 Hll. 510. [Upton v. Hume, 24 Oreg. 420, 33 Pac. 810, 21 L. R. A. 433; Burt v. Advertiser N. Co., 154 Mass. 235, 25 N. E. 1, 16 L. R. A. 97.] Even though they be preceded by the statement that they are so copied: Sanford v. Bennett, 24 N. Y. 20; and accompanied by a statement of disbelief. Com. v. Chambers, 15 Phila. 415.

³ Wheeler v. Stellas, 3 Ill. 348; Mason v. Mason, 4 N. H. 110. See State v. Burman, 15 La. Ann. 166; Parker v. McQueen, 8 B. Monr. 16; Sans v. Joeris, 14 Wis. 668; Hampton v. Wilson, 4 Dev. 468; Beardsley v. Bridgman, 17 Iowa, 290; Hawkins v. Lumsden, 10 Wis. 359; Knight v. Foster, 30 N. H. 576; Carpenter v. Bailey, 54 N. H. 500; Farr v. Rasco, 9 Mich. 553; Sheahan v. Collins, 20 Ill. 325; McDonald v. Woodruff, 2 Dill. 244; Kex v. Newman, 1 El. & Bl. 288.

⁴ Dole v. Lyon, 10 Johns. 447, 6 Am. Dec. 346; Mages v. Weeks, 4 Wend. 559; Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. 632; Hotchkiss v. Orphant, 2 Hll. 510; Cates v. Kellogg, 9 Ind. 593; Fowler v. Clichester, 26 Ohio St. 9; Cummerford v. McAvoy, 15 Ill. 311.

⁵ Antres v. Wells, 7 Johns. 269, 5 Am. Dec. 257; Haff v. Bennett, 4 Sandf. 120,

6 N. Y. 337; Marten v. Van Schaick, 4 Paige, 470; Commonwealth v. Nichols, 10 Met. 259.

⁶ Dawson v. Duncan, 7 El. & Bl. 229.

See Lewis v. Few, 5 Johns. 1.

⁷ Sanford v. Bennett, 24 N. Y. 20.

⁸ King v. Root, 4 Wend. 113, 21 Am. Dec. 102. The action was for a libel, published in the "New York American," reflecting upon Root, who was candidate for lieutenant-governor. We quote from the opinion of the chancellor: "It is insisted that this libel was a privileged communication. If so, the defendants were under no obligation to prove the truth of the charge, and the party libelled had no right to recover, unless he established malice in fact, or showed that the editors knew the charge to be false. The effect of such a doctrine would be deplorable. Instead of protecting, it would be destroying the freedom of the press, if it were understood that an editor could publish what he pleased against candidates for office, without being answerable for the truth of such publications. No honest man could afford to be an editor, and no man who had any character to lose would be a candidate for office under such a construction of the law of libel. The only safe rule to adopt in such cases is to permit editors to publish what they please in relation to the character and qualifications of candidates for office, but holding them responsible for the truth of what they publish." Notwithstanding the deplorable consequences here predicted from too great license to the press, it is matter on works of art and literary productions are allowable, but they must be fair and temperate, and the author himself must not be criticised under cover of a criticism of his works; nor must it be assumed that because he seeks the favor of the public for his productions, he thereby makes his private character and conduct public property.¹ For further privilege it would seem that publishers of news must appeal to the protection of public opinion, or they must call upon the legislature for such modification of the law as may appear important to their just protection.

But there is a difference between the mere publication of items of news in which the public may take an interest, as news merely, and the discussion of matters which concern the public because they are their own affairs. It is one thing to reproduce in the newspaper injurious reports respecting individuals, however willing the public may be to hear them, and a very different thing to discuss the public conduct of a high official. A private individual only challenges public criticism when his conduct becomes or threatens to be injurious to others; public characters and public institutions invite it at all times. The distinction is palpable, and it indicates a line of privilege which is by no means unimportant to the publishers of public journals, even when their right is determined by the same standard which determines the right of all other persons. If they may not publish news with impunity, they may at least discuss with freedom and boldness all matters of of daily observation that the press, in its comments upon public events and public men, proceeds in all respect as though it were privileged; public opinion would not sanction prosecutions by candidates for office for publications amounting to technical libels, but which were nevertheless published without malice in fact; and the man who has a "character to lose" presents himself for the suffrages of his fellow-citizens in the full reliance that detraction by the public press will be corrected through the same instrumentality, and that unmerited abuse will react on the public opinion in his favor. Meantime the press is gradually becoming more just, liberal, and dignified in its dealings with political opponents, and vituperation is much less common, reckless, and bitter now than it was at the beginning of the century, when repression was more often resorted to as a remedy. [That fair criticism of public men is allowable, see Burt v. Advertiser N. Co., public concern, because this is the privilege of every one.¹ The privilege extends to matters of government in all its grades and all its branches; to the performance of official duty by all classes of public officers and agents; to the courts, the prisons, the reformatories, the public charities, and the public schools; to all means of transportation and carriage, even when in private hands and management. But the privilege is not limited to these; but extends to all schemes, projects, enterprises, and organizations of a semi-public nature, which invite the public favor, and depend for their success on public confidence.² The soundness of a bank or an insurance company, the humanity of the managers of a private asylum, the integrity of a board of trade, the just management of a public fair, are all matters which directly and immediately concern the interest of the public. That interest can only be adequately protected through the liberty of public discussion, and to deny this would be to offer impunity to fraudulent schemes and enterprises. The law invites such discussion, because of the public interest in it, and it extends its protection to all publications which do not appear on their face, and are not shown otherwise, to have been inspired by malice. The publisher of a newspaper may open his columns to them freely, so long as they are restricted within the limits of good faith, not because he makes the furnishing of news his business, but because the discussion is the common right and liberty of every citizen.³

154 Mass. 238, 23 N. E. 1, 13 L. R. A. 97, and note. See also Smith v. Burrus, 106 Mo. 94, 16 S. W. 881, 13 L. R. A. 59, 27 Am. St. 329.]

¹ See Cooper v. Stone, 24 Wend. 454; Cooper v. Barber, 24 Wend. 105; Cooper v. Greeley, 1 Denio, 347. A newspaper criticism on a play is not privileged. If it goes beyond fair criticism in the jury's opinion it is libellous. Merivale v. Carson, L. R. 20 Q. B. D. 275. As to criticisms on public entertainments, see Fry v. Bennett, 5 Sandf. 54, and 28 N. Y. 324; Dobbin v. Swan, 1 Esp. 28; Green v. Chapman, 4 Bing. N. C. 92. As to how far sermons, preached, but not otherwise published, form a proper subject for comment and criticism by the public press, see Gathercole v. Miall, 15 M. & W. 818. If one sends a communication to a paper which is altered before publication, he is liable for it as published only if he has ratified it as changed. Dawson v. Holt, 11 Lea, 553.

¹ But a newspaper has no peculiar privilege to publish charges of corruption against an officer, or of crime against a candidate. Nugley v. Farrow, 60 Md. 168; Neeb v. Hope, 111 Pa. St. 145, 2 Atl. 608; Branson v. Bruce, 60 Mich. 497, 25 N. W. 671. And see cases, p. 628, note, ante. [Newspapers are not privileged to attempt by their comments to influence the judges of a court and compel them to submit to popular clamor the decision of a particular case before the court. Until the decision has been rendered, the newspapers have no right to comment upon or to criticize what they suppose that it will be. After it is rendered, and not until then, is it properly before the public. Conduct contrary to this rule is a contempt of court and may be punished as such. State v. Bee Pub. Co., 69 Neb. 282, 83 N. W. 204, 60 L. R. A. 195; State v. Tarzwell, 19 Wash. 288, 52 Pac. 1056, 43 L. R. A. 717; People v. Stapleton, 18 Cal. 508, 33 Pac. 197, 23 L. R. A. 787; Cooper v. People, 13 Col. 337, 373, 22

Pac. 730, 6 L. R. A. 430. But it is not a contempt of court to charge a judge, who is a candidate for reelection, with corruption and partiality in the decision of actions already adjudicated. State v. Circuit Court, 97 Wis. 1, 72 N. W. 193, 38 L. R. A. 551, 65 Am. St. 90.]

² See Crane v. Waters, 10 Fed. Rep. 319. Loeb v. J., 25 Alb. Law Jour. 217.

³ The following extracts are made from an opinion in Atkinson v. Detroit Free Press, 46 Mich. 341, 376, 9 N. W. 591, which was a suit for libel in a publication concerning what appeared to be the dishonest bankruptcy of a member of the Detroit Board of Trade. As the case went off on an unimportant point, the extracts are given as the views of the judge from whose opinion they are taken.

"What is a case of privilege? In general terms it may be said to be a case in which the circumstances rebut the presumption of legal malice. By legal malice is meant no more than the wrongful intention which the law always presumes as accompanying a wrongful act, without any proof of malice in fact. Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, 87. If one traduce another, whether knowing him or not, and whether intending to do him an injury or not, the law considers it as done of malice because it is wrongful and intentional. It equally works an injury whether injury was intended or not, and if there was no excuse for the slander, there should be an appropriate remedy. Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, 255. But the presumption of law may be rebutted by the circumstances under which the defamatory words have been uttered or published; and whenever this is the case no right of action can arise, even though the character of the party concerned may have suffered, unless he is able to show that there was malice in fact. Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, 87; Tengood v. Spyring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; Lewis v. Levy, El. Bl. & El. 537; Taylor v. Hawkins, 10 Q. B. 308, 321; Clark v. Molyneaux, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 237; Barrow v. Bell, 7 Gray, 301; Terry v. Fellows, 21 La. Ann. 876; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 408.

The publisher of a newspaper, however, even when responsible for all the actual damage which a party may suffer in consequence

"The privilege in a communication springs from the fact that there existed in the case some obligation or duty to speak or publish on the subject. Sometimes this obligation is mandatory; the duty is either imposed by law, or the circumstances render it so far imperative that the party upon whom it rests must suffer some penalty or loss unless she recognizes and performs it. In such cases the protection should be as conclusive as the duty is imperative. We have an illustration in the case of a witness in court; the law compels him to state what he knows that is relevant and competent in the controversy, and he will not be suffered to refuse if he would. But the conflicts in testimony give abundant evidence that witnesses are frequently mistaken; and if they must testify under a responsibility to civil suits for all mistakes injurious to the reputation of other persons, we should encounter such evasion of process and such suppression of the facts as would in many cases make the truth practically unattainable. In a civil suit against the witness, therefore, the law will not permit malice to be alleged or shown; if the witness testify falsely with evil intent, he may be indicted and punished; but in a civil suit which brings it in question, his evidence must be conclusively presumed to have been given under the inspiration of proper motives. The same conclusive presumption will attend the filing of the necessary pleadings and other papers in a cause, and the arguments of counsel, provided they do not wander from the case for the purposes of vituperation or harmful imputation upon character, conduct, or motives. Torrey v. Field, 10 Vt. 353; Gilbert v. People, 1 Denio, 41; Hoar v. Wood, 3 Met. 193; Strauss v. Meyer, 48 Ill. 358; Jolinson v. Brown, 13 W. Va. 71. But there are other cases in which the privilege is only prima facie and conditional; it exists so far as to rebut any legal presumption of malice, and constitutes a protection until actual malice is shown. It is therefore a privilege conditioned on the publication having been made with proper motives, but the proof of bad motives—or, in other words, of malice in fact—must be made by the party who asserts it. Spill v. Madie, L. R. 4 Ex. 232; Shurtliff v. Stevens, 51 Vt. 501. Such a case is where a voter publicly criticises and condemns the character or conduct of a candidate for public honors; he has a right to do this, and is prima facie protected in his criticism; but if it is made to appear that his privilege is used as a cloak for groundless and malicious assaults, the protection ceases, because the reason on which it rests ceases. The privilege is the handmaid of good faith.

"In the cases of qualified privilege, the duty to speak or publish is not imperative in the sense that a law is violated if it is not recognized; it may be a moral or social duty of imperfect obligation. Lord Campbell, Ch. J., in Harrison v. Bush, 5 E. & B. 344. Indeed, most cases of conditional privilege are cases in which a party may speak or abstain at his option; and if he speaks, it is because others desire and have a right to receive information on some subject which specially of injurious publications in his paper, cannot properly be made liable for exemplary or vindictive damages, if the article comconcerns them, or because in his opinion some moral, social, or political obligation demands it. The law imposes upon no citizen the duty to call the attention of the public to the maladministration of public affairs, or to the misconduct of public servants; but good citizenship may require him to speak, if his real motive in doing so is to bring about a reform of abuses, or to defeat the re-election or re-appointment of an incompetent officer. Palmer v. Concord, 48 N. H. 211, 216. And nothing is plainer than that to hold him to the strict and literal truth of every statement, recital, and possible inference would be to subject the right to conditions making any attempt at public discussion practically worthless. Lord Campbell has well shown in Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344, and especially by his reference to the cases of Rex v. Baile, 21 State Trials, 1, and Fairman v. Ives, 5 B. & Ald. 642, that the law cherishes this right, and regards liberally its exercise for the public good, so that an honest mistake in seeking the proper remedy through the publication will not be suffered to constitute a ground for recovery. Chief Justice Parker thus states the true rule in State v. Burnham, 9 N. H. 34, 41: 'If the end to be attained is justifiable; as, if the object is the removal of an incompetent officer, or to prevent the election of an unsuitable person to office, or, generally, to give useful information to the community or to those who have a right and ought to know, in order that they may act upon such information, the occasion is lawful, and the party may then justify or excuse the publication.' Still more comprehensive is the language of the trial judge in Kelly v. Sherlock, L. R. 1 Q. B. 606, 609: 'Every man has a right to discuss matters of public interest. A clergyman with his flock, an admiral with his fleet, a general with his army, and a judge with his jury,—we are all of us the subjects for public discussion. So also is it matter of public interest, the dispute between the plaintiff [a clergyman] and his organist, and the way in which a church is used: they are all public matters, and may be publicly discussed. And provided a man, whether in a newspaper or not, publishes a comment on a matter of public interest, fair in tone, and temperate, although he may express opinions that you may not agree with, that is not a subject for an action for libel; because whoever fills a public position renders himself open to public discussion, and if any part of his public acts is wrong, he must accept the attack as a necessary though unpleasant circumstance attaching to his position. In this country, everything, either by speech or writing, may be discussed for the benefit of the public.' This strong language is approved in Kelly v. Tinsling, L. R. 1 Q. B. 603; and in Henwood v. Harrison, L. R. 7 C. P. 606, 622, the principle is declared to be 'a universal one, that the public convenience is to be preferred to private interests, and that communications which the interests of society require to be unfettered may freely be made by persons acting honestly without actual malice, notwithstanding that they involve relevant comments condemnatory of individuals.' The same principle is found in Toogood v. Spyring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; Whitely v. Adams, 15 C. B. (N. S.), 417; Gott v. Pulsifer, 122 Mass. 235; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 403; Shurtleff v. Stevens, 51 Vt. 501.

[And after recapitulating the facts:]

'There is no room for plausible suggestion that these matters were not of public concern. The Detroit Board of Trade is a public institution, in the sense that it challenges public confidence by giving assurances that it is composed of individuals whose business integrity is known and undoubted. The public had reason to trust and confide in Clark, because he had been accepted as a suitable and proper member for this body; and reason is found in this record for the belief that his associates trusted him because he had won their confidence, and not because of any actual responsibility. It is as important to the city of Detroit that it should have an honorable and trustworthy board of trade—a board that would reject and spurn association with one known or believed to be unreliable and dishonest—as it is that it should have a trustworthy mayor or conplained of was inserted in his paper without his personal knowledge, and he has been guilty of no negligence in the selection of troller, or police authorities or other public functionaries. The business prosperity of a commercial city must depend quite as largely upon the honor and integrity of its commercial classes as upon the character of its political rulers; and confidence in these must cease unless fraud, when it appears, can be publicly rebuked.

"The defendant is publisher of a daily journal, established to give the facts of important current events, and to discuss for the information and instruction of its readers, public affairs. This case affords neither occasion nor excuse for any general discussion of the liberty of the press in giving news; what was done here might have been done by any individual in a pamphlet under the same privilege that protects a newspaper. Nor has the fact that the liberty of the press is frequently and most grossly abused any relevancy in this case; we are concerned only with the question whether the liberty of public discussion was abused in the particular case. The conductors of the defendant's paper, in the regular course of their business, had had brought to their attention the facts of a transaction which no one ventures to defend. This transaction in its direct consequences was calculated to defraud a number of persons of considerable sums of money; in its indirect consequences it was likely to disturb the prevailing confidence in an important public institution, and to injure the business reputation of the city. They investigated the case, and laid the results before the public. No doubt they might have used more carefully-guarded language, and avoided irritating head lines; but in a case of palpable fraud, which this seemed to be and was, something must be excused to honest indignation; for the beneficial ends to be subserved by public discussion would, in large measure, be defeated if dishonesty must be handled with delicacy, and fraud spoken of with such circumspection and careful and differential choice of words as to make it appear in the discussion a matter of indifference. It is complained that the paper followed its first publication with a review of the whole case a week after it was all settled; but this review was quite as proper as the first notice. No settlement could relieve the case of its worse aspects. If Clark had repented before he left Windsor, and had followed his money in its remarkable journey, by hack and sail-boat, on foot and in carriage, and recovered it for the use of his creditors, he ought still to have been brought to the bar of public opinion to be dealt with for his extraordinary conduct whereby a considerable percentage of his assets had already been wasted. Mott v. Dawson, 4d Iowa, 533. The defendant's paper would have been unworthy of the confidence and support of commercial men if its conductors had shut their eyes to such a transaction. If the plaintiff was not in fault, then it was his misfortune that it was impossible to deal with the case without bringing him into the discussion.

"The communication in this case being privileged, and there being in its terms no manifest abuse of the privilege, it was incumbent on the plaintiff to give some evidence of malice before he was entitled to ask a verdict in his favor. Taylor v. Hawkins, 10 Q. B. 308, 321; Henwood v. Harrison, L. R. 7 C. B. 609. The case therefore failed to be made out. If such a discussion of a matter of public interest were prima facie an unlawful act, and the author were obliged to justify every statement by evidence of its literal truth, the liberty of public discussion would be unworthy of being named as a privilege of value. It would be better to restore the censorship of a despotism than to assume to give a liberty which can only be accepted under a responsibility that is always threatening, and may at any time be ruinous. A censure in advance after despotic methods would be less objectionable than a caution in damages after, in good faith, the privilege had been exercised. No public discussion of important matters involving the conduct and motives of individuals could possibly be at the same time valuable and safe under the rules for which the plaintiff contends. It is a plausible suggestion that strict rules of responsibility are essential to the protection of reputation; but it is most deceptive, for every man agents, and no personal misconduct, and is not shown habitually to make his paper the vehicle of detraction and malice.¹

Publication of Legislative Proceedings.

Although debates, reports, and other proceedings in legislative bodies are privileged, it does not seem to follow that the publication of them is always equally privileged. The English decisions do not place such publications on any higher ground of right than any other communication through the public press. A member of Parliament, it is said, has a right to publish his speech, but it must not be made the vehicle of slander against any individual, and if it is, it is a libel.² And in another case: "A member of [the House of Commons] has spoken what he thought material, and what he was at liberty to speak, in his character as a member of that house. So far he was privileged; but he has not stopped there, but, unauthorized by the house, has chosen to publish an account of that speech, in what he has pleased to call a more corrected form, and in that publication has thrown out reflections injurious to the character of an individual." And he was convicted and fined for the libel.³

The circumstance that the publication was unauthorized by the house was alluded to in this opinion, but the rule of law would seem to be unaffected by it, since it was afterwards held that an order of the house directing a report made to it to be published did not constitute any protection to the official printer, who had

of common discernment, who observes what is taking place around him, and what influences control public opinion, cannot fail to know that reputation is best protected when the press is free. Impose shackles upon it and the protection fails when the need is greatest. Who would venture to expose a swindler or a blackmailer, or to give in detail the facts of a bank failure or other corporate defalcation, if every word and sentence must be uttered with judicial calmness and impartiality as between the swindler and his victims, and every fact and every inference be justified by unquestionable legal evidence? The unalloyed truth is that honesty reaps the chief advantages of free discussion; and fortunately it is honesty also that is least liable to suffer serious injury when the discussion incidentally affects it unjustly." And see Mimer v. Detroit Post & Tribune, 49 Mich. 353, 13 N. W. 773.

¹ Daily Post Co. v. McArthur, and Detroit Free Press v. Same, 10 Mich. 447; Perret v. New Orleans Times, 25 La. Ann. 170; Scripps v. Reilly, 35 Mich. 371; Same v. Same, 38 Mich. 10; Evening News v. Tryon, 42 Mich. 523, 4 N. W. 207, 35 Am. Rep. 459. A statutory provision that in actions against newspapers only actual damages to property, business, &c., should be recovered, if the publication was in good faith and did not involve a criminal charge, and if, as soon as possible, a correction was published, is bad: a class of citizens cannot be thus favored nor can damages be thus limited. Parker v. Detroit Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 569, 40 N. W. 731. But a like statute has been upheld in Minnesota. Allen v. Pioneer Press Co., 40 Minn. 117, 41 N. W. 936.

² Rex v. Lord Abington, 2 Esp. 226.

³ Rex v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273, 278.

published it in the regular course of his duty, in compliance with such order. All the power of the house was not sufficient to protect its printer in obeying the order to make this publication; and a statute was therefore passed to protect in the future persons publishing parliamentary reports, votes, or other proceedings, by order of either house.¹

It has been intimated, however, that what a representative is privileged to address to the house of which he is a member, he is also privileged to address to his constituents; and that the bona fide publication for that purpose of his speech in the house is protected.² And the practice in this country appears to proceed on this idea; the speeches and proceedings in Congress being fully reported by the press, and the exemption of the member from ¹ Stat. 3 and 4 Victoria, c. 9. The case was that of Stockdale v. Hansard, very fully reported in 9 Ad. & El. 1. See also 11 Ad. & El. 253. The Messrs. Hansard were printers to the House of Commons, and had printed by order of that house the report of the inspectors of prisons, in which a book, published by Stockdale, and found among the prisoners in Newgate, was described as obscene and indecent. Stockdale brought an action against the printers for libel, and recovered judgment. Lord Denman, presiding on the trial, said that "the fact of the House of Commons having directed Messrs. Hansard to publish all their parliamentary reports is no justification for them, or for any bookseller who publishes any parliamentary report containing a libel against any man." The house resented this opinion and resolved, "that the power of publishing such of its reports, votes, and proceedings as it shall deem necessary or conducive to the public interests is an essential incident to the constitutional functions of Parliament, more especially of this house as the representative portion of it." They also resolved that for any person to institute a suit in order to call its privileges in question, or for any court to decide upon matters of privilege inconsistent with the determination of either house, was a breach of privilege. Stockdale, however, brought other actions, and again recovered. When he sought to enforce these judgments by executions, his solicitor and himself were proceeded against for contempt of the house, and imprisoned.

While in prison Stockdale commenced a further suit. The sheriffs, who had been ordered by the House of Commons to restore the money which they had collected, were, on the other hand, compelled by attachments from the Queen's Bench to pay it over to Stockdale. In this complicated state of affairs, the proper and dignified mode of relieving the difficulty by the passage of a statute making such publications privileged for the future was adopted. For an account of this controversy, in addition to what appears in the law reports, see May, Law and Practice of Parliament 156-169, 2d ed.; May, Constitutional History, c. 7. A case in some respects similar to that of Stockdale v. Hansard is that of Popham v. Pickett, 7 Hurl. & Nor. 891. The defendant, the proprietor of a newspaper, was sued for publishing a report made by a medical officer of health to a vestry board, in pursuance of the statute, and which reflected severely upon the conduct of the plaintiff. The publication was made without any comment, and as a part of the proceedings of the vestry board. It was held not to be privileged, notwithstanding the statute provided for the publication of the report by the vestry board, — which however, had not yet been made. A substantially correct report of an open meeting of a town council is privileged. Wallis v. Bazel, 34 La. Ann. 131.

² Lives of Chief Justices, by Lord Campbell, Vol. III, p. 167; Davison v. Duncan, 7 El. & Bl. 229, 233.

being called to account for his speech being apparently supposed to extend to its publication also. When complete publicity is thus practised, perhaps every speech published should be regarded as addressed bona fide by the representative, not only to the house, but also to his constituents. But whether that view be taken or not, if publication is provided for by law, as in the case of Congressional debates, the publishing must be considered as privileged.

The Jury as Judges of the Law.

In a considerable number of the State constitutions it is provided that, in prosecutions for libel, the jury shall have a right to determine the law and the fact. In some it is added, "as in other cases;" in others, "under the direction of the court." For the necessity of these provisions we must recur to the rulings of the English judges in the latter half of the last century, and the memorable contests in the courts and in Parliament, resulting at last in the passage of Mr. Fox's Libel Act, declaratory of the rights of juries in prosecutions for libel.

In the year 1770, Woodfall, the printer of the "Morning Advertiser," was tried before Lord Mansfield for having published in his paper what was alleged to be a libel on the king; and his lordship told the jury that all they had to consider was, whether the defendant had published the paper set out in the information, and whether the innuendoes, imputing a particular meaning to particular words, were true, as that "the K —" meant his Majesty King George III.; but that they were not to consider whether the publication was, as alleged in the information, false and malicious, those being mere formal words; and that whether the letter was libellous or innocent was a pure question of law, upon which the opinion of the court might be taken by a demurrer, or a motion in arrest of judgment. His charge obviously required the jury, if satisfied the publication was made, and had the meaning attributed to it, to render a verdict of guilty, whether they believed the publication false and malicious or not; in other words, to convict the party of guilt, notwithstanding they might believe the essential element of criminality to be wanting. The jury, dissatisfied with these instructions, and unwilling to make their verdict cover matters upon which they were not at liberty to exercise their judgment, returned a verdict of "guilty of printing and publishing only;" but this the court afterwards rejected as ambiguous, and ordered a new trial.¹

In Miller's case, which was tried the same year, Lord Mansfield instructed the jury as follows: "The direction I am going to give you is with a full conviction and confidence that it is the language of the law." "If you by your verdict find the defendant not guilty, the fact established by that verdict is, he did not publish a paper of that meaning; that fact is established, and there is an end of the prosecution. You are to try that fact, because your verdict establishes that fact, that he did not publish it. If you find that, according to your judgment, your verdict is final, and if you find it otherwise it is between God and your consciences, for that is the basis upon which all verdicts ought to be founded; then the fact finally established by your verdict, if you find him guilty, is, that he printed and published a paper of the tenor and of the meaning set forth in the information; that is the only fact finally established by your verdict; and whatever fact is finally established never can be controverted in any shape whatsoever. But you do not by that verdict give an opinion, or establish whether it is or not lawful to print or publish a paper of the tenor and meaning in the information; for, supposing the defendant is found guilty, and the paper is such a paper as by the law of the land may be printed and published, the defendant has a right to have judgment respited, and to have it carried to the highest court of judicature."¹

Whether these instructions were really in accordance with the law of England, it would be of little importance now to inquire. They were assailed as not only destructive to the liberty of the press, but as taking from the jury that right to cover by their verdict all the matter charged and constituting the alleged offence, as it was conceded was their right in all other cases. In no other case could the jury be required to find a criminal intent which they did not believe to exist. In the House of Lords they were assailed by Lord Chatham; and Lord Camden, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in direct contradiction to Lord Mansfield, declared his instructions not to be the law of England. Nevertheless, with the judges generally, the view of Lord Mansfield prevailed, and it continued to be enforced for more than twenty years, so far as juries would suffer themselves to be controlled by the directions of the courts.

The act known as Mr. Fox's Libel Act was passed in 1792, against the protest of Lord Thurlow and five other lords, who predicted from it "the confusion and destruction of the law of England." It was entitled "An act to remove doubts respecting the functions of juries in cases of libel," and it declared and enacted that the jury might give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty, upon the whole matter put in issue upon the indictment or information, and should not be required or directed by the court or judge before whom it should be tried to find the defendant guilty, merely on the proof of the publication of the paper charged to be a libel, and of the sense ascribed to the same in the indictment or information: Provided, that on every such trial the court or judge before whom it should be tried should, according to their discretion, give their opinion and direction to the jury on the matter in issue, in like manner as in other criminal cases: Provided also, that nothing therein contained should prevent the jury from finding a special verdict in their discretion, as in other criminal cases: Provided also, that in case the jury should find the defendant guilty, he might move in arrest of judgment on such ground and in such manner as by law he might have done before the passing of the act.

¹ 20 State Trials, 870, 891. For an account of the raising of the same question in Pennsylvania, see early as 1692, see The Forum, by David Paul Brown, Vol. I. p. 280.

Whether this statute made the jury the rightful judges of the law as well as of the facts in libel cases, or whether, on the other hand, it only placed these cases on the same footing as other criminal prosecutions, leaving it the duty of the jury to accept and follow the instructions of the judge upon the criminal character of the publication, are questions upon which there are still differences of opinion. Its friends have placed the former construction upon it, while others adopt the opposite view.¹

In the United States the disposition of the early judges was to adopt the view of Lord Manfield as a correct exposition of the respective functions of court and jury in cases of libel; and on the memorable trial of Callendar, which led to the impeachment of Judge Chase, of the United States Supreme Court, the right of the jury to judge of the law was the point in dispute upon which that judge first delivered his opinion, and afterwards invited argument. The charge there was of libel upon President Adams, and it was prosecuted under the Sedition Law, so called, which expressly provided that the jury should have the right to determine the law and the fact, under the direction of the court, as in other cases. The defence insisted that the Sedition Law was unconstitutional and void, and proposed to argue that question to the jury, but were stopped by the court. The question of the constitutionality of a statute, it was said by Judge Chase, was a judicial question, and could only be passed upon by the court; the jury might determine the law applicable to the case under the statute, but they could not inquire into the validity of the statute by which that right was given.¹

¹ Compare Forsyth on Trial by Jury, c. 12, with May's Constitutional History of England, c. 9.

Whatever may be the true import of Mr. Fox's Libel Act, it would seem clear that a constitutional provision which allows the jury to determine the law, refers the questions of law to them for their rightful decision. Wherever such provisions exist, the jury, we think, are the judges of the law; and the argument of counsel upon it is rightfully addressed to both the court and the jury. Nor can the distinction be maintained which was taken by Judge Chase, and which forbids the jury considering questions affecting the constitutional validity of statutes. When the question before them is, what is the law of the case, the highest and paramount law of the case cannot be shut from view. Nevertheless, we conceive it to be proper, and indeed the duty of the judge, to instruct the jury upon the law in these cases, and it is to be expected that they will generally adopt and follow his opinion.

Where, however, the constitution provides that they shall be judges of the law "as in other cases," or may determine the law and the fact "under the direction of the court," we must perhaps conclude that the intention has been simply to put libel cases on the same footing with any other criminal prosecutions,² and that the jury will be expected to receive the law from the court.

¹ Wharton's State Trials, 688.

² "By the last clause of the sixth section of the eighth article of the Constitution of this State, it is declared that 'in all indictments for libels the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts under the direction of the court, as in other cases.' It would seem from this that the framers of our Bill of Rights did not imagine that juries were rightfully judges of law and fact in criminal cases, independently of the directions of courts. Their right to judge of the law is a right to be exercised only under the direction of the court; and if they go aside from that direction and determine the law incorrectly, they depart from their duty, and commit a public wrong; and this in criminal as well as in civil cases." Montgomery v. State, 11 Ohio, 421, 427. See also, State v. Allen, 1 McCord, 525; State v. Jay, 34 N. J. 303, 370.

The Constitution of Pennsylvania declares that "in all indictments for libels the jury shall have a right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court, as in other cases." In Pit- tock v. O'Neill, 63 Pa. St. 255, 3 Am. Rep. 544, Sharswood, J. says: "There can be no doubt that both in criminal and civil cases the court may express to the jury their opinion as to whether the publication is libellous. The difference is that in criminal cases they are not bound to do so, and if they do, their opinion is not binding on the jury, who may give a general verdict in opposition to it; and if that verdict is for the defendant, a new trial cannot be granted against his consent. As our declaration of rights succinctly expresses it, the jury have the right to determine the law and the facts in indictments for libel, as in other cases. But in civil cases the judge is bound to instruct the jury as to whether the publication is libellous, supposing the innuendoes to be true; and if that instruction is disregarded, the verdict will be set aside as contrary to law. In England, the courts have recently disregarded, to some extent, this plain distinction between criminal and civil proceedings. It appears to be put upon the ground that Mr. Fox's act, though limited in terms to indictments and informations, was declar-civil suits to recover damages for slander or libel, the truth is generally a complete defence, if pleaded and established.¹ In criminal prosecutions it was formerly not so. The basis of the prosecution being that the libel was likely to disturb the peace and order of society, that liability was supposed to be all the greater if the injurious charges were true, as a man would be more likely to commit a breach of the peace when the matters alleged against him were true than if they were false, in which latter case he might, perhaps, afford to treat them with contempt.² Hence arose the common maxim, “The greater the truth, the greater the libel,” which subjected the law on this subject to a great deal of ridicule and contempt. The constitutional provisions we have quoted generally make the truth a defence if published with good motives and for justifiable ends. Precisely what showing shall establish good motives and justifiable occasion must be settled by future decisions. In one case the suggestion was thrown out that proof of the truth of the charge alone might be sufficient,³ but this was not an authoritative decision, and it could tory of the law in all cases of libel upon what principle of construction, however, it is not very easy to understand. It is there the approved practice for the judge in civil actions, after explaining to the jury the legal definition of a libel, to leave to them the question whether the publication upon which the action is founded falls within that definition. Folgard's Stark, 202; Baylis v. Lawrence, 11 A. & E. 320; Farmer v. Coupland, 6 M. & W. 135; Campbell v. Spottiswoode, 8 B. & S. 781; Cox v. Lee, L. R. 4 Exch. 284. These cases were followed in Shattuck v. Allen, 4 Gray, 340. Yet it is clearly held that a verdict for the defendant upon that issue will be set aside, and a new trial granted. Hakewell v. Ingram, 28 Eng. Law & Eq. 413. “Though in criminal proceedings for libel,” says Jones, Ch. J., “there may be no review, in civil matters there are cases in which verdicts for the defendant are set aside upon the ground that the matter was a libel, though the jury found it was not.” This must be conceded to be an anomaly; and it will be best to avoid a practice which leads to such a result. The law, indeed, may be considered as settled in this State by long practice, never questioned, but incidentally confirmed in McConkle v. Binns, 5 Binn. 340; and Hays v. Brierty, 4 Watts, 382. It was held in the case last cited that where words of a dubious import are used, the plaintiff has a right to aver their meaning by innuendo, and the truth of such innuendo is for the jury. In New York, since the recent English cases, the question has been fully discussed and fully considered in Snyder v. Andrews, 6 Barb. 43; Green v. Telfair, 20 Barb. 11; Hunt v. Bennett, 19 N. Y. 173; and the law established on its old foundations.” Under like provisions in Tennessee, it is held no error to charge that, if the jury finds certain things true, the publication is prima facie libellous. Banner Pub. Co. v. State, 16 Lea, 178. Although the jury are judges of the law and facts, it is held that the court should declare the law, as in other cases. State v. Syphrett, 27 S. C. 29, 2 S. E. 624.

“Good Motives and Justifiable Ends.”

¹ Foss v. Hedderth, 10 Allen, 78. See ante, pp. 607, 608.

² State v. Lehre, 2 Brev. 446, 4 Am. Dec. 506.

³ Charge of Judge Betts to the jury in King v. Root, 4 Wend. 121: “Should the scope of proofs and circumstances lead you to believe the defendants had no not be true in any case where the matter published was not fit to be spread before the public, whether true or false. It must be held, we think, that where the defendant justifies in a criminal prosecution, the burden is upon him to prove, not only the truth of the charge, but also the "good motives and justifiable ends" of the publication. These might appear from the very character of the publication itself, if it was true; as where it exhibited the misconduct or unfitness of a candidate for public office; but, where it related to a person in private life, and who was himself taking no such action as should put his character in issue before the public, some further showing would generally be requisite after the truth had been proved.¹

good end in contemplation, that they were instigated to these charges solely to avenge personal and political resentments against the plaintiff, still, if they have satisfactorily shown the charges to be true, they must be acquitted of all liability to damages in a private action on account of the publication. Indeed, if good motives and justifiable ends must be shown, they might well be implied from the establishment of the truth of a charge, for the like reason that malice is inferred from its falsity." Malice, it is said by Alcott, Ch. J., is alleged in the declaration "rather to exclude the supposition that the publication may have been made on some innocent occasion than for any other purpose." Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 556, 555. See Moore v. Stephenson, 27 Conn. 14.

¹ In Commonwealth v. Bonner, 9 Met. 410, the defendant was indicted for a libel on one Oliver Brown, in the following words: "However, there were a few who, according to the old toper's dictionary, were drunk; yea, in all conscience, drunk as a drunken man; and who and which of you desperadoes of the town got them so? Was it you whose groggery was open, and the rat soup measured out at your bar to drunkards, while a daughter lay a corpse in your house, and even on the day she was laid in her cold and silent grave, a victim of God's chastening rod upon your guilty drunkard-manufacturing head? Was it you who refused to close your drunkery on the day that your aged father was laid in the narrow house appointed for all the living, and which must ere long receive your recreant carcass? We ask again, Was it you? Was it you?" On the trial the defendant introduced evidence to prove, and contended that he did prove, all the facts alleged in his publication. The court charged the jury that the burden was upon the defendant to show that the matter charged to be libellous was published with good motives and for justifiable ends; that malice is the wilful doing of an unlawful act, and does not necessarily imply personal ill-will towards the person libelled. The defendant excepted to the ruling of the court as applied to the facts proved, contending that, having proved the truth of all the facts alleged in the libel, and the publication being in reference to an illegal traffic, a public nuisance, the jury should have been instructed that it was incumbent on the government to show that defendant's motives were malicious, in the popular sense of the word, as respects said Brown. By the court, Shaw, Ch. J.: "The court are of opinion that the charge of the judge of the Common Pleas was strictly correct. If the publication be libellous, that is, be such as to bring the person libelled into hatred, contempt, and ridicule amongst the people, malice is presumed from the injurious act. But by Rev. Stat. c. 103, § 9 (in every prosecution for writing or publishing a libel, the defendant may give in evidence, in his defence upon the trial, the truth of the matter contained in the publication charged as libellous: provided, that such evidence shall not be deemed a sufficient justification, unless it shall be further made to appear, on the trial, that the matter charged to be libellous was published with good motives and for justifiable ends.' Nothing can be more explicit. The judge, therefore, was right in directing the jury that, after the publication had been shown to have been made by the defendant, and to be libellous and malicious, the burden was on the defendant, not only to prove the truth of the matter charged as libellous, but likewise that it was published with good motives and for justifiable ends. We are also satisfied that the judge was right in his description or definition of legal malice, that it is not malice in its popular sense; viz., that of hatred and ill-will to the party libelled, but an act done wilfully, unlawfully, and in violation of the just rights of another." And yet it would seem as if, conceding the facts published to be true, the jury ought to have found the occasion a proper one for correcting such indecent conduct by public exposure. See further on this subject, Regina v. Newman, 1 El. & Bl. 268 and 558; 8 C. 18 Eng. L. & Eq. 113; Bartholemey v. People, 2 Hill, 248; State

v. White, 7 Ired. 180; State v. Barnham, 9 N. H. 34; Cole v. Wilson, 18 B. Monr. 212; Hagan v. Hendry, 18 Md. 177; Bradley v. Heath, 12 Pick. 163, 22 Am. Dec. 418; Snyder v. Fulton, 34 Md. 128, 6 Am. Rep. 614; Commonwealth v. Snelling, 15 Pick. 537. The fact that the publication is copied from another source is clearly no protection, if it is not true in fact, Regina v. Newman, ubi sup. Compare Saunders v. Mills, 6 Bing. 213; Creedy v. Carr, 7 C. & P. 64; Sulkings v. Shakespeare, 46 Mich. 408, 9 N. W. 451. Neither are the motives or good character of the defendant, if he has published libellous matter which is false, Bartholemey v. People, 2 Hill 248; Commonwealth v. Snelling, 15 Pick. 537; Wilson v. Noonan, 27 Wis. 598. Where the truth is relied upon as a defence, the charge should appear to be true as made, Whittemore v. Weiss, 33 Mich. 348; Palmer v. Smith, 21 Minn. 419. [For an article on this general subject of Liberty of the Press, see 34 Am. L. Rev. 321.]

CHAPTER XIII.

OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

A CAREFUL examination of the American constitutions will disclose the fact that nothing is more fully set forth or more plainly expressed than the determination of their authors to preserve and perpetuate religious liberty, and to guard against the slightest approach towards the establishment of an inequality in the civil and political rights of citizens, which shall have for its basis only their differences of religious belief. The American people came to the work of framing their fundamental laws, after centuries of religious oppression and persecution, sometimes by one party or sect and sometimes by another, had taught them the utter futility of all attempts to propagate religious opinions by the rewards, penalties, or terrors of human laws. They could not fail to perceive, also, that a union of Church and State, like that which existed in England, if not wholly impracticable in America, was certainly opposed to the spirit of our institutions, and that any domineering of one sect over another was repressing to the energies of the people, and must necessarily tend to discontent and disorder. Whatever, therefore, may have been their individual sentiments upon religious questions, or upon the propriety of the State assuming supervision and control of religious affairs under other circumstances, the general voice has been, that persons of every religious persuasion should be made equal before the law, and that questions of religious belief and religious worship should be questions between each individual man and his Maker. Of these questions human tribunals, so long as the public order is not disturbed, are not to take cognizance, except as the individual, by his voluntary action in associating himself with a religious organization, may have conferred upon such organization a jurisdiction over him in ecclesiastical matters.¹

¹ The religious societies which exist in America are mere voluntary societies, having little resemblance to those which constitute a part of the machinery of government in England. They are for the most part formed under general laws, which permit the voluntary incorporation of attendants upon religious worship, with power in the corporation to hold real and personal estate for the purposes of their organization, but not for other purposes. Such a society is "a voluntary association of individuals or families, united for the purpose of having a com-

These constitutions, therefore, have not established religious toleration merely, but religious equality; in that particular being men place of worship, and to provide a proper teacher to instruct them in religious doctrines and duties, and to administer the ordinances of baptism, &c. Although a church or body of professing Christians is almost uniformly connected with such a society or congregation, the members of the church have no other or greater rights than any other members of the society who statedly attend with them for the purposes of divine worship. Over the church, as such, the legal or temporal tribunals of the State do not profess to have any jurisdiction whatever, except so far as is necessary to protect the civil rights of others, and to preserve the public peace. All questions relating to the faith and practice of the church and its members belong to the church judicatories to which they have voluntarily subjected themselves. But, as a general principle, those ecclesiastical judicatories cannot interfere with the temporal concerns of the congregation or society with which the church or the members thereof are connected." Watson v. Chancellor, in Baptist Church v. Wettersell, 3 Paige, 296, 301, 24 Am. Dec. 223. See Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 21 Ill. 25; Lawyer v. Clipperty, 7 Paige, 281; Shannon v. Frost, 3 B. Monr. 253; German, & Cong. v. Pressler, 17 La. Ann. 127; Sollier v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; Calkins v. Cheney, 92 Ill. 403. Equity will not determine questions of faith, doctrine, and schism unless necessarily involved in the enforcement of ascertained trusts. Fadness v. Braunburg, 53 Wis. 257, 41 N. W. 84. Such a corporation is not an ecclesiastical, but merely a private civil corporation, the members of the society being the corporators, and the trustees the managing officers, with such powers as the statute confers, and the ordinary discretionary powers of officers in civil corporations. Robertson v. Bullions, 11 N. Y. 243; Miller v. Gable, 2 Denio, 492. Compare Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 673. The church, connected with the society, if any there be, is not recognized in the law as a distinct entity; the corporators in the society are not necessarily members thereof, and the society may change its government, faith, form of worship, discipline, and ecclesiastical relations at will, subject only to the restraint imposed by their articles of association, and to the general laws of the State. Keyser v. Stansifer, 6 Ohio, 303; Robertson v. Bullions, 11 N. Y. 243; Parish of Belport v. Tooker, 29 Barb. 236, 21 N. Y. 267; Burrell v. Associated Reform Church, 44 Barb. 282; O'Hara v. Stack, 90 Pa. St. 477; Warner v. Bowdoin Sq. Bapt. Soc.; 148 Mass. 400, 19 N. E. 403. In New Hampshire the signers of the articles of association and not the pew-owners are the corporators. Trinitarian Cong. Soc. v. Union Cong. Soc., 61 N. H. 384. See also Holt v. Downs, 65 N. H. 170. An action will not lie against an incorporated ecclesiastical society for the wrongful expulsion of a member by the church, Hardin v. Baptist Church, 61 Mich. 137, 18 N. W. 403; Salé v. First Baptist Ch., 62 Iowa, 26, 17 N. W. 143. The courts of the State have no general jurisdiction and control over the officers of such corporations in respect to the performance of their official duties; but as in respect to the property which they hold for the corporation they stand in position of trustees, the courts may exercise the same supervision as in other cases of trust. Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 31 Ill. 25; Smith v. Nelson, 18 Vt. 511; Watson v. Avery, 2 Bush, 332; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 673; Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 9; Boxwell v. Adleck, 79 Va. 402; First Ref. Pres. Ch. v. Bowden, 14 Abb. N. C. 356. Where a bishop holds property in trust, upon his insolvency, courts will prevent the diversion of the property to his creditors. Mannix v. Purcell, 46 Ohio St. 102, 19 N. E. 572. But the courts will interfere where abuse of trust is alleged, only in clear cases, especially if the abuse alleged be a departure from the tenets of the founders of a charity. Happy v. Morton, 33 Ill. 298. See Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 9. It is competent to form such societies on the basis of a community of property. Scribner v. Rapp, 5 Watts 311, 30 Am. Dec. 327; Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana, 170, 26 Am. Dec. 446; Waite v. Merrill, 4 Me. 102, 16 Am. Dec. 238. The articles of association will determine who may far in advance not only of the mother country, but also of much of the colonial legislation, which, though more liberal than that vote when the State law does not prescribe qualifications. State v. Crowell, 9 N. J. 381. Should there be a disruption of the society, the title to the property will remain with that part of it which is acting in harmony with its own law; seceders will be entitled to no part of it. McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. St. 9; M. E. Church v. Wood, 6 Ohio, 283; Keyser v. Stansifer, 6 Ohio, 363; Shannon v. Frost, 3 B. Monr. 253; Gibson v. Armstrong, 7 B. Monr. 481; Hadden v. Chorn, 8 B. Monr. 70; Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 23 Ill. 456; Fernstler v. Siebert, 114 Pa. St. 193, 6 Atl. 165; Dressen v. Brammeyer, 66 Iowa, 750, 9 N. W. 193. And this even though there may have been a change in doctrine on the part of the controlling majority. Keyser v. Stansifer, 6 Ohio, 363. See Petty v. Tooker, 21 N. Y. 267; Horton v. Baptist Church, 34 Vt. 309; Egleston v. Doolittle, 35 Conn. 366; Miller v. English, 21 N. J. 317; Nicolls v. Rugg, 47 Ill. 47; Kinkad v. McKee, 9 Bush, 535; Baker v. Ducker, 79 Cal. 305, 21 Pac. 784. Whichever body the ecclesiastical authorities recognize as the church, whether it contains a majority of members or not, is entitled to the property. Gaff v. Green, 88 Ind. 122; White Lick Meeting v. White Lick Meeting, 89 Ind. 130. Peculiar rights sometimes arise on a division of a society, as to which we can only refer to Reformed Church v. Schoolcraft, 65 N. Y. 134; Kinkad v. McKee, 9 Bush, 535; Nicolls v. Rugg, 47 Ill. 47; Smith v. Swornstedt, 16 How. 288; Henry v. Deitrich, 84 Pa. St. 286. The administration of church rules or discipline the courts of the State do not interfere with, unless civil rights become involved, and then only for the protection of such rights. Hendrickson v. Decauw, 1 N. J. Eq. 577; Harmon v. Dreher, Speers Eq. 87; Dieffendorf v. Ref. Cal. Church, 20 Johns. 12; Wilson v. Johns Island Church, 2 Rich. Eq. 192; Den v. Bolton, 12 N. J. 209; Baptist Church v. Wetherell, 3 Paige, 501; German Reformed Church v. Seibert, 3 Pa. St. 282; State v. Farria, 45 Mo. 183; McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. St. 9; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679; Chase v. Cheney, 58 Ill. 609; Calkins v. Cheney, 92

Ill. 433; Gartin v. Fenick, 5 Bush, 110; Lucas v. Case, 9 Bush, 297; People v. German, &c. Church, 53 N. Y. 103; Grosvenor v. United Society, 118 Mass. 78; State v. Hebrew Congregation, 80 La. Ann. 205, 33 Am. Rep. 217; State v. Bibb St. Ch., 84 Ala. 23, 4 So. 40; Livingston v. Rector, &c., 45 N. J. L. 236; Richardson v. Union Cong. Soc., 58 N. H. 187; Matter of First Pres. Soc., 190 N. Y. 251, 12 N. E. 629; Fadness v. Braundborg, 73 Wis. 257, 41 N. W. 84. Decision of church tribunal as to the election of a deacon is conclusive. Atty.-Gen. v. Geerlings, 56 Mich. 562, 22 N. W. 89. But trustees may be prevented by the courts from continuing to employ a minister who has been deposed: Isam v. Fullager, 14 Abb. N. C. 233; see Hatchett v. Mt. Pleasant Ch., 49 Ark. 231; from closing a church building: Isam v. Trustees, 63 How. Pr. 463; and may be compelled to open it to a regularly assigned pastor. People v. Conley, 42 Hun, 98; Whitaker v. Michenor, 37 N. J. Eq. 6. In a congregationally governed church a minority of officers may be enjoined from putting in an organ against the wish of the majority of the officers and members: Hackney v. Vawter, 39 Kan. 615, 18 Pac. 629; and a minority of members from excluding the majority from using the church. Bates v. Houston, 65 Ga. 198. But an excommunication will not be allowed to affect civil rights. Fitzgerald v. Robinson, 112 Mass. 371. As to the nature and effect of the contract between the society and the minister, see Avery v. Tyringham, 3 Mass. 169, 3 Am. Dec. 105, and note; Perry v. Wheeler, 12 Bush, 541; East Norway Lake Ch. v. Froislie, 37 Minn. 447, 35 N. W. 296; Davis v. Bowdoin Sq. Bapt. Soc., 149 Mass. 165, 21 N. E. 294; West v. First Pres. Ch., 41 Minn. 94, 42 N. W. 922. Under New York statute unless a minister's salary is fixed in a certain way the church is not liable. Landers v. Frank St. M. E. Ch., 97 N. Y. 119. The civil courts may intervene as to a breach of contract for salary. Bird v. St. Mark's Church, 62 Iowa, 567, 17 N. W. 747. As to what is extra dues for such a society, see Harriman v. Baptist Church, 63 Ga. 185, 36 Am. Rep. 117.

of other civilized countries, nevertheless exhibited features of discrimination based upon religious beliefs or professions.¹

Considerable differences will appear in the provisions in the State constitutions on the general subject of the present chapter; some of them being confined to declarations and prohibitions whose purpose is to secure the most perfect equality before the law of all shades of religious belief, while some exhibit a jealousy of ecclesiastical authority by making persons who exercise the functions of clergyman, priest, or teacher of any religious persuasion, society, or sect, ineligible to civil office;² and still others show some traces of the old notion, that truth and a sense of duty do not consort with scepticism in religion.³ There are excep-

¹ For the distinction between religious toleration and religious equality, see Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 389; Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 1. And see Madison's views, in his Life by Rives, Vol. 1, p. 140. It was not easy, two centuries ago, to make men educated in the ideas of those days understand how there could be complete religious liberty, and at the same time order and due subordination to authority in the State. "Coleridge said that toleration was impossible until indifference made it worthless." Lowell, "Among my Books," 230. Roger Williams explained and defended his own views, and illustrated the subject thus: "There goes many a ship to sea, with many hundred souls in one ship, whose weal and woe is common, and is a true picture of a commonwealth, or human combination or society. It hath fallen out sometimes that both Papists and Protestants, Jews and Turks, may be embarked in one ship; upon which supposal I add, that all the liberty of conscience I ever pleaded for turns upon these two hinges; that none of the Papists, Protestants, Jews, or Turks be forced to come to the ship's prayers or worship if they practise any. I further add that I never denied that, notwithstanding this liberty, the commander of this ship ought to command the ship's course, yea, and also command that justice, peace, and sobriety be kept and practised, both among the seamen and all the passengers. If any of the seamen refuse to perform their service, or passengers to pay their freight; if any refuse to help, in person or purse, towards the common charges or defence; if any refuse to obey the common laws and orders of the ship, concerning their common peace and preservation; if any shall mutiny and rise up against their commanders and officers; if any should preach or write that there ought to be no commanders or officers, because all are equal in Christ, therefore no masters nor officers, no laws nor orders, no corrections nor punishments; I say I never denied but in such cases, whatever is pretended, the commander or commanders may judge, resist, compel, and punish such transgressors according to their deserts and merits." Arnott's History of Rhode Island, Vol. I. p. 254, citing Knowles, 279, 280. There is nothing in the first amendment to the federal Constitution which can give protection to those who practise what is forbidden by the statute as criminal, e. g. bigamy, — on the pretence that their religion requires or sanctions it. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145.

² There are provisions to this effect, more or less broad, in the Constitutions of Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland, and Kentucky.

³ The Constitution of Pennsylvania provides "that no person who acknowledges the being of God, and a future state of rewards and punishments, shall, on account of his religious sentiments, be disqualified to hold any office or place of trust or profit under this Commonwealth." Art. 1, § 4. — The Constitution of North Carolina: "The following classes of persons shall be disqualified for office: First: All persons who shall deny the existence of Almighty God," &c. Art. 6, § 5 — The Constitutions of Mississippi and South Carolina: "No person who denies tional clauses, however, though not many in number; and it is believed that, where they exist, they are not often made use of to deprive any person of the civil or political rights or privileges which are placed by law within the reach of his fellows.

Those things which are not lawful under any of the American constitutions may be stated thus:—

1. Any law respecting an establishment of religion. The legislatures have not been left at liberty to effect a union of Church and State, or to establish preferences by law in favor of any one religious persuasion or mode of worship. There is not complete religious liberty where any one sect is favored by the State and given an advantage by law over other sects.¹ Whatever estab-

the existence of the Supreme Being shall hold any office under this Constitution." — The Constitution of Tennessee: "No person who denies the being of a God, or a future state of rewards and punishments, shall hold any office in the civil department of this State." — On the other hand, the Constitutions of Georgia, Kansas, Virginia, West Virginia, Maine, Delaware, Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, Ohio, New Jersey, Nebraska, Minnesota, Arkansas, Texas, Alabama, Missouri, Rhode Island, Nevada, and Wisconsin expressly forbid religious tests as a qualification for office or public trust. Very inconsistently the Constitutions of Mississippi and Tennessee contain a similar prohibition. In the Constitutions of Alabama, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island, and West Virginia, it is provided that no person shall be denied any civil or political right, privilege, or capacity on account of his religious opinions. — The Constitution of Maryland provides "that no religious test ought ever to be required as a qualification for any office of trust or profit in this State, other than a declaration of belief in the existence of God; nor shall the legislature prescribe any other oath of office than the oath prescribed by this constitution." Declaration of Rights, Art. 37. — The Constitution of Illinois provides that "the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination shall forever be guaranteed; and no person shall be denied any civil or political right, privilege, or capacity, on account of his religious opinions; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be construed to dispense with oaths or affirmations, excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State. No person shall be required to attend or support any ministry or place of worship against his consent, nor shall any preference be given by law to any religious denomination or mode of worship." Art. 2, § 3. — The Constitutions of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New York, and South Carolina contain provisions that liberty of conscience is not to justify licentiousness or practices inconsistent with the peace and moral safety of society.

¹ A city ordinance is void which gives to one sect a privilege denied to others. Shreveport v. Levy, 28 La. Ann. 671. It is not unconstitutional to permit a school-house to be made use of for religious purposes when it is not wanted for schools. Nichols v. School Directors, 93 Ill. 81, 34 Am. Rep. 160; Davis v. Boger, 50 Iowa, 11. But in Missouri it seems the school directors have no authority to permit such use. Dorlin v. Shearer, 67 Mo. 301. Under the Illinois Constitution of 1848 the legislature had no authority to take a private school-house, erected under the provisions of a will as a school-house and place of worship, and constitute it a school district, and provide for the election of trustees, and invest them with taxing power for the support of a school therein. People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 356. But the basement of a church may be used for a school and teachers of one sect employed. And if religious instruction is given daily, though not required by lishes a distinction against one class or sect is, to the extent to which the distinction operates unfavorably, a persecution; and if based on religious grounds, a religious persecution. The extent of the discrimination is not material to the principle; it is enough that it creates an inequality of right or privilege.

2. Compulsory support, by taxation or otherwise, of religious instruction. Not only is no one denomination to be favored at the expense of the rest, but all support of religious instruction must be entirely voluntary. It is not within the sphere of government to coerce it.¹

3. Compulsory attendance upon religious worship. Whoever is not led by choice or a sense of duty to attend upon the ordinances of religion is not to be compelled to do so by the State. It is the province of the State to enforce, so far as it may be found practicable, the obligations and duties which the citizen may be under or may owe to his fellow-citizens or to society; but those which spring from the relations between himself and his Maker are to be enforced by the admonitions of the conscience, and not by the penalties of human laws. Indeed, as all real worship must essentially and necessarily consist in the free-will offering of adoration and gratitude by the creature to the Creator, human laws are obviously inadequate to incite or compel those internal and voluntary emotions which shall induce it, and human penalties at most could only enforce the observance of idle ceremonies, which, when unwillingly performed, are alike valueless to the participants and devoid of all the elements of true worship.

the authorities, a taxpayer cannot have equitable relief. Millard v. Board of Education, 121 Ill. 247, 10 N. E. 639. [A municipal corporation cannot hold as trustee real estate devoted to religious uses. Maysville v. Wood, 102 Ky. 263, 43 S. W. 403, 33 L. R. A. 99.]

¹ We must exempt from this the State of New Hampshire, whose constitution permits the legislature to authorize "the several towns, parishes, bodies corporate, or religious societies within this State to make adequate provisions, at their own expense, for the support and maintenance of public Protestant teachers of piety, religion, and morality;" but not to tax those of other sects or denominations for their support. Part I, Art. 6. As to meaning of Protestant, see Hale v. Everett, 59 N. H. 1. The attempt to amend the above provision by striking out the word "Protestant" was made in 1876, but failed, though at the same time the acceptance of the Protestant religion as a test for office was abolished, and the application of moneys raised by taxation to the support of denominational schools was prohibited. [But to appropriate moneys to a hospital in payment for treatment and cure of poor persons under a contract for such treatment is not to appropriate moneys in support of a religious society, even though all the incorporators of the hospital are of one faith, the hospital corporation being entirely independent of all church or religious organizations, and being open to persons of all faiths or no faith. Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U. S. 291, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121. Subventions cannot be made to sectarian schools to aid them in even purely secular instruction. Synod of Dakota v. State, 2 S. D. 536, 50 N. W. 632, 14 L. R. A. 418, and note.]

4. Restraints upon the free exercise of religion according to the dictates of the conscience. No external authority is to place itself between the finite being and the Infinite when the former is seeking to render the homage that is due, and in a mode which commends itself to his conscience and judgment as being suitable for him to render, and acceptable to its object.¹

5. Restraints upon the expression of religious belief. An earnest believer usually regards it as his duty to propagate his opinions, and to bring others to his views. To deprive him of this right is to take from him the power to perform what he considers a most sacred obligation.

These are the prohibitions which in some form of words are to be found in the American constitutions, and which secure freedom of conscience and of religious worship.² No man in religious

¹ This guaranty does not prevent adopting reasonable rules for the use of streets, and forbidding playing therein on an instrument, though it be done as an act of worship. Comm. v. Plaisted, 143 Mass. 274, 19 N. E. 224; State v. White, 64 N. H. 48, 5 Atl. 828.

² This whole subject was considered very largely in the case of Minor v. The Board of Education, in the Superior Court of Cincinnati, involving the right of the school board of that city to exclude the reading of the Bible from the public schools. The case was reported and published by Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, under the title, "The Bible in the Public Schools," 1870. The point of the case may be briefly stated. The constitution of the State, after various provisions for the protection of religious liberty, contained this clause: "Religion, morality, and knowledge, however, being essential to good government, it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to pass suitable laws to protect every religious denomination in the peaceable enjoyment of its own mode of public worship, and to encourage schools and the means of instruction." There being no legislation on the subject, except such as conferred large discretionary power on the Board of Education in the management of schools, that body passed a resolution, "that religious instruction and the reading of religious books, including the Holy Bible, are prohibited in the Common Schools of Cincinnati; it being the true object and intent of this rule to allow the children of the parents of all sects and opinions, in matters of faith and worship, to enjoy alike the benefit of the Common School fund." Certain taxpayers and citizens of said city, on the pretence that this action was against public policy and morality, and in violation of the spirit and intent of the provision in the constitution which has been quoted, filed their complaint in the Superior Court, praying that the board be enjoined from enforcing said resolution. The Superior Court made an order granting the prayer of the complaint; but the Supreme Court, on appeal, reversed it, holding that the provision in the constitution requiring the passage of suitable laws to encourage morality and religion was one addressed solely to the judgment and discretion of the legislative department; and that, in the absence of any legislation on the subject, the Board of Education could not be compelled to permit the reading of the Bible in the schools. Board of Education v. Minor, 23 Ohio St. 211. On the other hand, it has been decided that the school authorities, in their discretion, may compel the reading of the Bible in schools by pupils, even though it be against the objection and protest of their parents. Donahoe v. Richards, 38 Me. 376; Spiller v. Woburn, 12 Allen, 127. [The Constitution of Iowa, Article 1, Sec. 3, bill of rights, provides: "The general assembly shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; nor shall any person be compelled to attend any place of worship, matters is to be subjected to the censorship of the State or of any pay tithes, taxes, or other rates for building or repairing places of worship or the maintenance of any minister or ministry."

A statute of the State provided, "The Bible shall not be excluded from any school or institution in this State, nor shall any pupil be required to read it, contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian."

In Moore v. Monroe, 94 Iowa 367, 20 N. W. 475, the State Supreme Court was called upon to pass upon the constitutionality of the statute, and of the practice on the part of a teacher of occupying a few minutes each morning in reading selections from the Bible, in repeating the Lord's Prayer, and singing religious songs. The court, adopting the view of the complainant, that such practice was "worship," within the meaning of that term as used in the constitution, yet that such practice did not constitute the school-room a "place of worship," and the logic of the opinion would require the conclusion that the teacher was not a "minister" within the meaning of that term as used in the constitution. The view of the court being that the object of the provision was accomplished by a construction which would prevent the burdening of the taxpayer, for the building or repairing of "any place designed to be used distinctively as a place of worship," and that the casual use of a public building as a place for offering prayer, or doing other acts of religious worship was not within the prohibition of the constitution.

This case in Iowa was followed, six years later, 1893, by State v. District Board, 70 Wis. 177, 44 N. W. 957, 7 L. R. A. 330, 20 Am. St. 41. The Constitution of Wisconsin contained these provisions: "The right of every man to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of his own conscience shall never be infringed; nor shall any man be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship; . . . nor shall any control or interference with the rights of conscience be permitted, or any preference be given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship." Const. Art. 1, Sec. 18; and, "The legislature shall provide by law for the establishments of district schools, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable; and such schools shall be free and without charge for tuition, to all children between the ages of four and twenty years; and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein." Const. Art. x, Sec. 8. These provisions were construed in a case in which it appeared that the teacher of one of the district schools in the State was in the habit, daily, of reading in the school some portion of the King James version of the Bible, without comment and without requiring pupils who did not care to be present to attend while it was being done. It was held that the stated reading of the Bible constituted the school-room for the time a place of worship, and against this the taxpayer had a right to object. Also that the use of any version of the Bible as a text-book, and the stated readings thereof in the public schools, though unaccompanied by any comment, "was sectarian instruction" within the meaning of that phrase as used in the constitution.

In 1898 the Supreme Court of Michigan was called upon to consider the effect of the constitutional provisions of that State in a case in which it appeared that a teacher practised reading, during fifteen minutes preceding the close of school each day, from a book entitled "Readings from the Bible," largely made up of extracts from the Bible. No comments were made on the matter read, and pupils not desiring to attend were excused. The constitutional provisions considered were: "The legislature shall pass no law . . . to compel any person to attend, erect, or support any place of religious worship, or to pay tithes, taxes, or other rates for the support of any minister of the gospel or teacher of religion." Const. Art. 4, Sec. 59; and, "No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary, nor shall property belonging to the State be appropriated for any such purposes." Const. Art. 4, Sec. 49; and, "The legislature shall not diminish or enlarge the civil or political rights, privileges, and capacities of any person on account of his opinion or belief concerning matters of religion." Const. Art. 4, Sec. 41. It was held, such use of such a book did not violate any of the provisions referred to; that it did not constitute the school public authority; and the State is not to inquire into or take room a "place of religious worship," nor was the teacher, a "teacher of religion"; that it did not violate any "civil or political rights," nor did it involve the "appropriation" of any money, or property of the State "for the benefit of any religious sect, society or theological, or religious seminary." Pfeiffer v. Bd. of Education, 118 Mich. 600, 77 N. W. 250, 42 L. R. A. 538.

In 1902, in the case of State v. Schewe, — Neb. —, 91 N. W. 846, the provisions of the Constitution of Nebraska were construed. Sec. 4 of Art. 1 provides, among other things, that, "No person shall be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship against his consent, and no preference shall be given by law to any religious society, nor shall any interference with the rights of conscience be permitted." Sec. 11 of Art. 8 provides that "no sectarian instruction shall be allowed in any school or institution supported in whole or in part by the public funds set apart for educational purposes." Held, that exercises by a teacher in a public school, in a school building, in school hours, and in the presence of the pupils, consisting of the reading of passages from the Bible, and in the singing of songs and hymns, and offering prayer to the Deity in accordance with the doctrines, beliefs, customs, or usages of sectarian churches or religious organizations is forbidden by the constitution. On rehearing, the court uses the following language: "The decision (referring to the one just noted) does not, however, go to the extent of entirely excluding the Bible from the public schools. It goes only to the extent of denying the right to use it for the purpose of imparting sectarian instruction. The pith of the opinion is in the syllabus, which declares that 'exercises by a teacher in a public school in a school building, in school hours, and in the presence of the pupils, consisting of the reading of passages from the Bible, and in the singing of songs and hymns, and offering prayer to the Deity, in accordance with the doctrines, beliefs, customs, or usages of sectarian churches or religious organizations, are forbidden by the constitution of this State.' Certainly the Iliad may be read in the schools without inculcating a belief in the Olympic divinities, and the Koran may be read without teaching the Moslem faith. Why may not the Bible also be read without indoctrinating children in the creed or dogma of any sect? Its contents are largely historical and moral. Its language is unequalled in purity and elegance. Its style has never been surpassed. Among the classics of our literature it stands pre-eminent. It has been suggested that the English Bible is, in a special and limited sense, a sectarian book. To be sure, there are, according to the Catholic claim, vital points of difference with respect to faith and morals between it and the Douay version. In a Pennsylvania case cited by counsel, for respondents, the author of the opinion says that he noted over 50 points of difference between the two versions, — some of them important, and others trivial. These differences constitute the basis of some of the peculiarities of faith and practice that distinguish Catholicism from Protestantism, and make the adherents of each a distinct Christian sect. But the fact that the King James translation may be used to inculcate sectarian doctrines affords no presumption that it will be so used. The law does not forbid the use of the Bible in either version in the public schools. It is not proscribed either by the constitution or the statutes, and the courts have no right to declare its use to be unlawful, because it is possible or probable that those who are privileged to use it will misuse the privilege by attempting to propagate their own peculiar theological or ecclesiastical views and opinions. The point where the courts may rightfully intervene, and where they should intervene without hesitation, is where legitimate use has degenerated into abuse, — where a teacher employed to give secular instruction has violated the constitution by becoming a sectarian propagandist. That sectarian instruction may be given by the frequent reading, without note or comment, of judiciously selected passages, is, of course, obvious. A modern philosopher — perhaps the greatest — has said that persistent iteration is the most effective means of forcing alien conceptions upon reluctant minds. Whether it is prudent or politic notice of religious belief, when the citizen performs his duty to the State and to his fellows, and is guilty of no breach of public morals or public decorum.¹

But while thus careful to establish, protect, and defend religious freedom and equality, the American constitutions contain no provisions which prohibit the authorities from such solemn recognition of a superintending Providence in public transactions to permit Bible reading in the public schools is a question for the school authorities to determine, but whether the practice of Bible reading has taken the form of sectarian instruction in a particular case is a question for the courts to determine upon evidence. It cannot be presumed that the law has been violated. The alleged violation must in every instance be established by competent proof. The value of the common schools as disseminators of knowledge and social levelers is well understood and justly appreciated, and there is little likelihood that the people will ever permit their usefulness to be impaired by sectarian controversies. When we consider that this is the first case of its kind ever presented to this court for decision, we feel assured that neither teachers nor school boards have been much inclined to bring discord into the schools for the chance of securing by indirection a slight sectarian advantage. But if the fact were otherwise, it could not in any way affect our conclusion. The section of the constitution which provides that 'no sectarian instruction shall be allowed in any school or institution supported, in whole or in part, by public funds set apart for educational purposes,' cannot, under any canon of instruction with which we are acquainted, be held to mean that neither the Bible, nor any part of it, from Genesis to the Revelation, may be read in the educational institutions fostered by the State. We do not wish to be understood as either countenancing or discountenancing the reading of the Bible in the public schools. Even where it is an irritant element, the question whether its legitimate use shall be continued or discontinued is an administrative, and not a judicial question. It belongs to the school authorities, not to the courts."]

1 Congress is forbidden, by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, from making any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. Mr. Story says of this provision: "It was under a solemn consciousness of the dangers from ecclesiastical ambition, the bigotry of spiritual pride, and the intolerance of sects, exemplified in our domestic, as well as in foreign annals, that it was deemed advisable to exclude from the national government all power to act upon the subject. The situation, too, of the different States equally proclaimed the policy as well as the necessity of such an exclusion. In some of the States, Episcopalians constituted the predominant sect; in others, Presbyterians; in others, Congregationalists; in others, Quakers; and in others again there was a close numerical rivalry among contending sects. It was impossible that there should not arise perpetual strife and perpetual jealousy on the subject of ecclesiastical ascendancy, if the national government were left free to create a religious establishment. The only security was in extirpating the power. But this alone would have been an imperfect security, if it had not been followed up by a declaration of the right of the free exercise of religion, and a prohibition (as we have seen) of all religious tests. Thus, the whole power over the subject of religion is left exclusively to the State governments, to be acted upon according to their own sense of justice and the State constitutions; and the Catholic and Protestant, the Calvinist and the Arminian, the Jew and the infidel, may sit down at the common table of the national councils, without any inquisition into their faith or mode of worship." Story on the Constitution, § 1573; 1 Tuck. Bl. Com. App. 276. For an examination of this amendment, see Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145.

and exercises as the general religious sentiment of mankind inspires, and as seems meet and proper in finite and dependent beings. Whatever may be the shades of religious belief, all must acknowledge the fitness of recognizing in important human affairs the superintending care and control of the great Governor of the Universe, and of acknowledging with thanksgiving His boundless favors, of bowing in contrition when visited with the penalties of His broken laws. No principle of constitutional law is violated when thanksgiving or fast days are appointed ; when chaplains are designated for the army and navy ; when legislative sessions are opened with prayer or the reading of the Scriptures, or when religious teaching is encouraged by a general exemption of the houses of religious worship from taxation for the support of State government. Undoubtedly the spirit of the constitution will require, in all these cases, that care be taken to avoid discrimination in favor of or against any one religious denomination or sect ; but the power to do any of these things does not become unconstitutional simply because of its susceptibility to abuse.¹ This public recognition of religious worship, however, is not based entirely, perhaps not even mainly, upon a sense of what is due to the Supreme Being himself as the author of all good and of all law ; but the same reasons of State policy which induce the government to aid institutions of charity and seminaries of instruction, will incline it also to foster religious worship and religious institutions, as conservators of the public morals, and valuable, if not indispensable assistants in the preservation of the public order.

Nor, while recognizing a superintending Providence, are we always precluded from recognizing also, in the rules prescribed for the conduct of the citizen, the notorious fact that the prevailing religion in the States is Christian. Some acts would be offensive to public sentiment in a Christian community, and would tend to public disorder, which in a Mahometan or Pagan country might be passed by without notice, or even be regarded as meritorious ; just as some things would be considered indecent, and worthy of reprobation and punishment as such, in one state of society, which in another would be in accord with the prevailing customs, and therefore defended and protected by the laws. The criminal laws of every country are shaped in greater or less degree by the prevailing public sentiment as to what is right, proper, and decorous, or the reverse ; and they punish those acts as crimes which disturb the peace and order, or tend to shock the moral sense or sense of propriety and decency, of the community. The moral sense is largely regulated and controlled by the religious belief ; and therefore it is that those things which, estimated by a Christian standard, are profane and blasphemous, are properly punished as crimes against society, since they are offensive in the highest degree to the general public sense, and have a direct tendency to undermine the moral support of the laws, and to corrupt the community.

¹ See Trustees First M. E. Ch. v. Atlanta, 76 Ga. 181.

It is frequently said that Christianity is a part of the law of the land. In a certain sense and for certain purposes this is true. The best features of the common law, and especially those which regard the family and social relations; which compel the parent to support the child, the husband to support the wife; which make the marriage-tie permanent and forbid polygamy, — if not derived from, have at least been improved and strengthened by the prevailing religion and the teachings of its sacred Book. But the law does not attempt to enforce the precepts of Christianity on the ground of their sacred character or divine origin. Some of those precepts, though we may admit their continual and universal obligation, we must nevertheless recognize as being incapable of enforcement by human laws. That standard of morality which requires one to love his neighbor as himself we must admit is too elevated to be accepted by human tribunals as the proper test by which to judge the conduct of the citizen; and one could hardly be held responsible to the criminal laws if in goodness of heart and spontaneous charity he fell something short of the Good Samaritan. The precepts of Christianity, moreover, affect the heart, and address themselves to the conscience: while the laws of the State can regard the outward conduct only; and for these several reasons Christianity is not a part of the law of the land in any sense which entitles the courts to take notice of and base their judgments upon it, except so far as they can find that its precepts and principles have been incorporated in and made a component part of the positive law of the State.¹

Mr. Justice Story has said in the Girard Will case that, although Christianity is a part of the common law of the State, it is only so in this qualified sense, that its divine origin and truth are admitted, and therefore it is not to be maliciously and openly reviled and blasphemed against, to the annoyance of believers or to the injury of the public.² It may be doubted, however, if the

¹ Andrews v. Bible Society, 4 Sandf. 166, 1s2; Ayres v. Methodist Church, 3 Sandf. 351; State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. 557; Bush v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387; Board of Education v. Minor, 23 Ohio St. 210. The subject is largely considered in Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 1, 204 et seq., and also by Dr. S. T. Spear in his book entitled "Religion and the State."

² Vidal v. Girard's Ex'rs, 2 How. 127, 198. Mr. Webster's argument that Christianity is a part of the law of Pennsylvania is given in 6 Webster's Works, p. 173 [An indictment for blasphemy and profane punishment of blasphemy is based necessarily upon an admission of the divine origin or truth of the Christian religion, or incapable of being otherwise justified.

Blasphemy has been defined as consisting in speaking evil of the Deity, with an impious purpose to derogate from the divine majesty, and to alienate the minds of others from the love and reverence of God. It is purposely using words concerning the Supreme Being calculated and designed to impair and destroy the reverence, respect, and confidence due to him, as the intelligent Creator, Governor, and Judge of the world. It embraces the idea of detraction as regards the character and attributes of God, as calumny usually carries the same idea when applied to an individual. It is a wilful and malicious attempt to lessen men's reverence of God, by denying his existence or his attributes as an intelligent Creator, Governor, and Judge of men, and to prevent their having confidence in him as such.¹ Contumelious reproaches and profane ridicule of Christ or of the Holy Scriptures have the same evil effect in sapping the foundations of society and of public order, and are classed under the same head.²

In an early case where a prosecution for blasphemy came before Lord Hale, he is reported to have said: "Such kind of wicked, blasphemous words are not only an offence to God and religion, but a crime against the laws, State, and government, and therefore punishable in the Court of King's Bench. For to say religion is a cheat, is to subvert all those obligations whereby civil society is preserved; that Christianity is a part of the laws of England, and to reproach the Christian religion is to speak in subversion of the law."³ Eminent judges in this country have adopted this language, and applied it to prosecutions for blasphemy, where the charge consisted in malicious ridicule of the Author and Founder of the Christian religion. The early cases in New York and Massachusetts⁴ are particularly marked by swearing is defective unless it charges that the words were uttered in the presence of other persons and in their hearing. Com. v. Linn, 158 Pa. St. 22, 27 Atl. 543, 22 L. R. A. 353, and note on blasphemy and profanity as crimes.]

¹ State, Ch. J., in Commonwealth v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. 206, 213.

² People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. 280, 5 Am. Dec. 235; Commonwealth v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. 206; Updegraph v. Commonwealth, 11 S. & R. 384; State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. 553; Rex v. Waddington, 1 B. & C. 26; Rex v. Carlile, 3 B. &

Ald. 161; Cowan v. Milbourn, Law R. 2 Exch. 240.

³ The King v. Taylor, 3 Keb. 607, Vent. 263. See also The King v. Woolston, 2 Stra. 834, Fitzg. 64, Raym. 162, in which the defendant was convicted of publishing libels, ridiculing the miracles of Christ, his life and conversation. Lord Ch. J. Raymond in that case says: "I would have it taken notice of, that we do not meddle with the difference of opinion, and that we interfere only where the root of Christianity is struck at."

⁴ People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. 280, 5

clearness and precision on this point, and Mr. Justice Clayton, of Delaware, has also adopted and followed the ruling of Lord Chief Justice Hale, with such explanations of the true basis and justification of these prosecutions as to give us a clear understanding of the maxim that Christianity is a part of the law of the land, as understood and applied by the courts in these cases.¹ Taken with the explanation given, there is nothing in the maxim of which the believer in any creed, or the disbeliever of all, can justly complain. The language which the Christian regards as blasphemous, no man in sound mind can feel under a sense of duty to make use of under any circumstances, and no person is therefore deprived of a right when he is prohibited, under penalties, from uttering it.

But it does not follow, because blasphemy is punishable as a crime, that therefore one is not at liberty to dispute and argue against the truth of the Christian religion, or of any accepted dogma. Its "divine origin and truth" are not so far admitted in the law as to preclude their being controverted. To forbid discussion on this subject, except by the various sects of believers, would be to abridge the liberty of speech and of the press in a point which, with many, would be regarded as most important of all. Blasphemy implies something more than a denial of any of the truths of religion, even of the highest and most vital. A bad motive must exist; there must be a wilful and malicious attempt to lessen men's reverence for the Deity, or for the accepted religion. But outside of such wilful and malicious attempt, there is a broad field for candid investigation and discussion, which is as much open to the Jew and the Mahometan as to the professors of

Am. Dec. 335; Commonwealth v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. 206. See also Zeisweiss v. James, 53 Pa. St. 465, 471; McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. St. 6, 14.

¹ State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. 553. The case is very full, clear, and instructive, and cites all the English and American authorities. The conclusion at which it arrives is, that "Christianity was never considered a part of the common law, so far as that for a violation of its injunctions independent of the established laws of man, and without the sanction of any positive act of Parliament made to enforce those injunctions, any man could be drawn to answer in a common-law court. It was a part of the common law, 'so far that any person reviling, subverting, or ridiculing it, might be prosecuted at common law,' as Lord Mansfield has declared; because, in the judgment of our English ancestors and their judicial tribunals, he who reviled, subverted, or ridiculed Christianity, did an act which struck at the foundation of our civil society, and tended by its necessary consequences to disturb that common peace of the land of which (as Lord Chief Justice reported) the common law was the preserver. The common law . . . adapted itself to the religion of the country just so far as was necessary for the peace and safety of civil institutions; but it took cognizance of offences against God only, when, by their inevitable effects, they became offences against man, and his temporal security." See also what is said on this subject by Deer, J., in Andrew v. Bible Society, 4 Sandf. 106, 132.

the Christian faith. "No author or printer who fairly and conscientiously promulgates the opinions with whose truths he is impressed, for the benefit of others, is answerable as a criminal. A malicious and mischievous intention is, in such a case, the broad boundary between right and wrong; it is to be collected from the offensive levity, scurrilous and opprobrious language, and other circumstances, whether the act of the party was malicious."¹ Legal blasphemy implies that the words were uttered in a wanton manner, "with a wicked and malicious disposition, and not in a serious discussion upon any controverted point in religion."² The courts have always been careful, in administering the law, to say that they did not intend to include in blasphemy disputes between learned men upon particular controverted points.³ The constitutional provisions for the protection of religious liberty not only include within their protecting power all sentiments and professions concerning or upon the subject of religion, but they guarantee to every one a perfect right to form and to promulgate such opinions and doctrines upon religious matters, and in relation to the existence, power, attributes, and providence of a Supreme Being as to himself shall seem reasonable and correct. In doing this he acts under an awful responsibility, but it is not to any human tribunal.⁴

¹ Updegraph v. Commonwealth, 11 S. & R. 394. In Ayres v. Methodist Church, 3 Sandf. 551, 577, Duer, J., in speaking of "pious uses," says: "If the Presbyterian and the Baptist, the Methodist and the Protestant Episcopalian, must each be allowed to devote the entire income of his real and personal estate, forever, to the support of missions, or the spreading of the Bible, so must the Roman Catholic his to the endowment of a monastery, or the founding of a perpetual mass for the safety of his soul; the Jew his to the translation and publication of the Mishna or the Talmud, and the Mahometan (if in that calumnies continue to which this city [New York] like ancient Rome, seems to be doomed, such shall be among us), the Mahometan his to the assistance or relief of the annual pilgrims to Mecca."

² People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. 289, 293, 6 Am. Dec. 335, per Kent, Ch. J.

³ Rex v. Woolston, Stra. 834, Fitzg. 64; People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. 283, 5 Am. Dec. 335, per Kent, Ch. J.

⁴ Per Shaw, Ch. J., in Commonwealth v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. 206, 234. The language of the courts has perhaps not always been as guarded as it should have been on this subject. In The King v. Waddington, 1 B. & C. 25, the defendant was on trial for blasphemous libel, in saying that Jesus Christ was an impostor, and a murderer in principle. One of the jurors asked the Lord Chief Justice (Abbott) whether a work which denied the divinity of the Saviour was a libel. The Lord Chief Justice replied that "a work speaking of Jesus Christ in the language used in the publication in question was a libel, Christianity being a part of the law of the land." This was doubtless true, as the wrong motive was apparent; but it did not answer the juror's question. On motion for a new trial, the remarks of Best, J., are open to a construction which answers the question in the affirmative: "My Lord Chief Justice reports to us that he told the jury that it was an indictable offence to speak of Jesus Christ in the manner that he is spoken of in the publication for which this defendant is indicted. It cannot admit of the least doubt that this direction was correct. The 53 Geo. III. c. 136, has made no alteration in the common law relative to libel."

Other forms of profanity, besides that of blasphemy, are also made punishable by statutes in the several States. The cases these statutes take notice of are of a character no one can justify, and their punishment involves no question of religious liberty. The right to use profane and indecent language is recognized by no religious creed, and the practice is reprobated by right-thinking men of every nation and every religious belief. The statutes for the punishment of public profanity require no further justification than the natural impulses of every man who believes in a Supreme Being and recognizes his right to the reverence of his creatures.

The laws against the desecration of the Christian Sabbath by labor or sports are not so readily defensible by arguments the

If, previous to the passing of that statute, it would have been a libel to deny, in any printed book, the divinity of the second person in the Trinity, the same publication would be a libel now. The 53 Geo. III. c. 150, as its title expresses, is an act to relieve persons who impugn the doctrine of the Trinity from certain penalties. If we look at the body of the act to see from what penalties such persons are relieved, we find that they are the penalties from which : 1. W. & M. Sess. 1, c. 15, exempted all Protestant dissenters, except such as denied the Trinity, and the penalties or disabilities which the 9 & 10 W. III. imposed on those who denied the Trinity. The 1 W. & M. Sess. 1, c. 15, is, as it has been usually called, an act of toleration, or one which allows dissenters to worship God in the mode that is agreeable to their religious opinions, and exempts them from punishment for non-attendance at the Established Church and non-conformity to its rites. The legislature, in passing that act, only thought of easing the consciences of dissenters, and not of allowing them to attempt to weaken the faith of the members of the church. The 9 & 10 W. III. was to give security to the government by rendering men incapable of office, who entertained opinions hostile to the established religion. The only penalty imposed by that statute is exclusion from office, and that penalty is incurred by any manifestations of the dangerous opinion, without proof of intention in the person entertaining it, either to induce others to be of that opinion, or in any manner to disturb persons of a different persuasion. This statute rested on the principle of the test laws, and did not interfere with the common law relative to blasphemous libels. It is not necessary for me to say whether it be libellous to argue from the Scriptures against the divinity of Christ; that is not what the defendant professes to do; he argues against the divinity of Christ by denying the truth of the Scriptures. A work containing such arguments, published maliciously (which the jury in this case have found), is by the common law a libel, and the legislature has never altered this law, nor can it ever do so while the Christian religion is considered the basis of that law." It is a little difficult, perhaps, to determine precisely how far this opinion was designed to go in holding that the law forbids the public denial of the truth of the Scriptures. That arguments against it, made in good faith by those who do not accept it, are legitimate and rightful, we think there is no doubt; and the learned judge doubtless meant to admit as much when he required a malicious publication as an ingredient in the offence. However, when we are considering what is the common law of England and of this country as regards offences against God and religion, the existence of a State Church in that country and the effect of its recognition upon the law are circumstances to be kept constantly in view.

In People v. Porter, 2 Park. Cr. R. 14, the defence of drunkenness was made to a prosecution for a blasphemous libel. Winworth, Circuit Judge, presiding at the trial, declared the intoxication of defendant, at the time of uttering the words, to be an aggravation of the offence rather than an excuse.

force of which will be felt and admitted by all. It is no hardship to any one to compel him to abstain from public blasphemy or other profanity, and none can complain that his rights of conscience are invaded by this forced respect to a prevailing religious sentiment. But the Jew who is forced to respect the first day of the week, when his conscience requires of him the observance of the seventh also, may plausibly urge that the law discriminates against his religion, and by forcing him to keep a second Sabbath in each week, unjustly, though by indirection, punishes him for his belief.

The laws which prohibit ordinary employments on Sunday are to be defended, either on the same grounds which justify the punishment of profanity, or as establishing sanitary regulations, based upon the demonstration of experience that one day's rest in seven is needful to recuperate the exhausted energies of body and mind. If sustained on the first ground, the view must be that such laws only require the proper deference and regard which those not accepting the common belief may justly be required to pay to the public conscience. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania have preferred to defend such legislation on the second ground rather than the first;¹ but it appears to us that if the benefit to the individual is alone to be considered, the argument against the

1 "It intermeddles not with the natural and indefeasible right of all men to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences; it compels none to attend, erect, or support any place of worship, or to maintain any ministry against his consent: it pretends not to control or to interfere with the rights of conscience, and it establishes no preference for any religious establishment or mode of worship. It treats no religious doctrine as paramount in the State; it enforces no unwilling attendance upon the celebration of divine worship. It says not to Jew or Sabbatarian, 'You shall desecrate the day you esteem as holy, and keep sacred to religion that we deem to be so.' It enters upon no discussion of rival claims of the first and seventh days of the week, nor pretends to bind upon the conscience of any man any conclusion upon a subject which each must decide for himself. It intrudes not into the domestic circle to dictate when, where, or to what god its inmates shall address their orisons; nor does it presume to enter the synagogue of the Israelite, or the church of the Seventh-day Christian, to command or even persuade their attendance in the temples of those who especially approach the altar on Sunday. It does not in the slightest degree infringe upon the Sabbath of any sect, or curtail their freedom of worship. It detracts not one hour from any period of time they may feel bound to devote to this object, nor does it add a moment beyond what they may choose to employ. Its sole mission is to inculcate a temporary weekly cessation from labor, but it adds not to this requirement any religious obligation." Specht v. Commonwealth, 8 Pa. St. 312, 325. See also Charleston v. Benjamin, 2 Strob. 508; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387; McGatrick v. Wason, 4 Ohio St. 566; Hudson v. Geary, 4 R. I. 485; Bohl v. State, 3 Tex. App. 683; Johnston v. Commonwealth, 22 Pa. St. 102; Commonwealth v. Nesbit, 34 Pa. St. 378; Commonwealth v. Has, 122 Mass. 40; Commonwealth v. Starr, 144 Mass. 859, 11 N. E. 633; State v. Bott, 31 La. Ann. 663, 33 Am. Rep. 224; State v. Judge, 39 La. Ann. 132, 1 So. 427; State v. Balt. & O. R. R. Co., 15 W. Va. 362, 36 Am. Rep. 803.

law which he may make who has already observed the seventh day of the week, is unanswerable. But on the other ground it is clear that these laws are supportable on authority, notwithstanding the inconvenience which they occasion to those whose religious sentiments do not recognize the sacred character of the first day of the week.¹

Whatever deference the constitution or the laws may require to be paid in some cases to the conscientious scruples or religious convictions of the majority, the general policy always is, to avoid with care any compulsion which infringes on the religious scruples of any, however little reason may seem to others to underlie them. Even in the important matter of bearing arms for the public defence, those who cannot in conscience take part are excused, and their proportion of this great and sometimes imperative burden is borne by the rest of the community.²

Some of the State constitutions have also done away with the distinction which existed at the common law regarding the admissibility of testimony in some cases. All religions were recognized by the law to the extent of allowing all persons to be sworn and to give evidence who believed in a superintending Providence, who rewards and punishes, and that an oath was binding on their conscience.³ But the want of such belief rendered the person

¹ Commonwealth v. Wolf, 3 S. & R. 48; Commonwealth v. Fisher, 17 S. & R. 160; Shover v. State, 7 Ark. 629; Scales v. State, 47 Ark. 478, 1 S. W. 769; Voglesong v. State, 9 Ind. 112; State v. Amba, 29 Mo. 214; Cincinnati v. Rice, 15 Ohio, 225; Ex parte Koser, 60 Cal. 177; Parker v. State, 18 Lea, 478. A proviso in a Sunday law for the benefit of observers of Saturday is valid. Johns v. State, 78 Ind. 332. In Simonds's Ex'rs v. Gratz, 2 Pen. & Watts, 412, it was held that the conscientious scruples of a Jew to appear and attend a trial of his cause on Saturday were not sufficient cause for a continuance. But quære of this. In Frolickstein v. Mayor of Mobile, 40 Ala. 725, it was held that a statute or municipal ordinance prohibiting the sale of goods by merchants on Sunday, in its application to religious Jews "who believe that it is their religious duty to abstain from work on Saturdays, and to work on all the other six days of the week," was not violative of the article in the State constitution which declares that no person shall, "upon any pretence whatsoever, be hurt, molested, or restrained in his religious sentiments or persuasions." For decisions sustaining the prohibition of liquor sales on Sunday, see State v. Common Pleas, 30 N. J. 72, 13 Am. Rep. 422; State v. Bott, 81 La. Ann. 663, 33 Am. Rep. 224; State v. Gregory, 47 Conn. 278; Blahnt v. State, 34 Ark. 447; and of dramatic entertainments, see Menserdorff v. Dwyer, 69 N. Y. 667.

² There are constitutional provisions to this effect more or less broad in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, and South Carolina, and statutory provisions in some other States. In Tennessee "no citizen shall be compelled to bear arms, provided he will pay an equivalent to be ascertained by law." Art. 1, § 28.

³ See upon this point the leading case of Ormichund v. Barker, Willes, 638, and 1 Smith's Leading Cases, 535, where will be found a full discussion of this subject. Some of the earlier American cases required of a witness that he should believe in the existence of God, and of a state of rewards and punishments after incompetent. Wherever the common law remains unchanged, it must, we suppose, be held no violation of religious liberty to recognize and enforce its distinctions; but the tendency is to do away with them entirely, or to allow one's unbelief to go to his credibility only, if taken into account at all.¹

the present life. See especially Atwood v. Welton, 7 Conn. 36. But this rule did not generally obtain; belief in a Supreme Being was not punished false swearing, whether in this world or in the world to come, being regarded sufficient. Cubbinson v. McCreary, 7 W. & S. 202; Blocker v. Burgess, 2 Ala. 334; Jones v. Harris, 1 Stran. 300; Shaw v. Moore, 4 Jones (N. C.) 25; Hunscorn v. Hunscorn, 15 Mass. 184; Block v. Milligan, 10 Ohio, 121; Bennett v. State, 1 Swan, 411; Central R. R. Co. v. Rockafellow, 17 Ill. 541; Arnold v. Arnold, 13 Vt. 332; Butts v. Swartwood, 2 Cow. 431; Free v. Buckingham, 50 N. H. 219. But one who lacked this belief was not sworn, because there was no mode known to the law by which it was supposed an oath could be made binding upon his conscience. Arnold v. Arnold, 13 Vt. 332; Scott v. Hooper, 14 Vt. 533; Norton v. Ladd, 4 N. H. 444; Cent. R. R. Co. v. Rockafellow, 17 Ill. 541.

¹ The States of Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Oregon, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Florida, Missouri, California, Indiana, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Ohio, and

New York have constitutional provisions expressly doing away with incompetency from want of religious belief. Perhaps the general provisions in some of the other constitutions, declaring complete equality of civil rights, privileges, and capacities are sufficiently broad to accomplish the same purpose. Perry's Case, 3 Gratt. 632. In Michigan and Oregon a witness is not to be questioned concerning his religious belief. See People v. Jenness, 5 Mich. 305. In Georgia, the code provides that religious belief shall only go to the credit of a witness, and it has been held inadmissible to inquire of a witness whether he believed in Christ as the Saviour. Donkle v. Kohn, 44 Ga. 206. In Maryland, no one is incompetent as a witness or juror "provided he believes in the existence of God, and that, under His dispensation, such person will be held morally accountable for his acts, and be rewarded or punished therefor, either in this world or the world to come." Const. Dec. of Rights, § 86. In Missouri, an atheist is competent. Londener v. Lichtenheim, 11 Mo. App. 385.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE POWER OF TAXATION.

THE power to impose taxes is one so unlimited in force and so searching in extent, that the courts scarcely venture to declare that it is subject to any restrictions whatever, except such as rest in the discretion of the authority which exercises it. It reaches to every trade or occupation; to every object of industry, use, or enjoyment; to every species of possession; and it imposes a burden which, in case of failure to discharge it, may be followed by seizure and sale or confiscation of property. No attribute of sovereignty is more pervading, and at no point does the power of the government affect more constantly and intimately all the relations of life than through the exactions made under it.

Taxes are defined to be burdens or charges imposed by the legislative power upon persons or property, to raise money for public purposes.¹ The power to tax rests upon necessity, and is inherent in every sovereignty. The legislature of every free State will possess it under the general grant of legislative power, whether particularly specified in the constitution among the powers to be exercised by it or not. No constitutional government can exist without it, and no arbitrary government without regular and steady taxation could be anything but an oppressive and vexatious despotism, since the only alternative to taxation would be a forced extortion for the needs of government from such persons or objects as the men in power might select as victims. Chief Justice Marshall has said of this power: "The power of taxing the people and their property is essential to the very existence of government, and may be legitimately exercised on the objects to b. 12, c. 30. In its most enlarged sense the word "taxes" embraces all the regular impositions made by government upon the person, property, privileges, occupations, and enjoyments of the people for the purpose of raising public revenue. See Perry v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 318, 350; Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 664; Van Horn v. People, 46 Mich. 183, 9 N. W. 246; [Re Page, 60 Kan. 842, 58 Pac. 478, 47 L. R. A. 68. See also note to 13 L. R. A. 533.]

¹ Blackwell on Tax Titles, 1. A tax is a contribution imposed by government on individuals for the service of the State. It is distinguished from a subsidy as being certain and orderly, which is shown in its derivation from Greek, τάξις, order, or arrangement. Jacob, Law Dic.; Bouvier, Law Dic. "The revenues of a State are a portion that each subject gives of his property in order to secure, or to have, the agreeable enjoyment of the remainder." Montesquieu, Spirit of the Laws,

which it is applicable to the utmost extent to which the government may choose to carry it. The only security against the abuse of this power is found in the structure of the government itself. In imposing a tax, the legislature acts upon its constituents. This is, in general, a sufficient security against erroneous and oppressive taxation. The people of a State, therefore, give to their government a right of taxing themselves and their property; and as the exigencies of the government cannot be limited, they prescribe no limits to the exercise of this right, resting confidently on the interest of the legislator, and on the influence of the constituents over their representative, to guard them against its abuse."¹

The same eminent judge has said in another case: "The power of legislation, and consequently of taxation, operates on all persons and property belonging to the body politic. This is an original principle, which has its foundation in society itself. It is granted by all for the benefit of all. It resides in the government as part of itself, and need not be reserved where property of any description, or the right to use it in any manner, is granted to individuals or corporate bodies. However absolute the right of an individual may be, it is still in the nature of that right that it must bear a portion of the public burdens, and that portion must be determined by the legislature. This vital power may be abused; but the interest, wisdom, and justice of the representative body, and its relations with its constituents, furnish the only security where there is no express contract against unjust and excessive taxation, as well as against unwise legislation generally."² And again, the same judge says, it is "unfit for the judicial department to inquire what degree of taxation is the legitimate use, and what degree may amount to the abuse, of the power."³ The like general views have been frequently expressed in other cases.⁴

The Constitution of the United States declares that "the Congress shall have power to levy and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts,

¹ McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 438.

² Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 561.

³ McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 438. See Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491; Board of Education v. McLandsborough, 38 Ohio St. 227; State v. Board of Education, 38 Ohio St. 3.

⁴ Kirby v. Shaw, 19 Pa. St. 258;

Sharpless v. Mayor, &c., 21 Pa. St. 147; Welster v. Hake, 52 Pa. St. 474; Wingate v. Sluder, & Jones, 1 N. C. 532; Herrick v. Randolph, 13 Vt. 327; Armington v. Barnet, 15 Vt. 745; Thomas v. Leland, 24 Wend. 65; People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 119; Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 252; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mayor, 28 Ohio St. 521.

and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."¹ The duties, imposts, and excises here specified are merely different kinds of taxes; the first two terms being commonly applied to the levies made by governments on the importation and exportation of commodities, while the term "excises" is applied to the taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations, and upon corporate privileges. "No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State;"² but this provision of the Constitution is not violated by a requirement that an article intended for exportation shall be stamped, as a protection against fraud.³ Direct taxes, when laid by Congress, must be apportioned among the several States according to the representative population.⁴ The term "direct taxes," as employed in the Constitution, has a technical meaning, and embraces capitation and land taxes only.⁵ These are express limitations, imposed by the Constitution upon the federal power to tax; but there are some others which are implied, (a) and which under the complex system of American government have the effect to exempt some subjects otherwise taxable from the scope and reach, according to circumstances, of either the federal power to tax or the power of the several States. One of the implied limitations is that which precludes the States from taxing the agencies whereby the general government performs its functions. The reason is that, if they

¹ Const. U. S. Art. 1, § 8, cl. 1.

² Const. U. S. Art. 1, § 9, cl. 6.

³ Pace v. Burgess, 92 U. S. 372.

⁴ Const. U. S. Art. 1, § 2; Art. 1, § 9, cl. 4.

⁵ Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533;

Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586.

[Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co., 158

U. S. 601, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912, would seem to modify the statement of the text by declaring capitation taxes and those levied upon general property, whether real or personal or both, and the income derived therefrom, direct taxes.]

(a) [It is held that the States are restricted from taxing patent rights. People v. Brooklyn Bd. of Assessors, 156 N. Y. 417, 51 N. E. 289, 42 L. R. A. 200; Com. v. Edison Electric Light Co., 157 Pa. 529, 27 Atl. 379, 37 Am. St. 747; Com. v. Philadelphia Co., 157 Pa. 527, 27 Atl. 378; Com. v. Westinghouse El. & Mfg. Co., 151 Pa. 235, 24 Atl. 1107, 1111; Com. v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co., 151 Pa. 275, 24 Atl. 1114, 1119. See other cases upon State taxation of patent rights in note to 44 L. ed. U. S. 374. A State under a general law taxing legacies may tax a bequest to the United States, since the tax is levied on the bequest before it reaches the United States. United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; aff. 141 N. Y. 479, 47 N. E. 53. And the fact that a corporation possesses a franchise from the federal government, and is engaged in inter-state commerce, will not prevent the State's taxing it upon a franchise from the State. Central Pac. R. Co. v. California, 152 U. S. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785, aff. 105 Cal. 578, 38 Pac. 905. Copyrights not taxable by States. Leahy v. Roberts, 159 N. Y. 70, 53 N. E. 685, 45 L. R. A. 123. As to what lands of tribal Indians cannot be taxed by State, see Allen County Combs v. Simons, 120 Ind. 103, 28 N. E. 420, 18 L. R. A. 512.]

possessed this authority, it would be within their power to impose taxation to an extent that might cripple, if not wholly defeat, the operations of the national authority within its proper and constitutional sphere of action. "That the power to tax," says Chief Justice Marshall, "involves the power to destroy; that the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create; that there is a plain repugnance in conferring on one government a power to control the constitutional measures of another, which other, with respect to those very measures, is declared to be supreme over that which exerts the control,—are propositions not to be denied." And referring to the argument that confidence in the good faith of the State governments must forbid our indulging the anticipation of such consequences, he adds: "But all inconsistencies are to be reconciled by the magic of the word,—confidence. Taxation, it is said, does not necessarily and unavoidably destroy. To carry it to the excess of destruction would be an abuse, to presume which would banish that confidence which is essential to all government. But is this a case of confidence? Would the people of any one State trust those of another with a power to control the most insignificant operations of their State government? We know they would not. Why then should we suppose that the people of any one State should be willing to trust those of another with a power to control the operations of a government to which they have confided their most important and most valuable interests? In the legislature of the Union alone are all represented. The legislature of the Union alone, therefore, can be trusted by the people with the power of controlling measures which concern all, in the confidence that it will not be abused. This, then, is not a case of confidence."¹

¹ McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 816, 431. "The case involved the right of the State of Maryland to impose taxes upon the operations, within its limits, of the Bank of the United States, created by authority of Congress. "If," says the Chief Justice, "we apply the principle for which the State of Maryland contends to the Constitution generally, we shall find it capable of changing totally the character of that instrument. We shall find it capable of arresting all the measures of the government, and of prostrating it at the foot of the States. The American people have declared their Constitution, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, to be supreme; but this principle would transfer the supremacy in fact to the States. If the States may

tax one instrument employed by the government in the execution of its powers, they may tax any and every other instrument. They may tax the mail; they may tax the mint; they may tax patent rights; they may tax the papers of the custom-house; they may tax judicial process; they may tax all the means employed by the government to an excess which would defeat all the ends of government. This was not intended by the American people. They did not design to make their government dependent on the States." In Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 543, followed and approved in National Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. 1, it was held competent for Congress, in aid of the circulation of the national banks, to impose restraints upon the cir-

It follows as a logical result from this doctrine that if the Congress of the Union may constitutionally create a Bank of the United States, as an agency of the national government in the accomplishment of its constitutional purposes, any power of the States to tax such bank, or its property, or the means of performing its functions, unless with the consent of the United States, is precluded by necessary implication.¹ For the like reasons a State is prohibited from taxing an officer of the general government for his office or its emoluments; since such a tax, having the effect to reduce the compensation for the services provided by the act of Congress, would to that extent conflict with such act, and tend to neutralize its purpose.² So the States may not impose taxes upon the obligations or evidences of debt issued by the general government upon the loans made to it, unless such taxation is permitted by law of Congress, and then only in the manner such law shall prescribe, — any such tax being an impediment to the operations of the government in negotiating loans, and, in greater or less degree in proportion to its magnitude, tending to cripple and embarrass the national power.³ The tax upon culcation of the State banks in the form of taxation. Perhaps no other case goes so far as this, in holding that taxation may be imposed for other purposes than the raising of revenue, though the levy of duties upon imports with a view to incidental protection to domestic manufactures is upon a similar principle. [The Federal tax system is not subject to State registration laws, nor to State statutes of limitation. United States v. Snyder, 149 U. S. 219, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846.]

¹ McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738; Dobbins v. Commissioners of Erie Co., 16 Pet. 435. [The States are prohibited from taxing the franchises and intangible property of national banks. Owensboro Nat'l Bk. v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 694, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; Third Nat'l Bk. of Louisville v. Stone, 174 U. S. 422, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759. Upon taxing shares of national banks in hands of stockholders, see First Nat'l Bk. of Wellington v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 265, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 491, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; note to 7 L. ed. U. S. 639; also M. Henry v. Downer, 116 Cal. 20, 47 Pac. 773, 45 L. R. A. 737, and note thereto in L. R. A. Omission by official assessors to assess moneys of individual citizens invested in interest-bearing loans and securities, and in stocks and bonds, is not invalid as a discrimination against national banks whose shares are assessed, where the money invested in the non-assessed property does not compete with the national banks. First Nat. Bk., ac. v. Cheha Is. Co., 163 U. S. 440, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629, aff. 5 Wash. 64, 32 Pac. 1001; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 129 U. S. 360, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412, aff. 53 Kan. 444, 463, 38 Pac. 724.] But the doctrine which exempts the instrumentalities of the general government from the influence of State taxation, being founded on the implied necessity for the use of such instruments by the government, and legislation as does not impair the usefulness or capability of such instruments to serve the government is not within the rule of prohibition. National Bank v. Commonwealth, 9 Wall. 353; Thompson v. Pacific R. R. Co., 9 Wall. 579.

² Dobbins v. Commissioners of Erie Co., 16 Pet. 435. On similar grounds it is held in Canada that a provincial legislature has no power to impose a tax on the official income of an officer of the Dominion government. Leprohon v. Ottawa, 40 U. C. Rep. 486; s. c. on appeal, 2 Ont. App. Rep. 352.

³ Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 442;

the national securities is a tax upon the exercise of the power of Congress "to borrow money on the credit of the United States." The exercise of this power is interfered with to the extent of the tax imposed under State authority; and the liability of the certificates of stock or other securities to taxation by a State, in the hands of individuals, would necessarily affect their value in market, and therefore affect the free and unrestrained exercise of the power. "If the right to impose a tax exists, it is a right which, in its nature, acknowledges no limits. It may be carried to any extent within the jurisdiction of the State or corporation which imposes it, which the will of each State or corporation may prescribe."¹

If the States cannot tax the means by which the national government performs its functions, neither, on the other hand and for the same reasons, can the latter tax the agencies of the State governments. "The same supreme power which established the departments of the general government determined that the local governments should also exist for their own purposes, and made

Bank of Commerce v. New York City, 2 Black, 620; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall, 200; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall, 674; People v. Commissioners, 4 Wall, 244; Bradley v. People, 4 Wall, 459; The Banks v. The Mayor, 7 Wall, 19; Bank v. Supervisors, 7 Wall, 25; State v. Rogers, 70 Mo, 283. For a kindred doctrine, see State v. Jackson, 33 N. J. 460.

¹ Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 443, 460; Bank of Commerce v. New York City, 2 Black, 620; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall, 200; Society for Savings v. Come, 6 Wall, 694. Revenue stamps are not taxable. Palfrey v. Boston, 101 Mass. 229. Nor United States treasury notes. Montgomery County v. Elston, 32 Ind. 27. Nor the premium on United States bonds. People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 40 N. Y. 63. [But an inheritance or succession tax may be imposed upon a legacy consisting of United States bonds. Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829, aff. 30 Misc. 19, 62 N. Y. Supp. 1024.] In People v. United States, 93 Ill. 30, 34 Am. Rep. 175, it was decided that property of the United States, held for any purpose whatever, was not subject to State taxation. Citing McGoon v. Scales, 9 Wall, 23; Railway Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall, 293. Lands within a State belonging to the United States by purchase or failure of owner to pay direct taxes are exempt from State taxation while so owned. Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U. S. 151, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670. [Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S. 144, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.] The Central Pacific & Southern Pacific Railroad Companies derive many of their franchises from the United States. These cannot be taxed by a State without the consent of Congress. California v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073. But land is taxable though the title is still in the United States, if the real owner is entitled to a patent. Wis. Centr. Ry. Co. v. Comstock, 71 Wis. 88, 36 N. W. 843. [So, too, though his right to patent is not yet confirmed, owing to dispute as to mineral or non-mineral character of lands concerned, Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 580, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.] The property of the Western Union Telegraph Co., a New York corporation, lying in Massachusetts, cannot escape taxation there as an agency of the federal government, although it has the right to use post roads. Western U. Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611. That taxation cannot be evaded by turning funds temporarily into United States notes just before the time for assessment, see Shutwell v. Moore, 129 U. S. 690, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362.

it impossible to protect the people in their common interests without them. Each of these several agencies is confined to its own sphere, and all are strictly subordinate to the constitution which limits them, and independent of other agencies, except as thereby made dependent. There is nothing in the Constitution [of the United States] which can be made to admit of any interference by Congress with the secure existence of any State authority within its lawful bounds. And any such interference by the indirect means of taxation is quite as much beyond the power of the national legislature as if the interference were direct and extreme."¹ It has therefore been held that the law of Congress requiring judicial process to be stamped could not constitutionally be applied to the process of the State courts; since otherwise Congress might impose such restrictions upon the State courts as would put an end to their effective action, and be equivalent practically to abolishing them altogether.² And a similar ruling has been made in other analogous cases.

¹ Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 605. "In respect to the reserved powers, the State is as sovereign and independent as the general government. And if the means and instrumentalities employed by that government to carry into operation the powers granted to it are necessarily, and for the sake of self-preservation, exempt from taxation by the States, why are not those of the States depending upon their reserved powers, for like reasons, equally exempt from federal taxation? Their unimpaired existence in the one case is as essential as in the other. It is admitted that there is no express provision in the Constitution that prohibits the general government from taxing the means and instrumentalities of the States, nor is there any prohibiting the States from taxing the means and instrumentalities of that government. In both cases the exempt on rests upon necessary implication, and is upheld by the great law of self-preservation; as any government, whose means employed in conducting its operations, is subject to the control of another and distinct government, can only exist at the mercy of that government. Of what avail are these means if another power may tax them at discretion?" Per Nelson, J., in Collector v. Day, 11 Wall. 115, 124. See also Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 427; Railroad Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 6; Freedman v. Sigel, 10 Blatch. 327. [A tax levied by the United States upon legacies and distributive shares of personal property is a tax upon the transmission or receipt of property and not upon the right of the State to regulate the devolution of property upon death of owner. Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Murdock v. Ward, 178 U. S. 139, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Magoun v. Illinois Trust Co., 170 U. S. 283, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584. See United States v. Owens, 100 Fed. Rep. 70, upon right of Federal government to tax bonds of saloon-keepers. Held that act purporting to authorize such tax is void for violation of the principle against taxation of the agencies of the State.

The taxation of the capital stock of a corporation owning patents is a taxation of such patents and invalid. So held in People v. Board of Assessors, 156 N. Y. 417, 51 N. E. 269. Not so as to tax levied on the shares of stock as property of the individual. Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. State, 87 Md. 687, 40 Atl. 1074, 67 Am. St. 371.]

² Warren v. Paul, 22 Ind. 276; Jones v. Estate of Keep, 19 Wis. 369; Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 605; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold. 325; Smith v. Short, 40 Ala. 385; Moore v. Quirk, 105 Mass. 43, 7 Am. Rep. 469.

It has been repeatedly decided that the act of Congress which provided that Strong as is the language employed to characterize the taxing power in some of the cases which have considered this subject, subsequent events have demonstrated that it was by no means extravagant. An enormous national debt has not only made imposts necessary which in some cases reach several hundred per cent of the original cost of the articles upon which they are imposed, but the systems of State banking which were in force when the necessity for contracting that debt first arose, have been literally taxed out of existence by burdens avowedly imposed for that very purpose.¹ If taxation is thus unlimited in its operation upon the objects within its reach, it cannot be extravagant to say that the agencies of government are necessarily excepted from it, since otherwise its exercise might altogether destroy the government through the destruction of its agencies. That which was predicted as a possible event has been demonstrated by actual facts to be within the compass of the power; and if considerations of certain papers not stamped should not be received in evidence must be limited in its operation to the federal courts. Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 452; Green v. Hulway, 101 Mass. 243, 3 Am. Rep. 339; Clemens v. Conrad, 19 Mich. 170; Haight v. Grist, 64 N. C. 730; Griffin v. Ranney, 35 Conn. 289; People v. Gates, 43 N. Y. 40; Bowen v. Byrne, 55 Ill. 487; Haile v. Wilkinson, 21 Gratt. 75; Atkins v. Plympton, 44 Vt. 21; Bumpass v. Taggart, 26 Ark. 308, 7 Am. Rep. 623; Sammons v. Holloway, 21 Mich. 182, 4 Am. Rep. 465; Duffy v. Hobson, 40 Cal. 240; Sporrer v. Eifer, 1 Heisk. 653; McElvain v. Mud2, 44 Ala. 48, 4 Am. Rep. 106; Burson v. Huntington, 21 Mich. 416, 4 Am. Rep. 497; Davis v. Richardson, 45 Miss. 499, 7 Am. Rep. 192; Hunter v. Cobb, 1 Bush, 289; Craig v. Dimock, 47 Ill. 308; Moore v. Moore, 47 N. Y. 487, 7 Am. Rep. 456. [Knox v. Rossi, 25 Nev. 96, 57 Pac. 179, 48 L. R. A. 305. Upon effect of omission to stamp an instrument or cancel the stamp thereon, see note to this case in L. R. A. A check may be forged and the forger punished criminally, even though the instrument was not stamped in compliance with the law of Congress relating to checks, and was therefore invalid. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. Crim. App. 562, 51 S. W. 242, 46 L. R. A. 454, and see note to this case in L. R. A. upon omission of stamp as affecting criminal prosecution.] Several of these cases have gone still farther, and declared that Congress cannot preclude parties from entering into contracts permitted by the State laws, and that to declare them void was not a proper penalty for the enforcement of tax laws. Congress cannot make void a tax deed issued by a State. Sayles v. Davis, 22 Wis. 225. Nor require a stamp upon the official bonds of State officers. State v. Garton, 32 Ind. 1. Nor tax the salary of a State officer. Collector v. Day, 11 Wall. 113; Freedman v. Sigel, 10 Blatch. 327. Nor forbid the recording of an unstamped instrument under the State laws. Moore v. Quirk, 105 Mass. 49, 7 Am. Rep. 499. "Power to tax for State purposes is as much an exclusive power in the States, as the power to lay and collect taxes to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States is an exclusive power in Congress." Clifford, J., Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 427. In United States v. Railroad Co., 17 Wall. 322, it was decided that a municipal corporation of a State, being a portion of the sovereign power, was not subject to taxation by Congress upon its shares of stock in a railroad company. [Nor can the United States tax the income derived from bonds issued by the municipal corporations of the States. Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 429, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.]

¹ The constitutionality of this taxation was sustained by a divided court in Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533.

policy were important, it might be added that, if the States possessed the authority to tax the agencies of the national government, they would hold within their hands a constitutional weapon which factious and disappointed parties would be able to wield with terrible effect when the policy of the national government did not accord with their views; while, on the other hand, if the national government possessed a corresponding power over the agencies of the State governments, there would not be wanting men who, in times of strong party excitement, would be willing and eager to resort to this power as a means of coercing the States in their legislation upon the subjects remaining under their control.

There are other subjects which are or may be removed from the sphere of State taxation by force of the Constitution of the United States, or of the legislation of Congress under it. That instrument declares that "no State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws."¹ This prohibition has led to some difficulty in its practical application. Imports, as such, are not to be taxed generally; but it was not the purpose of the Constitution to exclude permanently from the sphere of State taxation all property brought into the country from abroad; and the difficulty encountered has been met with in endeavoring to indicate with sufficient accuracy for practical purposes the point of time at which articles imported cease to be regarded as imports within the meaning of the prohibition. In general terms it has been said that when the importer has so acted upon the thing imported that it has become incorporated and mixed up with the mass of property in the country, it has perhaps lost its distinctive character as an import, and has become subject to the taxing power of the State; but that while remaining the property of the importer, in his warehouse, in the original form or package in which it was imported, a tax upon it is too plainly a duty on imports to escape the prohibition in the Constitution.² And in the application of this rule

¹ Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10, cl. 2. The provision has no application to articles transported merely from one State to another. Brown v. Houston, 33 La. Ann. 843, 30 Am. Rep. 284; aff. 114 U. S. 622, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1961. See State v. Pittsburgh & Co. Co., 41 La. Ann. 465, 8 So. 220; [Am. Fertilizing Co. v. Bd. of Agriculture, 45 Fed. Rep. 69, 11 L. R. A. 178, and note; State v. Bixman, 162 Mo. 1, 62 S. W. 828.] But an inspection law applicable only to lime manufactured in Maine, is held a regulation of commerce. Higgins v. Lime, 130 Mass. 1. A State tax on alien passengers is a tax on commerce though levied in aid of an inspection law. People v. Compagnie, &c., 107 U. S. 60, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87. But a like impost under federal law is valid. Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

² Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 441, per Marshall, Ch. J. [May & Co. v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 20 Sup. Ct.

it was declared that a State law which, for revenue purposes, required an importer to take a license and pay fifty dollars before he should be permitted to sell a package of imported goods, was equivalent to laying a duty upon imports. It has also been held in another case, that a stamp duty imposed by the legislature of California upon bills of lading for gold or silver, transported from that State to any port or place out of the State, was in effect a tax upon exports, and the law was consequently void.¹

Congress is also vested with power to regulate commerce. (a) This power is not so far exclusive as to preclude State legislation on matters either local in their nature or operation, or intended

Rep. 978, aff. 51 La. Ann. 1064, 25 So. 959. And as to original packages, see Postal Tel. & Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360, and note 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; Re Wilson, 8 Mackey, 341 (D. C.), 12 L. R. A. 624, and note; and State v. Winters, 44 Kan. 723, 25 Pac. 235, 10 L. R. A. 616, and note; tax on imports, see note to 11 L. R. A. 179. See also Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Re Wilson, 10 N. M. 32, 60 Pac. 73, 48 L. R. A. 417. State cannot tax imported tea in original packages. Siegfried v. Raymond, 190 Ill. 224, 60 N. E. 808.]

¹ Almy v. California, 24 How. 100.

See what is said of this case in Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 137. And compare Jackson Iron Co. v. Auditor-General, 32 Mich. 488. See also Brumagim v. Tillinghast, 18 Cal. 285; Garrison v. Tillinghast, 18 Cal. 404; Ex parte Martin, 7 Nev. 140; Turner v. State, 55 Md. 240; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44. In the last two cases a law requiring an inspection of tobacco going out of the State is sustained. The States cannot discriminate in taxation between the productions of different States. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123.

(a) [The business of life insurance is not inter-state commerce. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962. Nor is marine insurance, Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610. Nor is fire insurance. Phila. Fire Assn. v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Liverpool & L. L. & Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts, 10 Wall. 566; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168; State v. Phipps, 50 Kan. 609, 31 Pac. 1007, 18 L. R. A. 657, 34 Am. St. 152. Upon State taxation and Federal commerce power, see note to 39 L. ed. U. S. 535, and another to 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041, also one to 37 L. ed. U. S. 216. Hiring laborers to be employed outside the limits of the State where hired is not commerce. Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128, aff. 110 Ga. 554, 35 S. E. 699. Nor is sending goods outside the State to have services performed upon them and the goods thereafter returned. Smith v. Jackson, 103 Tenn. 673, 54 S. W. 981, 47 L. R. A. 416. Nor is making contracts for buying and selling "futures" in another State. Alexander v. State, 83 Ga. 246, 12 S. E. 408, 10 L. R. A. 879. A State statute requiring the payment of a license tax by a non-resident soliciting orders for merchandise is invalid, Brennan v. City of Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. But an agent of a foreign corporation engaged in the purchase of wool to be shipped to that corporation in another State is engaged in inter-state commerce. MacNaughton Co. v. McGill, 29 Mont. 124, 49 Pac. 651, 28 L. R. A. 387, 63 Am. St. 610. Transportation of lottery tickets from one State to another by an express company is inter-state commerce. Champion v. Ames, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821. For other cases upon what constitutes "commerce," see Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, and cases cited in the opinion in Champion v. Ames, supra. For cases sustaining the anti-trust act of 1890 under the commerce clause, see United States v. Joint-Traffic Assn., 171 U. S. 506; Addyston Pipe & S. Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211; United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. Rep. 721.]

to be mere aids to commerce, for which special regulations can more effectually provide; such as harbor pilotage, beacons, buoys, the improvement of navigable waters within the State, and the examination as to their fitness of railroad employees, provided such legislation does not conflict with the regulations made by federal law.¹ Except as to such matters the power of Congress over commerce with foreign nations and among the several States is exclusive. If Congress has made no express regulations with regard to such commerce, its inaction is equivalent to a declaration that it shall be free.² The States, therefore, can enforce no regulations which make foreign or inter-state commerce subject to the payment of tribute to them.³ Duties of tonnage the States

¹ Conley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. 299; Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. 235; Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Esanaba Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 818; Willamette Iron B. Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. State, 128 U. S. 95, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28. A statute discriminating as to pilotage in favor of vessels from certain States is bad. Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688. Until Congress acts, State quarantine regulations are valid, and an examination fee may be charged graded by the kind of vessel. Morgan's S. S. Co. v. Louisiana, 118 U. S. 455, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114. See Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co., 144 Mass. 523, 11 N. E. 929. [But a State or municipal license tax levied upon tugs engaged in towing vessels engaged in inter-state commerce in the river and harbor of Chicago is bad. Hannon v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 346, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; and see in this connection note to this case in 87 L. ed. U. S. 216, on State statutes and regulation of inter-state commerce; also St. Louis v. Cons. Coal Co., 138 Mo. 342, 52 S. W. 103, 51 L. R. A. 850.]

² Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Walling v. Michigan, 118 U. S. 446, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Robbins

v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Phila. S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118.

³ In Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 441, it was held that a license fee of fifty dollars, required by the State of an importer before he should be permitted to sell imported goods, was unconstitutional, as coming directly in conflict with the regulations of Congress over commerce. So a tax on the amount of an auctioneer's sales was held inoperative so far as it applied to sales of imported goods made by him in the original packages for the importer. Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566. So is any tax which discriminates against imported goods. Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123. After property brought from another State has become part of the property in a State, it may be taxed like other property there. Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; [Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 159 U. S. 577, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 114, 25 S. E. 249, 35 L. R. A. 497;] but not, if it is taxed by reason of its being so brought. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275. See Phila. S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118. A tax upon receipts from the transportation of goods from one State to another by rail is bad. Case of State Freight Tax, 15 Wall. 232; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857. So is one upon the gross receipts from transportation by sea between different States, or to and from foreign countries: Phila. S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; im-are also forbidden to lay.¹ The meaning of this seems to be that pairing the force of Case of Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall 284; one upon gross receipts of car companies derived from inter-state business; State v. Woodruff, & Co., 114 Ind. 155, 15 N. E. 814. See Centra. R. R. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 49 N. J. L. 1, 7 Atl. 206. So is a privilege tax upon cars used as instruments of inter-state commerce. Pickard v. Pullman & Co., 117 U. S. 34, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635. So is the tax upon the capital stock of a foreign ferry corporation engaged in such commerce, which lands and receives passengers and freight within the State. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 199, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. So is one on all telegraph messages sent out of a State. Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460. See Ratterman v. W. U. Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127. A State may not exact, as a condition of doing business, a license from a company, a large part of whose business is the transmission of inter-state telegrams. Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 649, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1080. [But it may exact a license fee from an express company engaged in inter-state commerce before permitting it to do local business. Osborne v. Florida, 161 U. S. 659, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, aff. 33 Fla. 162, 14 So. 588, 25 L. R. A. 120, 20 Am. St. 60, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 731. And may tax such company upon its gross receipts from business done entirely within the State. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 230, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250. Likewise with telegraph companies. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. City Council of Charleston, 158 U. S. 692, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034. Western Un. Tel. Co. v. Freemont, 37 Neb. 602, 58 N. W. 415, 43 Neb. 439, 61 N. W. 724, 26 L. R. A. 938, 796. See, in this connection, Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Richmond, 99 Va. 102, 37 S. E. 789. And a charge of five dollars per annum for each pole planted by an inter-state telegraph company in a city's streets is not a tax on inter-state commerce, but a rental charged for use of the streets, and is valid. St. Louis v. W. U. Tel. Co., 148 U. S. 92, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; s. c. aff. 149 U. S. 455, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900. Taking orders by sample and sending them to principal in another State by whom they are filled, is inter-state commerce. Re Spain, 47 Fed. Rep. 208, 14 L. R. B. 97, and note; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 282, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829, 4 Inters. Com. R. 658, and see, in this connection, Re Houston, 47 Fed. Rep. 539, 14 L. R. A. 713; Re White, 43 Fed. Rep. 913, 11 L. R. A. 284; McLaughlin v. South Bend, 129 Ind. 471, 25 N. E. 155, 10 L. R. A. 357; French v. State, — Tex. Cr. Ap. —, 56 S. W. 1015, 52 L. R. A. 160; State v. Wiliingham, 9 Wyo. 200, 62 Pac. 797, 52 L. R. A. 138. Stockard v. Morgan, 105 Tenn. 412, 58 S. W. 1061, holds that a negotia-se broker representing only non-resident principals is subject to a State tax on occupation and is not engaged in inter-state commerce, but this case was afterward reversed in the Supreme Court of the United States, see Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576. But where the agent carries the goods with him and sells them, he is subject to the State law. Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, aff. 103 Mo. 241, 15 S. W. 81, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 527, 11 L. R. A. 219, 23 Am. St. 874; Rash v. Farley, 91 Ky. 344, 15 S. W. 892. Also where he forwards the orders, and the goods are shipped to him in bulk, and he breaks bulk and distributes them. Racine I. Co. v. McCommons, 111 Ga. 535, 36 S. E. 890, 51 L. R. A. 134; Camp v. State, — Tex. Cr. Ap. —, 61 S. W. 401 (Feb. 13, 1901); Croy v. Epperson, 104 Tenn. 525, 58 S. W. 235; State v. Caldwell, 127 N. C. 521, 37 S. E. 138. State may tax the corporate franchise of a company organized under its laws, although that company is engaged in inter-state commerce. People v. Wemple, 117 N. Y. 195, 22 N. E. 1646, 6 L. R. A. 393, and note.] That is not domestic commerce which in going between ports of the same State passes more than a marine league from shore. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. v. Board R. R. Comrs, 18 Fed. Rep. 10. Compare Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 129 Pa. St. 368, 18 Atl. 125. [Aff. in Lehigh V. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, holding that the domestic character of the com-vessels must not be taxed as vehicles of commerce, according merce between termini in the same State is not destroyed by the fact that in the carriage of the passengers and the goods, a portion of the route traversed lies in another State, thus reversing the rule of 18 Fed. Rep. 10, above. In L. V. R. Co. v. Pa., above, the tax was levied upon receipts, and an apportionment upon a mileage basis of receipts from domestic commerce, a portion of whose route lay without the State, was sustained.] For further discussion of this subject, see New York v. Minn., 11 Pet. 102; License Cases, 5 How. 504; Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 544; Erie Railway Co. v. New Jersey, 31 N. J. 531, rev. 30 N. J. 473; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 3 Grant, 126; Hinson v. Lott, 40 Ala. 123; Commonwealth v. Erie R. R., 62 Pa. St. 289; Osborne v. Mobile, 44 Ala. 498; s. c. in error, 16 Wall. 470; State v. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co., 45 Md. 331; Walcott v. People, 17 Mich. 68. In Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, it was held that a State law imposing a tax of one dollar on each person leaving the State by public conveyance was not void as coming in conflict with the control of Congress over commerce, though set aside on other grounds. Logs belonging to a non-resident are liable to be taxed though intended for transportation to another State, and partially prepared for being deposited at the place of shipment. Cook v. Iowa, 119 U. S. 517, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475. See Cook v. Brown Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 103 Ind. 302, 2 N. E. 758. On the subject of inter-state commerce, see further, pp. 846, 851-856, 873, post. See also on Taxation, 81-84. [Upon power of States over inter-state telegraph and telephone companies, see Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 79 Md. 502, 20 Atl. St. 24 L. R. A. 101, and note; and In re Pennsylvania Telephone Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 91, 20 Atl. 816. Municipal license tax levied upon tugs engaged in towing boats engaged in inter-state commerce is valid. Harmon v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 606, 13 S. p. Ct. 393, and see also note to this case in 37 L. ed. U. S. 219 upon State statutes and inter-state commerce. Railroad corporation engaged in inter-state commerce may send its agent into any State there to secure such commerce to his principal, and the State cannot exact of him a license fee for the transaction of such business. McCall v. California, 135 U. S. 104, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 135 U. S. 114, 334, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868. Sheep driven through a State for purpose of grazing, as well as to reach another State, are taxable in first State, even though they remain but a short time. Kelsey v. Rhodes, 7 Wyo. 267, 51 Pac. 503, 39 L. R. A. 594; s. c. 9 Wyo. 352, 63 Pac. 935. License tax upon those engaged in packing oysters for sale or transportation is valid, even though oysters are intended to be shipped out of the State. State v. Applegarth, 51 Md. 293, 31 Atl. 961, 28 L. R. A. 312. State may tax corporate franchise of a domestic corporation, even though the corporation is organized to carry on inter-state commerce. State v. Bd. of Assessors, 55 N. J. L. 523, 28 Atl. 711, 25 L. R. A. 134. One selling merchandise that is in a foreign State is engaged in inter-state commerce and cannot be compelled to pay a license. Adkins v. Richmond, 98 Va. 91, 34 S. E. 997. In Western Union T. Co. v. New Hope — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204, an ordinance requiring a license fee of $1.00 per pole, and $2.50 per mile of wire, was sustained though imposed upon poles and wires used in inter-state business. For other cases upon inter-state commerce and State's power of taxation, see Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 113, 25 S. E. 240, 65 L. R. A. 497; Commonwealth v. Myers, 92 Va. 803, 23 S. E. 915, 31 L. R. A. 373; Carrollton v. Bazzette, 159 Ill. 284, 42 N. E. 837, 31 L. R. A. 522; San Bernardino v. Southern Pac. Co., 107 Cal. 524, 40 Pac. 798, 29 L. R. A. 327; South Bend v. Martin, 142 Ind. 31, 41 N. E. 315, 29 L. R. A. 531; Commonwealth v. Harnes, 189 Pa. 89, 30 Atl. 1035, 27 L. R. A. 582; Wm J. Her & Co., 93 Iowa, 316, 61 N. W. 1001, 27 L. R. A. 219; Leavell v. Western U. Tel. Co., 116 N. C. 211, 21 S. E. 331, 27 L. R. A. 843; State v. Bd. of Assessors, 57 N. J. L. 516, 31 Atl. 229, 27 L. R. A. 684; State v. Gorham, 115 N. C. 721, 20 S. E. 179, 25 L. R. A. 819; Curt v. Sutton, 102 Mich. 324, 60 N. W. 500, 25 L. R. A. 819; Georgia Packing Co. v. Macon, 60 Fed. Rep. 774, 4 Inter-Com. Rep. 505, 22 L. R. A. 775; San

¹ Const. of U. S. art. 1, § 10, cl. 2.

to capacity;¹ but it is admitted they may be taxed like other property.²

Francisco v. Western U. Tel. Co., 96 Cal. 140, 31 Pac. 10, 17 L. R. A. 391; Rothermel v. Meyerle, 136 Pa. 259, 20 Atl. 583, 9 L. R. A. 396, and note; State v. Zephy, 14 S. D. 119, 84 N. W. 390, State v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 115 Iowa, 30, 84 N. W. 383.]

¹ Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. 577; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313. See Steamship Co. v. Port Wardens, 6 Wall. 31; State Tonnage Tax Cases, 12 Wall. 294; Ionian Steamship Co. v. Tinker, 64 U. S. 233; Lott v. Morgan, 41 Ala. 246; Johnson v. Drummond, 20 Gratt. 413; State v. Charleston, 4 Rich. 286; Johnson v. Loper, 43 N. J. L. 321. A license tax upon the business of running a ferry between two States is not a tonnage tax. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 167 U. S. 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257. But such tax upon running towboats between New Orleans and the Gulf is a regulation of commerce. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38. Tolls based on tonnage may be charged for the use of improved waterways. Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313. Port dues may not be laid unless services are rendered. Harbor Comrs v. Bushley, 19 S. C. 315; Webb v. Dunn, 18 Fla. 721.

² See above cases. Also Peeten v. Morgan, 19 Wall. 581; Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273; [N. W. Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County, 24 Wash. 326, 64 Pac. 906.] Wharfage charges are not forbidden by the above clause of the Constitution. Marshall v. Vicksburg, 15 Wall. 146; Packet Co. v. Kenkuk, 95 U. S. 80; Packet Co. v. St. Louis, 100 U. S. 423; Vicksburg v. Tobin, 100 U. S. 490; and they may be measured by tonnage. Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. S. 559; Transportation Co. v. Parkersburg, 167 U. S. 601, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732. [As to inter-state bridges, see Kenkuk & H. Bridge Co. v. Illinois, 175 U. S. 629, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235. The State may tax the average number of refrigerator cars used within its borders, even though they are owned outside the State and are engaged in inter-state commerce. Union Ref. Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; aff. 18 Utah 378,

55 Pac. 632, 48 L. R. A. 799; Am. Refs. Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599. Upon State taxes and commerce, see notes to 39 L. ed. U. S. 538, 24 C. C. A. 21, 8 C. C. A. 492, 13 L. R. A. 686, 11 L. R. A. 173, and 9 L. R. A. 503. State may tax capital employed within its limits, even though a part of the business conducted is inter-state commerce. People v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; aff. 91 Hun, 158, 149 N. Y. 698, 44 N. E. 1127. Although the control of navigable waters used for inter-state commerce is in Congress, yet the State that owns the soil underneath is not thereby prohibited from taxing structures erected thereon; it may also delegate this power of taxation to a municipality. Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 612, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; aff. 99 Ky. 623, 33 S. W. 591. Upon relation between State power of taxation and Federal control of commerce, note to 37 L. ed. U. S. 216. In the taxation of companies engaged in inter-state commerce, such as railway, telegraph, telephone, and express companies, and the like, a State is not restricted to the tangible property of such companies within its borders, but may tax in addition an equitable proportion of the intangible property of such companies used in such business, even though the companies are chartered by other States or countries, and have their principal office outside the taxing State. Exactly what rules shall be followed in the valuation of such intangible property, and its apportionment among the various States in which such companies operate, is not very well settled. See the whole subject exhaustively discussed in Adams Express Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395; s. c. in 61 Fed. Rep. 449, 470, 51 Ohio St. 492, 37 N. E. 945, 64 Fed. Rep. 9, 37 U. S. Ap. 378, 369, 63 Fed. Rep. 549, 557. See also Western U. Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 203 U. S. 1, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1954; aff. 141 Ind. 181, 40 N. E. 1051; Cleveland, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 164 U. S. 469, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1122; 4 Int. St. Com. R. 671; Pittsburg, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Massachusetts v. W. U. Tel. Co., 141 U. S. 40, 11 Sup. Ct.

It is also believed that that provision in the Constitution of the United States, which declares that "the citizens of each State

Rep. 889; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, 3 Int. St. Com. R. 595; Western U. Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 368, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 163 U. S. 159, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Adams Express Co. v. Kentucky, 169 U. S. 171, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; and in particular, see Adams Express Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 169 U. S. 185, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64, in which Mr. Justice Iredell, in delivering the opinion of the court denying a petition for a rehearing of 145 U. S. 184, lays down the very sensible proposition that "it is a cardinal rule which should never be forgotten, that whatever property is worth for the purposes of income and sale it is worth for the purposes of taxation." See also State, Gilbert v. Halliday, 58 Ohio St. 728, 51 N. E. 1192, 49 L. R. A. 427. The principle regulating the relation between the taxing power of the States and the commerce power of Congress, is stated by Mr. Chief Justice Fisher in Postal Telegraph Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 282, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 391; aff. 71 Miss. 555, 14 So. 23, 4 Inter. Com. R. 416-42 Ann. St. 476, as follows: "Property in a State belonging to a corporation, whether foreign or domestic, engaged in foreign or interstate commerce, may be taxed, or a tax imposed on the corporation on account of its property within a State, and may take the form of a tax for the privilege of exercising its franchises within the State, if the ascertainment of the amount is made dependent in fact on the value of its property situated within the State, if the exaction therefore not being susceptible of exceeding the sum which might be leviable directly thereon, and if payment be not made a condition precedent to the right to carry on the business, but its enforcement left to the ordinary means devised for the collection of taxes." This is reaffirmed in New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 461, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878, which sustains a tax upon tolls received by a lessee of a railroad from a lessee engaged in interstate commerce. See note upon State tax laws and interstate commerce, in 69 L. ed. U. S. 321, and another to

58 L. ed. U. S. 1041. Two other very important cases upon the "unit rule" in taxation of properties lying in two or more States, are Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114, and Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1122. The intangible property taxable within the State may be apportioned by the State, for purposes of county taxation, among the counties into or through which the railway extends. Columbus S. R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 479, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366, aff. 86 Ga. 574, 15 S. E. 293. See also Pullman's P. C. Co. v. Hayward, 141 U. S. 36, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 853. Where the tangible property in the State consists entirely of railway coaches running into or through the State, the property in the State may be valued by taking such fraction of the total capital stock of the company as the miles of road over which it runs its coaches in the State are of the total number of miles of road over which it runs its coaches. Pullman's P. C. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876. And a State may levy an excise tax upon a railroad operating within its borders, and such excise may be proportioned upon a graduated scale to the gross receipts of such road derived within the State, such gross receipts being determined from the total gross receipts for the entire system, within and without the State, from local, interstate, and foreign commerce, by the application of a track mileage ratio. Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada, 142 U. S. 217, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; Cumberland & P. R. Co. v. State, 22 Md. 618, 48 Ad. 503. And the State may enforce the payment of all such taxes by the imposition of whatever penalties it may see fit to prescribe by general law. A penalty of 50% of attorneys' fees was sustained in Western U. Tel. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 364, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345, aff. 149 Ind. 64, 44 N. E. 706. State cannot require a foreign corporation to pay a license before engaging in interstate commerce within its borders. Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851. Nor can it make mandatory and conclusive any arithmetical rule for

shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several States,"¹ will preclude any State from imposing upon the property which citizens of other States may own, or the business which they may carry on within its limits, any higher burdens by way of taxation than are imposed upon corresponding property or business of its own citizens. This is the express decision of the Supreme Court of Alabama,² following in this particular the dictum of an eminent federal judge at an early day,³ and the same doctrine has been recently affirmed by the federal Supreme Court.⁴ As the States are forbidden to pass any laws the determination of that portion of the intangible property of an inter-state business to be assessed as being within the State. Such rule is to be considered merely directory and presumptive. Welis, E. & Co's Express v. Crawford County, 63 Ark. 576, 40 S. W. 710, 57 L. R. A. 371. Business of a foreign railroad company having only terminal facilities in the State cannot be taxed by the State. People v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 1, 33 N. E. 720, 13 L. R. A. 694. The intangible capital of steamship companies may be distributed among the States in proportion to their tangible property. Beaufort Co. Comrs v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 128 N. C. 553, 39 S. E. 18. Cost of construction, cost of replacement, connections with other roads, and other commercial advantages, rental value, net earnings, and market value of stocks and bonds should all be considered in assessing railroad property. Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Jackson County, 38 Ore. 559, 64 Pac. 257, 65 Pac. 369. For other cases upon assessment of railroad property, see State v. Virginia & T. R. Co., 23 Nev. 283, 43 Pac. 723, 35 L. R. A. 759; Detroit City St. R. Co. v. Common Council, 125 Mich. 673, 85 N. W. 96, 86 N. W. 309.]

¹ Art. 4, § 2. A license tax may not be imposed upon one who contracts with or induces laborers to leave a State. Joseph v. Randolph, 71 Ala. 469. [Contra, Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128, aff. 110 Ga. 229, 35 S. E. 629.] A license tax upon buyers who come into a certain county to buy produce therein for shipment to markets outside the county is not repugnant to the equal privileges clause. Rothermel v. Meyerle, 133 Pa. 250, 20 Atl. 583, 9 L. R. A. 366.]

² Wiley v. Parmer, 14 Ala. 627.

³ Washington, J., in Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 571, 380. And see Campbell v. Morris, 3 H. & McH. 554; Ward v. Morris, 4 H. & McH. 240; and other cases cited, ante, p. 37, note. See also Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 295.

⁴ Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 419, 430; Case of State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 500. Compare Machine Co. v. Gage, 160 U. S. 673. A State cannot impose for the privilege of doing business within its limits, a license tax upon travelling agents from other States, offering for sale or selling merchandise, when none is imposed upon its own people. McGuire v. Parker, 32 La. Ann. 332. Or a heavier license tax upon non-residents than upon residents carrying on the same business. Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418; State v. Wiggin, 64 N. H. 508, 15 Atl. 128. Nor a license tax upon those dealing in goods, wares, and merchandise not the product of the State, while imposing none on similar traders selling the products of the State. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 449, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Espartero Thomas, 71 Cal. 204. See Graffy v. Rushville, 197 Ind. 502, 8 N. E. 639; Marshalltown v. Blum, 68 Iowa, 184, 12 N. W. 280; Pacific Junction v. Dyer, 64 Iowa, 28, 19 N. W. 802; State v. Pratt, 59 Vt. 502, 9 Atl. 552. Compare People v. Lyng, 74 Mich. 579, 42 N. W. 139; rev. in 135 U. S. 161, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725. [But it may impose upon such traders a license tax, when it imposes upon those dealing in its own similar products an equal tax. Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 206, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247, aff. 103 Mo. 241, 15 S. W. 81, 3 Inters. Com. R. 527, 11 L. R. A. 219, 23 Am. St. 874; contra, McGraw v. Marion, 98 Ky. 673, 34 S. W. 18, 47 L. R. A. 503. That a license tax levied upon itinerant impairing the obligation of contracts, they are of course precluded from levying any taxes which would have that effect. Therefore, as was shown in a previous chapter, if the State by any valid contract has obligated itself not to tax particular property, or not to tax beyond a certain rate, a tax in disregard of the obligation is void.¹ It is also held that to tax in one State contracts owned in another impairs their obligation, even though they are made and are payable in the State imposing the tax, and are secured by mortgage in that State.²

venders may be had as against non-residents, is no reason for holding it void as to residents. Brownback v. North Wales, 164 Pa. 608, 45 Atl. 680, 49 L. R. A. 446.] Nor charge vessels loaded with the products of other States larger fees for the use of the public wharves than are charged vessels loaded with products of the same State. Gay v. Baltimore, 100 U. S. 434. See further Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566. "The negotiation of sales of goods which are in another State for the purpose of introducing them into the State in which the negotiation is made is interstate commerce," and a statute imposing a privilege license upon all persons selling by sample within a Tennessee taxing district is void as applied to the drummer for an Ohio house, as interfering with such commerce, and this although Tennessee and foreign drummers are put on the same footing. Robbins v. Shelby Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Corsen v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 662, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; State v. Agee, 83 Ala. 110, 3 So. 556; State v. Bracco, 193 N. C. 349, 9 S. E. 404; Simmons Hardware Co. v. McGuire, 39 La. Ann. 849, 2 So. 592; Fort Scott v. Pelton, 39 Kan. 724, 18 Pac. 954; Ex parte Rosenblatt, 19 Nev. 459, 14 Pac. 238. [Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Ackles v. Richmond, 98 Va. 91, 34 S. E. 967, 47 L. R. A. 583; Laurens v. Elmore, 55 S. C. 477, 32 S. E. 569, 45 L. R. A. 249.] A license tax can be demanded only in respect of the business of an express company carried on entirely within the State. Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851 rev. Crutcher v. Com., 89 Ky. 6, 12 S. W. 141.] See also State v. Richards, 32 W. Va. 348, 9 S. E. 245. [And a State may tax resident commission merchants upon their commissions, even though those commissions are earned entirely upon interstate commerce. Ficklen v. Shelby Taxing District, 146 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810. And it may tax sellers of alcoholic liquors, and may exempt from such tax manufacturers who sell at the place of manufacture in quantities above a given amount. Such exemption does not discriminate against non-resident manufacturers. Reymann Brewing Co. v. Brister, 176 U. S. 445, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.]

¹ See ante, p. 356, and cases cited in note.

² State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 390; Street Railroad Co. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S. W. 348. See also Mayor of Baltimore v. Hussey, 37 Md. 112, 9 Atl. 19; Railroad Co. v. Com'rs, 91 N. C. 454; Railroad Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 202; Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 208. The stock of a foreign corporation is not taxable, though its property is used within the State by its licensees. Com. v. Amer. Bell Tel. Co., 129 Pa. St. 217, 18 Atl. 122; People v. Amer. Bell Tel. Co., 117 N. Y. 241, 22 N. E. 1057. Compare Catlin v. Hall, 21 Vt. 152; Jenkins v. Charleston, 5 S. C. 333; Mumford v. Sewall, 11 Oreg. 67, 4 Pac. 585. A State may tax its citizen upon the public debt of another State held by him, though exempt from taxes in such State. Bonaparte v. Tax Court, 104 U. S. 502. A foreign corporation having a railroad and doing business in a State, may, as a condition of doing business, be required, like a domestic corporation, to collect a tax upon its loans held by residents of the State. Com. v. New York, L. E. & W. R. R. Co., 129 Pa. St. 463, 8 Atl. 412. [The estate of a bankrupt in the hands of his assignee may be taxed by the State and county till distribution.

Having thus indicated the extent of the taxing power,¹ it is necessary to add that certain elements are essential in all taxation, and that it will not follow as of course, because the power is so vast, that everything which may be done under pretence of its exercise will leave the citizen without redress, even though there be no conflict with express constitutional inhibitions. Everything that may be done under the name of taxation is not necessarily a tax; and it may happen that an oppressive burden imposed by the government, when it comes to be carefully scrutinized, will prove, instead of a tax, to be an unlawful confiscation of property, unwarranted by any principle of constitutional government.

Re Sims, 118 Fed. Rep. 350. But where moneys are loaned by a creditor residing in one State to a debtor residing in another, the loan being effected through the intervention of an agent resident in the latter, the creditor is taxable in the latter State in respect of moneys so loaned, particularly if the moneys, as they fall due and are paid, are retained in that State. Bristol v. Warrington Co., 177 U. S. 133, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585. To substantially the same effect is New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 360, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, although here the notes and other evidences of debt were left in the hands of the agent in Louisiana. See many cases cited in a note on "Sims" for taxation of debts evidenced by notes or mortgages held by agent residing in different State from principal. Appended to the Stempel Case in 44 L. ed. U. S. 174. These cases, taken in connection with King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131, and Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, show a decided tendency to disregard the rule mobilia personam sequuntur, so far at least as taxation and attachment are concerned. And see in this connection Savings and Loan Society v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, where the right of a State to tax the interest of a non-resident mortgagee in lands within its boundaries is upheld, and the case of State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, distinguished, and sundry dicta in it disapproved.]

¹ A State may, if it see fit, tax the property owned, held, and used by itself or its municipalities for public purposes; but this would so obviously be unwise and impolitic that the intent to do so is never assumed, but public property is always,

by implication of law, exempt from the operation of the general terms of tax laws. People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; Trustees of Industrial University v. Champaign Co., 76 Ill. 184; Directors of Poor v. School Directors, 42 Pa. St. 21; People v. Austin, 47 Cal. 353; People v. Doe, 36 Cal. 220; Wayland v. County Comrs., 4 Gray, 500; Worcester Co. v. Worcester, 116 Mass. 193; State v. Gaffney, 34 N. J. 123; Camden v. Camden Village Corp., 77 Me. 530, 1 Atl. 683; Erie Co. v. Erie, 113 Pa. St. 360, 6 Atl. 205. But city water-works may be taxed for county purposes. Erie Co. v. Comrs. Water-Works, 113 Pa. St. 368, 6 Atl. 135. The same rule applies to special city assessments. Green v. Hotelling, 44 N. J. L. 317; Polk Co. Savings Bank v. State, 69 Iowa, 24, 25 N. W. 413; Harris Co. v. Boyd, 70 Tex. 237, 7 S. W. 713. But see contra, Adams Co. v. Quincy, 139 Ill. 503, 22 N. E. 624. And the exemption extends to lands acquired by a city outside its limits to supply itself with water. West Hartford v. Water Comrs., 44 Conn. 250; Rochester v. Rush, 80 N. Y. 302. So of a ferry landing in Brooklyn owned by New York City, to which the ferry privilege belongs. People v. Assessors, 111 N. Y. 605, 10 N. E. 90. See Black v. Sherwood, 84 Va. 906, 3 S. E. 454. But not so of land taken by a city in payment of the defalcation of an officer. People v. Chicago, 124 Ill. 653, 17 N. E. 53. [Public property is in Louisiana liable to special assessments for public improvements. New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S. 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44. Upon liability of public property to assessment for public improvements, see many cases cited and discussed in note to 44 L. ed. U. S. 96.]

In the first place, taxation having for its only legitimate object the raising of money for public purposes (a) and the proper needs

(a) [Appropriation of money for the expenses of a school controlled by a private corporation in consideration of the gratuitous instruction of common school-teachers is for a public purpose, and it is not an assumption of debts of a private corporation or a loan to it. Boehm v. Hertz, 182 Ill. 154, 54 N. E. 273, 45 L. R. A. 575. Purchase of rights necessary to the beautification of public parks is a public purpose. Knowlton v. Williams, 174 Mass. 476, 55 N. E. 77, 47 L. R. A. 314. So is erection of a bridge for highway and railway purposes, even though bridge is property of a private corporation authorized to collect tolls for its use. Pittsford v. Magoun, 109 Iowa, 364, 80 N. W. 512, 46 L. R. A. 381. To aid in the building of a railroad is a public purpose. Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 611, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, and cases therein cited. Contra, People v. Tp. B3. of Salem, 20 Mich. 452. So, possibly, to pension those dependent upon an officer dying in office. Opinion of Justices, 175 Mass. 500, 57 N. E. 675, 49 L. R. A. 564. An enterprise may be public, even though it is controlled by a private corporation for profit. Ryan v. L. & N. Terminals Co., 102 Tenn. 111, 50 S. W. 744, 45 L. R. A. 303. See also Phoenix Fire Ins. Co. v. Montgomery Fire Dept., 117 Ala. 631, 23 So. 843, 42 L. R. A. 468. Maintenance of a State university established by constitutional authority is a public purpose, but the creation of free scholarships and allowances for needy students, even though appointments to them are made upon public competitive examinations, is not. State v. Switzer, 143 Mo. 287, 46 S. W. 245, 40 L. R. A. 280, 65 Am. St. 653. To make a county exhibit at the Omaha exposition in 1898, was held a public purpose in State v. Cornell, 53 Neb. 556, 74 N. W. 59, 39 L. R. A. 513. Erection of electric-lighting plant to furnish light to citizens as well as to municipality is. Michell v. Negancee, 116 Mich. 359, 71 N. W. 646, 38 L. R. A. 157, 27 Am. St. 428; Jacksonville Ed. L. Co. v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. 229, 18 So. 677, 30 L. R. A. 543, 51 Am. St. 24. Opinion of Justices, 150 Mass. 392, 24 N. E. 1084, 8 L. R. A. 487, and note; McClendon v. St. Augustine, 42 Fla. 287, 59 So. 421 (Nov. 3, 1900); contra, Mauldin v. Greenville, 33 S. C. 1, 11 S. E. 434, 8 L. R. A. 291. Construction of an underground street railway is. Sun P. & P. Assn. v. New York, 152 N. Y. 257, 46 N. E. 499, 37 L. R. A. 755. Treatment of habitual drunkards at a private institution is not. Wis. Keeley Inst. Co. v. Milwaukee County, 95 Wis. 153, 70 N. W. 55, 36 L. R. A. 55; contra, Re Hanse, 23 Col. 87, 46 Pac. 117, 33 L. R. A. 832; Baltimore v. Keeley Institute, 81 Md. 106, 31 Atl. 437, 27 L. R. A. 346. To make an exhibit of county resources at an exposition is. Shelby County v. Tennessee C. Exp. Co., 93 Tenn. 633, 36 S. W. 604, 33 L. R. A. 717. So to construct a subway beneath city streets, which when completed is to be leased to a street railway company. Price v. Crocker, 165 Mass. 317, 44 N. E. 446, 32 L. R. A. 610. To provide bounties for killing coyotes. Ingram v. Colgan, 106 Cal. 113, 120, 35 Pac. 315, 39 Pac. 437, 28 L. R. A. 187, 49 Am. St. 221. Moneys for benefit of an insolvent railroad company with provision that resident creditors shall first be paid out of proceeds cannot be raised by taxation. Baltimore & E. S. R. Co. v. Spring, 80 Md. 610, 31 Atl. 208, 27 L. R. A. 72. But medical treatment and care of poor persons may be provided at public expense in time of epidemic. Thomas v. Mason, 39 W. Va. 526, 20 S. E. 580, 26 L. R. A. 727, and note. A municipal electric plant to supply electricity for municipal purposes, even though electricity is to be supplied also to private consumers, provided reasonable rates be charged, may be erected at public cost. Linn v. Chambersburg, 130 Pa. 511, 28 Atl. 842, 25 L. R. A. 217; Crawfordsville v. Braden, 130 Ind. 149, 28 N. E. 843, 14 L. R. A. 248, and note, 30 Am. St. 214. To make State exhibit at World's Columbian Exposition is. Norman v. Kentucky B1. of Managers, 93 Ky. 537, 20 S. W. 901, 18 L. R. A. 550; Daggett v. Colgan, 92 Cal. 53, 28 Pac. 61, 14 L. R. A. 474, and note on public purposes, 27 Am. St. 36. Purchase of fuel and distribution and sale thereof to inhabitants is not a public service. Opinion of Justices, 155 Mass. 598, 30 N. E. 1142, 15 L. R. A. 899; In re Municipal Fuel Plants, — Mass. —, 36 N. E. 25 (1903). Public moneys cannot be applied toward part payment of tuition of pupils attending private academies. Underwood v. Wood, 93 Ky. 177, 19 S. W.

of government, the exaction of moneys from the citizens for other purposes is not a proper exercise of this power, and must therefore be unauthorized. In this place, however, we do not use the word public in any narrow and restricted sense, nor do we mean to be understood that whenever the legislature shall overstep the legitimate bounds of their authority, the case will be such that the courts can interfere to arrest their action. There are many cases of unconstitutional action by the representatives of the people which can be reached only through the ballot-box; and there are other cases where the line of distinction between that which is allowable and that which is not is so faint and shadowy that the decision of the legislature must be accepted as final, even though the judicial opinion might be different. But there are still other cases where it is entirely possible for the legislature so clearly to exceed the bounds of due authority that we cannot doubt the right of the courts to interfere and check what can only be looked upon as ruthless extortion, provided the nature of the case is such that judicial process can afford relief. An unlimited power to make any and every thing lawful which the legislature might see fit to call taxation, would be, when plainly stated, an unlimited power to plunder the citizen.¹

¹ Tyson v. School Directors, 51 Pa. v. Vernon, 27 Iowa, 28; Allen v. Jay, 60 St. 9; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82; Me. 124, 11 Am. Rep. 185; Ferguson Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray, 417; Hansen v. Landram, 6 Bush, 230; People v. 405, 15 L. R. A. 825, and note. To provide bounties for planting forest trees is not a public purpose. Deal v. Mississippi County, 107 Mo. 464, 18 S. W. 24, 14 L. R. A. 622. But enlargement of a private millrace may be if it extends river and canal navigation to a public street. Waterloo W. Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 128 N. Y. 645, 28 N. E. 338, 14 L. R. A. 481. Disposal of sewage is. Re Kingman, 153 Mass. 500, 27 N. E. 778, 12 L. R. A. 417, and note. So is supplying natural gas to the corporation and to its citizens. State v. Toledo, 48 Ohio St. 112, 26 N. E. 1901, 11 L. R. A. 720. Erection of a memorial hall is, but maintenance and support of a G. A. R. post is not. Kingman v. Brockton, 153 Mass. 235, 26 N. E. 998, 11 L. R. A. 123, and note. Distributing water power to private consumers is not. Re Barre Water Co., 22 Vt. 27, 20 Atl. 109, 9 L. R. A. 195. Where the Constitution authorizes counties to loan their aid for the "necessary support of the poor," a statute "authorizing counties to issue bonds to procure seed-grain for needy farmers resident therein" is valid. State v. Nelson County, 1 N. D. 88, 45 N. W. 33, 8 L. R. A. 283, and note, 26 Am. St. 699. Keeping private lands clear of driftwood is a private purpose. Hutton v. Webb, 126 N. C. 807, 35 S. E. 341. To raise money to pay to men drafted and serving in Union Armies in Civil War, or to their heirs, specified sums is a private purpose. Bush v. Bd. of Supervs. of Orange Co., 159 N. Y. 212, 53 N. E. 1121, 45 L. R. A. 556, 70 Am. St. 538. An act providing for the raising of money to pay a bounty to private producers of beet sugar is invalid. Michigan Sugar Co. v. Auditor General, 124 Mich. 374, 85 N. W. 825, 83 Am. St. 354. A grant of land by the city of Minneapolis to a private corporation for use for an Industrial Exhibition was held valid upon the theory that though it involved taxation, the purpose was "public" within the requirement of the rule. Minneapolis v. Janney, 86 Minn. 111, 90 N. W. 312. For other cases on public purposes, see Skinner v. Henderson, 20 Fla. 121, 7 So. 464, 8 L. R. A. 56.]

It must always be conceded that the proper authority to determine what should and what should not constitute a public burden is the legislative department of the State. This is not only true for the State at large, but it is true also in respect to each municipality or political division of the State; these inferior corporate existences having only such authority in this regard as the legislature shall confer upon them.¹ And in determining this question, the legislature cannot be held to any narrow or technical rule. Not only are certain expenditures absolutely essential to the continued existence of the government and the performance of its ordinary functions, but as a matter of policy it may sometimes be proper and wise to assume other burdens which rest entirely on considerations of honor, gratitude, or charity. The officers of government must be paid, the laws printed, roads constructed, and public buildings erected; but with a view to the general well-being of society, it may also be important that the children of the State should be educated, the poor kept from starvation,² losses in the public service indemnified, and incentives held out to faithful and fearless discharge of duty in the future, by the payment of pensions to those who have been faithful public servants in the past. There will therefore be necessary expenditures, and expenditures which rest upon considerations of policy only, and, in regard to the one as much as to the other, the decision of that department to which alone questions of State policy are addressed must be accepted as conclusive.

Township Board of Salem, 20 Mich. 452; Washington Avenue, 69 Pa. St. 332, 8 Am. Rep. 255. "It is the clear right of every citizen to insist that no unlawful or unauthorized exaction shall be made upon him under the guise of taxation. If any such illegal encroachment is attempted, he can always invoke the aid of the judicial tribunals for his protection, and prevent his money or other property from being taken and appropriated for a purpose and in a manner not authorized by the Constitution and laws." Per Brewer, Ch. J., in Freeland v. Hastings, 19 Allen, 570, 575. See Hooper v. Beverly, 14 Me. 375; People v. Sup'rs of Saginaw, 26 Mich. 22; Weisner v. Douglas, 64 N. Y. 91, 21 Am. Rep. 585. [A statute authorizing the State to loan its money to individuals for the buying of seeds in cases where crops have failed, is invalid for violating the principle that the functions of the State are to be exercised primarily in the interest of the public rather than in the interest of the individual. Deering & Co. v. Peterson, 75 Minn. 118, 77 N. W. 568.]

¹ Litchfield v. Vernon, 41 N. Y. 123. A law may determine absolutely the amount of tax to be raised for a local improvement, and the property upon which it is to be apportioned. Spencer v. Merchant, 100 N. Y. 585, 3 N. E. 682; aff. 125 U. S. 345, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721. See ante, p. 335, and cases cited in note 1, p. 699.

² Taxes cannot be levied to donate to benevolent and charitable societies, which are controlled by private individuals, and over which the public authorities have no supervision or control. So held in an able opinion in St. Mary's Industrial School v. Brown, 45 Md. 310. But a city may be allowed to pay a part of the expense of an orphanage to which its magistrates may commit poor children. Shepherd's Fold v. Mayor, &c. New York, 93 N. Y. 187.

Very strong language has been used by the courts in some of the cases on this subject. In a case where was questioned the validity of the State law confirming township action which granted gratuities to persons enlisting in the military service of the United States, the Supreme Court of Connecticut assigned the following reasons in its support:—

“In the first place, if it be conceded that it is not competent for the legislative power to make a gift of the common property, or of a sum of money to be raised by taxation, where no possible public benefit, direct or indirect, can be derived therefrom, such exercise of the legislative power must be of an extraordinary character to justify the interference of the judiciary; and this is not that case.

“Second. If there be the least possibility that making the gift will be promotive in any degree of the public welfare, it becomes a question of policy, and not of natural justice, and the determination of the legislature is conclusive. And such is this case. Such gifts to unfortunate classes of society, as the indigent blind, the deaf and dumb, or insane, or grants to particular colleges or schools, or grants of pensions, swords, or other mementos for past services, involving the general good indirectly and in slight degree, are frequently made and never questioned.

“Third. The government of the United States was constituted by the people of the State, although acting in concert with the people of other States, and the general good of the people of this State is involved in the maintenance of that general government. In many conceivable ways the action of the town might not only mitigate the burdens imposed upon a class, but render the service of that class more efficient to the general government, and therefore it must be presumed that the legislature found that the public good was in fact thereby promoted.

“And fourth. It is obviously possible, and therefore to be intended, that the General Assembly found a clear equity to justify their action.”¹

And the Supreme Court of Wisconsin has said: “To justify

¹ Booth v. Woodbury, 32 Conn. 118, 128. See to the same effect Speer v. School Directors of Blairville, 50 Pa. St. 150. The legislature is not obliged to consult the will of the people concerned in ordering the levy of local assessments for the public purposes of the local government. Cheaney v. Hooper, 9 B. Monr. 830; Slack v. Maysville, &c. R. R. Co., 13 B. Monr. 1; Cypress Pond Draining Co. v. Hooper, 2 Met. (Ky.) 350; Spencer

v. Merchant, 100 N. Y. 385, 3 N. E. 982; aff. 125 U. S. 345, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921. Compare People v. Common Council of Detroit, 28 Mich. 228. The legislature cannot delegate to parties concerned the authority to levy taxes for the benefit of their own estates, and of those of others interested with them but not consenting. Southtown Fence Co. v. McAllister, 12 Bush, 312.

the court in arresting the proceedings and declaring the tax void, the absence of all possible public interest in the purposes for which the funds are raised must be clear and palpable; so clear and palpable as to be perceptible by every mind at the first blush. . . . It is not denied that claims founded in equity and justice, in the largest sense of those terms, or in gratitude or charity, will support a tax. Such is the language of the authorities."¹

But we think it is plain, as has been said by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, that "the legislature cannot . . . in the form of a tax, take the money of the citizens and give it to an individual, the public interest or welfare being in no way connected with the transaction. The objects for which money is raised by taxation must be public, and such as subserve the common interest and well-being of the community required to contribute."² Or, as stated by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, "the legislature has no constitutional right to . . . lay a tax, or to authorize any municipal corporation to do it, in order to raise funds for a mere private purpose. No such authority passed to the assembly by the general grant of the legislative power. This would not be legislation. Taxation is a mode of raising revenue for public purposes. When it is prostituted to objects in no way connected with the public interest or welfare, it ceases to be taxation and becomes plunder. Transferring money from the owners of it into the possession of those who have no title to it, though it be done under the name and form of a tax, is unconstitutional for ¹ Brodhead v. City of Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 621, 632. See M. Is. v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 411, 9 Am. Rep. 578; Spring v. Russell, 7 Me. 273; Williams v. School District, 83 Vt. 271. Taxation to supply natural gas to a city valid. Fellows v. Walker, 30 Fed. Rep. 631. It is not competent for a city to levy taxes to loan to persons who have suffered from a fire. Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 454, 15 Am. Rep. 99, and note, p. 53; Feldman v. City Council of Charleston, 23 S. C. 57. Or to supply farmers, whose crops have been destroyed, with provisions, and grain for seed and feed. State v. Osawkee, 14 Kan. 418. Or to aid manufacturing enterprises. Allen v. Jay, 60 Me. 124, 11 Am. Rep. 185; Commercial Bank v. Iola, 2 Den. 355; Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655; Opinions of Judges, 58 Me. 500; Coates v. Campbell, 37 Minn. 498, 35 N. W. 599; Mather v. Ottawa, 114 Ill. 653, 3 N. E. 218; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep.

442; Cole v. La Grange, 113 U. S. 1, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; though it be under pretence of sanitary improvements. Clee v. Sanders, 74 Mich. 692, 42 N. W. 154. Power to tax in aid of a water grist mill, recognized in Nebraska: Traver v. Merrick Co., 14 Neb. 327, 15 N. W. 690; contra, in aid of steam mill, Osborn v. Adams Co., 109 U. S. 1, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150. Taxation to pay a subscription to a private corporation is not for a public purpose. Weisner v. Douglas, 64 N. Y. 91, 21 Am. Rep. 586. A city cannot be empowered to erect a dam, with the privilege afterwards at discretion to devote it to either a public or private purpose; but the public purpose must appear. Attorney-General v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 490.

² Per Dixon, Ch. J., in Brodhead v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 624, 632. See also Lunsden v. Cross, 10 Wis. 282; Opinions of Judges, 58 Me. 590; Moulton v. Raymond, 60 Me. 121; post, p. 704, and note.

all the reasons which forbid the legislature to usurp any other power not granted to them."¹ And by the same court, in a still later case, where the question was whether the legislature could lawfully require a municipality to refund to a bounty association the sums which they had advanced to relieve themselves from an impending military conscription, "such an enactment would not be legislation at all. It would be in the nature of judicial action, it is true, but wanting the justice of notice to parties to be affected by the hearing, trial, and all that gives sanction and force to regular judicial proceedings; it would much more resemble an imperial rescript than constitutional legislation: first, in declaring an obligation where none was created or previously existed; and next, in decreeing payment, by directing the money or property of the people to be sequestered to make the payment. The legislature can exercise no such despotic functions."²

¹ Per Black, Ch. J., in Sharpless v. Mayor, &c., 21 Pa. St. 147, 198. See Opinions of Judges, 58 Me. 580.

² Tyson v. School Directors of Halifax, 51 Pa. St. 422. See also Grim v. Weisenburg School District, 57 Pa. St. 433. The decisions in Miller v. Grandy, 13 Mich. 540; Crowell v. Hopkinton, 45 N. H. 9; and Shackford v. Newington, 48 N. H. 415, so far as they hold that a bounty law is not to be held to cover moneys before advanced by an individual without any pledge of the public credit, must be held referable, we think, to the same principle. And see cases, ante, p. 282, note 3. Compensation for money voluntarily contributed for levee purposes by allowing such sums as a credit on future levee taxes is not allowable. Those incidentally benefited cannot be compelled to refund money thus spent. Davis v. Gaines, 48 Ark. 370, 3 S. W. 184. We are aware that there are some cases the doctrine of which seems opposed to those we have cited, but perhaps a careful examination will enable us to harmonize them all. One of these is Guilford v. Supervisors of Chenango, 18 Barb. 615, and 13 N. Y. 143. The facts in that case were as follows. Cornell and Clark were formerly commissioners of highways of the town of Guilford, and as such, by direction of the voters of the town, had sued the Butternut and Oxford Turnpike Road Company. They were unsuccessful in the action, and were, after a long litigation, obliged to pay costs. The town then refused to reimburse them these costs. Cornell and Clark sued the town, and, after prosecuting the action to the court of last resort, ascertained that they had no legal remedy. They then applied to the legislature, and procured an act authorizing the question of payment or not by the town to be submitted to the voters at the succeeding town meeting. The voters decided that they would not tax themselves for any such purpose. Another application was then made to the legislature, which resulted in a law authorizing the county judge of Chenango County to appoint three commissioners, whose duty it should be to hear and determine the amount of costs and expenses incurred by Cornell and Clark in the prosecution and defense of the suits mentioned. It authorized the commissioners to make an award, which was to be filed with the county clerk, and the board of supervisors were then required, at their next annual meeting, to apportion the amount of the award upon the taxable property of the town of Guilford, and provide for its collection in the same manner as other taxes are collected. The validity of this act was affirmed. It was regarded as one of those of which Dennis, J., says, "The statute book is full, perhaps too full, of laws awarding damages and compensation of various kinds to be paid by the public to individuals who had failed to obtain what they considered equitably due to them by the decision of a ministerial officers acting under the provi-

A like doctrine has been asserted by the Supreme Court of Michigan in a recent case. That State is forbidden by its constitutions of former laws. The courts have no power to supervise or review the doings of the legislature in such cases." It is apparent that there was a strong equitable claim upon the township in this case for the reimbursement of moneys expended by public officers under the direction of their constituents, and perhaps no principle of constitutional law was violated by the legislature thus changing it into a legal demand and compelling its satisfaction. Mr. Selgwick criticises this act, and says of it that it "may be called taxation, but in truth it is the reversal of a judicial decision." Selg. on Stat. and Const. Law, 414. There are very many claims, however, resting in equity, which the courts would be compelled to reject, but when it would be very proper for the legislature to recognize, and provide for by taxation. Brewster v. City of Syracuse, 10 N. Y. 110. Another case, perhaps still stronger than that of Guilford v. The Supervisors, is Thomas v. Leland, 24 Wend. 85. Persons at Utica had given bond to pay the extraordinary expense that would be caused to the State by changing the junction of the Chenango Canal from Whitesborough to Utica, and the legislature afterwards passed an act requiring the amount to be levied by a tax on the real property of the city of Utica. The theory of this act may be stated thus: The canal was a public way. The expense of constructing all public ways may be properly charged on the community especially or peculiarly benefited by it. The city of Utica was specially and peculiarly benefited by having the canal terminate there; and as the expense of construction was thereby increased, it was proper and equitable that the property to be benefited should pay this difference, instead of the State at large. The act was sustained by the courts, and it was well remarked that the fact that a bond had been before given securing the same money could not detract from its validity. Whether this case can stand with some others, and especially with that of Hampshire v. Franklin, 18 Mass. 76, we have elsewhere expressed a doubt, and it must be conceded that, for the legislature in any case to compel a municipality to assume a burden, on the ground of local benefit or local obligation, against the will of the citizens, is the exercise of an arbitrary power little in harmony with the general features of our republican system, and only to be justified, if at all, in extreme cases. The general idea of our tax system is, that those shall vote the burdens who are to pay them; and it would be intolerable that a central authority should have power, not only to tax localities, for local purposes of a public character which they did not approve, but also, if it so pleased, to compel them to assume and discharge private claims not equitably chargeable upon them. See the New York cases above referred to criticised in State v. Tappin, 20 Wis. 604, 689, 9 Am. Rep. 622. The legislature may require a county to pay for a road: Wilcox v. Deer Lodge Co., 2 Mont. 574; and may apportion to a township such part of the cost as the length of it in the township bears to its total length. Mahoney v. Conroy, 103 Pa. St. 332. See also Staw v. Dennis, 10 Ill. 405. The cases of Cheney v. Hooper, 9 B. Monr. 350; Sharp's Ex. v. Dunavan, 17 B. Monr. 223; Matus v. Shields, 2 Met. (Ky.) 553 will throw some light on this general subject. The case of Cypress Pond Draining Co. v. Harper, 2 Met. (Ky.) 350, is also instructive. The Cypress Pond Draining Company was incorporated to drain and keep drained the lands within a specified boundary, at the cost of the owners, and was authorized by the act to collect a tax on each acre, not exceeding twenty-five cents per acre, for that purpose, for ten years, to be collected by the sheriff. With the money thus collected, the board of managers, six in number, named in the act, was required to drain certain creeks and ponds within said boundary. The members of the board owned in the aggregate 3,840 acres, the larger portion of which was low land, subject to inundation, and of little or no value in its then condition, but which would be rendered very valuable by the contemplated draining. The corporate boundary contained 14,921 acres, owned by sixty-eight persons. Thirty-four of these, owning 5,975 acres, had no agency tution to engage in works of public improvement, except in the expenditure of grants of land or other property made to it for this purpose. The State, with this prohibition in force, entered into a contract with a private party for the construction by such party of an improvement in the Muskegon River, for which the State was to pay the contractor fifty thousand dollars, from the Internal Improvement Fund. The improvement was made, but the State officers declined to draw warrants for the amount, on the ground that the fund from which payment was to have been made was exhausted. The State then passed an act for the levying of tolls upon the property passing through the improvement sufficient to pay the contract price within five years. The court held this act void. As the State had no power to construct or pay for such a work from its general fund, and could not constitutionally have agreed to pay the contractors from tolls, there was no theory on which the act could be supported, except it was that the State had misappropriated the Internal Improvement Fund, and therefore ought to provide payment from some other source. But if the State had misappropriated the fund, the burden of reimbursement would fall upon the State at large; it could not lawfully be imposed upon a single town or district, or upon the commerce of a single town or district. The burden must be borne by those upon whom it justly rests, and to recognize in the State a power to compel some single district to assume and discharge a State debt would be to recognize its power to make an obnoxious district or an obnoxious class bear the whole burden of the State government. An act to that effect would not be taxation, nor would it be the exercise of any legitimate legislative authority.¹ And it in the passage of the act, and no notice of the application therefor, gave no assent to its provisions, and a very small portion of their land, if any, would be benefited or improved in value by the proposed draining; and they resisted the collection of the tax. As to these owners the act of incorporation was held unconstitutional and inoperative. See also the City of Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Monr. 491; Livingston v. Wilder, 53 Ill. 392; Curtis v. Wulpple, 24 Wis. 350; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 480; People v. Common Council of Detroit, 28 Mich. 228. The author has considered the subject of this note at some length in his treatise on taxation, c. 21.

¹ Ryerson v. Utley, 16 Mich. 290. See also People v. Springwells, 25 Mich. 153;

Anderson v. Hill, 54 Mich. 477, 29 N. W. 649. "Uniformity in taxation implies equality in the burden of taxation." Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 1, 15. "This equality in the burden constitutes the very substance designed to be secured by the rule." Weeks v. City of Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242, 258. See also Sanborn v. Rice, 9 Minn. 273; State v. Haven, 22 Wis. 699. The reasoning of these cases seems not to have been satisfactory to the New York Court of Appeals. See Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 602, in which an act was sustained which authorized "and required" the village of Brookport to levy a tax for the erection of a State Normal School building at that place. No recent case, we think, has gone so far as this. Compare State v. Targan, 20 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Mayor of may be said of such an act, that, so far as it would operate to make those who would pay the tolls pay more than their proportion of the State obligation, it was in effect taking their property for the private benefit of other citizens of the State, and was obnoxious to all the objections against the appropriation of private property for private purposes which could exist in any other case.

And the Supreme Court of Iowa has said: "If there be such a flagrant and palpable departure from equity in the burden imposed; if it be imposed for the benefit of others, or for purposes in which those objecting have no interest, and are therefore not bound to contribute, it is no matter in what form the power is exercised, — whether in the unequal levy of the tax, or in the regulation of the boundaries of the local government, which results in subjecting the party unjustly to local taxes, — it must be regarded as coming within the prohibition of the constitution designed to protect private rights against aggression however made, and whether under color of recognized power or not."¹

When, therefore, the legislature assumes to impose a pecuniary burden upon the citizen in the form of a tax, two questions may always be raised: First, whether the purpose of such burden may properly be considered public on any of the grounds above indicated;² and second, if public, then whether the burden is

Mobile v. Dargan, 45 Ala. 310; Livingston County v. Weiden, 84 Ill. 427; Burr v. Carbondale, 76 Ill. 455. "There can be no doubt that, as a general rule, where an expenditure is to be made for a public object, the execution of which will be substantially beneficial to every portion of the Commonwealth alike, and in the benefits and advantages of which all the people will equally participate, if the money is to be raised by taxation, the assessment would be deemed to come within that class which is held to defray one of the general charges of government, and ought therefore to be imposed as nearly as possible with equality upon all persons resident and estates lying within the Commonwealth. . . . An assessment for such a purpose, if laid in any other manner, could not in any just or proper sense be regarded as 'proportional' within the meaning of the Constitution." Merrick v. Inhabitants of Amherst, 12 Allen, 500, 504, per Brewster, Ch. J. This case holds that local taxation for a State purpose may be permitted in consideration of local benefits, and only differs in principle from Garden v. Cornes, in that the one permits what the other requires. The case of Marks v. Trustees of Purdue University, 37 Ind. 155, follows Merrick v. Amherst, and Burr v. Carbondale, 76 Ill. 455; Hensley Township v. People, 84 Ill. 544, and Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 497, are to the same effect. Taxation not levied according to the principles upon which the right to tax is based is an unlawful appropriation of private property to public uses. City of Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Monr. 491; People v. Township Board of Salem, 20 Mich. 452; Tide Water Co. v. Costar, 18 N. J. Eq. 518; Hammett v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. St. 143, 3 Am. Rep. 615.

¹ Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82, 82. See Durant v. Kauffman, 34 Iowa, 194.

² Though the legislature first decides that the use is public, the decision is not conclusive. They cannot make that a public purpose which is not so in fact. Gove v. Epping, 41 N. H. 530; Crowell v. Hopkinton, 45 N. H. 9; Freeland v. Hastings, 10 Allen, 570; Hooper v. Emery, 14 one which should properly be borne by the district upon which it is imposed. If either of these questions is answered in the negative, the legislature must be held to have assumed an authority not conferred in the general grant of legislative power, and which is therefore unconstitutional and void. "The power of taxation," says an eminent writer, "is a great governmental attribute, with which the courts have very wisely shown extreme unwillingness to interfere; but if abused, the abuse should share the fate of all other usurpations."¹ In the case of burdens thus assumed by the legislature on behalf of the State, it is not always that a speedy and safe remedy can properly be afforded in the courts. It would certainly be a very dangerous exercise of power for a court to attempt to stay the collection of State taxes because an illegal demand was included in the levy; and indeed, as State taxes are not usually levied for the purpose of satisfying specific demands, but a gross sum is raised which it is calculated will be sufficient for the wants of the year, the question is not usually one of the unconstitutionality of taxation, but of the misappropriation of moneys which have been raised by taxation. But if the State should order a city, township, or village to raise money by taxation to establish one of its citizens in business, or for any other object equally removed from the proper sphere of government, or should undertake to impose the whole burden of the government upon a fraction of the State, the usurpation of authority would not only be plain and palpable, but the proper remedy would also be plain, and no court of competent jurisdiction could feel at liberty to decline to enforce the paramount law.²

In the second place, it is of the very essence of taxation that it be levied with equality and uniformity, and to this end, that there should be some system of apportionment.³ Where the burden is

Me. 375; Allen v. Jay, 60 Me. 124, 11 Am. Rep. 185; Tyler v. Beacher, 44 Vt. 551, 8 Am. Rep. 338; Ferguson v. Landram, 5 Bush. 230; Kelly v. Marshall, 60 Pa. St. 319; People v. Flogg, 46 N. Y. 401; Curtis v. Whipple, 24 Wis. 350; Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655; [Re Page, 60 Kan. 842, 58 Pac. 478, 47 L. R. A. 68.]

¹ Sedgwick on Const. and Stat. Law, 414.

² Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655. [See also Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Chappell, 124 Mich. 72, 82 N. W. 800.]

³ [In State v. Traveller's Ins. Co. 73 Conn. 265, 47 Atl. 209, 57 L. R. A. 491,

it is held that, in the absence of any provision to that effect in the federal or State constitution, the taxing power of the legislature is not restricted by any implied rule of fundamental law that taxes must be equal and uniform. The court is unanimous upon three propositions as expressed by Baldwin, J. (1) "There is nothing in the constitution of Connecticut, nor in the 14th amendment to that of the United States, which, either expressly or by implication, requires that all taxation by this State shall be uniform or equal; (2) there is no fundamental principle of free government or natural justice that all taxation shall be uniform or equal; (3) a citizen of another State common, there should be common contribution to discharge it.¹

who participates as a shareholder in a corporation in the enjoyment of a special franchise granted by this State with a reservation of the power of amendment or repeal at pleasure, is not deprived of any privilege or immunity coming within the meaning of § 2, Art. 4, of the Constitution of the United States, by a statute imposing a State tax of 1½ per cent on the market value of his shares without any provision for deduction of capital invested in real estate," though such deduction is provided for in taxation of market value of shares of resident stockholders. The majority opinion seems to assert that the judicial power would be incompetent to declare a statute to be no law, though there were a fundamental principle of free government and natural justice, that all taxation should be uniform and equal which was violated by the statute. The judgment in this case was affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States in Traveller's Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 183 U. S. 894, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473, upon the peculiar provisions of the Connecticut tax laws.] The legislature cannot itself make an assessment directly or by placing a value on certain property. In re House Bill, 9 Col. 635, 21 Pac. 476; Slaughter v. Louisville, 89 Ky. 112, 8 S. W. 917; Ex parte Low, 24 W. Va. 620. [Nor can it classify the counties, and arbitrarily value the lands in each class. Hawkins v. Mangum, 78 Miss. 37, 28 So. 572.] That it is not essential to provide for the taxation of all property, see Mississippi Mills v. Cook, 55 Miss. 40; that it is competent to provide for taxing railroad corporations in a different way from individuals; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 675; State Board v. Central R. R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 146, 4 Atl. 578; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. Ry. Co. v. Com., 81 Ky. 462; Franklin Co. v. Railroad, 12 Lea, 521; Central Ia. Ry. Co. v. Board, 67 Iowa, 199, 25 N. W. 128. [McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep.

242. Upon taxation of railroads, see Cass County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 25 Neb. 345, 41 N. W. 216, 2 L. R. A. 188, and note. A tax against a railway company whose lines are partly without the State levied under a statute providing for an assessment upon gross receipts in such proportion as its mileage within the State bears to its total mileage, is valid. State Treas. v. Auditor General, 45 Mich. 224, 9 N. W. 258. Cumberland & P. Ry. Co. v. State, 92 Md. 608, 48 Atl. 503, 52 L. R. A. 764.] But some railroads may not be taxed on gross receipts, while others are taxed on capital. Worth v. Wilmington, & C. R. R. Co., 89 N. C. 201; nor may they alone be taxed to raise a fund to pay railroad commissioners; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. Co. v. Howe, 32 Kan. 737, 6 Pac. 307; nor may the assessed value of other real property be made the standard of value of railroad property. Williams v. State Board, 51 N. J. L. 512, 18 Atl. 750. See California v. Central Pac. R. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Santa Clara Co. v. South. Pac. R. R. Co., 118 U. S. 394, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132. [Nor may telegraph and telephone lines be taxed at a rate determined by taking the average rate of taxes, general, municipal, and local, levied throughout the State during the previous year, and applying it to the entire property of the company in the State for the present year, Pingree v. Dix, 120 Mich. 95, 78 N. W. 1025, 44 L. R. A. 679.] That property may be classified for taxation, Coal Run Co. v. Finlen, 124 Ill. 600, 17 N. E. 11; People v. Henderson, 12 Col. 369, 21 Pac. 144; Fahey v. State, 27 Tex. App. 146, 11 S. W. 108. Corporate and individual obligations may be put in different classes. Com. v. Del. Div. Canal Co., 123 Pa. St. 594, 16 Atl. 584. That the rule of uniformity must be applied to all subjects of taxation within the district and class; Marsh v. Supervisors, 42 Wis. 502; Phileo v. Hiles, 42 Wis. 527; Bureau

¹ 2 Kent, 231; Saiborn v. Rice, 9 Minn. 273; Ryerson v. Utley, 15 Mich. 269; Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 268; Tidewater Co. v. Costar, 18 N. J. Eq. 512. [A poll tax cannot be levied in such wise that those actually voting shall be exempt therefrom. Kansas City v. Whipple, 136 Mo. 475, 38 S. W. 295, 55 L. R. A. 747, 38 Am. St. 657.]

Taxation is the equivalent for the protection which the government affords to the persons and property of its citizens; and as

Co. v. Railroad Co., 44 Ill. 229; Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153; that it is not competent to add a percentage to the list for refusal or neglect to make oath to the tax list; McCormick v. Fitch, 14 Minn. 252; but see Ex parte Lynch, 10 S. C. 32; that it is competent to permit a deduction for debts from the assessment; Wetmore v. Multnomah Co., 6 Oreg. 463; contra, Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 1; that where property is required to be taxed by value, it is not competent to tax a corporation on its property and also on its capital stock; State v. Cumberland, &c. R. R. Co., 40 Md. 22; that a statute making a portion only of a certain kind of property taxable is unconstitutional; Pike v. State, 5 Ark. 204; that occupation taxes are no violation of the rule of uniformity. Youngblood v. Sexton, 82 Mich. 406; Ex parte Robinson, 12 Nev. 263; Gatlin v. Tarboro, 78 N. C. 119; [Fleetwood v. Read, 21 Wash. 547, 58 Pac. 365, 47 L. R. A. 205;] that foreign insurance companies may be required to pay different taxes from others; State v. Lathrop, 10 La. Ann. 398; Commonwealth v. Germania L. I. Co., 11 Pitts. 553; Ex parte Cohn, 13 Nev. 424; see San Francisco v. Liverpool, &c. Co., 74 Cal. 113, 15 Pac. 380. They may be required to pay such taxes as companies of the taxing State are made to pay in the home States of such companies. Home Ins. Co. v. Swiger, 104 Ill. 653; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Welch, 20 Kan. 672; People v. Fire Ass., 92 N. Y. 311; State v. Ins. Co., 115 Ind. 257, 17 N. E. 574. [But holders of contracts made with companies not doing business within this State cannot be subjected to higher taxation thereupon. Re Page, 60 Kan. 842, 58 Pac. 478, 47 L. R. A. 68.] Taxation for roads upon the citizens only of a township is unequal. Marion, &c. Ry. Co. v. Champlin, 37 Kan. 682, 16 Pac. 222. So is the exemption from such taxes of all property in incorporated villages. Com'rs v. Owen, 7 Col. 467, 4 Pac. 795. But uniformity provisions do not apply to the distribution of a road fund. Holton v. Com'rs Mecklenburg Co., 93 N. C. 430. And see Weber v.

Reinhard, 73 Pa. St. 370, 13 Am. Rep. 747; Louisville, &c. R. R. Co. v. State, 25 Ind. 177; Whitney v. Ragsdale, 33 Ind. 107; Francis v. Railroad Co., 19 Kan. 303; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 142; Wis. Cent. R. R. Co. v. Taylor Co., 52 Wis. 87, 8 N. W. 833; State v. Estabrook, 3 Neb. 173; Murray v. Lehman, 61 Miss. 283; Graham v. Com'rs Chautauqua Co., 31 Kan. 478, 2 Pac. 549; Dunham v. Cox, 44 N. J. Eq. 273, 14 Atl. 123.

The following are special cases: A tax on drays, &c., proportioned to the number of animals employed in drawing them, contravenes the constitutional requirement of uniformity in license taxes. State v. Endorn, 23 La. Ann. 603. See New Orleans v. Home Ins. Co., 23 La. Ann. 449. A railroad company cannot be taxed according to the length of its road. State v. South Can. R. R. Co., 4 S. C. 376. A tax on cotton cannot be proportioned to the weight regardless of grades. Sims v. Jackson, 22 La. Ann. 410. Income is not property for the purposes of taxation. Waring v. Savannah, 50 Ga. 83. A collateral inheritance tax is not a property tax. Schoolfield's Exec. v. Lynchburg, 78 Va. 206. A tax on the franchises of a coal company may be proportioned to the coal mined. Kittanning Coal Co. v. Commonwealth, 79 Pa. St. 190. The keepers of private markets may be charged a license tax though none is imposed on those who sell in the public markets. New Orleans v. Dubarry, 33 La. Ann. 481, 33 Am. Rep. 273. [And taxes may be levied upon vendors of merchandise, proportional to their annual gross receipts from sales, and such vendors may be classified into retail and wholesale and dealers at boards of trade, and the rates for the several classes may differ. Knisely v. Cotterel, 133 Pa. 614, 46 Atl. 801, 50 L. R. A. 86. Where the Constitution requires uniformity of rate as well as of valuation, the legislature cannot provide that pupils outside of a high-school district shall be admitted to attend the high-school upon payment of specified rates. H. S. Dist. No. 137 v. Lancaster Co., 60 Neb. 147, 82 N. W. 380, 49 L. R. A. 343. A tax that is clearly discriminaall are alike protected, so all alike should bear the burden, in proportion to the interests secured. Taxes by the poll are justly regarded as odious and are seldom resorted to for the collection of revenue; and when taxes are levied upon property there must be an apportionment with reference to a uniform standard, or they degenerate into mere arbitrary exactions.¹ In this particular the State constitutions have been very specific, though in providing for equality and uniformity they have done little more than to state in concise language a principle of constitutional law which, whether declared or not, would inhere in the power to tax.

Taxes may assume the form of duties, imposts, and excises; (a) tory in favor of particular classes of debtors is void. Hamilton v. Wilson, 61 Kan. 511, 59 Pac. 1039, 48 L. R. A. 238. The uniformity clause of the Montana Constitution does not apply to license taxes upon occupations. State v. French, 17 Mont. 54, 41 Pac. 1078, 30 L. R. A. 415. Requirement of uniformity does not prevent separate classification of railroad property and its assessment by special tribunal. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Worthen, 52 Ark. 523, 18 S. W. 254, 7 L. R. A. 374. Holders of mortgages issued by individuals cannot be taxed while those holding mortgages issued by railroad and other quasi-public corporations are exempt. Russell v. Croy, 164 Mo. 69, 63 S. W. 849.]

¹ A tax on negro polls and negroes' property alone, to be applied to the education of negro children alone, is bad. Puitt v. Com'rs Gaston Co., 94 N. C. 709. [A tax on bicycles for the construction of bicycle paths, bicycles being within the classes of property subjected to general taxation, is void for inequality, and where such tax is assessed regardless of valuation, it is invalid for like reasons. Ellis v. Frazier, 38 Oreg. 462, 63 Pac. 642, 53 L. R. A. 454. See, on general question of uniformity in taxation, Florida C. Ry. Co. v. Reynolds, 188 U. S. 471, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.]

(a) [A tax upon legacies and distributive shares is not a tax upon property, but an excise upon the transmission or receipt of such legacies and distributive shares, and, in the absence of constitutional prohibition, the rate at which it is levied may be graduated with regard both to the value of the share, and to the remoteness of relationship between the decedent and the recipient of the property. Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; State v. Hamlin, 86 Me. 495, 30 Atl. 76, 25 L. R. A. 692, 41 Am. St. 569; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 38 N. E. 512, 26 L. R. A. 256. Upon taxes on succession and collateral inheritances, see note to Magoun v. Illinois Tr. & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037; see also Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Hugh v. Coyne, 93 Fed. Rep. 450. Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 89, 27 N. E. 759, 12 L. R. A. 401; Com. v. Ferguson, 137 Pa. 595, 20 Atl. 879, 10 L. R. A. 249; Wallace v. Myers, 38 Fed. Rep. 184, 4 L. R. A. 171; Re Howe, 112 N. Y. 199, 19 N. E. 513, 2 L. R. A. 825, and notes to 4 L. R. A. 171, and 2 L. R. A. 825. Exemptions from a statute taxing legacies and inheritances, provided they apply equally to all persons in the same class, do not deny to any person the equal protection of the laws, and it rests with the legislature to determine the amounts of the exemptions and the basis of the classification, which basis, however, must not be clearly unreasonable. Magoun v. Illinois Tr. & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. Upon succession tax upon foreigners, see Rixner's Succession, 48 La. Ann. 552, 19 So. 597, 32 L. R. A. 177, and note. Graduated inheritance tax sustained. Kochersperger v. Drake, 167 Ill. 122, 47 N. E. 321, 41 L. R. A. 446; conceded, as violating rule of uniformity. State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S. W. 245, 49 L. R. A. 259, 55 Am. St. 653. An arbitrary statutory exemption sustained in and those collected by the national government are very largely of this character. They may also assume the form of license fees, for permission to carry on particular occupations, or to enjoy special franchises.¹ They may be specific; such as are often

¹ As to taxes on business and franchises, see Cooley on Taxation, c. 18. Offices, posts of profit, and occupations are proper subjects of taxation. Brown's App., 111 Pa. St. 72, 2 Atl. 77. That all occupations may be taxed when no restraints are imposed by the Constitution, see State v. Hayne, 4 Rich. 463; Ould v. Richmond, 23 Gratt. 464, 14 Am. Rep. 133; Commonwealth v. Moore, 25 Gratt. 951; Cousins v. State, 50 Ala. 113, 20 Am. Rep. 290; Stewart v. Potts, 49 Miss. 749; Morrill v. State, 38 Wis. 428, 20 Am. Rep. 12; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 219, 34 Am. Rep. 737; Young v. Thomas, 17 Fla. 169, 35 Am. Rep. 93; Richmond & D. R. R. Co. v. Reidsville, 101 N. C. 404, 8 S. E. 124. Such a tax may be based on the average amount of a merchant's stock. Newton v. Atchison, 31 Kan. 161, 1 Pac. 288. See Danville v. Shelton, 76 Va. 325. A city may be empowered to impose a license upon the business of a foreign insurance company, as well as a tax upon its net income. St. Joseph v. Ernst, 95 Mo. 390, 8 S. W. 558; or an occupation tax upon saloons, in addition to the license to sell. State v. Bennett, 19 Neb. 191, 26 N. W. 714. A privilege tax on private carriages in addition to an ad valorem tax is invalid. Livingston v. Paducah, 50 Ky. 650. An occupation tax must not be so unreasonable as to be prohibitory. Caldwell v. Lincoln, 19 Neb. 669, 27 N. W. 647. See Mankato v. Fowler, 32 Minn. 564, 20 N. W. 361; Western U. Tel. Co. v. Philadelphia, 12 Atl. 144; Jackson v. Newman, 59 Miss. 385; People v. Russell, 43 Mich. 917, 14 N. W. 508; Ex parte Gregory, 20 Tex. App. 219; Kneeland v. Pittsburgh, — Pa. St. —, 11 Atl. 657, as to what is a reasonable license, tax, or fee. But revenue cannot be raised in the form of license fees under an authority to require licenses to be taken out for mere police purposes. Idre, 288, and note; Barlington v. Baumgardner, 42 Iowa, 673, and cases cited. As to when a power to license can be made use of as a means of raising revenue, see Ex parte Frank, 52 Cal. 600, 28 Am. Rep. 642; Peuler v. State, 11 Neb. 647, 19 N. W. 481; U. S. Dist. Co. v. Chicago, 112 Ill. 19; In re Guerrero, 69 Cal. 88, 10 Pac. 261; Flanagan v. Plainfield, 44 N. J. L. 118. [Where the business licensed is not one of common right, but one which may be entirely prohibited, there is no limit to the license fee which may be imposed. State v. Bixman, 162 Mo. 1, 62 S. W. 828.] It is no valid objection to a tax on business that its operation will not be uniform. Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 409; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 639, 9 N. E. 672. But see Pullman P. C. Co. v. State, 64 Tex. 274; Bainger's

State v. Furnell, 20 Mont. 209, 51 Pac. 267, 39 L. R. A. 170; but an arbitrary exemption which is applied only to those estates not exceeding it in amount, while larger estates have no exemption whatever, is void, and invalidates the entire statute. State v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 814, 41 N. E. 579, 30 L. R. A. 218; contra, State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 674, 20 S. W. 750, 28 L. R. A. 178; Minor v. Winthrop, 192 Mass. 113, 38 N. E. 512, 26 L. R. A. 259. Distinction in rates may be made between heirs and legatees in direct and collateral lines, and between these and strangers. Minor v. Winthrop, 192 Mass. 113, 38 N. E. 512, 26 L. R. A. 259; State v. Hamlin, 50 Me. 495, 30 Atl. 76, 25 L. R. A. 632, 41 Am. St. 529. Contingent estates are not subject to the tax until they become vested. Re Estate of Roosevelt, 145 N. Y. 129, 38 N. E. 281, 25 L. R. A. 695. Real estate situated outside the State is not subject to inheritance tax, even after conversion into money in the hands of the executors. Re Swifts' Estate, 137 N. Y. 77, 32 N. E. 1096, 18 L. R. A. 799. For other cases upon inheritance and succession taxes, see Re Roban-Chabot's Estate, 147 N. Y. 250, 60 N. E. 538; Re Mahony's Estate, 193 Cal. 180, 65 Pac. 389; Union Trust Co. v. Durfee, 125 Mich. 487, 84 N. W. 1191; Ayers v. Chicago Title & T. Co., 187 Ill. 42, 58 N. E. 318; Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 N. E. 738; Hooper v. Bradford, 178 Mass. 95, 59 N. E. 678.]

levied upon corporations, in reference to the amount of capital stock, or to the business done, or profits earned by them. Or they may be direct; upon property, in proportion to its value, (a) or upon some other basis of apportionment which the legislature shall regard as just, and which shall keep in view the general idea of uniformity. The taxes collected by the States are mostly of the latter class, and it is to them that the constitutional principles we shall have occasion to discuss will more particularly apply.

As to all taxation apportioned upon property, there must be App., 109 Pa. St. 79. It should operate uniformly upon each class taxed. Smith v. Louisville, 9 Ky. L. 779, 6 S. W. 911; St. Louis v. Bowler, 94 Mo. 630, 7 S. W. 434; Braun v. Chicago, 119 Ill. 180. Further as to taxes on occupations, see Boye v. Girardey, 28 La. Ann. 717; Hedgson v. New Orleans, 21 La. Ann. 80; New Orleans v. Kaufman, 29 La. Ann. 283, 29 Am. Rep. 628; Texas B. & I. Co. v. State, 42 Tex. 636.

In the following cases license fees were held not to be taxes, but merely police regulations: Required of foreign corporations doing business in the State: People v. Tharber, 18 Ill. 554; Walker v. Springfield, 64 Ill. 394. Of dealers in intoxicating liquors: Burch v. Savannah, 42 Ga. 696; Durack's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 491; East St. Louis v. Wehrung, 46 Ill. 202; Lovington v. Trustees, 99 Ill. 564; Baker v. Panola Co., 83 Tex. 86; East St. Louis v. Trustees, 102 Ill. 489; Rochester v. Upman, 19 Minn. 138; State v. Cassidy, 22 Minn. 312, 21 Am. Rep. 765; State v. Kain, 22 Minn. 328; Pietter v. State, 11 Neb. 547, 10 N. W. 481. Of auctioneers: Goshen v. Kern, 63 Ind. 468. Of a street railway company: Johnson v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 445. But see New York v. Railway Co., 32 N. Y. 261. Of insurance companies: Fire Depart- ment v. Helfenstein, 16 Wis. 136. Of gas companies for inspection: Cincinnati Gas Co. v. State, 18 Ohio St. 237. Of proprietors of theatres: Boston v. Schaffer, 9 Pick. 415. For building licenses: Welch v. Hotchkiss, 33 Conn. 140.

The fee exacted in granting a ferry license is not a tax, but is paid for the franchise. Chivers v. People, 11 Mich. 43. See Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 102 Ill. 560.

The exaction of license fees under the police power is no violation of the constitutional requirement of uniform taxation. State v. Cassidy, 22 Minn. 312, 21 Am. Rep. 765; Walters v. Duke, 31 La. Ann. 658. An act sustained which imposed a smaller license tax on proprietors of bars on steamboats than on those of bars on land. State v. Rolfe, 30 La. Ann. 991. The exemption from taxation of the Louisiana Saving Bank held not to exclude a city license tax on the business. New Orleans v. Savings Bank, 31 La. Ann. 637. An exemption of all property in a town from parish taxes does not prevent the imposition of a license. Marehous Parish v. Brigham, 41 La. Ann. 665, 6 So. 257. For instances of license fees held to be taxes and not warranted by statute, see ante, 283, note.

(a) [Upon mode of valuing telephones, &c., where the property has attached to it a non-taxing, see State v. Halliday, 58 Ohio St. 728, 51 N. E. 1102, 49 L. R. A. 427. For a very full discussion of the subject of the taxation of corporate franchises with exhaustive citation of authorities, see 57 L. R. A. 23, in the note to Louisville T. W. Co. v. Com., 136 Ky. 125, 49 S. W. 1069. See also South Covington & C. S. Ry. Co. v. Blevins, 105 Ky. 283, 43 S. W. 23, 57 L. R. A. 50; State v. Duluth G. & W. Co., 73 Minn. 93, 78 N. W. 1032, 57 L. R. A. 63; Commercial E. L. & P. Co. v. Judson, 21 Wash. 49, 50 Pac. 823, 57 L. R. A. 78. The taxation of the franchise or business of corporations doing business in the State, with an exemption of all corporations wholly engaged in the business of manufacturing within the State, is constitutional. New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 305, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.]

taxing districts, (a) and within these districts the rule of absolute uniformity must be applicable.¹ A State tax is to be apportioned through the State, a county tax through the county, a city tax through the city;² while in the case of local improvements, benefiting in a special and peculiar manner some portion of the State or of a county or city, it is competent to arrange a special taxing district, within which the expense shall be apportioned. School districts and road districts are also taxing districts for the peculiar purposes for which they exist, and villages may have special powers of taxation distinct from the townships of which they form a part. Whenever it is made a requirement of the State constitution that taxation shall be upon property according to value, such a requirement implies an assessment of valuation by public officers at such regular periods as shall be provided by law, and a taxation upon the basis of such assessment until the period arrives for making it anew.³ Thus, the Constitutions of Maine

¹ If the proper rule of uniformity is established by the legislature, but the taxing officers purposely evade it and assess unequal taxes, the collection will be enjoined. Merrill v. Humphrey, 24 Mich. 170; Lefferts v. Supervisors, 21 Wis. 688; Mason v. Lancaster, 4 Bush, 406; Fuller v. Gould, 20 Vt. 643; Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153, and cases cited.

The constitutional requirement that property shall be assessed for taxation by uniform rules, and according to true value, does not make it necessary to tax all property, and it is satisfied by such regulations as impose the same percentage of actual value upon such property as is made taxable, in the township for township purposes, in the county for county purposes, &c. Stratton v. Collins, 43 N. J. 563.

² An act requiring a school-district tax when collected to be distributed between the district collecting it and others is void, as being in effect a local tax for a general purpose. Bromley v. Reynolds, 2 Utah, 525. See State v. Fuller, 30 N. J. 576; McBean v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. 349. A State tax must be apportioned uniformly through the State, a county tax through the county, a city tax through the city. East Portland v. Multnomah Co., 6 Oreg. 62; Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 1, 15; Pine Grove v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 636, 675; Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Boone Co., 44 Ill. 240. For peculiar cases, see State v. New Orleans, 15 La. Ann. 354; Kent v. Kentland, 62 Ind. 291, 30 Am. Rep. 182; Comrs of Ottawa Co. v. Nelson, 19 Kan. 254, 27 Am. Rep. 101; Cleveland v. Halsey, 41 Ohio St. 670. The whole burden of expense for fire protection, police, &c., cannot be imposed upon an area within a city. Morgan v. Elizabeth, 44 N. J. L. 571.

³ Where a tax is to be assessed by the value of property, or in proportion to benefits, the right of the owner to be

(a) ["If the State Constitution does not prohibit, the legislature speaking generally, may create a new taxing district, determine what territory shall belong to such district and what property shall be considered as benefited by a proposed improvement. And in so doing it is not compelled to give notice to the parties resident within the territory or permit a hearing before itself, one of its committees, or any other tribunal, as to the question whether the property so included within the taxing district is in fact benefited. Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 343, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Parsons v. Dist. of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521." Per Mr. Justice Brewer, in Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617, aff. 98 Conn. 131, 35 Atl. 24, 421. See also Gilson v. Rush County, 128 Ind. 65, 27 N. E. 235, 11 L. R. A. 835.]

and Massachusetts require that there shall be a valuation of estates within the Commonwealth to be made at least every ten years;¹ the Constitution of Michigan requires the annual assessments which are made by township officers to be equalized by a State board, which reviews them for that purpose every five years;² and the Constitution of Rhode Island requires the legislature "from time to time" to provide for new valuations of property for the assessment of taxes in such manner as they may deem best.³ Some other constitutions contain no provisions upon this subject; but the necessity for valuation is nevertheless implied, though the mode of making it, and the periods at which it shall be made, are left to the legislative discretion.

There are some kinds of taxes, however, that are not usually assessed according to the value of property, and some which could not be thus assessed. And there is probably no State which does not levy other taxes than those which are imposed upon property.⁴

heard in some stage of the proceedings would seem to be clear; and it has been expressly affirmed in some cases. See Philadelphia v. Miller, 49 Pa. St. 440; Stewart v. Trevor, 53 Pa. St. 374; Butler v. Supervisors of Saginaw, 25 Mich. 22; Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 155; Clegborn v. Postlewaite, 43 Ill. 428; Darling v. Gunn, 60 Ill. 424; Kuntz v. Saumpton, 117 Ind. 1, 19 N. E. 474; Redwood Co. v. Winona, &c. Co., 40 Minn. 512, 41 N. W. 465, 42 N. W. 473; Chauvin v. Vailton, 8 Mont. 451, 23 Pac. 554; [Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 23 S. E. 909, 31 L. R. A. 582, 63 Am. St. 825] per, 722, note. The statutes generally provide for a hearing before some board, either on some day and at some place fixed by the statute, or after notice publicly given. That such statutes are mandatory, and an assessment made in disregard of them void, see Thames Manuf. Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 559; Phillips v. Stevens Point, 25 Wis. 544; Walker v. Chapman, 22 Ala. 116; Sioux City, &c. R. R. Co. v. Washington Co., 3 Neb. 50; Leavenworth Co. v. Lang, 8 Kan. 284; Griswold v. School District, 24 Mich. 262. [Where the taxpayer is examined upon his return at the time it is made, he cannot claim a later hearing. McTwiggan v. Hunter, 19 R. I. 265, 33 Atl. 5, 29 L. R. A. 526.] On the general right to notice in tax cases, see the opinion of Mr. Justice Field in the case of San Mateo County v. So. Pac. R. R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 722; where the right is strongly affirmed. ["A notice to all property holders of the time and place at which the assessment is to be made is all that 'due process' requires in respect to the matter of notice in tax proceedings." Per Mr. Justice Brewer in Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 107 U. S. 461, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. See also Paulson v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, aff. 16 Oreg. 450, 19 Pac. 450, 1 L. R. A. 673. The action of the assessors after giving opportunity for a hearing is final in the absence of fraud or mistake. Albuquerque Nat. Bk. v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194. The assessment is void if the notice of opportunity for hearing fails to designate tribunal, place, and time, or any of them. Norfolk v. Young, 97 Va. 728, 34 S. E. 889, 47 L. R. A. 574. Statute, if definite, is sufficient notice, Streight v. Durham, 10 Okla. 361, 61 Pac. 1036. That assessed value of tangible replaceable property cannot exceed the cost of reproduction or replacement, see People v. Clapp, 152 N. Y. 400, 48 N. E. 842, 39 L. R. A. 257 (railroad real estate).]

¹ Constitution of Maine, art. 9, § 7; Constitution of Mass., Part 2, c. 1, § 1, art. 4.

² Constitution of Mich., art. 14, § 13.

³ Constitution of Rhode Island, art. 4, § 15.

⁴ See Bright v. McCullough, 27 Ind. 223; Osld v. Richmond, 23 Gratt. 494, 14 Am. Rep. 139; Youngblood v. Sexton,

Every burden which the State imposes upon its citizens with a view to a revenue, either for itself or for any of the municipal governments, or for the support of the governmental machinery in any of the political divisions, is levied under the power of taxation, whether imposed under the name of tax, or under some other designation. The license fees which are sometimes required to be paid by those who follow particular employments are, when imposed for purposes of revenue, taxes;¹ the tolls upon persons or property, for making use of the works of public improvement owned and controlled by the State, are a species of tax; stamp duties when imposed are taxes; and it is not uncommon, as we have already stated, to require that corporations shall pay a certain sum annually, assessed according to the amount or value of their capital stock, or some other standard; this mode being regarded by the State as most convenient and suitable for the taxation of such organizations. It is evident, therefore, that the express provisions, which are usual in State constitutions, that taxation upon property shall be according to value, do not include every species of taxation; and that all special cases like those we have here referred to are, by implication, excepted.

But in addition to these cases, there are others where taxes are levied directly upon property, which are nevertheless held not to be within the constitutional provisions. Assessments for the opening, making, improving, or repairing of streets, the draining of swamps, and the like local works, (α) have been generally

32 Mich. 406, 20 Am. Rep. 654; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216, 34 Am. Rep. 737.

¹ See Ould v. Richmond, 23 Gratt, 464, 14 Am. Rep. 139; Wilmington v. Macks, 86 N. C. 88; Lightburne v. Taxing

District, 4 Lea, 219. [Such taxes are not property taxes, and are not subject to the provisions requiring uniformity and equality. State v. Applegarth, 81 Md. 293, 31 Atl. 961, 28 L. R. A. 512.]

(α) [As to what are public improvements, see Re Kingman, 153 Mass. 503, 27 N. E. 778, 12 L. R. A. 417, and note. Cost of maintenance of sewers may be met by special assessments, although cost of construction has already been levied and paid by parties assessed for maintenance. Carson v. Brockton Sewer Comm'rs, 182 U. S. 338, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899, aff. 175 Mass. 242, 53 N. E. 1, 48 L. R. A. 277. That the construction of irrigation works in an arid region which will become fertile under irrigation is a public improvement, see Fallbrook Irrigation District v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56. Country highways are not "local improvements," and their cost cannot be levied upon adjacent lands alone. Sperry v. Flygare, 80 Minn. 325, 83 N. W. 177, 49 L. R. A. 757. Where the duty to repair rests upon the city, and it, in contracting for the paving of a street, incorporates in the contract a clause requiring the contractor to keep the street in repair for a stated period, the parties assessed to pay for paving can have the total cost abated by a reasonable sum for probable repairs. They are liable only for cost of construction. Robertson v. Omaha, 55 Neb. 718, 78 N. W. 442, 44 L. R. A. 534; State v. Trenton, 81 N. J. L. 599, 40 Atl. 575, 44 L. R. A. 540. Upon power of city to bind contractor to repair pavement which he makes, see Portland v. Portland Bld. Paving & I. Co., made upon property, with some reference to the supposed benefits which the property would receive therefrom. Instead, therefore, of making the assessment include all the property of the municipal organization in which the improvement is made, a new and special taxing district is created, whose bounds are confined to the limits within which property receives a special and peculiar benefit, in consequence of the improvement. Even within this district the assessment is sometimes made by some other standard than that of value; (a) and it is evident that if it be just to create the taxing district with reference to special benefits, it would be equally just and proper to make the taxation within the district have reference to the benefit each parcel of property receives, rather than to its relative value. The opening or paving of a street may increase the value of all property upon or near it; and it may be just that all such property should contribute to the expense of the improvement: but it by no means follows that each parcel of the property will receive from the improvement a benefit in proportion to the previous value. One lot upon the street may be greatly increased in value, another at a little distance may be but slightly benefited; and if no constitutional provision interferes, there is consequently abundant reason why the tax levied within the taxing district should have reference, not to value, but to benefit. (a)

33 Oreg. 307, 52 Pac. 28, 44 L. R. A. 527, and note, 72 Am. St. 713. Expense of maintaining and repairing boulevards and pleasure ways cannot be met by special assessments, as the work is not a local improvement. Crane v. West Chicago P. Commrs., 153 Ill. 348, 38 N. E. 942, 26 L. R. A. 311. Nor is that of sprinkling streets. Chicago v. Blair, 149 Ill. 310, 36 N. E. 829, 24 L. R. A. 412, and note, citing cases pro and con. But expense of sweeping streets may be specially assessed. Reinken v. Fuehring, 130 Ind. 382, 30 N. E. 414, 15 L. R. A. 624, 30 Am. St. 247.]

(a) [The determination of this standard of assessment is a matter for the discretion of the legislature, and the judiciary will inquire into its fitness only when the action of the legislature is clearly unreasonable. Fallbrook Irri. Dist. v. Bradler, 194 U. S. 112, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56. See also Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 209, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; in which case it is held that the cost of an improvement, which consisted in the condemnation of property for a street and the opening of the same, could not all be assessed against the person whose property was so taken, he being the sole abutter. This case has been used as authority for the doctrine that there must be an opportunity for particular inquiry for special benefits in each case, and an assessment made proportionate to such benefits so ascertained, rather than an assessment by general rule without an opportunity to urge special or peculiar benefits to particular abutting or adjacent property, but in French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 181 U. S. 324, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, aff. 168 Mo. 534, 58 S. W. 934, the court repudiates this construction of Norwood v. Baker, and holds that in that case at least such an assessment was lawful. Vigorous dissenting opinions were rendered in both these cases. French v. Barber Asphalt, & Co. was followed by Wight v. Davidson et al., 181 U. S. 371, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, rev. 16 App. D. C. 371; Town of Tonawanda et al. v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, rev. the Circuit Court of United States for Northern Dist. of New York; Cass Farm Co. Ltd. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644, 645, aff. 124 Mich. 433, 83 N. W. 108; Detroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 398, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624, 645, rev. 193 Fed. Rep. 357; Farrill v. West Chicago Park Commissioners, 181 U. S. 403, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, 645, aff. 182 Ill. 299, 55 N. E. 325; Shumate v. Heman, 181 U. S. 402, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645, aff. 156 Mo. 534, 57 S. W. 559; Wormley v. District of Columbia and Allen v. District of Columbia, reported together in 181 U. S. 402, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, and aff. 15 App. D. C. 58 and 70. The litigation in these cases seems to have been founded on the opinion in Norwood v. Baker before it was construed in French v. Barber, & Co. See also Smith v. Worcester, — Mass. —, 65 N. E. 40. A sewer assessment cannot be made in proportion to frontage, regardless of benefits. Dexter v. Boston, 176 Mass. 247, 57 N. E. 379, 79 Am. St. 306. An assessment for public improvements is limited to the value of the improvements to the property assessed. Walsh v. Barron, 61 Ohio St. 15, 55 N. E. 194; State v. Newark, 37 N. J. L. 415. The question of the basis upon which such assessments shall be laid is a legislative one, subject to review by the courts for unreasonableness only. Spencer v. Merchant, 100 N. Y. 585, 3 N. E. 682. See this case in 125 U. S. 345, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821.]

It has been objected, however, to taxation upon this basis, that inasmuch as the district upon which the burden is imposed is compelled to make the improvement for the benefit of the general public, it is, to the extent of the tax levied, an appropriation of private property for the public use; and as the persons taxed, as a part of the public, would be entitled of right to the enjoyment of the improvement when made, such right of enjoyment could not be treated as compensation for the exaction which is made of them exclusively, and such exaction would therefore be opposed to those constitutional principles which declare the inviolability of private property. But those principles have no reference to the taking of property under legitimate taxation. When the Constitution provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation made therefor, it has reference to an appropriation thereof under the right of eminent domain. Taxation and eminent domain indeed rest substantially on the same foundation, as each implies the taking of private property for the public use on compensation made; but the compensation is different in the two cases. When taxation takes money for the public use, the taxpayer receives, or is supposed to receive, his just compensation in the protection which government affords to life, liberty, and property, in the public conveniences which it provides, and in the increase in the value of possessions which comes from the use to which the government applies the money raised by the tax;¹ and these benefits amply support the individual burden.

(a) [That an elevated railway operating above a street and having stairways leading from the street to its stations may be benefited by paving the street, see Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Chicago, 183 Ill. 75, 55 N. E. 721, 47 L. R. A. 624. But a right of way of a surface railroad cannot. Detroit G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 100 Mich. 13, 63 N. W. 1007, 28 L. R. A. 793, 58 Am. St. 493; Chicago, M. & S. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 89 Wis. 506, 62 N. W. 417, 28 L. R. A. 249, and see note pro and con in L. R. A.; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Ottumwa, 112 Iowa, 390, 53 N. W. 1374, 51 L. R. A. 753; contra, Kuehner v. Freeport, 143 Ill. 92, 32 N. E. 372, 17 L. R. A. 774. But in California it was held that local improvement districts for the construction of irrigation works might be created at will by the legislature, that assessments to pay for such works might be levied upon property according to its value, and that the question of benefit was immaterial. Re Boulds Madera Irrigation District, 92 Cal. 206, 341, 28 Pac. 272, 675, 14 L. R. A. 755, and note.]

But if these special local levies are taxation, do they come under the general provisions on the subject of taxation to be found in our State constitutions? The Constitution of Michigan directs that "the legislature shall provide an uniform rule of taxation, except on property paying specific taxes; and taxes shall be levied upon such property as shall be prescribed by law;"² and again: "All assessments hereafter authorized shall be on property at its cash value."³ In the construction of these provisions the first has been regarded as confiding to the discretion of the legislature the establishment of the rule of uniformity by which taxation was to be imposed; and the second as having reference to the annual valuation of property for the purposes of taxation, which it is customary to make in that State, and not to the actual levy of a tax. A local tax, therefore, levied in the city of Detroit, to meet the expense of paving a public street, and which was levied, not in proportion to the value of property, but according to an arbitrary scale of supposed benefit, has been held not invalid under the constitutional provision.⁴

So the Constitution of Illinois declares that "the General Assembly shall provide for levying a tax by valuation, so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his or her property; such value to be ascertained by some person or persons to be elected or appointed in such manner as the General Assembly shall direct, and not otherwise,"⁵ &c. The charter of the city of Peoria provided that, when a public street was opened or improved, commissioners should be appointed by the county court to assess upon the property benefited the expense of the improvement in proportion to the benefit. This provision was held to be constitutional, on the ground that assessments of this character were not such taxation as was contemplated by

¹ People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Williams v. Mayor, &c. of Detroit, 2 Mich. 590; Scovill v. Cleveland, 1 Ohio St. 123; Northern Indiana R. R. Co. v. Connelly, 19 Ohio St. 150; Washington Avenue, 69 Pa. St. 352, 8 Am. Rep. 255; White v. People, 84 Ill. 604.

² Art. 14, § 11.

³ Art. 14, § 12.

⁴ Williams v. Mayor, &c. of Detroit, 2 Mich. 590. And see Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 274; State v. Stout, 61 Ind. 143; Taylor v. Boyd, 63 Tex. 533; [Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966.]

⁵ Art. 9, § 2.

the general terms which the constitution employed.¹ Like decisions have been made in other States in regard to similar assessments.²

¹ City of Peoria v. Kidder, 26 Ill. 351. See also Canal Trustees v. Chicago, 12 Ill. 403. In Chicago v. Larned, 34 Ill. 203, it was decided that, while taxation for these local assessments might constitutionally be made in proportion and to the extent of the benefits received, it could not under the Constitution of 1848 be made on the basis of frontage. This case was followed in Wright v. Chicago, 46 Ill. 44. The contrary is held under the Constitution of 1870. White v. People, 94 Ill. 604; Craw v. Tolono, 90 Ill. 235, 36 Am. Rep. 143.

² People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Matter of Mayor, &c. of New York, 11 Johns. 77; Sharp v. Spier, 4 Hill, 76; Livingstone v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 8 Wend. 85; Matter of Furman St., 17 Wend. 649; Louisville v. Hyatt, 2 B. Monr. 177, 36 Am. Dec. 594; Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 189; Schenley v. City of Allegheny, 25 Pa. St. 128; Wray v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 365; Hanmatt v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. St. 146, 3 Am. Rep. 615; Washington Avenue, 69 Pa. St. 353, 8 Am. Rep. 253; McBride v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 574; Chicago v. Larned, 34 Ill. 203; Murphy v. People, 120 Ill. 234, 11 N. E. 202; Springfield v. Green, 120 Ill. 229, 11 N. E. 261; City of Lexington v. McQuillan's Heirs, 9 Dana, 513; Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454; Hines v. Leavenworth, 3 Kan. 186; St. Joseph v. O'Donoghue, 31 Mo. 345; Egyptian Levee Co. v. Hardin, 27 Mo. 466; St. Joseph v. Anthony, 30 Mo. 537; Farrar v. St. Louis, 80 Mo. 379; Burnet v. Sacramento, 12 Cal. 76; Yeatman v. Crandell, 11 La. Ann. 220; Wallace v. Shelton, 14 La. Ann. 498; Richardson v. Morgan, 16 La. Ann. 429; Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 243; Marian v. Epler, 5 Ohio St. 259; Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St. 333; Northern Ind. R. R. Co. v. Connelly, 10 Ohio St. 159; Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 534; Maloy v. Marietta, 11 Ohio St. 636; State v. Dean, 23 N. J. 335; State v. Mayor, &c. of Jersey City, 24 N. J. 602; Bond v. Kenosha, 17 Wis. 284; City of Fairfield v. Ratcliff, 20 Iowa, 306; Municipality No. 2 v. White, 9 La. Ann. 447; Cumming v. Police Jury, 9 La. Ann. 503;

Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa. St. 103; McGehee v. Mathis, 21 Ark. 40; Goodrich v. Winchester, &c. Turnpike Co., 23 Ind. 119; Emery v. Gas Co., 28 Cal. 345; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; Dorgan v. Boston, 12 Allen, 223; Anderson v. Kerns Draining Co., 14 Ind. 199; Macon v. Patty, 57 Miss. 878, 34 Am. Rep. 451; Cain v. Commissioners, 85 N. C. 8; Norfolk v. Ellis, 26 Gratt. 224; Wilkins v. Detroit, 46 Mich. 120, 8 N. W. 701, 9 N. W. 427; Vasser v. George, 47 Miss. 713; Roundtree v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 612; Richmond v. A. R. R. Co. v. Lynchburg, 81 Va. 473. For a special case, see Cincinnati Gas, &c. Co. v. State, 15 Ohio St. 237. In Alabama a decision has been made the other way. The constitution provides that "all taxes levied on property in this State shall be assessed in exact proportion to the value of such property; provided, however, that the General Assembly may levy a poll-tax not to exceed one dollar and fifty cents on each poll, which shall be applied exclusively in aid of the public-school fund." This, it was decided, would preclude the levy of a local assessment for the improvement of a street by the foot front. Mayor of Mobile v. Dargan, 45 Ala. 310. In Colorado only improvements within the domain of the police power can be paid for by special assessment. Expense of sewers may be, but not that of gutters and curbs. Pueblo v. Robinson, 12 Col. 533, 21 Pac. 839; Wilson v. Chilcott, 12 Col. 609, 21 Pac. 901. [New sidewalks and drains necessitated by a change in the established grade are for a public or municipal purpose, and the cost must be paid out of the general fund. It cannot be assessed upon owners of abutting property. Mauldin v. Greenville, 53 S. C. 285, 31 S. E. 252, 43 L. R. A. 161, mod. s. c. 42 S. C. 283, 26 S. E. 842, 27 L. R. A. 284. But the cost of watering a street may be. Sears v. Board of Aldermen, 173 Mass. 71, 56 N. E. 138, 48 L. R. A. 834.] The cases of Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242, and Lunsden v. Cross, 10 Wis. 282, recognize the fact that these local burdens are generally imposed under the name of assessments instead of

But whatever may be the basis of the taxation, the requirement that it shall be uniform is universal. It applies as much to these local assessments as to any other species of taxes. The difference is only in the character of the uniformity, and in the basis on which it is established.¹ But to render taxation uniform in any case, two things are essential. The first of these taxes, and that therefore they are not covered by the general provisions in the constitution of the State on the subject of taxation. And see Bond v. Kennisha, 17 Ws. 284; Hale v. Kennisha, 29 Ws. 530. [And the cost of a local improvement may not only be assessed in proportion to benefits, but the cost of maintenance may also be so assessed. Carson v. Sewerage Commrs of Brockton, 176 Mass. 242, 35 N. E. 1, 48 L. R. A. 277, aff. in 182 U. S. 398, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 830. But where lands abutting upon a portion of street amounting to a cul-de-sac have been assessed for its construction in proportion to benefits, they cannot be again assessed for the extension of the portion first constructed. Re Orkney Street, 194 Pa. 425, 45 Atl. 314, 48 L. R. A. 274. In Tennessee, levee improvements must be assessed upon property in proportion to its value. Reelfoot Lake Levee Dist. v. Dawson, 97 Tenn. 151, 88 S. W. 1041, 34 L. R. A. 725.] An exemption of church property from taxation will not preclude its being assessed for improving streets in front of it. See post, p. 740, note. [That exemptions from taxation do not exempt from special assessment for local improvements, see Bil. of Improvement v. School Dist., 63 Ark. 354, 19 S. W. 939, 16 L. R. A. 418; Zabel v. Louisville B. O. Home, 92 Ky. 89, 17 S. W. 212, 13 L. R. A. 608; Atlanta v. First P. Church, 85 Ga. 730, 13 S. E. 252, 12 L. R. A. 552, and note; Home, & Co. v. Wilkinsburg, 181 Pa. 109, 18 Atl. 937, 6 L. R. A. 531; Adams County v. Quincy, 120 Ill. 523, 22 N. E. 944, 6 L. R. A. 155, and note; note to 4 L. R. A. 171.]

¹ In the case of assessments which are to be made on the basis of benefits, provision is usually made for a hearing. As to the right to this, see p. 817, note. [Requirement that tax upon personal property be paid at time of assessment with provision made for hearing concerning value, &c., and refund of excess, does not violate uniformity requirement.

Tax upon real estate is secured by lien, and collection may safely be deferred longer than in case of personal property. Rode v. Siebe, 110 Cal. 518, 51 Pac. 869, 39 L. R. A. 342. Uniformity clause does not apply to license taxes. State v. French, 17 Mont. 54, 41 Pac. 1078, 30 L. R. A. 415; Denver City R. Co. v. Denver, 21 Col. 350, 41 Pac. 825, 29 L. R. A. 608. Nor does it require that the mode of assessment be uniform. Commonwealth v. Brown, 91 Va. 762, 21 S. E. 357, 28 L. R. A. 110. But where property is to be assessed at its "cash value," and property taxes are required to be uniform and equal, an ordinance levying an ad valorem tax upon realty and a license tax upon personalty is bad in respect to the license tax. Levi v. Louisville, 97 Ky. 894, 30 S. W. 973, 28 L. R. A. 480. Uniformity is not violated by a statute allowing deduction of debts from credits. Florer v. Sheridan, 137 Ind. 28, 36 N. E. 365, 23 L. R. A. 278, and note. But it is violated by a statute giving a State revenue agent power to assess at discretion and without notice, property which has escaped assessment in prior years, the owner being permitted to be heard only in defence of suit to collect taxes upon such assessment. Adams v. Tonella, 70 Miss. 701, 14 So. 17, 22 L. R. A. 346. That lack of uniformity may arise from administration in a partial and oppressive way, see Hoefling v. San Antonio, 85 Tex. 228, 20 S. W. 85, 16 L. R. A. 608. An arbitrary tax of $1 per mile upon railroads is bad. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. State, 49 Ohio St. 189, 80 N. E. 435, 16 L. R. A. 380. Where taxation is required to be "ad valorem on all property subject to be taxed," the rate must be uniform. Savannah v. Weed, 84 Ga. 683, 11 S. E. 255, 8 L. R. A. 270, and note. For other cases on question of uniformity, see Wasson v. Wayne Co. Commrs, 49 Ohio St. 622, 32 N. E. 472, 17 L. R. A. 795.]

is that each taxing district should confine itself to the objects of taxation within its limits. Otherwise there is, or may be, duplicate taxation, and of course inequality. Assessments upon real estate not lying within the taxing districts would be void,¹ and assessments for personal property made against persons not residing in the district would also be void, unless made with reference to the actual presence of the property in such district.²

¹ But sometimes when a parcel of real estate lies partly in two districts, authority is given by law to assess the whole in one of these districts, and the whole parcel may then be considered as having been embraced within the district where taxed, by an enlargement of the district bounds to include it. Saunders v. Springstein, 4 Wend. 429. It is as competent to provide for the repairing of a street by special assessment on adjoining land, as for the original paving. See Willard v. Presbury, 14 Wall. 676; Gurnee v. Chicago, 40 Ill. 165; Bradley v. McAtee, 7 Bush, 607; Sholey v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 481, 8 N. W. 52; Blount v. Janesville, 31 Wis. 648; Municipality v. Dunn, 10 La. Ann. 57; Jelliff v. Newark, 49 N. J. L. 233, 12 Atl. 770; Estes v. Owen, 90 Mo. 113, 2 S. W. 133. Contra, Hammett v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. St. 146; Orphan Asylum's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 135, 3 Atl. 217; Williamsport v. Beck, 128 Pa. St. 147, 18 Atl. 329. The expense of sewer repairs properly payable by a city cannot be imposed on adjoining owners by calling the work street improvement. Clay v. Grand Rapids, 60 Mich. 451, 27 N. W. 693. [Power to impose licenses upon occupations authorizes a license tax upon a non-resident who carries on his occupation in the city. Petersburg v. Cocke, 94 Va. 244, 26 S. E. 576, 36 L. R. A. 432. Real estate mortgages may be made taxable at the situs of the realty covered by them. Detroit Com. Council v. Rentz, 91 Mich. 78, 51 N. W. 787, 16 L. R. A. 69, and note upon taxation of mortgages. Assessment is wholly void if it covers property partly within and partly without the district, unless the parts can be distinguished. Sioux City B. Co. v. Dakota County, 81 Neb. 75, 84 N. W. 697.]

² People v. Supervisors of Chenango, 11 N. Y. 563; Mygatt v. Washburn, 15

N. Y. 810; Brown v. Smith, 24 Barb. 419; Hartland v. Church, 47 Me. 193; Lessee of Hughey v. Horrell, 2 Ohio, 231. [Held that under this principle credits cannot be taxed to the creditor at the residence of the debtor. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Bd. of Assessors, 51 La. Ann. 1025, 25 So. 979, 45 L. R. A. 524; but see in this connection cases cited in note a, p. 696. Moneys and securities held in the State for investment, reinvestment, and sale are taxable against the owners where so held. Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 589, 45 N. E. 647, 37 L. R. A. 384. And so are unpaid legacies and distributive shares taxable within the State, even though the beneficiaries are non-resident. Schmidt v. Falley, 148 Ind. 160, 47 N. E. 323, 37 L. R. A. 442. A vessel engaged in commerce is taxable only at her home port if she is duly registered there, even though she is used practically all of the time within the limits of another State than that of her home port. Johnson v. De Bary-Baya M. Line, 37 Fla. 499, 19 So. 240, 37 L. R. A. 518; upon situs of ships for purpose of taxation, see note to this case in L. R. A. Water-power is deemed for purposes of taxation to have its situs where it is used. Union W. P. Co. v. Auburn, 90 Me. 69, 37 Atl. 331, 37 L. R. A. 651; but see Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Concord, 69 N. H. 562, 34 Ad. 241, 32 L. R. A. 321, holding that water power is appurtenant to lands upon which it may be used. Ice may be taxed where stored, though it is to be used elsewhere. Winkley v. Newton, 67 N. H. 86, 56 Atl. 610, 35 L. R. A. 750. Average amount of livestock in the hands of cattle-dealers may be taxed, although brought from other States and usually retained by dealers for only one day. Myers v. Baltimore Co. Commrs., 84 Md. 385, 35 Atl. 144, 31 L. R. A. 399. So with bands of

In Wells v. City of Weston,¹ the Supreme Court of Missouri deny the right of the legislature to subject property located in one taxing district to assessment in another, upon the express ground that it is in substance the arbitrary taxation of the property of one class of citizens for the benefit of another class. The case was one where the legislature sought to subject real estate lying outside the limits of a city to taxation for city purposes, on the theory that it received some benefit from the city government, and ought to contribute to its support. In Kentucky² and Iowa³ decisions have been made which, while affirming the same principle as the case above cited, go still further, and declare that it is not competent for the legislature to increase the limits of a city, in order to include therein farming lands, occupied by the owner for agricultural purposes, and not required for either streets or houses, or other purposes of a town, where the purpose is merely to increase the city revenue by taxation. The courts admit that foreign corporation when kept in safe deposit vault within the State. Re Whiting's Estate, 150 N. Y. 27, 44 N. E. 715, 34 L. R. A. 232. And with moneys of non-resident. Re Houlender's Estate, 150 N. Y. 37, 44 N. E. 718, 34 L. R. A. 235. So with stock of domestic corporation held outside of State by a non-resident, but not with bonds. Re Bronson's Estate, 150 N. Y. 1, 44 N. E. 707, 34 L. R. A. 238. So with credits in hands of resident trustee holding legal title. Detroit v. Lewis, 109 Mich. 155, 30 N. W. 458, 32 L. R. A. 499. Real estate mortgages owned and controlled by non-resident cannot be taxed. Holland v. Comm'rs of Silver Bow Co., 15 Mont. 430, 33 Pac. 575, 27 L. R. A. 797. Stock in trade of a partnership is located for purposes of taxation in the city where it actually is for purpose of sale, without regard to residence of owners. Hopkins v. Baker Bros., 78 Md. 363, 28 Atl. 284, 22 L. R. A. 477, and note on partnership property tax. In Maine, water pipes are considered real-estate taxable in the district in which they are actually situated. Paris v. Norway Water Co., 85 Me. 330, 27 Atl. 140, 21 L. R. A. 525; but in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin it is otherwise, see note to 21 L. R. A. 525, and see also Stellerville Water Co. v. People, 140 Ill. 545, 30 N. E. 278, 16 L. R. A. 305; Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Bd. of Equalization, 51 Iowa, 407, 31 N. W. 18, 15 L. R. A. 293, and note; Fond du Lac Water Co. v. Fond du Lac, 82 Wis. 322, 52 N. W. 459, 16 L. R. A. 551. On situs of trust property, see Trustees of Richmond Co. Academy v. Augusta, 90 Ga. 634, 17 S. E. 61, 26 L. R. A. 151, and note. As to where franchise is taxable, see Spring Valley Water-works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 83, 83 Pac. 735, 21 L. R. A. 416; Yellow R. Imp. Co. v. Wood County, 81 Wis. 554, 51 N. W. 1004, 17 L. R. A. 92, and note. Negotiable promissory notes have situs with creditor. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 343, 13 L. R. A. 729, and note on situs of notes and mortgages; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Bd. of Assessors, 44 La. Ann. 730, 11 So. 91, 16 L. R. A. 56.]

¹ 22 Mo. 354. To the same effect is In re Flatbush, 60 N. Y. 398. Compare case of State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 17 Wall. 500; St. Charles v. Nolle, 51 Mo. 122, 11 Am. Rep. 440; People v. Townsend, 55 Cal. 633; State Treasurer v. Auditor-General, 43 Mich. 224, 9 N. W. 558. The case of Lanphorne v. Robinson, 20 Gratt. 661, is contra.

² City of Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Monr. 431; Arbogast v. Louisville, 2 Bush, 271; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 37. [But the mere fact that the land is not yet platted is not sufficient to exempt it. Briggs v. Russellville, 99 Ky. 515, 39 S. W. 568, 34 L. R. A. 153.]

³ Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82.

the extension of the limits of a city or town, so as to include its actual enlargement, as manifested by houses and population, is to be deemed a legitimate exercise of the taxing power, but they declare that an indefinite or unreasonable extension, so as to embrace lands or farms at a distance from the local government, does not rest upon the same authority. And although it may be a delicate as well as a difficult duty for the judiciary to interpose, the court had no doubt but strictly there are limits beyond which the legislative discretion cannot go. "It is not every case of injustice or oppression which may be reached; and it is not every case which will authorize a judicial tribunal to inquire into the minute operation of laws imposing taxes, or defining the boundaries of local jurisdictions. The extension of the limits of the local authority may in some cases be greater than is necessary to include the adjacent population, or territory laid out into city lots, without a case being presented in which the courts would be called upon to apply a nice and exact scrutiny as to its practical operation. It must be a case of flagrant injustice and palpable wrong, amounting to the taking of private property without such compensation in return as the taxpayer is at liberty to consider a fair equivalent for the tax." This decision has been subsequently recognized and followed as authority, in the last-named State.¹

¹ Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 86; Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 494; Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa, 282. These cases were cited and followed in Bradshaw v. Omaha, 1 Neb. 10. These cases, however, do not hold the legislative act which enlarges the city limits to be absolutely void, but only held that they will limit the exercise of the taxing power as nearly as practicable to the line where the extension of the boundaries ceases to be beneficial to the proprietor in a municipal point of view. For this purpose they enter into an inquiry of fact, whether the lands in question, in view of their relative position to the growing and improved parts of the town, and partaking more or less of the benefits of municipal government, are proper subjects of municipal taxation; and if not, they enjoin the collection of such taxes. It would seem as if there must be great practical difficulties—if not some of principle—in making this disposition of such a case. They have nevertheless been followed repeatedly in Iowa. Davis v. Dubuque, 20

Iowa, 458; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26 Iowa, 419; Durant v. Kauffman, 34 Iowa, 184. [But such exemption does not cover lands held for speculative purposes and only incidentally or temporarily used for agriculture. Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 97 Iowa, 289, 60 N. W. 175, 35 L. R. A. 63. Where the statute permits the annexation of platted sections and "land adjacent thereto," the adjacent land must be somewhat suburban in character. State v. Minnetonka, 57 Minn. 526, 59 N. W. 472, 25 L. R. A. 755, and note. But some allowance may be made for prospective growth. Ferguson v. Snellomish, 8 Wash. 638, 30 Pac. 993, 24 L. R. A. 795. See also Vestal v. Little Rock, 54 Ark. 321, 329, 15 S. W. 891, 18 S. W. 291, 11 L. R. A. 778.] There are decisions adverse to these. See Stütz v. Indianapolis, 55 Ind. 515; Martin v. Dix, 52 Miss. 53, 24 Am. Rep. 661; Giboney v. Cape Girardeau, 68 Mo. 141; New Orleans v. Cazear, 27 La. Ann. 156; [Kimball v. Grantsville City, 19 Utah, 368, 57 Pac. 1, 45 L. R. A. 628, overr. Kaysville

The second essential is that there should be uniformity in the manner of the assessment, and approximate equality in the amount of exactions within the district;¹ and to this end that all the objects of taxation within the district should be embraced. The correctness of this principle will be conceded, but whether in practice it has been applied or not, it may not always be easy to determine.

"With the single exception of specific taxes," says Christiancy, J. in Woodbridge v. Detroit,² "the terms 'tax' and 'assessment' both, I think, when applied to property, and especially to lands, always include the idea of some ratio or rule of apportionment, so that, of the whole sum to be raised, the part paid by one

City v. Ellison, 18 Utah, 163, 55 Pac. 886; 43 L. R. A. 81.] Compare Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. St. 170; Hewitt's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 55; Stoner v. Flournoy, 28 La. Ann. 850; Norris v. Waco, 57 Tex. 635; Washburn v. Oshkosh, 60 Wis. 453, 19 N. W. 364; [State v. Eldson, 76 Tex. 302, 13 S. W. 268, 7 L. R. A. 733.] That the legislature cannot annex to a village, territory not contiguous for the purpose of increasing its revenues, see Smith v. Sherry, 59 Wis. 210, 3 N. W. 561. [The Federal courts will not intervene to correct any purely arbitrary action of the State authorities in respect to the annexation of territory to municipalities. Forsyth v. Hammond, 163 U. S. 509, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605. Upon municipal taxation of rural lands, see Briggen v. Russellville, 99 Ky. 515, 33 S. W. 358, 34 L. R. A. 153, and note. Legislature cannot annex non-contiguous lands. Denver v. Coulchan, 20 Col. 471, 39 Pac. 425, 27 L. R. A. 751. Upon power of legislature to annex territory to municipalities, see State v. Cincinnati, 52 Ohio St. 419, 40 N. E. 365, 27 L. R. A. 737, and notes; also a valuable case, Vestal v. Little Rock, 54 Ark. 321, 326, 15 S. W. 850, 19 S. W. 231, 11 L. R. A. 778, and note.]

¹ See Davis v. Gaines, 48 Ark. 370, 3 S. W. 184; State v. Dist. Court, 33 Minn. 235, 22 N. W. 625; Warren v. Chicago, 118 Ill. 320, 11 N. E. 218. Where an assessment is to be made by benefits, property owners have an absolute right to be heard, and a law for making it without provision for a hearing is void. Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Baltimore v. Scharf, 54 Md.

439; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Campbell v. Dwiggins, 83 Ind. 473; Gilmore v. Rentig, 33 Kan. 156, 3 Pac. 781; Brown v. Denver, 7 Col. 395, 3 Pac. 455; Boorman v. Santa Barbara, 35 Cal. 313, 1 Pac. 31; Gatch v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 718, 15 N. W. 819; Trustees v. Davenport, 65 Iowa, 632, 22 N. W. 904; [Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.] See Waples, Proceedings in Rem. 64; ante, 711, note. Costa, Baltimore v. Johns Hopkins Hosp., 56 Md. 1; Cleveland v. Tripp, 18 R. I. 59; Davis v. Lynchburg, 84 Va. 561, 6 S. E. 233. Notice is unnecessary if only a mathematical calculation is involved. Anery v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa, 701, 30 N. W. 789; [and for the fixing of the rate of charge per 1000 gallons of sewerage discharged into the city sewer, no hearing is necessary. Carson v. Sewerage Commrs. of Brockton, 175 Mass. 242, 68 N. E. 1, 48 L. R. A. 277, aff. 182 U. S. 238, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860.] If an opportunity for a hearing is given at some step of the proceedings it is enough; as in judicial proceedings to enforce the assessment. Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., 111 U. S. 701, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; [Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, aff. 16 Oreg. 450, 19 Pac. 450, 1 L. R. A. 673. Unless expressly authorized, a municipality cannot make exemptions from taxation. McTwiggan v. Hunter, 19 R. I. 265, 33 Atl. 5, 29 L. R. A. 526.]

² 8 Mich. 274, 301. See also Chicago v. Larned, 34 Ill. 203; Crete v. Chicago, 56 Ill. 422.

piece of property shall bear some known relation to, or be affected by, that paid by another. Thus, if one hundred dollars are to be raised from tracts A, B, and C, the amount paid by A will reduce by so much that to be paid by B and C; and so of the others. In the case of specific taxes, as well as duties and imposts, though the amount paid by one is not affected by that paid by another, yet there is a known and fixed relation of one to the other, a uniform rate by which it is imposed upon the whole species or class of property or persons to which the specific tax applies; and this is so of duties and imposts, whether specific or ad valorem. To compel individuals to contribute money or property to the use of the public, without reference to any common ratio, and without requiring the sum paid by one piece or kind of property, or by one person, to bear any relation whatever to that paid by another, is, it seems to me, to lay a forced contribution, not a tax, duty, or impost, within the sense of these terms, as applied to the exercise of powers by any enlightened or responsible government."

In the case of Knowlton v. Supervisors of Rock County,¹ an important and interesting question arose, involving the very point now under discussion. The Constitution of Wisconsin provides that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform," which, if we are correct in what we have already stated, is no more than an affirmation of a settled principle of constitutional law. The city of Janesville included within its territorial limits, not only the land embraced within the recorded plat of the village of Janesville and its additions, but also a large quantity of the adjacent farming or agricultural lands. Conceiving the owners of these lands to be greatly and unequally burdened by taxation for the support of the city government, the legislature passed an act declaring that

¹ 9 Wis. 410. A tax case of much more than ordinary interest and importance is that of San Mateo County v. The Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 722, Justice Field delivering an elaborate opinion, in the conclusions of which Judge Sawyer concurred. The suit was brought for the recovery of a tax assessed upon the franchisees, roadway, road-bed, rails, and rolling-stock of the defendant. By the Constitution of the State the real estate of private individuals is valued for taxation, with a deduction of all mortgages and other liens, but the value of the property of railroads is to be assessed without any such deduction. It was held by these eminent judges that this discrimination in taxation between the property of natural persons and railroad corporations was an unwarrantable departure from the rule of equality and uniformity in taxation; that the provision which establishes the discrimination is not due process of law, and is therefore opposed to the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which is equally effectual to protect against an unwarranted exercise of the taxing power as against any other unlawful deprivation of property. It was also affirmed that the State has no power, by its constitution or otherwise, to withdraw corporations from the guarantees of the Federal Constitution.

"in no case shall the real and personal property within the territorial limits of said city, and not included within the territorial limits of the recorded plat of the village of Janesville, or of any additions to said village, which may be used, occupied, or reserved for agricultural or horticultural purposes, be subject to an annual tax to defray the current expenses of said city, exceeding one-half of one per cent; nor for the repair and building of roads and bridges, and the support of the poor, more than one-half as much on each dollar's valuation shall be levied for such purposes as on the property within such recorded plats, nor shall the same be subject to any tax for any of the purposes mentioned in § 5 of c. 5 of [the city charter]; nor shall the said farming or gardening land be subject to any tax, other than before mentioned, for any city purpose whatsoever." Under the charter the property of the city was liable to an annual tax of one per centum to defray the current expenses of the city; and also an additional tax of such sum as the common council might deem necessary for the repair and building of roads and bridges, and for the support of the poor. Thus it will be perceived that the legislature within the same taxing district, — if the whole city is to be considered one district only, — undertook to provide that a portion of the property should be taxed at one rate in proportion to value, and another portion at a much lower rate; while from taxation for certain proper local purposes the latter class was exempted altogether.

"It was contended in argument," say the court, "that as those provisions fixed one uniform rate without the recorded plats, and another within them, thus taxing all the property without alike, and all within alike, they do not infringe the constitution. In other words, that for the purpose of taxation, the legislature have the right arbitrarily to divide up and classify the property of the citizens, and, having done so, they do not violate the constitutional rule of uniformity, provided all the property within a given class is rated alike.

"The answer to this argument is, that it creates different rules of taxation, to the number of which there is no limit, except that fixed by legislative discretion, while the constitution establishes but one fixed, unbending, uniform rule upon the subject. It is believed that if the legislature can, by classification, thus arbitrarily, and without regard to value, discriminate in the same municipal corporation between personal and real property within, and personal and real property without a recorded plat, they can also by the same means discriminate between lands used for one purpose and those used for another, such as lands used for growing wheat and those used for growing corn, or any other crop; meadow-lands and pasture-lands, cultivated and uncultivated lands; or they can classify by the description, such as odd-numbered lots and blocks and even-numbered ones, or odd and even-numbered sections. Personal property can be classified by its character, use, or description, or, as in the present case, by its location, and thus the rules of taxation may be multiplied to an extent equal in number to the different kinds, uses, descriptions, and locations of real and personal property. We do not see why the system may not be carried further, and the classification be made by the character, trade, profession, or business of the owners. For certainly this rule of uniformity can as well be applied to such a classification as any other, and thus the constitutional provision be saved intact. Such a construction would make the constitution operative only to the extent of prohibiting the legislature from discriminating in favor of particular individuals, and would reduce the people, while considering so grave and important a proposition, to the ridiculous attitude of saying to the legislature, 'You shall not discriminate between single individuals or corporations; but you may divide the citizens up into different classes, as the followers of different trades, professions, or kinds of business, or as the owners of different species or descriptions of property, and legislate for one class, and against another, as much as you please, provided you serve all of the favored or unfavored classes alike;' thus affording a direct and solemn constitutional sanction to a system of taxation so manifestly and grossly unjust that it will not find an apologist anywhere, at least outside of those who are the recipients of its favor. We do not believe the framers of that instrument intended such a construction, and therefore cannot adopt it."¹

The principle to be deduced from the Iowa and Wisconsin cases, assuming that they do not in any degree conflict, seems to

¹ Per Dixon, Ch. J., 9 Wis. 410, 421. Besides the other cases referred to, see, on this same general subject, Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 534; State v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 12 La. Ann. 802; Adams v. Somerville, 2 Head, 363; McComb v. Bell, 2 Minn. 295; Attorney-General v. Winnebago Lake & Fox River P. R. Co., 11 Wis. 35; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242; O'Kane v. Treat, 25 Ill. 557; Philadelphia Association, &c. v. Wood, 39 Pa. 73; Sacramento v. Crocker, 16 Cal. 119. There was a provision in the charter of Covington that a street might be paved with the Nicholson pavement at the expense of the adjoining owners, when the owners of the larger part of the frontage should petition therefor. An amendatory act authorized it as to a portion of a certain street without such a petition; thus permitting a special improvement on that street, at the expense of the owners of adjoining lots, on a different principle from that adopted for the city generally. In Howell v. Bristol, 8 Bush, 498, this amendment was held inconsistent with the fundamental principles of taxation, and consequently void.

be this: The legislature cannot arbitrarily include within the limits of a village, borough, or city, property and persons not properly chargeable with its burdens, and for the sole purpose of increasing the corporate revenues by the exaction of the taxes. But whenever the corporate boundaries are established, it is to be understood that whatever property is included within those limits has been thus included by the legislature, because it justly belongs there, as being within the circuit which is benefited by the local government, and which ought consequently to contribute to its burdens. The legislature cannot, therefore, after having already, by including the property within the corporation, declared its opinion that such property should contribute to the local government, immediately turn about and establish a basis of taxation which assumes that the property is not in fact urban property at all, but is agricultural lands, and should be assessed accordingly. The rule of apportionment must be uniform throughout the taxing district, applicable to all alike; but the legislature have no power to arrange the taxing districts arbitrarily, and without reference to the great fundamental principle of taxation, that the burden must be borne by those upon whom it justly rests. The Kentucky and Iowa decisions hold that, in a case where they have manifestly and unmistakably done so, the courts may interfere and restrain the imposition of municipal burdens on property which does not properly belong within the municipal taxing district at all. It must be manifest, however, that the effect of the decisions in the States last referred to is to establish judicially two or more districts within a municipality where the legislature has established one only; and as this is plainly a legislative function, it would seem that the legislature must be at least as competent to establish them directly as any court can be to do the same thing indirectly. And in Missouri, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania, no difficulty has been found in sustaining legislation which discriminated in taxation between "rural" lands and others within the same city.¹

This rule of uniformity has perhaps been found most difficult of

¹ Bondist v. St. Louis, 19 Mo. 179; Henderson v. Lambert, 8 Bush, 697; Park and v. Gains, 88 Ky. 572, 11 S. W. 646; Serrille v. Philadelphia, 85 Pa. St. 355. And see Gillette v. Hartford, 31 Conn. 351. In Missouri such land, though taxed at a different rate, must be valued like other land. State v. O'Brien, 80 Mo. 631, 1 S. W. 733. In Utah it is denied that such land within the limits, but outside the city as built, can be subjected to city taxes. Terr v. Daniels, 5 Utah, 278, 22 Pac. 163.

Agricultural land in tracts of ten acres or more brought within a city may be exempted from city taxes: Leicht v. Burlington, 73 Iowa, 29, 34 N. W. 494; if brought in after the passage of an act allowing it. Perkins v. Burlington, 77 Iowa, 553, 42 N. W. 441. Under Indiana statutes such land may not be taxed for general purposes above township rates, but is liable for special assessments. Dickerson v. Franklin, 112 Ind. 178, 13 N. E. 579.

application in regard to those cases of taxation which are commonly known under the head of assessments, and which are made either for local improvement and repair, or to prevent local causes resulting in the destruction of health or property. In those cases where it has been held that such assessments were not covered by the constitutional provision that taxation should be laid upon property in proportion to value, it has, nevertheless, been decided that the authority to make them must be referred to the taxing power, and not to the police power of the State, under which sidewalks have sometimes been ordered to be constructed. Apportionment of the burden was therefore essential, though it need not be made upon property in proportion to its value. But the question then arises: What shall be the rule of apportionment? Can a street be ordered graded and paved, and the expense assessed exclusively upon the property which, in the opinion of the assessors, shall be peculiarly benefited thereby, in proportion to such benefit? Or may a taxing district be created for the purpose, and the expense assessed in proportion to the area of the lots? Or may the street be made a taxing district, and the cost levied in proportion to the frontage? Or may each lot-owner be required to grade and pave in front of his lot? These are grave questions, and they have not been found of easy solution.

The case of The People v. The Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn,¹ is a leading case, holding that a statute authorizing a municipal corporation to grade and improve streets, and to assess the expense among the owners and occupants of lands benefited by the improvement, in proportion to the amount of such benefit, is a constitutional and valid law. The court in that case concede that taxation cannot be laid without apportionment, but hold that the basis of apportionment in these cases is left by the constitution with the legislature. The application of any one rule or principle of apportionment to all cases would be manifestly oppressive and unjust. Taxation is sometimes regulated by one principle, and sometimes by another; and very often it has been apportioned without reference to locality, or to the taxpayer's ability to contribute, or to any proportion between the burden and the benefit. "The excise laws, and taxes on carriages and watches, are among the many examples of this description of taxation. Some taxes affect classes of inhabitants only. All duties on imported goods are taxes on the class of consumers. The tax on one imported article falls on a large class of consumers, while the tax on another affects comparatively a few individuals. The duty on one article consumed by one class of inhabitants is twenty per cent of its value, while on another, consumed by a different class, it is forty per cent. The duty on one foreign commodity is laid for the purpose of revenue mainly, without reference to the ability of its consumers to pay, as in the case of the duty on salt. The duty on another is laid for the purpose of encouraging domestic manufactures of the same article, thus compelling the consumer to pay a higher price to one man than he could otherwise have bought the article for from another. These discriminations may be impolitic, and in some cases unjust; but if the power of taxation upon importations had not been transferred by the people of this State to the federal government there could have been no pretence for declaring them to be unconstitutional in State legislation.

¹ 4 N. Y. 419, 427; reversing same case, 8 Barb. 209.

"A property tax for the general purposes of the government, either of the State at large or of a county, city, or other district, is regarded as a just and equitable tax. The reason is obvious. It apportions the burden according to the benefit more nearly than any other inflexible rule of general taxation. A rich man derives more benefit from taxation, in the protection and improvement of his property, than a poor man, and ought therefore to pay more. But the amount of each man's benefit in general taxation cannot be ascertained and estimated with any degree of certainty; and for that reason a property tax is adopted, instead of an estimate of benefits. In local taxation, however, for special purposes, the local benefits may in many cases be seen, traced, and estimated to a reasonable certainty. At least this has been supposed and assumed to be true by the legislature, whose duty it is to prescribe the rules on which taxation is to be apportioned, and whose determination of this matter, being within the scope of its lawful power, is conclusive."

The reasoning of this case has been generally accepted as satisfactory, and followed in subsequent cases.¹

¹ Scoville v. Cleveland, 1 Ohio St. 125; 113 v. Hazen, 5 Ohio St. 243; Marion v. Luer, 5 Ohio St. 250; Maloy v. Marietta, 11 Ohio St. 635; City of Peoria v. Keller, 20 Ill. 351; Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St. 333; Garrett v. St. Louis, 25 Mo. 596; Ulrich v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 438; Bradley v. McAtee, 7 Bush, 657, 3 Am. Rep. 369; Jones v. Boston, 104 Mass. 491; Sessions v. Crunkilton, 20 Ohio St. 349; State v. Fuller, 34 N. J. 227; Holton v. Milwaukee, 31 Wis. 27; McMasters v. Commonwealth, 3 Watts, 292; Allentown v. Henry, 73 Pa. St. 494; Weber v. Reinhard, 73 Pa. St. 379, 13 Am. Rep. 747; Livingston v. New York, 8

Weed, 85, 22 Am. Dec. 622; Wright v. Boston, 9 Cush. 233; Jones v. Boston, 104 Mass. 491; Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 189; Cone v. Hartford, 28 Conn. 393; Alexander v. Baltimore, 5 Gill, 383; Howard v. The Church, 18 Md. 451; Hoyt v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 39; Sneely v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 431, 8 N. W. 52; Barnett v. Sacramento, 12 Cal. 78; La Fayette v. Fowler, 34 Ind. 140. The right to assess by benefits has been denied in South Carolina. State v. Charleston, 12 Rich. 702. The legislation in Ohio on the subject has authorized the cities and villages, in opening and improving streets, to assess the expense either upon the lots abutting on

On the other hand, and on the like reasoning, it has been held equally competent to make the street a taxing district, and assess the expense of the improvement upon the lots in proportion to the frontage.¹ Here also is apportionment by a rule the street in proportion to the street front, or upon the lands in proportion to their assessed value. In a case where the former mode was resorted to, and an assessment made upon property owned by the Northern Indiana Railroad Company for its corporate purposes, Pack J., thus states and answers an objection to the validity of the tax: "But it is said that assessments, as distinguished from general taxation, rest solely upon the idea of equivalents,—a compensation proportioned to the special benefits derived from the improvement, and that, in the case at bar, the railroad company is not, and in the nature of things cannot be, in any degree benefited by the improvement. It is quite true that the right to impose such special taxes is based upon a presumed equivalent; but it by no means follows that there must be in fact such full equivalent in every instance, or that its absence will render the assessment invalid. The rule of apportionment, whether by the front foot, or a percentage upon the assessed valuation, must be uniform, affecting all the owners and all the property abutting on the street alike. One rule cannot be applied to one owner, and a different rule to another owner. One could not be assessed ten per cent, another five, another three, and another left altogether unassessed because he was not in fact benefited. It is manifest that the actual benefits resulting from the improvement may be as various almost as the number of the owners, and the uses to which the property may be applied. No general rule, therefore, could be laid down which would do equal and exact justice to all. The legislature have not attempted so vain a thing, but have prescribed two different modes in which the assessment may be made, and left the city authorities free to adopt either. The mode adopted by the council becomes the statutory equivalent for the benefits conferred, although in fact the burden imposed may greatly preponderate. In such case, if no fraud intervene, and the assessment does not substantially exhaust the owner's interest in the land, his remedy would seem to be to procure, by a timely appeal to the city authorities, a reduction of the special assessment, and its imposition, in whole or in part, upon the public at large." Northern Indiana R. R. Co. v. Conneely, 10 Ohio St. 159, 165. And see Howell v. Bristol, 8 Bush, 466; [Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 344, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 626, aff'd 9 N. D. 208, 82 N. W. 732; Ramsey County v. Robert P. Lewis Co., 72 Minn. 87, 75 N. W. 108, 63 L. R. A. 421.] It is competent to provide for assessing benefits upon the owner instead of the land. In re Centre St., 115 Pa. St. 247, 8 Atl. 58. [Contra, Ivanhoe v. Enterprise, 29 Ore. 245, 45 Pac. 771, 55 L. R. A. 58, and see also note to this case in L. R. A.] As to repaving, see our, 719, note. The legislative determination that certain land is benefited is conclusive. Only the question of apportionment remains open. Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Pacific Bridge Co. v. Kirckham, 64 Cal. 512, 2 Pac. 400. The finding of benefits by a common council is conclusive unless palpably unjust. Paulson v. Portland, 18 Ore. 450, 19 Pac. 450, 1 L. R. A. 673; Little Rock v. Katzenstein, 52 Ark. 107, 12 S. W. 123; Pueblo v. Robinson, 12 Col. 593, 21 Pac. Rep. 899. In ordering a local assessment the common council may determine that the benefits to property within the district will equal the cost of the improvement. Cook v. Sioux, 27 Minn. 500, 8 N. W. 755. If a council has made an assessment district, a jury in apportioning benefits must impose some on each parcel in it. Rentz v. Detroit, 48 Mich. 544, 12 N. W. 694, 911. Contra, Kansas City v. Baird, 28 Mo. 215, 11 S. W. 243, 502. But a wholly arbitrary apportionment that could not possibly be just would be void. Thomas v. Gahn, 35 Mich. 155. A council cannot be empowered to impose expense as it may "deem equitable and just." Barnes v. Dyer, 58 Vt. 419.

¹ Williams v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 590; Northern Indiana R. R. Co. v. Conneely, which approximates to what is just, but which, like any other rule that can be applied, is only an approximation to absolute

10 Ohio St. 159; Lumsden v. Cross, 10 Wis. 282. And see St. Joseph v. O'Donoghue, 31 Mo. 345; Burnett v. Sacramento, 12 Cal. 76; Scoville v. Cleveland, 1 Ohio St. 129; Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 243; Ernst v. Kunkle, 5 Ohio St. 520; Hines v. Leavenworth, 3 Kan. 186; Magee v. Commonwealth, 48 Pa. St. 358; Wray v. Pittsburg, 48 Pa. St. 365; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; White v. People, 94 Ill. 604; Wilbur v. Springfield, 123 Ill. 395, 14 N. E. 871; Davis v. Lynchburg, 84 Va. 861, 6 S. E. 230; Farrar v. St. Louis, 80 Mo. 379; Taylor v. Boyd, 63 Tex. 533; O'Reilly v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. 439, 21 N. E. 1004; [Raleigh v. Pearce, 110 N. C. 82, 14 S. E. 521, 17 L. R. A. 350, and note on constitutionality of frontage rule. Frontage rule will not be sustained where provision has not been made for a hearing in which property owners may appear and show that such assessment is not proportional to benefits. Utman v. Baltimore, 72 Md. 587, 597, 309, 20 Atl. 141, 21 Atl. 709, 21 Atl. 711, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note.] although the assessment exceeds the value of a long, shallow strip assessed. McCormick's Est. v. Harrisburg, 129 Pa. St. 213, 18 Atl. 125. In Hammett v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. St. 146, 3 Am. Rep. 615, while the cases here cited are approved, it is denied that a street already laid out and in good condition can be taken and improved for a public drive or carriage-way at the expense of the adjacent owners; this not being an improvement for local but for general purposes. See Washington Avenue, 63 Pa. St. 352, 8 Am. Rep. 255; Orphan Asylum's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 135, 8 Atl. 217; Williamsport v. Beck, 128 Pa. St. 147, 18 Atl. 329. But a borough may cause a sidewalk to be retold at the cost of an abutter. Smith v. Kingston, 129 Pa. St. 367, 14 Atl. 170. [An ordinance requiring abutting property-owners to remove snow and ice is unconstitutional. State v. Tuckman, 69 N. H. 318, 41 Atl. 347, 42 L. R. A. 428; Griffey v. Bloomington, 88 Ill. 554; Chicago v. O'Brien, 111 Ill. 552.] Compare Allen v. Drew, 44 Vt. 174 (case of water-rents); Willard v. Presbury, 14 Wall. 676; Hoyt v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 39, 2 Am.

Rep. 76; La Fayette v. Fowler, 34 Ind. 140; Chambers v. Satterlee, 40 Cal. 437; Bradley v. McAtee, 7 Bush, 567, 3 Am. Rep. 393. In Washington Avenue, 63 Pa. St. 352, 8 Am. Rep. 255, it is denied that this principle can be applied to the country and to farming lands. Agnew, J., says: "To apply it to the country, or to farm lands, would lead to such inequality and injustice as to deprive it of all soundness as a rule, or as a substitute for a fair and impartial valuation of benefits in pursuance of law; so that at the very first blush every one would pronounce it palpably unreasonable and unjust." The able opinion in this case is a very satisfactory and very thorough examination of the principles on which local assessments are supported. The cases of Seely v. Pittsburg, 82 Pa. St. 360; Crag v. Philadelphia, 89 Pa. St. 265; Philadelphia v. Rule, 93 Pa. St. 15, and Scranton v. Penn. Coal Co., 105 Pa. St. 445, are in principle similar. The rule of assessment by frontage is not sanctioned in Arkansas: Peay v. Little Rock, 32 Ark. 31; Monticello v. Banks, 48 Ark. 251, 2 S. W. 852; nor in Tennessee: McBean v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. 840. [Nor will the frontage rule be sustained where it results in an apportionment varying substantially from the value of benefits conferred and in excess thereof. In Norwood v. Baker, a peculiar state of facts showed the frontage rule in a most unfavorable light. B. owned a parcel of land on W. Ave. I. Ave. intersected W. Ave. at right angles, but was interrupted for a space of 300 ft. by B.'s land, through which the street had not yet been opened. It had, however, been opened beyond B.'s land, so that by the opening of the street for this distance of 300 ft. across B.'s land, the street would be open throughout its length. The village council of N. by ordinance provided for the appropriation of this strip through B.'s land, and the value thereof was duly assessed and paid to B. Thereupon the council, following the frontage rule, assessed upon B., whose land was the only land fronting upon the new portion of the street, the entire cost of the land appropriated, and in addition all the ex-equality. But if, in the opinion of the legislature, it is the proper rule to apply to any particular case, the courts must enforce it.

penses connected with such appropriation. As a matter of fact the land of B. was probably not at all benefited by the opening of the street through it, since all parts of it had had substantially equally good street facilities before. The United States Supreme Court sustained an injunction against the assessment on the ground that it amounted to a taking without due process. Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 293, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187. But under a statute authorizing the entire expense of a street pavement to be apportioned on abutting lots according to the frontage rule, and without any preliminary hearing as to benefits, the assessment cannot, in the absence of allegation and proofs that the resulting assessment is substantially in excess of benefits, be set aside where the lots are of equal depth, and are substantially similarly related to the improvement. The statute is good to the extent at least of furnishing a prima facie rule of apportionment. French v. Barber A. Paving Co., 181 U. S. 324, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, aff. 158 Mo. 534, 58 S. W. 934, 54 L. R. A. 492. To same effect see Farrell v. W. Chicago Park Comm'rs, 182 Ill. 230, 55 N. E. 325; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 124 Mich. 433, 7 Det. L. N. 233, 83 N. W. 103; Heman v. Allen, 158 Mo. 534, 57 S. W. 559, all of which are sustained in 181 U. S. 402, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645, the Missouri case sub nom. Shumate v. Heman; see the vigorous dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Hall in 181 U. S. 402, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653. See also Banaz v. Smith, 133 Cal. 102, 65 Pac. 309, sustaining the frontage rule as a prima facie rule; also Ramsey County v. Lewis Co., 82 Minn. 402, 84 N. W. 611 (June 18, 1901), rev. same case, 82 Minn. 390, 85 N. W. 207; Indianapolis v. Holt, 155 Ind. 222, 57 N. E. 906, 958, 1100; Baltimore v. Stewart, 92 Md. 535, 48 Atl. 165; Barfield v. Gleason, 23 Ky. L. 128, 63 S. W. 964, (sustaining assessment proportional to area). Notice by publication is sufficient in street improvement proceedings. Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618. And such notice may be by a minute in the publication of the council's proceedings. State v. Pillsbury, 52 Minn. 259, 85 N. W. 175. Upon constitutionality of frontage rule, see Raleigh v. Peace, 110 N. C. 32, 14 S. E. 521, 17 L. R. A. 339, and note; upon necessity of special benefit, see Re Bonds of Madera Irrig. Dist., 92 Cal. 290, 341, 28 Pac. 272, 675, 14 L. R. A. 755, and note; upon distinction between taxes and special assessments, see Adams Co. v. Quincy, 130 Ill. 666, 22 N. E. 624, 6 L. R. A. 155, and note. Upon practically unlimited power of Congress over special assessments in District of Columbia, see Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 18 Sup. Ct. 521; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618. The frontage rule is no longer valid in Indiana, and no special assessment can exceed the benefit. If the cost of the improvement exceeds the amount of the special benefits, the excess must be paid out of the general fund raised by taxation. Adams v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 437, 57 N. E. 114, 49 L. R. A. 707. "Compensation paid to a landowner for lands taken by appropriation proceedings to open a street cannot be assessed back upon the lands of the owner remaining after such taking. Neither can costs and expenses incurred in such proceeding be so assessed." Cincinnati, L. & N. R. Co. v. Cincinnati, 62 Ohio St. 475, 57 N. E. 223, 49 L. R. A. 593; Bloomington v. Latham, 142 Ill. 462, 32 N. E. 506, 18 L. R. A. 487. Assessment by the frontage rule rejected. Assessments must be proportioned to benefits and not in excess thereof. Kersten v. Milwaukee, 106 Wis. 209, 81 N. W. 948, 1102, 48 L. R. A. 851; Hutcheson v. Storrie, 82 Tex. 685, 51 S. W. 848, 45 L. R. A. 289. For other cases on special assessments, see Asberry v. Roanoke, 91 Va. 562, 22 S. E. 390, 42 L. R. A. 638; Weed v. Boston, 172 Mass. 25, 51 N. E. 264, 43 L. R. A. 642; Rolph v. Fargo, 7 N. D. 610, 78 N. W. 242, 42 L. R. A. 649 (sustaining frontage rule); Detroit v. Cospin, 112 Mich. 588, 71 N. W. 149, 42 L. R. A. 638; Ramsey County v. Lewis Company, 72 Minn. 87, 75 N. W. 108, 42 L. R. A. 679; Violet v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 591, 23 S. E. 900, 31 L. R. A. 382; Hayes v. Douglas County, 92 Wis. 423, 65 N. W. 482, 31 L. R. A. 213; Denver v. Knowles, 17 Col. 204, 30 Pac. 1041, 17 L. R. A.

But a very different case is presented when the legislature undertakes to provide that each lot upon a street shall pay the whole expense of grading and paving the street along its front. (a) For while in such a case there would be something having the outward appearance of apportionment, it requires but slight examination to discover that it is a deceptive semblance only, and that the measure of equality which the constitution requires is entirely wanting. If every lot-owner is compelled to construct the street in front of his lot, his tax is neither increased nor diminished by the assessment upon his neighbors; nothing is divided or apportioned between him and them; and each particular lot is in fact arbitrarily made a taxing district, and charged with the whole expenditure therein and thus apportionment avoided. If the tax were for grading the street simply, those lots which were already at the established grade would escape altogether, while those on either side, which chanced to be above and below, must bear the whole burden, though no more benefited by the improvement than the others.¹ It is evident, therefore, that a law for making assessments on this basis could not have in view such distribution of burdens in proportion to benefits as ought to be a cardinal idea in every tax-law.² It would be nakedly an arbitrary command of the law to each lot-owner to construct the street in front of his lot at his own expense, according to a prescribed standard; and a power to issue such command could never be exercised by a constitutional government, unless we are at liberty to treat it as a police regulation, and place the duty to make the streets upon the same footing as that to keep the sidewalk free from obstruction and fit for passage. But any such idea is clearly inadmissible.³

135 (sustaining frontage rule in absence of any showing of unfairness); Speer v. Athens, 55 Ga. 49, 11 S. E. 802, 9 L. R. A. 492; Graham v. Chicago, 157 Ill. 411, 58 N. E. 393; King v. City of Portland, 38 Oreg. 402, 63 Pac. 2, 55 L. R. A. 812. Where a street is widened upon one side only, the lands on both sides of the street abut on the improvement. Cincinnati v. Barsche, 52 Ohio St. 324, 40 N. E. 21, 27 L. R. A. 566.]

¹ In fact, lots above and below an established grade are usually less benefited by the grading than the others; because the improvement subjects them to new burdens, in order to bring the general surface to the grade of the street, which the others escape.

² The case of Warren v. Henley, 81 Iowa, 31, is opposed to the reasoning of the text; but the learned judge who delivers the opinion concedes that he is unable to support his conclusions on the authorities within his reach.

³ All lots in the district must be assessed, not simply those in front of which work has been done. Diggins v. Brown, 75 Cal. 318, 18 Pac. 373. See City of Lexington v. McQuillan's Heirs, 9 Dana, 513, and opinions of Campbell and Christiancy, JJ., in Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 274. The case of Weeks v. Mil-

(a) [Such assessment held clearly arbitrary and void in Davis v. Litchfield, 145 Ill. 313, 53 N. E. 885, 21 L. R. A. 566, and note upon such assessments.]

In many other cases, besides the construction, improvement, and repair of streets, may special taxing districts be created, with waukee, 10 Wis. 258, seems to be contra. We quote from the opinion of the court by Paige, J. After stating the rule that uniformity in taxation implies equality in the burden, he proceeds: "The principle upon which these assessments rest is clearly destructive of this equality. It requires every lot-owner to build whatever improvements the public may require on the street in front of his lot, without reference to inequalities in the value of the lots, in the expense of constructing the improvements, or to the question whether the lot is injured or benefited by their construction. Corner lots are required to construct and keep in repair three times as much as other lots; and yet it is well known that the difference in value bears no proportion to this difference in burden. In front of one lot the expense of building the street may exceed the value of the lot; and its construction may impose on the owner additional expense, to render his lot accessible. In front of another lot of even much greater value, the expense is comparatively slight. These inequalities are obvious; and I have always thought that the principle of such assessments was radically wrong. They have been very extensively discussed, and sustained upon the ground that the lot should pay because it receives the benefit. But if this be true, that the improvements in front of a lot are made for the benefit of the lot only, then the right of the public to tax the owner at all for that purpose fails; because the public has no right to tax the citizen to make him build improvements for his own benefit merely. It must be for a public purpose; and it being once established that the construction of streets is a public purpose that will justify taxation, I think it follows, if the matter is to be settled on principle, that the taxation should be equal and uniform, and that to make it so the whole taxable property of the political division in which the improvement is made should be taxed by a uniform rule for the purpose of its construction.

"But in sustaining these assessments when private property was wanted for a street, it has been said the State could take it, because the use of a street was a public use; in order to justify a resort to the power of taxation, it is said the building of a street is a public purpose. But then, having got the land to build it on, and the power to tax by holding it a public purpose, they immediately abandon that idea, and say that it is a private benefit, and make the owner of the lot build the whole of it. I think this is the same in principle as it would be to say that the town in which the county seat is located should build the county buildings, or that the county where the capital is should construct the public edifices of the State, upon the ground that, by being located nearer, they derived a greater benefit than others. If the question, therefore, was, whether the system of assessment could be sustained upon principle, I should have no hesitation in deciding it in the negative. I fully agree with the reasoning of the Supreme Court of Louisiana in the case of Municipality No. 2 v. White, 9 La. Ann. 447, upon this point.

"But the question is not whether this system is established upon sound principles, but whether the legislature has power, under the constitution, to establish such a system. As already stated, if the provision requiring the rule of taxation to be uniform was the only one bearing upon the question, I should answer this also in the negative. But there is another provision which seems to me so important, that it has changed the result to which I should otherwise have arrived. That provision is § 3 of art. 11, and is as follows: 'It shall be the duty of the legislature, and they are hereby empowered, to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and taxation, and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.'

"It cannot well be denied that if the word 'assessment,' as used in this section, had reference to this established system of special taxation for municipal improvements, that then it is a clear recoga view to local improvements. The cases of drains to relieve swamps, marshes, and other low lands of their stagnant water, and of levees to prevent lands being overflowed by rivers, will at once suggest themselves. In providing for such cases, however, the legislature exercises another power besides the power of taxation. On the theory that the drainage is for the sole purpose of benefiting the lands of individuals, it might be difficult to defend such legislation. But if the stagnant water causes or threatens disease, it may be a nuisance, which, under its power of police, the State would have authority to abate. The laws for this purpose, so far as they have fallen under our observation, have proceeded upon this theory. Nevertheless, when the State incurs expense in the exercise of its police power for this purpose, it may be proper to assess that expense upon the portion of the community specially and peculiarly benefited. The assessment is usually made with reference to the benefit to property; and it is difficult to frame or nition of the existence and legality of the power." And the court, having reached the conclusion that the word did have reference to such an established system, sustained the assessment, adding: "The same effect was given to the same clause in the Constitution of Ohio, by the Supreme Court of that State, in a recent decision in the case of Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio, N. S. 243. And the reasoning of Chief Justice Rayney on the question I think it impossible to answer."

If the State of Wisconsin had any settled and known practice, designated as assessments, under which each lot-owner was compelled to construct the streets in front of his lot, then the constitution as quoted may well be held to recognize such practice. In this view, however, it is still difficult to discover any "restriction" in a law which perpetuates the arbitrary and unjust custom, and which still permits the whole expense of making the street in front of each lot to be imposed upon it. The only restriction which the law imposes is, that its terms exclude uniformity, equality, and justice, which surely could not be the restriction the constitution designed. Certainly the learned judge shows very clearly that such a law is unwarranted as a legitimate exercise of the taxing power; and as it cannot be warranted under any other power known to constitutional government, the authority to adopt it should not be found in doubtful words. The case of Hill v. Higdon, referred to, is different. There the expense of improving the street was assessed upon the property abutting on the street, in proportion to the foot front. The decision there was, that the constitutional provision that "laws shall be passed taxing by a uniform rule all moneys, &c., and also all real and personal property, according to the true value in money," had no reference to these local assessments, which might still be made, as they were before the constitution was adopted, with reference to the benefits conferred. The case, therefore, showed a rule of apportionment which was made applicable throughout the taxing district, to wit, along the street so far as the improvement extended. The case of State v. City of Portage, 12 Wis. 562, holds that a law authorizing the expense of an improvement to be assessed upon the abutting lots, in proportion to their front or size, would not justify and sustain city action which required the owner of each lot to bear the expense of the improvement in front of it.

It has been often contended that taxation by frontage was in effect a taking of property for the public use, but the courts have held otherwise. People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 410; Allen v. Drew, 44 Vt. 174; Warren v. Henry, 31 Iowa, 31; Washington Avenue, 69 Pa. St. 352, 8 Am. Rep. 235; White v. People, 94 Ill. 604.

to conceive of any other rule of apportionment that would operate so justly and so equally in these cases. There may be difficulty in the detail; difficulty in securing just and impartial assessments; but the principle of such a law would not depend for its soundness upon such considerations.¹

¹ See Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St. 333; Sessions v. Crunk-linton, 20 Ohio St. 349; French v. Kirkland, 1 Paige, 117; Phillips v. Wickham, 1 Paige, 590; Anderson v. Kerns Co., 14 Ind. 199; O'Reiley v. Kankakee Co., 32 Ind. 169; Draining Co. Case, 11 La. Ann. 338; Hagar v. Supervisors of Yolo, 47 Cal. 222; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97. [Re Tuthill, 183 N. Y. 133, 57 N. E. 393, 49 L. R. A. 781.] In Woodruff v. Fisher, 17 Barb. 224, Hand, J., speaking of one of these drainage laws, says: "If the object to be accomplished by this statute may be considered a public improvement, the power of taxation seems to have been sustained upon analogous principles. [Citing People v. Mayor, & Co. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Thomas v. Ireland, 24 Wend. 65; and Livingston v. Mayor, & Co. of New York, 8 Wend. 85, 22 Am. Dec. 622.] But if the object was merely to improve the property of individuals, I think the statute would be void, although it provided for compensation. The water privileges on Indian River cannot be taken or affected in any way solely for the private advantage of others, however numerous the beneficiaries. Several statutes have been passed for draining swamps, but it seems to me that the principle above advanced rests upon natural and constitutional law. The professed object of this statute is to promote public health. And one question that arises is, whether the owners of large tracts of land in a state of nature can be taxed to pay the expense of draining them, by destroying the dams, &c., of other persons away from the drowned lands, and for the purposes of public health. This law proposes to destroy the water power of certain persons against their will, to drain the lands of others, also, for all that appears, against their will; and all at the expense of the latter, for this public good. If this taxation is illegal, no mode of compensation is provided, and all is illegal." "The owners of these lands could not be convicted of maintaining a public nuisance because they did not drain them; even though they were the owners of the lands upon which the obstructions are situated. It does not appear by the act or the complaint that the sickness to be prevented prevails among inhabitants on the wet lands, nor whether these lands will be benefited or injured by draining; and certainly, unless they will be benefited, it would seem to be partial legislation to tax a certain tract of land, for the expense of doing to it what did not improve it, merely because, in a state of nature, it may be productive of sickness. Street assessments are put upon the ground that the land assessed is improved, and its value greatly enhanced." The remarks of Green, J., in Williams v. Mayor, & Co. of Detroit, 2 Mich. 569, 567, may be here quoted: "Every species of taxation, in every mode, is in theory and principle based upon an idea of compensation, benefit, or advantage to the person or property taxed, either directly or indirectly. If the tax is levied for the support of the government and general police of the State, for the education and moral instruction of the citizens, or the construction of works of internal improvement, he is supposed to receive a just compensation in the security which the government affords to his person and property, the means of enjoying his possessions, and their enhanced capacity to contribute to his comfort and gratification, which constitute their value."

It has been held incompetent, however, for a city which has itself created a nuisance on the property of a citizen, to tax him for the expense of removing or abating it. Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 258.

In Egyptian Levee Co. v. Harlin, 27 Mo. 495, it was held that a special assessment for the purpose of reclaiming a district from inundation might properly be laid upon land in proportion to its area, and that the constitutional provision that taxation should be levied on property in Sewers in cities and populous districts are a necessity, not only that the streets may be kept clean and in repair, but to prevent the premises of individuals from becoming nuisances. The expense of these is variously assessed. It may unquestionably be made by benefits and by frontage under proper legislation.¹ In certain classes of cases, it has been customary to call upon the citizen to appear in person and perform service for the State, in the nature of police duties. The burden of improving and repairing the common highways of the country, except in the urban districts, is generally laid upon the people in the form of an assessment of labor. The assessment may be upon each citizen, in proportion to his property; or, in addition to the property assessment, there may be one also by the poll. But though the public burden assumes the form of labor, it is still taxation, and must therefore be levied on some principle of uniformity. But it is a peculiar species of taxation; and the general terms "tax" or "taxation," as employed in the State constitutions, would not generally be understood to include it. It has been decided that the clause in the Constitution of Illinois, that "the mode of levying a tax shall be by valuation, so that every person shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of the property he or she has in his or her possession," did not prevent the levy of poll-taxes in highway labor. "The framers of the constitution intended to direct a uniform mode of taxation on property, and not to proportion to its valuation did not preclude this mode of assessment. The same ruling was made in Louisiana cases. Crowley v. Copley, 2 La. Ann. 329; Yeatman v. Crandall, 11 La. Ann. 220; Wallace v. Shelton, 14 La. Ann. 438; Bishop v. Marks, 15 La. Ann. 147; Richardson v. Morgan, 15 La. Ann. 429. So with reference to assessments for irrigating arid lands. Turlock Irrig. Dist. v. Williams, 70 Cal. 360, 15 Pac. 379. And see McGehee v. Mathis, 21 Ark. 40; Jones v. Boston, 164 Mass. 431; Dady v. Swope, 47 Miss. 367; Alcorn v. Hamer, 38 Miss. 652; Boro v. Phillips Co., 4 Ill. 210. [Expense of street sprinkling may be met by special assessments on the benefit rule. Phillips Academy v. Andover, 175 Mass. 118, 55 N. E. 841, 48 L. R. A. 560.]

¹ In England it is made by benefits. In this country different methods are adopted. See Wright v. Boston, 9 Cosh. 231; Leonidaster v. Connor, 130 Mass. 384, 2 N. E. 960; Cane v. Hartford, 28 Conn. 663; St. Louis v. Osters, 30 Mo. 456;

Rutherford v. Hamilton, 97 Mo. 543, 11 S. W. 249; Stroud v. Philadelphia, 61 Pa. St. 255; Philadelphia v. Tyron, 35 Pa. St. 401; Warner v. Grand Haven, 30 Mich. 24. It may be made according to the value of the lots: Mason v. Spencer, 35 Kan. 512, 11 Pac. 402; Snow v. Fitchburg, 123 Mass. 183; or by area. Keese v. Denver, 10 Col. 112, 15 Pac. 825. It would not be competent, however, to make the assessment for a city sewer by the area upon both in and out lots, as this, from the nature of the case, could not possibly be equal. Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 155. Street sprinkling may be paid for according to the frontage upon the street sprinkled. State v. Reis, 38 Minn. 371, 38 N. W. 97. [Expense of maintenance of sewers, as well as of construction, may be met by special assessments according to benefits. Carson v. Brockton Sewer Comm'rs, 182 U. S. 398, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807, aff. 175 Mass. 242, 59 N. E. 1, 48 L. R. A. 277.]

hibit any other species of taxation, but to leave the legislature the power to impose such other taxes as would be consonant to public justice, and as the circumstances of the country might require. They probably intended to prevent the imposition of an arbitrary tax on property, according to kind and quantity, and without reference to value. The inequality of that mode of taxation was the object to be avoided. We cannot believe they intended that all the public burdens should be borne by those having property in possession, wholly exempting the rest of the community, who, by the same constitution, were made secure in the exercise of the rights of suffrage, and all the immunities of the citizen."¹ And in another case, where an assessment of highway labor is compared with one upon adjacent property for widening a street, — which had been held not to be taxation, as that term was understood in the constitution, — it is said: "An assessment of labor for the repair of roads and streets is less like a tax than is such an assessment. The former is not based upon, nor has it any reference to, property or values owned by the person of whom it is required, whilst the latter is based alone upon the property designated by the law imposing it. Nor is an assessment a capitation tax, as that is a sum of money levied upon each poll. This rate, on the contrary, is a requisition for so many days' labor, which may be commuted in money. No doubt, the number of days levied, and the sum which may be received by commutation, must be uniform within the limits of the district or body imposing the same. This requisition for labor to repair roads is not a tax, and hence this exemption is not repugnant to the constitution."²

It will be apparent from what has already been said, that it is not essential to the validity of taxation that it be levied according to the rules of abstract justice.³ It is only essential that the legislature keep within its proper sphere of action, and do not impose burdens under the name of taxation which are not taxes in fact; and its decision as to what is proper, just, and politic,

¹ Sawyer v. City of Alton, 4 Ill. 127, 130; State v. Halifax, 4 Dev. 345; Amelia v. Stamford, 3 Johns 92; Draining Co. Case, 11 La. Ann. 338, 372.

² Town of Pleasant v. Kost, 29 Ill. 490, 494.

³ Frellsen v. Mahar, 21 La. Ann. 79; People v. Whyler, 41 Cal. 351; Warren v. Henley, 31 Iowa, 21. In this last case, Beck, J., criticises the position taken ante, pp. 730-732, that the cost of a local improvement cannot be imposed on the adjoining premises irrespective of any apportionment, and appears to suppose our views rest upon the injustice of such a proceeding. This is not strictly correct; it may or may not be just in any particular case; but taxation necessarily implies apportionment, and even a just burden cannot be imposed as a tax without it. [See a peculiar case in Baldwin v. Douglas County, 37 Neb. 283, 55 N. W. 875, 20 L. R. A. 850, declaring a doubtful rule.]

must then be final and conclusive. Absolute equality and strict justice are unattainable in tax proceedings. The legislature must be left to decide for itself how nearly it is possible to approximate so desirable a result. It must happen under any tax law that some property will be taxed twice, while other property will escape taxation altogether.¹ Instances will also occur where persons will be taxed as owners of property which has ceased to exist. Any system adopted for taking valuations of property must fix upon a certain time for that purpose, and a party becomes liable to be taxed upon what he possesses at the time the valuing officer calls upon him. Yet changes of property from person to person are occurring while the valuation is going on, and the same parcel of property may be found by the assessor in the hands of two different persons, and be twice assessed, while another parcel in the transfer from hand to hand fails to be assessed at all. So the man who owns property when the assessment is taken may have been deprived of it by accident or other misfortune before the tax becomes payable; but the tax is nevertheless a charge against him. And when the valuation is made but once in a series of years, the occasional hardships and inequalities in consequence of relative changes in the value of property from various causes, becomes sometimes very glaring. Nevertheless, no question of constitutional law is raised by these inequalities and hardships, and the legislative control is complete.²

¹ Duplicate taxation must occasionally take place, however carefully the law may have been framed to avoid it. A tax cannot be set aside on that ground merely. Augusta Bank v. Augusta, 36 Me. 255. It is customary to tax corporations on their capital stock, or on their property, and also the corporators on their shares; and this is entirely admissible. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679; Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Belo v. Commissioners, 82 N. C. 415, 33 Am. Rep. 688; Bradley v. Bander, 36 Ohio St. 28, 38 Am. Rep. 547; Cook v. Burlington, 59 Iowa, 251, 13 N. W. 113; Lee v. Sturges, 46 Ohio St. 153, 19 N. E. 593. The tax on the shares may be collected from the corporation out of dividends. Street Railroad Co. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S. W. 348. But it is said the intent to tax both stock and shares must be clear. Penn. Co. v. Com., — Pa. St. —, 15 Atl. 456. [And see Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, and Bk. of Commerce v. Ten- nessee, 161 U. S. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450, s. c. 163 U. S. 416, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113, where it is held that the language "Said institution . . . shall pay to the State an annual tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 per cent on each share of capital stock, which shall be in lieu of all other taxes" makes the shares in the hands of the stockholders non-taxable. But the bank may be taxed upon its capital stock under that provision. Shelby Co. v. Union & Planters' Bank, 161 U. S. 143, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.] So land may be taxed at its full value, and also the mortgage upon it. People v. Board of Supervisors, 71 Mich. 16, 38 N. W. 633. [But not in California. Germania Trust Co. v. San Francisco, 128 Cal. 589, 61 Pac. 178.]

² In Shaw v. Dennis, 10 Ill. 405, objection was taken to an assessment made for a local improvement under a special statute, that the commissioners, in determining who should be liable to pay the tax, and the amount each should pay,

The legislature must also, except when an unbending rule has been prescribed for it by the constitution, have power to select in its discretion the subjects of taxation.¹ The rule of uniformity requires an apportionment among all the subjects of taxation within the districts; but it does not require that everything which the legislature might make taxable shall be made so in fact. Many exemptions are usually made from taxation from reasons the cogency of which is at once apparent. The agencies of the national government, we have seen, are not taxable by the States; and the agencies and property of States, counties, cities, boroughs, towns, and villages are also exempted by law, (a) be-were to be governed by the last assessment of taxable property in the county. It was insisted that this was an unjust criterion, for a man might have disposed of all the taxable property assessed to him in the last assessment before this tax was actually declared by the commissioners. The court, however, regarded the objection as more refined than practical, and one that, if allowed, would at once annihilate the power of taxation. "In the imposition of taxes, exact and critical justice and equality are absolutely unattainable. If we attempt it, we might have to divide a single year's tax upon a given article of property among a dozen different individuals who owned it at different times during the year, and then be almost as far from the desired end as when we started. The proposition is Utopian. The legislature must adopt some practical system; and there is no more danger of oppression or injustice in taking a former valuation than in relying upon one to be made subsequently." And see People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171.

¹ Wisconsin Cent. R. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37, 8 N. W. 833; Stratton v. Collins, 42 N. J. 553; New Orleans v. People's Bank, 32 La. Ann. 82; New Orleans v. Fourcely, 30 La. Ann. pt. 1, 916; Gibbons v. Dist. Columbia, 116 U. S. 464, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; University v. Skidmore, 87 Tenn. 155, 9 S. W. 802. But if provision for certain exemptions is made by the constitution, no others are valid. Le Duc v. Hastings, 39 Minn. 119 35 N. W. 803. [But it seems that the legislature may exempt lands received from the Federal government in trust to aid in the building of railways without regard to the constitutional provisions concerning exemptions. See Stearns v. Minnesota, 170 U. S. 223, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78, and Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. St. Louis Co., 179 U. S. 202, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124. Held, that an exemption of $5,000 in each estate from the operation of the inheritance tax law is void, as being repugnant to the requirement of uniformity. Re Cope, 191 Pa. 1, 48 Atl. 79, 45 L. R. A. 316. Where the Constitution requires that the legislature "shall provide by law for a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation, and shall prescribe such regulations as shall secure a just valuation," failure on the part of the legislature to prescribe such rules for any class of property (e. g. paid-up and partly paid-up life insurance policies) exempts that class. State Board of Tax Commissioners v. Holliday, 150 Ind. 216, 49 N. E. 14, 42 L. R. A. 828. In Maryland the legislature cannot exempt personal property and improvements upon lands, leaving the bare land values to be assessed. Wells v. Hyattsville Comm'rs, 77 Md. 125, 26 Atl. 357, 29 L. R. A. 89. Oregon legislature cannot exempt railroad property upon condition that State troops and munitions of war be carried free. Hogg v. Mackay, 23 Oreg. 333, 31 Pac. 779, 19 L. R. A. 77, and note upon power of exemption. No exemptions allowed in North Carolina. Reimond v. Tarboro, 106 N. C. 122, 10 S. E. 345, 7 L. R. A. 539.]

(a) [But in Kentucky, a municipal corporation may be taxed upon its franchise to operate water-works. Newport v. Com., 106 Ky. 434, 59 S. W. 245, 45 L. R. A. 518. Public parks and the property used by the fire department are public prop-cause, if any portion of the public expenses was imposed upon them, it must in some form be collected from the citizens before it can be paid. No beneficial object could therefore be accomplished by any such assessment. The property of educational and religious institutions is also generally exempted from taxation by law upon very similar considerations, and from a prevailing belief that it is the policy and the interest of the State to encourage them.¹ If

¹ As in the case of other special privileges, exemptions from taxation are to be strictly construed. Trustees of M. E. Church v. Ellis, 38 Ind. 8; State v. Mills, 34 N. J. 177; Nashville, &c. R. R. Co. v. Hodges, 7 Lea, 663; Railway Co. v. Philadelphia, 101 U. S. 528; Morris v. Royal Arch Masons, 38 Tex. 638, 5 S. W. 519; Yazoo & M. V. R. R. Co. v. Thomas, 35 Miss. 553, 5 So. 108; People v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 674; Commonwealth's Appeal, 127 Pa. St. 435, 17 Atl. 1034; Third Cong. Soc. v. Springfield, 147 Mass. 306, 18 N. E. 69; ante, 236; and many other cases cited in Cooley on Taxation, 146. [Exemption of the capital of a bank does not include property bought in on foreclosure of its stock and stock loan mortgages. Louisiana v. Bd. of Assessors, 167 U. S. 407, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10-9; Bk. of Commerce v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 154, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450; Sheely Co. v. Union & Painters' Bank, 161 U. S. 149, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558. Whether exemption is contract or not, see Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 L. ed. U. S. 805, and note. Exemptions narrowly construed. Ford v. Delta & Pine Land Co., 154 U. S. 602, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Byram v. Marion Co. Commrs., 145 Ind. 210, 44 N. E. 257, 63 L. R. A. 476; Montana Catholic Mission v. L. & C. County, 15 Mont. 559, 55 Pac. 2, 22 L. R. A. 604; Wells v. Savannah, 185 U. S. 331, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637, aff. 107 Ga. 1, 32 S. E. 904. Exemption from taxation of lands granted by Congress until such lands are sold by railroad, extends only to time when equitable title is conveyed, although legal title may not be given until long after. Winona & St. Peter Land Company v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83. Exemptions not so strictly construed as to defeat their purpose. Brown University v. Granger, 19 R. I. 704, 30 Atl. 720, 36 L. R. A. 847. Exemption of shares of stock from taxation exempts the company unless the contrary expressly appears. State v. Heppenheimer, 68 N. J. L. 633, 34 Atl. 1931, 32 L. R. A. 643. For other cases on exemptions, see Commonwealth v. Juniata Coke Co., 157 Pa. 637, 27 Atl. 373, 22 L. R. A. 232; Comm. v. Pottsville Iron & S. Co., 157 Pa. 569, 27 Atl. 371, 22 L. R. A. 228; Ramsey County v. MacAlester College, 61 Minn. 437, 53 N. W. 794, 18 L. R. A. 278; Re Prime's Estate, 136 N. Y. 347, 62 N. E. 1651, 18 L. R. A. 713; State v. Reokuk & W. R. Co., 93 Mo. 30, 12 S. W. 230, 0 L. R. A. 222.] The local authorities cannot be authorized by the legislature to make exemptions. Farnsworth Co. v. Lisbon, 62 Me. 451; Wilson v. Supervisors of Sutter, 47 Cal. 91; State v. Hanibal, &c. R. R. Co., 75 Mo. 298; Austin v. Gas Co., 60 Tex. 180, 7 S. W. 290. See Brewer Brick Co. v. Brewer, 62 Me. 62, 16 Am. Rep. 205; State v. Hudson, &c. Comrs., 37 N. J. 12; Augusta Factory v. Augusta, 85 Ga. 734, 10 S. E. 859. Compare Danville v. Shelton, 75 Va. 325. But they may doubtless be authorized to decide upon the facts what persons or property come within the rules of exemption prescribed by the legislature. It has erty and are exempt. Owensboro v. Com., 165 Ky. 344, 49 S. W. 320, 44 L. R. A. 202. But property not used for public purposes is not within the rule. San Diego v. Linda Vista Irrigation Dist., 198 Cal. 186, 41 Pac. 251, 35 L. R. A. 33. Nor is public property in private hands, even though used for public purposes. State v. Cooley, 62 Minn. 153, 64 N. W. 376, 29 L. R. A. 777. Where the State cannot be sued, State property is necessarily exempt from special assessments. Mt. Vernon v. People, 117 Ill. 353, 35 N. E. 503, 23 L. R. A. 807, and note on municipal assessments of State property. State university with appurtenant property is exempt. Auditor General v. University, 86 Mich. 407, 47 N. W. 440, 10 L. R. A. 876, and note.]

the State may cause taxes to be levied from motives of charity or gratitude, so for the like reasons it may exempt the objects of charity and gratitude from taxation.¹ Property is sometimes released from taxation by contract between the State and corporations, (a) and specified occupations are sometimes charged with been generally held that an exemption from taxation would not exempt the property from being assessed for a local improvement. Matter of Mayor, &c., 11 Johns. 77; Baltimore v. Cemetery Co., 7 Md. 517; La Fayette v. Orphan Asylum, 4 La. Ann. 1; Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa. St. 69; Le Fever v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 586; Lockwood v. St. Louis, 24 Mo. 20; Broadway Baptist Church v. McAttee, 8 Bush, 508, 8 Am. Rep. 480; Universalist Society v. Providence, 6 R. I. 235; Patterson v. Society, &c., 24 N. J. 386; Cincinnati College v. State, 19 Ohio, 110; Brewster v. Hough, 10 N. H. 138; Seymour v. Hartford, 21 Conn. 481; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; Peoria v. Kidder, 26 Ill. 351; Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 569; Seamen's Friend Society v. Boston, 116 Mass. 181; Orange, &c. R. R. Co. v. Alexandria, 17 Gratt. 176; Lima v. Cemetery Ass., 42 Ohio St. 128; State v. Kansas City, 89 Mo. 34, 14 S. W. 515; Chicago v. Baptist Union, 115 Ill. 245, 2 N. E. 254; [Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 102 Mich. 274, 60 N. W. 767, 29 L. R. A. 195; Board of Improvement v. School Dist., 56 Ark. 354, 19 S. W. 969, 16 L. R. A. 418; Zabel v. Louisville B. O. Home, 92 Ky. 89, 17 S. W. 212, 13 L. R. A. 668; Atlanta v. First Pr. Church, 86 Ga. 730, 13 S. E. 252, 12 L. R. A. 852, and note; Home, &c. v. Wilkinsburg, 131 Pa. 103, 18 Atl. 937, 6 L. R. A. 531; Adams County v. Quincy, 180 Ill. 566, 22 N. E. 624, 6 L. R. A. 155, and note; note to 4 L. R. A. 171.] Contra, Trustees M. E. Ch. v. Atlanta, 76 Ga. 181, and see Swan Point Cem. v. Tripp, 14 R. I. 109. [Upon exemptions and special assessments, see Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Decatur, 126 Ill. 92, 18 N. E. 315, 1 L. R. A. 613, and note, s. c. 147 U. S. 190, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293, sustaining the rule that "exemption from all taxation of every kind" does not exempt from special assessments for street improvements. See also San Diego v. Linda Vista Irrigation Dist., 108 Cal. 189, 41 Pac. 291, 35 L. R. A. 33, and note.

Upon what are public improvements, see Re Kingman, 153 Mass. 568, 27 N. E. 778, 12 L. R. A. 417, and note. Upon whether exemption is a contract or not, see note to 22 L. ed. U. S. 805; exemption of church property, note to 29 L. ed. U. S. 680. And in an exemption a reservation of limited taxing power to "municipal corporations" extends to municipalities subsequently incorporated. Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Wright, 164 U. S. 327, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.] Land held in trust for the State is exempt. People v. Trustees of Schools, 118 Ill. 52, 7 N. E. 262. The customary constitutional inhibition of any law respecting an establishment of religion, &c., is not violated by an exemption of church property from taxation. Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46 Iowa, 275, 26 Am. Rep. 138. [Where a school admits pupils of all creeds, races, colors, and conditions without discrimination, it is a public charity, even though owned by a private corporation, and it may lawfully be exempted from taxation. White v. Smith, 183 Pa. 222, 43 L. R. A. 498, 42 Atl. 125. So with college buildings used exclusively as dormitories and boarding halls for the accommodation of students. Yale University v. New Haven, 71 Conn. 316, 42 Atl. 57, 43 L. R. A. 490. Exemption will cover income-producing property if income is devoted solely to charitable purposes, and free education of female orphan children is such purpose. Trustees of Kentucky F. O. School v. Louisville, 109 Ky. 470, 36 S. W. 921, 40 L. R. A. 119; contra, on first proposition, Portland H. Benev. Society v. Kelly, 28 Ore. 173, 43 Pac. 3, 30 L. R. A. 167; American S. S. Union v. Taylor, 161 Pa. 367, 29 Atl. 23, 28 L. R. A. 695.]

¹ But it is not competent to grant exemptions from taxation based on sex or age, — e. g., widows, maids, and female minors, — and an act attempting to make such exemptions is void. State v. Indianapolis, 69 Ind. 273, 35 Am. Rep. 223.

(a) [Upon exemption from taxation, see note to 22 L. ed. U. S. 805.]

specific taxes in lieu of all taxation of their property. A broad field is here opened to legislative discretion. As matter of State policy it might also be deemed proper to make general exemption of sufficient of the tools of trade or other means of support, to enable the poor man, not yet a pauper, to escape becoming a public burden. There is still ample room for apportionment after all such exemptions have been made. The constitutional requirement of equality and uniformity only extends to such objects of taxation as the legislature shall determine to be properly subject to the burden.¹ The power to determine the persons and the objects to be taxed is trusted exclusively to the legislative department;² but over all those objects the burden must be spread or it will be unequal and unlawful as to such as are selected to make the payment.³

¹ State v. North, 27 Mo. 464; People v. Colman, 8 Cal. 46; Durach's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 491; Brewer Brick Co. v. Brewer, 82 Me. 62, 13 Am. Rep. 395. [Crafts v. Ray, — R. I. —, 46 Atl. 1043, 49 L. R. A. 604. See also Maine Water Co. v. Waterville, 93 Me. 586, 45 Atl. 830, 49 L. R. A. 294.]

² Wilson v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 4 E. D. Smith, 675; Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 243; State v. Parker, 33 N. J. 313; State v. County Court, 19 Ark. 309. Classes of property as well as classes of persons may be exempted. Butler's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 448; Sioux City v. School District, 55 Iowa, 150, 7 N. W. 488. Notwithstanding a requirement that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform," the legislature may levy specific State taxes on corporations, and exempt them from municipal taxation. So held on the ground of stare decisis. Kneeland v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 464. See Ill. Cent. R. R. Co. v. McLean Co., 17 Ill. 231; New Orleans v. Savings Bank, 31 La. Ann. 823; Hunsaker v. Wright, 30 Ill. 146; Portland v. Water Co., 67 Me. 135.

³ In the case of Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242, a somewhat peculiar exemption was made. It appears that several lots in the city upon which a new hotel was being constructed, of the value of from $150,000 to $200,000, were purposely omitted to be taxed, under the direction of the Common Council, "in view of the great public benefit which the construction of the hotel would be to the city." Paine, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says: "I have no doubt this exemption originated in motives of generosity and public spirit. And perhaps the same motives should induce the taxpayers of the city to submit to the slight increase of the tax thereby imposed on each, without questioning its strict legality. But they cannot be compelled to. No man is obliged to be more generous than the law requires, but each may stand strictly upon his legal rights. That this exemption was illegal, was scarcely contested. I shall therefore make no effort to show that the Common Council had no authority to suspend or repeal the general law of the State, declaring what property shall be taxable and what exempt. But the important question presented is, whether, conceding it to have been entirely unauthorized, it vitiates the tax assessed upon other property. And upon this question I think the following rule is established, both by reason and authority. Omissions of this character, arising from mistakes of fact, erroneous computations, or errors of judgment on the part of those to whom the execution of the taxing laws is entrusted, do not necessarily vitiate the whole tax. But intentional disregard of those laws, in such manner as to impose illegal taxes on those who are assessed, does. The first part of the rule is necessary to enable taxes to be collected at all. The execution of these laws is necessarily entrusted to men, and men are fallible, liable to frequent mistakes of fact and errors of judgment. If such errors, on the part of those who

In some of the States it has been decided that the particular provisions inserted in their constitutions to insure uniformity are so worded as to forbid exemptions. Thus the late Constitution of Illinois provided that "the General Assembly shall provide for levying a tax by valuation, so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his or her property."¹ Under this it was held that exemption by the legislature of persons residing in a city from a tax levied to repair roads beyond the city limits, by township authority, — the city being embraced within the township which, for that purpose, was the taxing district, — was void.² It is to be observed of these cases, however, that they would have fallen within the general principle laid down in Knowlton v. Supervisors of Rock Co.,³ and the legislative acts under consideration might, if that case were followed, have been declared void on general principles, irrespective of the peculiar wording of the constitution. These cases, notwithstanding, as well as others in Illinois, recognize the power in the legisare attempting in good faith to perform their duties, should vitiate the whole tax, no tax could ever be collected. And therefore, though they sometimes increase improperly the burdens of those paying taxes, that part of the rule which holds the tax not thereby avoided is absolutely essential to a continuance of government. But it seems to me clear that the other part is equally essential to the just protection of the citizen. If those executing these laws may deliberately disregard them, and assess the whole tax upon a part only of those who are liable to pay it, and have it still a legal tax, then the laws afford no protection, and the citizen is at the mercy of those officers, who, by being appointed to execute the laws, would seem to be thereby placed beyond legal control. I know of no considerations of public policy or necessity that can justify carrying the rule to that extent. And the fact that in this instance the disregard of the law proceeded from good motives ought not to affect the decision of the question. It is a rule of law that is to be established; and, if established here because the motives were good, it would serve as a precedent where the motives were bad, and the power usurped for purposes of oppression," pp. 812-815. See also Henry v. Chester, 15 Vt. 400; State v. Collector of Jersey City, 24 N. J. 108; Insurance Co. v. Yard, 17 Pa. St. 331;

Williams v. School District, 21 Pick. 75; Hersey v. Supervisors of Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 185; Crosby v. Lyon, 37 Cal. 242; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 142; Adams v. Beman, 10 Kan. 37; Brewer Brick Co. v. Brewer, 62 Me. 62, 10 Am. Rep. 335. But it seems that an omission of property from the tax-roll by the assessor, unintentionally, through want of judgment and lack of diligence and business habits, will not invalidate the roll. Dean v. Gleason, 16 Wis. 1; Ricketts v. Spraker, 77 Ind. 371. In Seefeld v. Watkins, 22 Ill. 66, and Merritt v. Farrie, 22 Ill. 393, it appears to be decided that, even in the case of intentional omissions the tax-roll would not be invalidated, but the parties injured would be left to their remedy against the assessor. See also Duncan v. Chicago, 55 Ill. 559; State v. Maxwell, 27 La. Ann. 722; New Orleans v. Fourchy, 30 La. Ann. pt. 1, 910. Compare Francis v. Railroad Co., 19 Kan. 303.

¹ Art. 9, § 2, of the old Constitution.

² O'Kane v. Treat, 25 Ill. 517; Hunsaker v. Wright, 30 Ill. 143. See also Trustees v. McConnell, 12 Ill. 128; Madison County v. People, 58 Ill. 446; Danham v. Chicago, 55 Ill. 517; Louisville, &c. R. R. Co. v. State, 8 Heisk. 609, 744. [People's Loan & H. Ass'n v. Keith, 153 Ill. 609, 30 N. E. 1077, 28 L. R. A. 65.]

³ 9 Wis. 410. See ante, p. 723.

lature to commute for a tax, or to contract for its release for a consideration. The Constitution of Ohio provides¹ that "laws shall be passed taxing by a uniform rule all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint-stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money." Under this section it was held not competent for the legislature to provide that lands within the limits of a city should not be taxed for any city purpose, except roads, unless the same were laid off into town lots and recorded as such, or into out-lots not exceeding five acres each.² Upon this case we should make the same remark as upon the Illinois cases above referred to. The Constitution of California provides that "all property in the State shall be taxed in proportion to its value;" and this is held to preclude all exemptions of private property when taxes are laid for either general or local purposes.³

It is, moreover, essential to valid taxation that the taxing officers be able to show legislative authority for the burden they assume to impose in every instance. Taxes can only be voted by the people's representatives. They are in every instance an appropriation by the people to the government, which the latter is to expend in furnishing the people protection, security, and such facilities for enjoyment as it properly pertains to government to provide. This principle is a chief corner-stone of Anglo-Saxon liberty; and it has operated not only as an important check on government, in preventing extravagant expenditures, as well as unjust and tyrannical action, but it has been an important guaranty of the right of private property. Property is secure from the lawless grasp of the government, if the means of existence of the government depend upon the voluntary grants of those who own the property. Our ancestors coupled their grants with demands for the redress of grievances: but in modern times the surest protection against grievances has been found to be to vote specific taxes for the specific purposes to which the people's representatives are willing they shall be devoted;⁴ and the persons exercising the functions of government must then become petitioners if they desire money for other objects. And then these grants are only made periodically. Only a few things, such as the salaries of officers, the interest upon the public debt, the support of schools, and the like, are provided for by permanent

¹ Art. 12 § 2.

² People v. McCreery, 84 Cal. 432;

³ Zanesville v. Auditor of Muskingum County, 5 Ohio St. 589. See also Fields v. Comrs of Highland Co., 36 Ohio St. 476.

Crosby v. Lyon, 37 Cal. 242; People v. Eddy, 43 Cal. 331, 13 Am. Rep. 143.

⁴ Hoboken v. Phinney, 29 N. J. 65.

laws; and not always is this done. The government is dependent from year to year on the periodical vote of supplies. And this vote will come from representatives who are newly chosen by the people, and who will be expected to reflect their views regarding the public expenditures. State taxation, therefore, is not likely to be excessive or onerous, except when the people, in times of financial ease, excitement, and inflation, have allowed the incurring of extravagant debts, the burden of which remains after the excitement has passed away.

But it is as true of the political divisions of the State as it is of the State at large, that legislative authority must be shown for every levy of taxes.¹ The power to levy taxes by these divisions comes from the State. The State confers it, and at the same time exercises a parental supervision by circumscribing it. Indeed, on general principles, the power is circumscribed by the rule that the taxation by the local authorities can only be for local purposes.² Neither the State nor the local body can authorize the imposition of a tax on the people of a county or town for an object in which the people of the county or town are not concerned. And by some of the State constitutions it is expressly required that the State, in creating municipal corporations, shall restrict their power of taxation over the subjects within their control. These requirements, however, impose an obligation upon the legislature which only its sense of duty can compel it to perform.³ It is evident that if the legislature fail to enact the restrictive legislation, the courts have no power to compel such action.

¹ State v. Charleston, 2 Speers, 623; Columbia v. Guest, 3 Head, 413; Bangs v. Snow, 1 Mass. 181; Clark v. Davenport, 14 Iowa, 434; Burlington v. Kellar, 18 Iowa, 59; Mays v. Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 258; Richmond v. Daniel, 14 Gratt. 385; Simmons v. Wilson, 66 N. C. 335; Lott v. Ross, 38 Ala. 159; Lisbon v. Bath, 21 N. H. 319; Daily v. Swope, 47 Miss. 367. The same rule applies to laying special assessments. Augusta v. Murphy, 79 Ga. 191, 3 S. E. 329; Vaughn v. Ashland, 71 Wis. 502, 37 N. W. 809. [And all conditions precedent which may have been prescribed by law for the levy of special assessments must be strictly complied with. They are jurisdictional, and their omission makes the levy void. Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98, aff. 12 Utah, 479, 43 Pac. 119. As to equitable relief against illegal taxation, see note to this case in 42 L. ed. U. S. 445.] Without express authority a city cannot tax its own bonds. Macon v. Jones, 67 Ga. 482. Where a city has power to issue securities it has implied power to tax to meet them, unless there is a clear limitation upon its power so to do. Quincy v. Jackson, 113 U. S. 332, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544. And, if a city is dissolved, the legislature may tax for like purpose, although thus it lays a higher tax than it has the right, under ordinary circumstances, to impose. Hare v. Kennerly, 83 Ala. 608, 3 So. 581.

² Foster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 916. See ante, p. 312.

³ In Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 243, 248, Rayney, J., says of this provision: "A failure to perform this duty may be of very serious import, but lays no foundation for judicial correction." And see Maloy v. Marietta, 11 Ohio St. 339.

Whether in any case a charter of incorporation could be held void on the ground that it conferred unlimited powers of taxation, is a question that could not well arise, as a charter is probably never granted which does not impose some restrictions; and where that is the case, it must be inferred that those were all the restrictions the legislature deemed important, and that therefore the constitutional duty of the legislature has been performed.¹

When, however, it is said to be essential to valid taxation that

¹ The Constitution of Ohio requires the legislature to provide by general laws for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, &c. The general law authorizing the expense of grading and paving streets to be assessed on the grounds bounding and abutting on the street in proportion to the street front, was regarded as being passed in attempted fulfilment of the constitutional duty, and therefore valid. The chief restriction in the case was, that it did not authorize assessment in any other or different mode from what had been customary. Northern Indiana R. R. Co. v. Connelly, 10 Ohio St. 159. The statute also provided that no improvement or repair of a street or highway, the cost of which was to be assessed upon the owners, should be directed without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members elected to the municipal council, or unless two-thirds of the owners to be charged should petition in writing therefor. In Maloy v. Marietta, 11 Ohio St. 632, 639, Peck, J., says: "This may be said to be a very imperfect protection; and in some cases will doubtless prove to be so; but it is calculated and designed, by the publicity or the publicity it requires, to prevent any flagrant abuses of the power. Such is plainly its object; and we know of no rights conferred upon courts thus to interfere with the exercise of a legislative discretion which the constitution has delegated to the law-making power." And see Weeks v. Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 242. The Constitution of Michigan requires the legislature, in providing for the incorporation of cities and villages, to "restrict their power of taxation," &c. The Detroit Metropolitan Police Law made it the duty of the Board of Police to prepare and submit to the city controller, on or before the first day of May in each year, an estimate in detail of the cost and expense of maintaining the police department, and the Common Council was required to raise the same by general tax. These provisions, it was claimed, were in conflict with the constitution, because no limit was fixed by them to the estimate that might be made. In People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481, 498, the court say: "Whether this provision of the constitution can be regarded as mandatory in a sense that would make all charters of municipal corporation and acts relating thereto which are wanting in this limitation invalid, we do not feel called upon to decide in this case, since it is clear that a limitation upon taxation is fixed by the act before us. The constitution has not prescribed the character of the restriction which shall be imposed, and from the nature of the case it was impossible to do more than to make it the duty of the legislature to set some bounds to a power so liable to abuse. A provision which, like the one complained of, limits the power of taxation to the actual expenses as estimated by the governing board, after first limiting the power of the board to incur expense within narrow limits, is as much a restriction as if it confined the power to a certain percentage upon taxable property, or to a sum proportioned to the number of inhabitants in the city. Whether the restriction fixed upon would as effectually guard the citizen against abuse as any other which might have been established was a question for the legislative department of the government, and does not concern us on this inquiry." [Where townships are mere adjuncts or branches of county governments, as in Missouri, the township tax rate is a part of the rate to which the county is limited. State v. Mo. P. R. Co., 123 Mo. 72, 27 S. W. 367, 26 L. R. A. 36.]

there be legislative authority for every tax that is laid, it is not meant that the legislative department of the State must have passed upon the necessity and propriety of every particular tax; but those who assume to seize the property of the citizen for the satisfaction of the tax must be able to show that that particular tax is authorized, either by general or special law. The power inherent in the government to tax lies dormant until a constitutional law has been passed calling it into action, and is then vitalized only to the extent provided by the law. Those, therefore, who act under such a law should be careful to keep within its limits, lest they remove from their acts the shield of its protection. While we do not propose to enter upon any attempt to point out the various cases in which a failure to obey strictly the requirements of the law will render the proceedings void, — in regard to which a diversity of decision would be met with, — we think we shall be safe in saying that, in cases of this description, which propose to dispossess the citizen of his property against his will, not only will any excess of taxation beyond what the law allows render the proceedings void, but any failure to comply with such requirements of the law as are made for the protection of the owner's interest will also render them void. (a)

There are several reported cases in which the taxes levied were slightly in excess of legislative power, and in which it was urged in support of the proceedings, that the law ought not to take notice of such unimportant matters; but the courts have held that an excess of jurisdiction is never unimportant. In one case in Maine, the excess was eighty-seven cents only in a tax of $225.75, but it was deemed sufficient to render the proceedings void. Said Mellen, Ch. J., delivering the opinion of the court: "It is contended that the sum of eighty-seven cents is such a trifle as to fall within the range of the maxim de minimis, &c.; but if not, that still this small excess does not vitiate the assessment. The maxim is so vague in itself as to form a very unsafe ground of proceeding or judging; and it may be almost as difficulty to apply it as a rule in pecuniary concerns as to the interest which a witness has in the event of a cause; and in such case it cannot apply. Any interest excludes him. The assessment was therefore unauthorized and void. If the line which the legislature has established be once passed, we know of no boundary to the discretion of the assessors."¹ The same view has been taken by the Supreme Court of Michigan, by which the opinion is expressed that the maxim de minimis lex non curat should be applied with great caution to proceedings of this character, and that the excess could not be held unimportant and overlooked where, as in that case, each dollar of legal tax was perceptibly increased thereby.² Perhaps, however, a slight excess, not the result of intention, but of erroneous calculations, may be overlooked, in view of the great difficulty in making all such calculations mathematically correct, and the consequent impolicy of requiring entire freedom from all errors.³

(a) [Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98, aff. 12 Utah, 475, 43 Pac. 119; and see many cases cited in note in 42 L. ed. U. S. 445. See Farnsworth Lumber Co. v. Fairley, — Miss. —, 28 So. 529, (April 30, 1900) for an assessment held void for lack of opportunity to taxpayers to object to it, right to object being secured by statute.]

What method shall be devised for the collection of a tax, the legislature must determine, subject only to such rules, limitations, and restraints as the constitution of the State may have imposed.⁴ Very summary methods are sanctioned by practice and precedent.⁵

¹ Huse v. Merriam, 2 Me. 375. See Joyner v. School District, 3 Cush. 567; Kemper v. McClelland, 19 Ohio, 308; School District v. Merriam, 12 Conn. 407; Ewell v. Shaw, 1 Me. 359; Wells v. Burbank, 17 N. H. 333; Kinsworthy v. Mitchell, 21 Ark. 145.

² Case v. Dean, 16 Mich. 12. And see Commonwealth v. Savings Bank, 5 Allen, 428; Buckhall v. Story, 30 Cal. 67; Drew v. Davis, 19 Vt. 506; Wells v. Burbank, 17 N. H. 333; Axtell v. Gerlach, 67 Cal. 483, 8 Pac. 34.

³ This was the view taken by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin in Kelley v. Corson, 8 Wis. 132 where an excess of $8.61 in a tax of $6,654.57 was held not to be fatal; it appearing not to be the result of intention, and the court thinking that an accidental error no greater than this ought to be disregarded. See also O'Grady v. Barnhusel, 23 Cal. 287; State v. Newark, 25 N. J. 355; Harvard v. Day, 62 Miss. 748. In Iowa the statute requires a sale to be upheld if any portion of the tax was legal. See Parker v. Sexton, 20 Iowa, 421. If a part of a tax only is illegal, the balance will be sustained if capable of being distinguished. O'Kane v. Trent, 25 Ill. 557; People v. Nichols, 49 Ill. 517. See State v. Plainfield, 38 N. J. L. 38. [That unintentional error arising from making an exemption mistakenly believed to be authorized by law will not vitiate, see McTwiggan v. Hunter, 19 N. I. 295, 38 Atl. 5, 29 L. R. A. 520.]

⁴ The following methods are resorted to: Suit at law; arrest of the person taxed, distress of goods, and sale if necessary; detention of goods, in the case of imports, until payment is made; sale or leasing of land taxed; imposition of penalties for non-payment; forfeiture of property; making payment a condition precedent to the exercise of some legal right, such the institution of a suit, or voting at elections, or to the carrying on of a business; requiring stamps on papers, documents, manufactured articles, &c. In Prentice v. Weston, 111 N. Y. 420, 18 N. E. 720; it is held not an unwarrantable interference with private property to forbid cutting of timber on land on which a tax remains unpaid, when the chief value of the land lay in the timber. A village occupation tax cannot be enforced by fine and imprisonment. State v. Green, 27 Neb. 64, 42 N. W. 913. [In case of gross under-assessment, the assessment may be corrected in manner prescribed by law, and the taxes based on such correction collected from the present owner of the property. Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483, aff. 72 Minn. 519, 75 N. W. 718. Upon reassessment of taxes, see note to 5 L. R. A. 892. Lands may be forfeited to State for non return to assessor, if statute so provides. State v. Sponaugle, 45 W. Va. 415, 32 S. E. 253, 43 L. R. A. 727.]

⁵ See Henderson's Distilled Spirits, 14 Wall. 44; Weimer v. Bunbury, 38 Mich. 201; Lydecker v. Palisade Land Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 415; Springer v. United States,

Wherever a tax is invalid because of excess of authority, or because the requisites in tax proceedings which the law has provided for the protection of the taxpayer are not complied with, any sale of property based upon it will be void also. The owner is not deprived of his property by "the law of the land," if it is taken to satisfy an illegal tax. And if property is sold for the satisfaction of several taxes, any one of which is unauthorized, or for any reason illegal, the sale is altogether void.¹ And the

102 U. S. 580; In re Hackett, 53 Vt. 234; Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 639, 9 N. E. 872; note, 565, note. [Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 494, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925. See notes on power of State to tax, 10 L. ed. U. S. 1022; sale of land for taxes, 4 L. ed. U. S. 515.]

¹ This has been repeatedly held. Ellwell v. Snow, 1 Me. 339; Lady v. Davis, 4 Mich. 149; Bangs v. Snow, 1 Mass. 180; Thurston v. Little, 3 Mass. 429; Dillingham v. Snow, 5 Mass. 547; Stetson v. Kempton, 13 Mass. 283; Libby v. Burnham, 15 Mass. 144; Hayden v. Foster, 13 Pick. 492; Torrey v. Milbury, 21 Pick. 64; Alford v. Colby, 26 Pick. 418; Drew v. Davis, 10 Vt. 593; Doe v. McQuilkin, 8 Blackf. 535; Kemper v. McJelland, 19 Ohio, 588; Peterson v. Kirtland, 65 Mass. 33, 3 So. 65, 3 So. 824; [Dever v. Cornwell, 10 N. D. 123, 86 N. W. 227; Sheets v. Paine, 10 N. D. 163, 86 N. W. 117; Nehasane Park Assn. v. Lloyd, 167 N. Y. 431, 69 N. E. 741.] This is upon the ground that, the sale being based upon both the legal and the illegal tax, it is manifestly impossible afterwards to make the distinction, so that the act shall be partly a trespass and partly innocent. [But see Southworth v. Edwards, 152 Mass. 263, 25 N. E. 176, 3 L. R. A. 118.] But when a party asks relief in equity before a sale against the collection of taxes, a part of which are legal, he will be required first to pay that part, or at least to so distinguish it from the rest that process of injunction can be so framed as to leave the legal taxes to be enforced; and failing in this, his bill will be dismissed. Conway v. Waverley, 15 Mich. 257; Palmer v. Napoleon, 16 Mich. 175; Hersey v. Supervisors of Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 185; Bond v. Kenosha, 17 Wis. 284; Myrick v. La Crosse, 17 Wis.

442; Roseberry v. Huff, 27 Ind. 12; Montgomery v. Wasem, 118 Ind. 343, 15 N. E. 785, 19 N. E. 184; Com'r's Allegany Co. v. Union Min. Co., 61 Md. 545; Brown v. School Dist., 12 Oreg. 345, 7 Pac. 357; Gage v. Caraher, 125 Ill. 447, 17 N. E. 777. Compare Solomon v. Osceola, 77 Mich. 365, 43 N. W. 900; [Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Altgeld v. San Antonio, 81 Tex. 456, 17 S. W. 75, 13 L. R. A. 383.]

As to the character and extent of the irregularities which should defeat the proceedings for the collection of taxes, we could not undertake to speak here. We think the statement in the text, that a failure to comply with any such requirements of the law as are made for the protection of the owner's interest will prove fatal to a tax sale, will be found abundantly sustained by the authorities, while many of the cases go still further in making irregularities fatal. It appears to us that where the requirement of the law which has failed of observance was one which had regard simply to the due and orderly conduct of the proceedings, or to the protection of the public interest, as against the officer, so that to the taxpayer it is immaterial whether it was complied with or not, a failure to comply ought not to be recognized as a foundation for complaint by him. But those safeguards which the legislature has thrown around the estates of citizens to protect them against unequal, unjust, and extortionate taxation, the courts are not at liberty to do away with by declaring them non-essential. To hold the requirement of the law in regard to them directory only, and not mandatory, is in effect to exercise a dispensing power over the laws. Mr. Blackwell, in his treatise on Tax Titles, has collected the cases on this subject industriously, and perhaps we shall be pardoned for saying also with general rule is applicable here, that where property is taken under statutory authority in derogation of common right, every requisite of the statute having a semblance of benefit to the owner must be complied with, or the proceeding will be ineffectual.¹

a perceptible leaning against that species of conveyance. As illustrating how far the courts will go, in some cases, to sustain irregular taxation, where officers have acted in good faith, reference is made to Kelley v. Corson, 11 Wis. 1; Hershey v. Supervisors of Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 125. See also Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 479, where the court endeavors to lay down a general rule as to the illegalities which should render a tax roll invalid. A party bound to pay a tax, or any portion thereof, cannot get title to the land by neglecting payment and allowing a sale to be made at which he becomes the purchaser. McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 539. See Burier v. Porter, 13 Mich. 292; Cooley on Taxation, 500 et seq. [See on sale of land for taxes, note to 4 L. ed. U. S. 515; injunction to restrain collection of tax, when granted, note to 20 L. ed. U. S. 65, and one to 22 L. R. A. 669; recovery of taxes illegally assessed, note to 21 L. ed. U. S. 63; tax as cloud on title, Olin v. Woodruff, 51 Fla. 160, 12 So. 227, 22 L. R. A. 639, and note. Upon when taxes illegally assessed can be recovered back, see note to 21 L. ed. U. S. 63. Upon sale of land for taxes, note to 4 L. ed. U. S. 515. Where lands are forfeited to the State for non-payment of taxes, and are thereafter assessed for taxation in the name of an assumed or non-existent owner, and then sold for non-payment of taxes based upon such assessment, the purchaser gets no valid title. Rich v. Braxton, 158 U. S. 375, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096. Assessment in name of a dead man is void. Ty v. Perea, 10 N. M. 362, 62 Pac. 1064; Milwaukee v. Gallagher, 104 La. 713, 29 So. 367. But since 1890 assessment may be in name of registered owner, whether alive or dead. Owner must see that proper change in registration is made when he comes into the title. Geddes v. Cunningham, 104 La. 805, 29 So. 128. Where land is assessed to holder of legal title and also to holder of equitable title, and latter pays tax assessed, sale for non-payment of tax assessed against former is void. Bogges

v. Scott, 48 W. Va. 316, 37 S. E. 661. And where a new map has been made, and the landowner in ignorance thereof reports his lands for assessment under the descriptions of the old map, giving the quantities correctly, and the assessor assumes that the lot-numbers are according to the new map, and modifies the quantities reported to make them conform to the new map, and the owner in ignorance of such modification pays all taxes assessed against him, the sale of the plots not covered by the assessor's list is invalid for mistake. Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424. Sale for unpaid taxes is void if at time tax was due owner appeared before proper officer and offered to pay his tax and did pay all that the officer stated as the amount of tax, although he erroneously understated it. Gould v. Sullivan, 84 Wis. 659, 54 N. W. 1013, 20 L. R. A. 487, and note. And redemption is valid if the person redeeming pays all that the proper officer states is due, although the officer erroneously states the sum too small. Hintrager v. Mahony, 78 Iowa, 537, 43 N. W. 522, 6 L. R. A. 50, and note. State cannot tax lands belonging to United States, and a sale based upon tax levied upon such lands is void. Young v. Charnquist, 114 Iowa, 116, 86 N. W. 205.]

¹ See ante, pp. 109-114. Also Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 485; Westfall v. Preston, 49 N. Y. 349, 353; Stratton v. Collins, 43 N. J. 563; Cooley on Taxation, c. 15. [See also Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98, aff. 12 Utah, 476, 43 Pac. 119; also extensive note upon equitable relief against illegal taxation, 42 L. ed. U. S. 445. Thirty days' publication of notice of sale of lands for taxes is not insufficient to constitute due process of law. Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; s. c. 47 La. Ann. 1473, 17 So. 868. Necessity of strict compliance, both in assessment and in subsequent proceedings. Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508, and note to 4 L.

ed. U. S. 518; Gage v. Bani, 141 U. S. 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Stout v. Mastin, 139 U. S. 151, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Martin v. Barbour, 140 U. S. 634, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Bird v. Benlisa, 142 U. S. 664, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Smith v. Callanan, 103 Iowa, 218, 72 N. W. 513, 42 L. R. A. 452; Power v. Bowdle, 3 N. D. 107, 64 N. W. 494, 21 L. R. A. 328; Budge v. Grand Forks, 1 N. D. 302, 47 N. W. 320, 10 L. R. A. 165; Dever v. Cornwell, 10 N. D. 123, 86 N. W. 227; Thweatt v. Howard, 68 Ark. 428, 59 S. W. 784; State v. Dugan, 105 Tenn. 245, 58 S. W. 256; Condon v. Galbraith, 106 Tenn. 14, 58 S. W. 916; Olson v. Phillips, 80 Minn. 339, 83 N. W. 169. Absence of "$" before number intended to show amount of tax is fatal. Russell v. Chittenden, 123 Mich. 546, 82 N. W. 204; Norris v. Hall, 124 Mich. 170, 82 N. W. 832.]

It should be stated that in Iowa, under legislation favorable to tax titles, the courts go further in sustaining them than in perhaps any other State. Reference is made to the following cases: Eldridge v. Keuhl, 27 Iowa, 180; McCready v. Sexton, 29 Iowa, 356; Hurley v. Powell, 31 Iowa, 64; Rima v. Cowan, 31 Iowa, 125; Thomas v. Stickie, 32 Iowa, 71; Henderson v. Oliver, 32 Iowa, 512; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32 Iowa, 461; Ware v. Little, 35 Iowa, 234; Jeffrey v. Brokaw, 35 Iowa, 505; Genther v. Fuller, 36 Iowa, 604; Leavitt v. Watson, 37 Iowa, 93; Phelps v. Meade, 41 Iowa, 470. It may be useful to compare these cases with Kimball v. Rosendale, 42 Wis. 407, and Silsbee v. Stockle, 44 Mich. 561, 7 N. W. 180, 367.

CHAPTER XV.

THE EMINENT DOMAIN.

EVERY sovereignty possesses buildings, lands, and other property, which it holds for the use of its officers and agents, to enable them to perform their public functions. It may also have property from the rents, issues, and profits, or perhaps the sale, of which it is expected the State will derive a revenue. Such property constitutes the ordinary domain of the State. In respect to its use, enjoyment, and alienation, the same principles apply which govern the management and control of like property of individuals; and the State is in fact but an individual proprietor, whose title and rights are to be tested, regulated, and governed by the same rules that would have pertained to the ownership of the same property by any of its citizens. There are also cases in which property is peculiarly devoted to the general use and enjoyment of the individual citizens who compose the organized society, but the regulation and control of which are vested in the State by virtue of its sovereignty. The State may be the proprietor of this property, and retain it for the common use, as a means of contributing to the general health, comfort, or happiness of the people; but generally it is not strictly the owner, but rather the governing and supervisory trustee of the public rights in such property, vested with the power and charged with the duty of so regulating, protecting, and controlling them, as to secure to each citizen the privilege to make them available for his purposes, so far as may be consistent with an equal enjoyment by every other citizen of the same privilege.¹ In some instances these rights are

¹ In The Company of Free Fishers, &c. v. Gann, 20 C. B. N. S. 1, it was held that the ownership of the Crown in the bed of navigable waters is for the benefit of the subject, and cannot be used in any such manner as to derogate from or interfere with the right of navigation, which belongs by law to all the subjects of the realm. And that consequently the grantees of a particular portion, who occupied it for a fishery, could not be lawfully authorized to charge and collect anchorage dues from vessels anchoring therein. As regards public and exclusive rights of fishery in this country, see Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. 475, 4 Am. Dec. 483; Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. 109, 16 Am. Dec. 383; Parker v. Middam Co., 20 Me. 853, 87 Am. Dec. 56; Parsons v. Clark, 76 Me. 476; Commonwealth v. Look, 108 Mass. 452; Cole v. Eastham, 183 Mass. 65; Packard v. Ryder, 144 Mass. 440, 11 N. E. 378; Sloan v. Biemiller, 34 Ohio St. 472; Lincoln v. Davis, 53 Mich. 875, 19 N. W. 103; Angell on Watercourses, § 56 a, and cases cited; Cooley on Torts, 388-390.

of such a nature, or the circumstances are such, that the most feasible mode of enabling every citizen to participate therein may seem to be for the State to transfer its control, wholly or partially, to individuals, either receiving by way of augmentation of the public revenues a compensation therefor, or securing in return a release to the citizens generally from some tax or charge which would have rested upon them in respect to such rights, had the State retained the usual control in its own hands, and borne the incidental burdens.

The rights of which we here speak are considered as pertaining to the State by virtue of an authority existing in every sovereignty, and which is called the eminent domain. Some of these are complete without any action on the part of the State; as is the case with the rights of navigation in its seas, lakes, and public rivers, the rights of fishery in public waters, and the right of the State to the precious metals which may be mined within its limits.¹ Others only become complete and are rendered effectual through the State displacing, either partially or wholly, the rights of private ownership and control; and this it accomplishes either by contract with the owner, by accepting his gift, or by appropriating his property against his will through an exercise of its superior authority. Of these, the common highway furnishes an example; the public rights therein being acquired either by the grant or dedication of the owner of the land over which they run, or by a species of forcible dispossession when the public necessity demands the way, and the private owner will neither give nor sell it. All these rights rest upon a principle which in every sovereignty is essential to its existence and perpetuity, and which, so far as when called into action it excludes pre-existing individual rights, is sometimes spoken of as being based upon an implied reservation by the government when its citizens acquire property from it or under its protection. (a) And as there is not often occasion to speak of the eminent domain except in reference to those cases in which the government is called upon to appropriate property against the will of the owners, the right itself is generally defined as if it were restricted to such cases, and is said to be that superior right of property pertaining to the sovereignty by which the private property acquired by its citizens under its protection may be taken or its use controlled for the public benefit without regard to the wishes of its owners. More accurately, it is the rightful authority, which exists in every sovereignty, to control and regulate those rights of a public nature which pertain to its citizens in common, and to appropriate and control individual property for the public benefit, as the public safety, necessity, convenience, or welfare may demand.¹

¹ 1 Bl. Com. 294; 3 Kent, 378, note. carries with it to the grantee the title to all mines. Boggs v. Merced, & Co., 14 Cal. 279; Moore v. Smaw, 17 Cal. 139.

(a) [The right of eminent domain does not depend upon the Constitution, but exists independent of it. It is inherent in sovereignty. Stearns v. Barre, 73 Vt. 251, 50 Atl. 1086, 87 Am. St. 721.]

When the existence of a particular power in the government is recognized on the ground of necessity, no delegation of the legislative power by the people can be held to vest authority in the department which holds it in trust, to bargain away such power, or

¹ Vattel, c. 20, § 34; Bynkershoek, lib. 2, c. 15; Ang. on Watercourses, § 457; 2 Kent, 338-340; Redf. on Railw. c. 11, § 1; Waples, Pro. in Rem, § 242. "The right which belongs to the society or to the sovereign of disposing, in case of necessity, and for the public safety, of all the wealth contained in the State, is called the eminent domain." McKinley, J., in Pollard's Lessee v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 223. "Notwithstanding the grant to individuals, the eminent domain, the highest and most exact idea of property, remains in the government, or in the aggregate body of the people in their sovereign capacity; and they have a right to resume the possession of the property, in the manner directed by the constitution and laws of the State, whenever the public interest requires it. This right of resumption may be exercised, not only where the safety, but also where the interest, or even the expediency of the State is concerned; as where the land of the individual is wanted for a road, canal, or other public improvement." Wabash, Chancellor, in Beekman v. Saratoga & Schenectady R. R. Co., 3 Paige, 45, 73, 22 Am. Dec. 679. The right is inherent in all governments, and requires no constitutional provision to give it force. Brown v. Beatty, 34 Miss. 227; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140; Lake Shore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 97 Ill. 505, 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 440; United States v. Jones, 139 U. S. 513, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846. "Title to property is always held upon the implied condition that it must be surrendered to the government either in whole or in part, when the public necessities, evidenced according to the established forms of law, demand." Hopbloom, J., in People v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 32 Barb. 102, 112. And see

Heyward v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 N. Y. 314; Water Works Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364; Weir v. St. Paul, &c. R. R. Co., 18 Minn. 155. That one exercise of the power of appropriation will not preclude others for the same purpose, see Central Branch U. P. R. R. Co. v. Atchison, &c. R. R. Co., 20 Kan. 289, 5 A. & E. R. R. Cas. 357, and cases in note; Peck v. Louisville, &c. Ry. Co., 101 Ind. 366; Dietrichs v. Lincoln, &c. R. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361, 13 N. W. 624. But when a bridge company has once located its line of approach and begins work, it cannot change it without legislative authority. Matter of Poughkeepsie Bridge Co., 108 N. Y. 453, 15 N. E. 601. The constitutional prohibition against the taking of private property for public use without compensation is self-enforcing, and equity may enjoin the damaging of such property though the legislature has provided no method of determining compensation. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. Ry. Co. v. Terminal Ry. Co., 97 Mo. 457, 10 S. W. 825, 3 L. R. A. 240; Hickman v. Kansas City, 120 Mo. 110, 25 S. W. 225, 22 L. R. A. 555, 41 Am. St. 684; Sentle v. Lead, 10 S. D. 312, 73 N. W. 101, 39 L. R. A. 345. A taking under the police power is not in exercise of the power of eminent domain. State v. Schenmer, 42 La. Ann. 1165, 8 So. 307, 13 L. R. A. 135. See Ruch v. City of New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 275, 9 So. 473; Peart v. Meeker, 45 La. Ann. 421, 12 So. 430; Sweet v. Reel, 37 Fed. Rep. 823; Id. 159 U. S. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; State v. Griffin, 68 N. H. 1, 39 Atl. 260, 41 L. R. A. 177. So in case of destruction of mill and mill dam to avoid damage to highway and other property. Aitken v. Wells River, 70 Vt. 308, 40 Atl. 829, 67 Am. St. 672, 41 L. R. A. 366.]

to so tie up the hands of the government as to preclude its repeated exercise, as often and under such circumstances as the needs of the government may require. For if this were otherwise, the authority to make laws for the government and welfare of the State might be so exercised, in strict conformity with its constitution, as at length to preclude the State performing its ordinary and essential functions, and the agent chosen to govern the State might put an end to the State itself. It must follow that any legislative bargain in restraint of the complete, continuous, and repeated exercise of the right of eminent domain is unwarranted and void; and that provision of the Constitution of the United States which forbids the States violating the obligation of contracts could not be so construed as to render valid and effectual such a bargain, which originally was in excess of proper authority. (a) Upon this subject we shall content ourselves with referring in this place to what has been said in another connection.¹

As under the peculiar American system the protection and regulation of private rights, privileges, and immunities in general belong to the State governments, and those governments are expected to make provision for the conveniences and necessities which are usually provided for their citizens through the exercise of the right of eminent domain, the right itself, it would seem, must pertain to those governments also, rather than to the government of the nation; and such has been the conclusion of the authorities. In the new Territories, however, where the government of the United States exercises sovereign authority, it possesses, as incident thereto, the right of eminent domain, which it may exercise directly or through the territorial governments; but this right passes from the nation to the newly formed State whenever the latter is admitted into the Union.² So far, however,

¹ See ante, p. 306.

² Pollard's Lessee v. Hagan, 3 How. 212; Goodtitle v. Kibbee, 9 How. 471; Doe v. Beebe, 13 How. 25; United States v. The Railroad Bridge Co., 6 McLean, 517; Weber v. Harbor Commissioners, 18 Wall. 57; Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427; Warren v. St. Paul, &c. R. R. Co., 18 Minn. 354. [Article V. of the amendments to the Federal constitution providing among other things that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation is not applicable to a taking by a State or its authority, but is a limitation on the Federal Government only. Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. 84.] Although it has been held in some cases that the States have authority, under the eminent domain, to appropriate the property of individuals in order to donate it to the general government for national purposes: Reddell v. Bryan, 14 Md. 444; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229; Burt v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 106 Mass. 359, and Cummings v. Ash, 50 N. H. 501; [Lancey v. King County, 16 Wash. 9, 45 Pac. 645, 34 L. R. A. 817,] the contrary is now determined. See Trombley v. Auditor-General, 23 Mich. 471; Kohl v. United

(a) [Woodmere Cemetery v. Raulo, 104 Mich. 593 (509), 62 N. W. 1010; Lock Haven Bridge Co. v. Clinton County, 157 Pa. St. 379, 27 Atl. 729]

as the general government may deem it important to appropriate lands or other property for its own purposes, and to enable it to perform its functions,—as must sometimes be necessary in the case of forts, light-houses, military posts or roads, and other conveniences and necessities of government,—the general government may still exercise the authority, as well within the States as within the territory under its exclusive jurisdiction, and its right to do so may be supported by the same reasons which support the right in any case; that is to say, the absolute necessity that the means in the government for performing its functions and perpetuating its existence should not be liable to be controlled or defeated by the want of consent of private parties, or of any other authority.¹

What Property is subject to the Right.

Every species of property which the public needs may require and which government cannot lawfully appropriate under any other right, is subject to be seized and appropriated under the right of eminent domain.² Lands for the public ways; timber, stone, and gravel with which to make or improve the public ways;³ buildings standing in the way of contemplated improve-

States, 91 U. S. 357. Such an authority in the States is needless, for the power of the general government is ample for all needs. But a statute is valid which grants to the United States the right to institute condemnation proceedings. Matter of Petition of United States, 96 N. Y. 227. [General government may exercise the eminent domain either in the territories or in the States for the execution of powers granted to it. Cherokee Nation v. South Kansas Ry. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 955, 33 Fed. Rep. 900. The United States may exercise the right of eminent domain in the interest of interstate commerce. Monongahela Navigation Co. v. United States, 145 U. S. 312, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; in the District of Columbia, Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 351; for the preservation of the battlefield of Gettysburg, U. S. v. Gettysburg Elec. Ry. Co., 169 U. S. 638, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; see also Luxton v. North River Bridge Co., 163 U. S. 325, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891.]

¹ Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 387; Transley v. Auditor-General, 23 Mich. 471; Darlington v. United States, 82 Pa. St. 382. The United States may delegate to a State tribunal the power to ascertain the compensation to be paid. United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

² People v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 32 Barb. 102; Bailey v. Miltenberger, 31 Pa. St. 37. [Authority to condemn does not authorize condemnation of lands of State unless so expressed. Seattle & M. Ry. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 150, 34 Pac. 551, 38 Am. St. 866, 22 L. R. A. 217.] Land belonging to, but not in actual use by a State university, may be condemned. In re St. Paul & N. P. Ry. Co., 34 Minn. 227, 25 N. W. 345. [Water from natural watercourse for irrigation: McGhee Irr. Ditch Co. v. Hudson, 85 Tex. 587, 22 S. W. 398, 937; property of church: Macon and A. Ry. Co. v. Riggs, 87 Ga. 158, 13 S. E. 312; homestead: Jockheck v. Shawnee Co. Com'rs, 53 Kan. 780, 37 Pac. 621; works and franchise of a water company: Brooklyn v. Long Island Water Supply Co., 143 N. Y. 596, 38 N. E. 983, 26 L. R. A. 270; aff. 160 U. S. 685, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.]

³ Wheelock v. Young, 4 Wend. 647; Lyon v. Jerome, 15 Wend. 569; Jerome v. Ross, 7 Johns. Ch. 315, 11 Am. Dec.

ments, or which for any other reason it becomes necessary to take, remove, or destroy for the public good;¹ streams of water;² corporate franchises;³ and generally, it may be said, legal and equi-

484; Bliss v. Hosmer, 15 Ohio, 44; Watkins v. Walker Co., 18 Tex. 585. In Bridge v. Smith, 34 Vt. 484, it was held competent for a railroad company to appropriate lands for piling the wood and lumber used on the road, and brought to it to be transported thereon.

¹ Wells v. Somerset, &c. R. R. Co., 47 Me. 345. So of a pier. Matter of Union Ferry Co., 98 N. Y. 139. But the destruction of a private house during a fire to prevent the spreading of a conflagration has been held not to be an appropriation under the right of eminent domain, but an exercise of the police power. "The destruction of this property was authorized by the law of overruling necessity; it was the exercise of a natural right belonging to every individual, not conferred by law, but tacitly accepted from all human codes." Per Stearns, Senator, in Russell v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 2 Denio, 461, 473. See also Sorocum v. Geary, 3 Cal. 63; Conwell v. Emrie, 2 Ind. 35; American Print Works v. Lawrence, 21 N. J. 248; Same v. Same, 25 N. J. 9, 30; McDonald v. Redwing, 13 Minn. 88; Field v. Des Moines, 39 Iowa, 575. The municipal corporation whose officers order the destruction is not liable for the damages unless expressly made so by statute. White v. Charleston, 2 Hill (S. C.), 571; Dunbar v. San Francisco, 1 Cal. 345; Stone v. Mayor, &c., of New York, 25 Wend. 157; Taylor v. Plymouth, 8 Met. 422; Ruggles v. Nantucket, 11 Cush. 433; Keller v. Corpus Christi, 60 Tex. 614, 32 Am. Rep. 613. [In the exercise of police power the State cannot authorize the taking of private property without compensation, when it can be condemned and paid for under the power of eminent domain. People v. Elk River, &c. Co., 167 Cal. 221, 40 Pac. 531, 48 Am. St. 121.]

² Gardner v. Mewburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 152, 7 Am. Dec. 328. In this case a stream was appropriated in order to supply a town with water. The appropriation might, of course, be made for any other object of public utility; and a stream may even be diverted from its course to remove it out of the way of a public improvement when not appropriated. See Johnson v. Atlantic, &c. R. R. Co., 35 N. H. 509; Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Magruder, 34 Md. 79, 6 Am. Rep. 310; Rensch v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 57 Iowa, 687, 11 N. W. 847. But in general, in constructing a public work, it is the duty of those concerned to avoid diverting streams, and to construct the necessary culverts, bridges, &c., for that purpose. March v. Portsmouth, &c. R. R. Co., 19 N. H. 372; Boughton v. Carter, 18 Johns. 405; Rowe v. Adelson, 34 N. H. 330; Proprietors, &c. v. Nashua & Lowell R. R. Co., 10 Cush. 388; Haynes v. Burlington, 38 Vt. 359. And see Pettigrew v. Evansville, 25 Wis. 223; Armstrong v. Green Bay Co., 31 Wis. 316; Stein v. Burden, 24 Ala. 163; Diamond Match Co. v. New Haven, 55 Conn. 519, 13 Atl. 403. As to the obligation of a railroad company to compensate parties whose lands are flooded by excavations or embankments of the company, see Brown v. Cayuga, &c. R. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 486; Norris v. Vt. Cent. R. R. Co., 28 Vt. 99. Compare Eaton v. Boston C. & M. R. Co., 51 N. H. 594, where it was decided that a corporation which flooded a man's land by removing a natural protection in the construction of its road was liable for the injury, even though its road was constructed with due care, with Bellenger v. N. Y. Central R. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 42; Abbott v. Kansas City, &c. Co., 83 Mo. 271; Moss v. St. Louis, &c. Ry. Co., 85 Mo. 89; Bell v. Norfolk, &c. R. R. Co., 191 N. C. 21, 7 S. E. 467; and other cases cited, post, pp. 782, 826.

³ Piscataqua Bridge v. New Hampshire Bridge, 7 N. H. 35; Crosby v. Hanover, 86 N. H. 404; Tuckwell Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 11 Leigh, 42, 36 Am. Dec. 374; Boston Water Power Co. v. Boston & Worcester R. R. Co., 23 Pick. 356; Central Bridge Corporation v. Lowe, 4 Gray, 474; West River Bridge v. Dxs, 3 How. 567; Richmond R. R. Co. v. Dxs, 18 R. R. Co., 13 How. 71, per Gibbs J.; Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co. v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., 4 Gill & J. 5; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 159; Red River Bridge Co. v. Clarksville, 1 Smth. 176; Arrington v. Barnet, 15 Vt. 745; White table rights of every description are liable to be thus appropri-

River Turnpike Co. v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 21 Vt. 590; Newcastle, &c. R. R. Co. v. Peru & Indiana R. R. Co., 3 Ind. 464; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. R. Co., 4 Cush. 63; Forward v. Hampshire, &c. Canal Co., 22 Pick. 402; Commonwealth v. Pittsburg, &c. R. R. Co., 58 Pa. St. 26; Re Towanda Bridge Co., 91 Pa. St. 216; In re Twenty-Second St., 102 Pa. St. 195. "The only true rule of policy as well as of law is, that a grant for one public purpose must yield to another more urgent and important, and this can be effected without any infringement on the constitutional rights of the subject. If in such cases suitable and adequate provision is made by the legislature for the compensation of those whose property or franchise is injured or taken away, there is no violation of public faith or private right. The obligation of the contract created by the original charter is thereby recognized." Per Bailew, J., in Central Bridge Corporation v. Lowell, 4 Gray, 474, 482. This subject receives a very full and satisfactory examination by Judges Pearson and Skarswood, in Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 66 Pa. St. 41. 5 Am. Rep. 329. In Central City Horse Railway Co. v. Fort Clark Horse Railway Co., 87 Ill. 523, this subject is somewhat considered. The question involved is thus stated by the court: "Can a competing horse railway company in an incorporated city acquire by compulsion a title to or the joint use of [a part of] the track and superstructure of another like corporation, and for the express purpose of making the tracks so compulsorily taken a portion of its own line?" This question is answered in the negative, though at the same time it is intimated that "proceedings might be instituted, perhaps, to condemn the entire road and franchise, and thus pass it over as an entirety to the competing road." But as to this, see Lake Shore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 97 Ill. 505; Re Rochester Water Commissioners, 65 N. Y. 413; Little Miami, &c. R. R. Co. v. Dayton, 23 Ohio St. 510. [A turnpike way may be condemned for an electric street railway. The legislature may determine when one grant must yield to another. Baltimore & P. T. R. v. Baltimore C. & R. Co., 81 Md.

247, 31 Atl. 854. If the second use will better serve the public, the first franchise may be condemned. Re City of Brooklyn, 143 N. Y. 506, 25 N. E. 983, 26 L. R. A. 270; aff. 106 U. S. 685, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Trustees of Atlanta University v. City of Atlanta, 93 Ga. 468, 21 S. E. 74; United States v. Gettysburg E. R. Co., 160 U. S. 668, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. Land condemned for one use cannot be taken for a similar use without specific authority where the second use is inconsistent, or materially interferes with the first: Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Comrs of Seneca Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 945; St. Louis, I. & K. C. R. Co. v. Hannibal, U. D. Co., 125 Mo. 82, 28 S. W. 482; Suburban R. T. Co. v. City of New York, 128 N. Y. 510, 28 N. E. 525, rev. 60 Hun. 577; Re City of New York, 135 N. Y. 253, 31 N. E. 1043. Land of one railway company for another line of railway: Butte, A. & P. R. Co. v. Montana U. R. Co., 16 Mont. 504, 41 Pac. 232, 31 L. R. A. 298, 60 Am. St. 598. So, though the second use is not a similar use, if it is inconsistent with the first use. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Cambridge, 103 Mass. 224, 44 N. E. 140; Cincinnati W. & M. R. Co. v. Anderson, 138 Ind. 490, 38 N. E. 167, 47 Am. St. 283; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Whitely, 35 Ky. 215, 24 S. W. 604, 44 Am. St. 220, and note; Minn. & St. L. R. Co. v. Minn. W. R. Co., 61 Minn. 502, 63 N. W. 1035; Seattle & M. R. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 150, 34 Pac. 551, 38 Am. St. 890, 22 L. R. A. 217. Land of a railway company for a grain elevator: Re Stewart's Application, 65 Minn. 515, 63 N. W. 208, 33 L. R. A. 427; a toll bridge for an electric street railway: Pittsburg & W. E. P. R. Co. v. Port Bridge Co., 165 Pa. St. 35, 53 Atl. 511, 26 L. R. A. 823. The yards and tracks of a railway company may be condemned for a public street if properly authorized, Terra Haute v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co., 140 Ind. 174, 45 N. E. 77, 37 L. R. A. 189; Chicago, &c. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 87 Iowa, 159, 36 N. W. 87, 59 Am. St. 404.] Land appropriated by one railroad company under the eminent domain, but not required for the exercise of its franchises or the discharge of its duties, is liable to be taken for the corporate use of another railroad company. North Carolina, &c. R. R. Co. v. Carolina Central, &c. R. R.

ated.¹ From this statement, however, must be excepted money, or that which in ordinary use passes as such, and which the government may reach by taxation, and also rights in action, which can only be available when made to produce money; neither of which can it be needful to take under this power.²

Legislative Authority Requisite.

The right to appropriate private property to public uses lies dormant in the State, until legislative action is had, pointing out

Co., 83 N. C. 489. See Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Lake, 71 Ill. 333. A contract ceding to a telegraph company the exclusive right of operating and maintaining its lines over the right of way of a railroad company cannot preclude the State from authorizing the establishment of another telegraph line over the same right of way. New Orleans, &c. R. R. Co. v. Southern, &c. Telegraph Co., 53 Ala. 211. The bridge of a corporation may be taken under this power and made a free bridge. He Towanda Bridge Co., 91 Pa. St. 218. So of the right of a railroad company given under peculiar circumstances to take toll on a highway. Phila. &c. Ry. Co.'s Appeal, 120 Pa. St. 90, 18 Atl. 708.

¹ The appurtenant right of an abutter to have a street open may be taken: Rennselaer v. Leopold, 106 Ind. 29, 5 N. E. 781; the right to pass over a private way: Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. R. Co. v. Overton, 85 Hun, 157; the right to have a farm-crossing at a particular place. Matter of N. Y. L. &c. R. R. Co., 44 Hun, 194. [Private cemetery for public park, In re Board of Street Openings, &c., 133 N. Y. 329, 31 N. E. 102, 28 Am. St. 640; Homesstead for court houses: Jockheck v. Shawnee Co. Comrs., 53 Kan. 750, 37 Pac. 821; leasehold interest in lands: Corrigan et al. v. City of Chicago, 144 Ill. 587, 33 N. E. 746, 21 L. R. A. 212. In such case the exercise of the right terminates the obligation to pay rent. Id.]

² Property of individuals cannot be appropriated by the State under this power for the mere purpose of adding to the revenues of the State. Thus it has been held in Ohio, that in appropriating the water of streams for the purposes of a canal, more could not be taken than was needed for that object, with a view to raising a revenue by selling or leasing it. "The State, notwithstanding the sovereignty of her character, can take only sufficient water from private streams for the purposes of the canal. So far the law authorizes the commissioners to invade private right as to take what may be necessary for canal navigation, and to this extent authority is conferred by the constitution, provided a compensation be paid to the owner. The principle is founded on the superior claims of a whole community over an individual citizen; but then in those cases only where private property is wanted for public use, or demanded by the public welfare. We know of no instances in which it has or can be taken, even by State authority, for the mere purpose of raising a revenue by sale or otherwise; and the exercise of such a power would be utterly destructive of individual right, and break down all the distinctions between maum and bum, and annihilate them forever at the pleasure of the State." Wood, J., in Buckingham v. Smith, 10 Ohio, 288, 297. To the same effect is Cooper v. Williams, 5 Ohio, 392, 22 Am. Dec. 745.

Taking money under the right of eminent domain, when it must be compensated in money afterwards, could be nothing more or less than a forced loan, only to be justified as a last resort in a time of extreme peril, where neither the credit of the government nor the power of taxation could be made available. It is impossible to lay down rules for such a case, except such as the law of overruling necessity, which for the time being sets aside all the rules and protections of private right, shall then prescribe. [Kaysville v. Ellison, 18 Utah, 138, 55 Pac. 359, 72 Am. St. 772, 43 L. R. A. 81.] See post, p. 784, note.

the occasions, the modes, conditions, and agencies for its appropriations.¹ Private property can only be taken pursuant to law; but a legislative act declaring the necessity, being the customary mode in which that fact is determined, must be held to be for this purpose "the law of the land," and no further finding or adjudication can be essential, unless the constitution of the State has expressly required it.² When, however, action is had for this purpose, there must be kept in view that general as well as reasonable and just rule, that, whenever in pursuance of law the property of an individual is to be divested by proceedings against his will, a strict compliance must be had with all the provisions of law which are made for his protection and benefit, or the proceeding will be ineffectual.³ These provisions must be regarded as in the nature of conditions precedent, which are not only to be observed and complied with before the right of the property owner is disturbed, but the party claiming authority under the

¹ Barrow v. Page, 5 Hayw. 97; Railroad Co. v. Lake, 71 Ill. 333; Allen v. Jones, 47 Ind. 435. [But see Easthampton v. Hampshire County Com'rs, 154 Mass. 424, 28 N. E. 298, 13 L. R. A. 157, where it is held that express authority is not necessary to the taking of part of a schoolhouse lot for a town way.] It cannot be presumed that any corporation has authority to exercise the right of eminent domain until the grant be shown. Publics v. Dunkirk & Co. R. R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 173; Allen v. Jones, 47 Ind. 435. A foreign corporation, it is held in Nebraska, which may not acquire real estate, cannot condemn land indirectly through a domestic corporation. State v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628, 50 N. W. 121; Koenig v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 27 Neb. 609, 45 N. W. 423.

² "Whatever may be the theoretical foundation for the right of eminent domain, it is certain that it attaches as an incident to every sovereignty, and constitutes a condition upon which all property is held. When the public necessity requires it, private rights to property must yield to this paramount right of the sovereign power. We have repeatedly held that the character of the work for which the property is taken, and not the means or agencies employed for its construction, determines the question of power in the exercise of this right. It requires no judicial condemnation to subject private property to public uses. Like the power to tax, it resides with the legislative department to whom the delegation is made. It may be exercised directly or indirectly by that body; and it can only be restrained by the judiciary when its limits have been exceeded or its authority has been abused or perverted." Kramer v. Cleveland & Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 5 Ohio St. 140, 146. The mode of exercise is left to the legislative discretion, when not restrained by the constitution. Secombe v. Railroad Co., 23 Wall. 108. An owner is not entitled to notice of meeting of commissioners to determine the necessity of an improvement. Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 Ohio St. 463.

³ Gillwater v. Mississippi &c. R. R. Co., 13 Ill. 1; Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171; Dalton v. Water Commissioners, 49 Cal. 223; Stockton v. Whitmore, 50 Cal. 554; Supervisors of Doddridge v. Stout, 9 W. Va. 703; Mitchell v. Illinois &c. Coal Co., 68 Ill. 283; Chicago &c. R. R. Co. v. Smith, 78 Ill. 96; Springfield &c. R. R. Co. v. Hall, 67 Ill. 99; Powers's Appeal, 29 Mich. 504; Kroop v. Forman, 31 Mich. 144; Arnold v. Decatur, 29 Mich. 77; Lund v. New Bedford, 121 Mass. 286; Wamesit Power Co. v. Allen, 120 Mass. 352; Bohlman v. Green Bay &c. R. R. Co., 40 Wis. 157; Moore v. Railway Co., 34 Wis. 173; United States v. Reed, 56 Mo. 565; Decatur County v. Humphreys, 47 Ga. 565; Commissioners v. Beckwith, 10 Kan. 603.

adverse proceeding must show affirmatively such compliance. For example, if by a statute prescribing the mode of exercising the right of eminent domain, the damages to be assessed in favor of the property owner for the taking of his land are to be so assessed by disinterested freeholders of the municipality, the proceedings will be ineffectual unless they show on their face that the appraisers were such freeholders and inhabitants.¹ So if a statute only authorizes proceedings in invitum after an effort shall have been made to agree with the owner on the compensation to be paid, the fact of such effort and its failure must appear.² So if the statute vests the title to lands appropriated in the State or in a corporation on payment therefor being made, it is evident that, under the rule stated, the payment is a condition precedent to the passing of the title.³ And where a general railroad law

¹ Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 189; Judson v. Bridgeport, 25 Conn. 426; Peopie v. Brighton, 20 Mich. 57; Moore v. Railway Co., 34 Wis. 178.

² Rollenbaugh v. Chester Valley R. R. Co., 21 Pa. St. 100; Ellis v. Pacific R. R. Co., 51 Mo. 200; United States v. Reed, 56 Mo. 565; Burt v. Brigham, 117 Mass. 207; Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon, &c. Co., 10 Oreg. 444; Howland v. School Dist., 16 R. I. 257, 15 Atl. 74; Reed v. Ohio, &c. Ry. Co., 126 Ill. 48, 17 N. E. 807; Grand Rapids & I. R. R. Co. v. Weiden, 70 Mich. 390, 38 N. W. 294; West Va. Transportation Co. v. Volcanic Oil & Coal Co., 5 W. Va. 382; it was held that if the owner appears in proceedings taken for the assessment of damages, and contests the amount without objecting the want of any such attempt, the court must presume it to have been made.

³ Stacy v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 89. By the section of the statute under which the land was appropriated, it was provided that when land or other real estate was taken by the corporation, for the use of their road, and the parties were unable to agree upon the price of the land, the same should be ascertained and determined by the commissioners, together with the costs and charges accruing thereon, and upon the payment of the same, or by depositing the amount in a bank, as should be ordered by the commissioners, the corporation should be deemed to be seized and possessed of the lands. Held, that, until the payment was made, the company had no right to enter upon the land to construct the road, or to exercise any act of ownership over it; and that a court of equity would enjoin them from exercising any such right, or they might be prosecuted in trespass at law. This case follows Baltimore & Susquehanna R. R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, and Blondgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. R. Co., 18 Wend. 8, where the statutory provisions were similar. In Kentucky, payment in money must be made before entry. Covington Ry. Co. v. Piel, 87 Ky. 267, 8 S. W. 449. See farther State v. Seymour, 35 N. J. 47; Cameron v. Supervisors, 47 Miss. 284; St. Joseph, &c. R. R. Co. v. Calender, 13 Kan. 493; Paris v. Mason, 37 Tex. 447; People v. McRoberts, 62 Ill. 38; St. Louis &c. R. R. Co. v. Teters, 68 Ill. 144; Sherman v. Milwaukee, &c. R. R. Co., 49 Wis. 646; Bohlman v. Green Bay, &c. R. R. Co., 40 Wis. 157; Brady v. Bronson, 45 Cal. 649; Delphi v. Evans, 36 Ind. 10; Kidmiller v. Wyandotte, 2 Dill. 376. In the case in Howard it is said: "It can hardly be questioned that without acceptance by the acts and in the mode prescribed [i. e., by payment of the damages assessed], the company were not bound that if they had been dissatisfied with the estimate placed on the land, or could have procured a more eligible site for the location of their road, they would have been at liberty, before such acceptance, wholly to renounce the acquisition. The proprietors of the land could have no authority to coerce the company into its adoption." Daniel, J., 10 How. 395, 399.

authorized routes to be surveyed by associated persons desirous of constructing roads, and provided that if the legislature, on being petitioned for the purpose, should decide by law that a proposed road would be of sufficient utility to justify its construction, then the company, when organized, might proceed to take land for the way, it was held that, until the route was approved by the legislature, no authority could be claimed under the law to appropriate land for the purpose.¹ These cases must suffice as illustrations of a general rule, which indeed would seem to be too plain and obvious to require either illustration or discussion.²

So the powers granted by such statutes are not to be enlarged by intendment, especially where they are being exercised by a corporation by way of appropriation of land for its corporate purposes. "There is no rule more familiar or better settled than this: that grants of corporate power, being in derogation of common right, are to be strictly construed; and this is especially the case where the power claimed is a delegation of the right of eminent domain, one of the highest powers of sovereignty pertaining to the State itself, and interfering most seriously and often vexatiously with the ordinary rights of property."³ It has ac-

¹ Goldwater v. Mississippi, &c. R. R. Co., 13 Ill. 1. "The statute says, that after a certain other act shall have been passed, the company may then proceed to take private property for the use of its roads: that is equivalent to saying that that right shall not be exercised without such subsequent act. The right to take private property for public use is one of the highest prerogatives of the sovereign power; and here the legislature has, in language not to be mistaken, expressed its intention to reserve that power until it could judge for itself whether the proposed road would be of sufficient public utility to justify the use of this high prerogative. It did not intend to cast this power away, to be gathered up and used by any who might chose to exercise it." Ibid. p. 4.

² See further the cases of Atlantic & Ohio R. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 5 Ohio St. 270; Parker v. Howe, 41 Me. 215; Atkinson v. Marietta & Cincinnati R. R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 21.

³ Carrier v. Marietta & Cincinnati R. R. Co., 11 Ohio St. 223, 231; Miami Coal Co. v. Wigton, 19 Ohio St. 569. See ante, pp. 534, 555. [Authority to construct is not authority to condemn: City of Madison v. Daley, 35 Fed. Rep. 751; City of Tacoma v. State,

4 Wash. 64, 29 Pac. 847; Brunswick & W. Ry. Co. v. City of Waycross, 94 Ga. 102, 21 S. E. 145; Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Town of Cicero, 154 Ill. 650, 39 N. E. 574. Authority to construct water-works for fire protection and domestic use is not authority to furnish water for motive power for light manufacturing, though grant of power contained words "and other purposes": Re Barre Water Co., 62 Vt. 27, 20 Atl. 109, 9 L. R. A. 135. The words "any railway" in a statute authorizing condemnation proceedings, held not to include street railways operated by horse power or electricity. Thomson-Houston Elec. Co. v. Simon, 20 Oreg. 60, 25 Pac. 147, 10 L. R. A. 231. Authority to condemn for telegraph line, held to authorize condemnation for telephone line under New Jersey statute. State v. Central New Jersey Telegraph Co., 63 N. J. L. 341, 21 Atl. 490, 11 L. R. A. 834; San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. S. W. Telph. & Telne. Co., 98 Tex. 513, 55 S. W. 117, 49 L. R. A. 459. Other illustrations of this rule of strict construction may be found in the following cases: Jare Theresa Drainage Dist., 80 Wis. 501, 63 N. W. 285; Bigler's Executors v. Penna. Canal Co., 177 Pa. St. 28, 85 Atl. 112; Trustees Atlanta University v. City cordingly been held that where a railroad company was authorized by law to "enter upon any land to survey, lay down, and construct its road," "to locate and construct branch roads," &c., to appropriate land "for necessary side tracks," and "a right of way over adjacent lands sufficient to enable such company to construct and repair its road," and the company had located, and was engaged in the construction of its main road along the north side of a town, it was not authorized under this grant of power to appropriate a temporary right of way for a term of years along the south side of the town, to be used as a substitute for the main track whilst the latter was in process of construction.¹ And substantially the same strict rule is applied when the State itself seeks to appropriate private property; for it is not unreasonable that the property owner should have the right to insist that the State, which selects the occasion, and prescribes the conditions for the appropriation of his property, should confine its action strictly within the limits which it has marked out as sufficient. So high a prerogative as that of divesting one's estate against his will should only be exercised where the plain letter of the law permits it, and under a careful observance of the formalities prescribed for the owner's protection.(a)

The Purpose.

The definition given of the right of eminent domain implies that the purpose for which it may be exercised must not be a of Atlanta, 23 Ga. 468, 21 S. E. 74; Wilder v. Boston & A. Ry. Co., 161 Mass. 387, 37 N. E. 386; Kansas City, &c. Ry. Co. v. Perry, 37 Ark. 320, 21 S. W. 884; Providence & W. Ry. Co., Petitioner, 17 R. I. 224, 21 Atl. 993; Kyle v. Texas and N. O. Ry. Co., 8 Wilson, § 456; Kettle River Ry. Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co., 41 Mont. 461, 43 N. W. 469, 6 L. R. A. 111; Payne v. Kansas, &c. Ry. Co., 46 Fed. Rep. 543; Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Galt, 133 Ill. 667, 26 N. E. 425, 24 N. E. 674; Dennis, Long & Co. v. City of Louisville, 98 Ky. 67, 32 S. W. 271; Ewing v. Alabama, &c. Ry. Co., 8 Miss. 551, 9 So. 256; Cheney v. Atlantic City Water Works Co., 55 N. J. L. 295, 28 Atl. 93; Illinois Central Ry.

Co. v. City of Chicago, 133 Ill. 453, 28 N. E. 740; Louisville & N. Ry. Co. v. Whitely County Court, 95 Ky. 215, 24 S. W. 604, 44 Am. St. 220; Beaver v. City of Harrisburg, 156 Pa. St. 647, 27 Atl. 4; Chicago & G. W. Ry. Co. v. First Methodist Church, 42 C. C. A. 178, 102 Fed. Rep. 85.]

¹ Currier v. Marietta & Cincinnati R. R. Co., 11 Ohio St. 228. And see Grimmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47; Bensley v. Mountain Lake, &c. Co., 13 Cal. 296; Bruning v. N. O. Canal & Banking Co., 12 La. Ann. 541; West Virginia Transportation Co. v. Volcanic Oil & Coal Co., 5 W. Va. 382.

(a) [Authority to condemn cannot be delegated to a foreign corporation: St. Louis & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Fultz, 52 Fed. Rep. 627; Koenig v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 27 Neb. 660, 43 N. W. 423; Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 23 Neb. 171, 49 N. W. 1110; contra, New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Welsh, 143 N. Y. 411, 38 N. E. 378. A Railway company cannot pass authority to condemn to a manufacturing corporation: Appeal of Hartman Steel Co., 129 Pa. St. 551, 18 Atl. 553.]

more private purpose; and it is conceded on all hands that the legislature has no power, in any case, to take the property of one individual and pass it over to another without reference to some use to which it is to be applied for the public benefit.¹ "The right of eminent domain," it has been said, "does not imply a right in the sovereign power to take the property of one citizen and transfer it to another, even for a full compensation, where the public interest will be in no way promoted by such transfer."² It seems not to be allowable, therefore, to authorize private roads

¹ [The constitutional prohibition against taking private property for public use, operates by implication to prohibit the taking of property for private use. Richards v. Wolf, 82 Iowa, 358, 47 N. W. 1044, 31 Am. St. 601; Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767, 57 N. W. 559, 41 Am. St. 771, 22 L. R. A. 400. For a discussion of the meaning of the term "public" as used in this connection, see 51 Cent. L. Jour. 823.] In a work of this character, we have no occasion to consider the right of the government to seize and appropriate to its own use the property of individuals in time of war, through its military authorities. That is a right which depends on the existence of hostilities, and the suspension, partially or wholly, of the civil laws. For recent cases in which it has been considered, see Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115; Wilson v. Crockett, 43 Mo. 216; Wellman v. Wickerman, 44 Mo. 484; Yost v. Stout, 4 Cold. 205; Sutton v. Tiller, 9 Cal. 593; Taylor v. Nashville, 8 N. R. Co., 6 Cold. 646; Coolidge v. Guthrie, 8 Am. Law Reg. n. s. 22; Elliott v. Staunton, 3 W. Va. 574; Wilson v. Franklin, 63 N. C. 259.

² Beekman v. Saratoga & Schenectady R. R. Co., 3 Paige, 73, 22 Am. Dec. 679; Tereyck v. Canal Co., 18 N. J. 299, 37 Am. Dec. 203; Hepburn's Case, 3 Blunt. 31; Saffler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311; Pittsburg v. Scott, 1 Pa. St. 303; Matter of Albany Street, 11 Wend. 149, 25 Am. Dec. 618; Matter of John & Cherry Streets, 19 Wend. 659; Cooper v. Williams, 5 Ohio, 391, 24 Am. Dec. 239; Buckingham v. Smith, 10 Ohio, 288; Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 3 Ohio St. 833. See this subject considered on principle and authority by Senator Tracy in Bloodgood v. Monawk & Hudson R. R. Co., 18 Wend. 955 et

seq. See also Embury v. Conner, 3 N. Y. 511; Kramer v. Cleveland & Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 5 Ohio St. 140; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603; Concord R. R. v. Greeley, 17 N. H. 47; N. Y. & Harlem R. R. Co. v. Kip, 46 N. Y. 546, 7 Am. Rep. 355. [The closing of part of a public alley whereby the lands within the alley revert to the adjoining owner, held not to be for public use. Van Witsen v. Gutman, 79 Md. 405, 29 Atl. 608, 24 L. R. A. 403. An act giving one street railway the right to use the tracks of another is not due process, when it is apparent that it was not a public benefit, but a benefit to the company, to whom the grant is made. Philadelphia, M. & S. S. R. Co., Petition of, — Pa. St. —, 53 Atl. 191.] The power can only be exercised to supply some existing public need or to gain some present public advantage; not with a view to contingent results dependent on a projected speculation. Edgewood R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 257. Nor for a mere public convenience; such as a company for loading and unloading freight on and from steamboats and other craft touching at a river port. Memphis Freight Co. v. Memphis, 4 Cold. 419. But land not needed at once may be condemned for extra tracks of a railroad. Matter of Staten Island Transit Co., 103 N. Y. 251, 8 N. E. 548. [Under the internal improvement clause of the Constitution of South Carolina, a statute authorizing condemnation for railway connecting a private manufacturing plant with a public railway is valid. Ex parte Bacot, 36 S. C. 125, 15 S. E. 291, 15 L. R. A. 585. A private way cannot be authorized on a public highway against an adjoining proprietor who has a fee in the street. Bradley v. Pharr, 45 La. Ann. 426, 12 So. 618, 19 L. R. A. 847.

to be laid out across the lands of unwilling parties by an exercise of this right. The easement in such a case would be the property of him for whom it was established; and although the owner would not be deprived of the fee in the land, the beneficial use and exclusive enjoyment of his property would in greater or less degree be interfered with. Nor would it be material to inquire what quantum of interest would pass from him: it would be sufficient that some interest, the appropriation of which detracted from his right and authority, and interfered with his exclusive possession as owner, had been taken against his will; and if taken for a purely private purpose, it would be unlawful.¹ Nor ¹ Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, per Bronson, J.; Clark v. White, 2 Swan, 640; White v. White, 5 Barb. 474; Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311; Pittsburg v. Scott, 1 Pa. St. 309; Nesbitt v. Trumbo, 39 Ill. 110; Osborn v. Hart, 24 Wis. 89, 1 Am. Rep. 161; Tyler v. Beach, 44 Vt. 648, 8 Am. Rep. 398; Bankhead v. Brown, 25 Iowa, 540; Witham v. Osburn, 4 Oreg. 318, 18 Am. Rep. 257; Stewart v. Hartman, 46 Ind. 331; Wild v. Deig, 43 Ind. 455, 13 Am. Rep. 399; Blackman v. Halves, 72 Ind. 515; White v. Clark, 2 Swan, 230; Hickman's Case, 4 Harr. 580; Robinson v. Swope, 12 Bush, 21; Varner v. Martin, 21 W. Va. 534. A neighborhood road is only a private road, and taking land for it would not be for a public use. Dickey v. Tennison, 27 Mo. 373. [Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767, 57 N. W. 559, 41 Am. St. 771, 22 L. R. A. 496; Logan v. Stogdale, 123 Ind. 372, 24 N. E. 135, 8 L. R. A. 58, and note. Way laid out on application of single private person, to be paid for and kept in repair by him, but to be used by all who desire to use it, is a public way for which lands may be condemned. Latah County v. Peterson, 2 Idaho, 1118, 29 Pac. 1089, 16 L. R. A. 81.] But see, as to this, Ferris v. Bramble, 5 Ohio St. 109; Brock v. Barnett, 57 Vt. 172; Bell v. Prouty, 43 Vt. 279; Whittingham v. Bowen, 22 Vt. 317; Proctor v. Andover, 42 N. H. 348. [It seems that a way essentially private may be given a public character by act of the legislature because of incidental public benefits. Los Angeles Co. v. Reyes, — Cal. —, 32 Pac. 233; Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767, 57 N. W. 559, 41 Am. St. 771, 22 L. R. A. 496; Monterey Co. v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 511, 23 Pac. 700.

And see Wisconsin Water Co. v. Winans, 85 Wis. 26, 64 N. W. 1003, 39 Am. St. 818, and note; Latah Co. v. Peterson, 2 Idaho, 1118, 29 Pac. 1089, 16 L. R. A. 81; Butte, Anaconda, & P. Ry. Co. v. Montana U. Ry. Co., 16 Mont. 504, 41 Pac. 232, 81 L. R. A. 238. See Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson, 30 Oreg. 205, 46 Pac. 790, 34 L. R. A. 388, 60 Am. St. 618.] To avoid this difficulty, it is provided by the constitutions of some of the States that private roads may be laid out under proceedings corresponding to those for the establishment of highways. There are provisions to that effect in the Constitutions of New York, Georgia, and Michigan. It is allowable under the Alabama Constitution also. Steele v. County Com'rs, 83 Ala. 304, 3 So. 761. But in Harvey v. Thomas, 10 Watts, 63, it was held that the right might be exercised in order to the establishment of private ways from coal fields to connect them with the public improvements, there being nothing in the constitution forbidding it. See also the Pocopson Road, 16 Pa. St. 15; Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241; Brewer v. Bowman, 9 Ga. 37; Robinson v. Swope, 12 Bush, 21. But in Illinois it is held expressly that such a road cannot be condemned. Sholl v. German Coal Co., 118 Ill. 427, 10 N. E. 199, and the doctrine of the cases just cited is directly opposed to Young v. McKenzie, 3 Ga. 31; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140; Buffalo & N. Y. R. R. Co. v. Brainard, 9 N. Y. 100; Bradley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 21 Conn. 294; Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St. 333, and many other cases; though possibly convenient access to the great coal fields of the State might be held to could it be of importance that the public would receive incidental benefits, such as usually spring from the improvement of lands or the establishment of prosperous private enterprises: the public use implies a possession, occupation, and enjoyment of the land by the public at large, or by public agencies;¹ and a due protection to the rights of private property will preclude the government from seizing it in the hands of the owner, and turning it over to another on vague grounds of public benefit to spring from the more profitable use to which the latter may devote it.

We find ourselves somewhat at sea, however, when we undertake to define, in the light of the judicial decisions, what consti-be so far a matter of general concern as to support an exercise of the power on the ground of the public benefit. So held as to a subterranean mining railway. De Camp v. Ithema R. R. Co., 47 N. J. L. 43. In Iowa a statute authorizing condemnation of public ways in such cases was upheld though only the mine-owners may have occasion to use them. Phillips v. Watson, 63 Iowa, 28, 18 N. W. 669. [A spur track to serve private concern only is not for public purpose. Kyle v. Tex. & N. O. Ry. Co., 3 Willson (Tex. Civ. App.), § 499; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Petty, 67 Ark. 359, 21 S. W. 884.] In Eldridge v. Smith, 34 Vt. 484, it was held that the manufacture of railroad cars was not so legitimately and necessarily connected with the management of a railroad that the company would be authorized to appropriate lands therefor. So also, of land for the erection of dwelling-houses to rent by railroad companies to their employees. But under authority to a railroad company to take land for constructing and operating its road, it may take what is needed for depot grounds. N. Y. & Harlaam R. R. Co. v. Kip, 49 N. Y. 546, 7 Am. Rep. 385. Spur tracks in a city to reach mills and warehouses may be condemned: Toledo S. & M. R. R. Co. v. East Saginaw, &c. Co., 72 Mich. 290, 40 N. W. 466; if necessary to the operation of the road. South Chicago R. R. Co. v. Dix, 109 Ill. 267. Not if merely to increase its business. Then the use is not public. Chicago & E. I. R. R. Co. v. Wilcox, 110 Ill. 449, 6 N. E. 49; Pittsburg, W. & K. Co. v. Benwood Iron Works, 51 W. Va. 719, 2 L. R. A. 689, 8 S. E. 453.

In the text we have stated what is unquestionably the result of the authorities; though if the question were an open one it might well be debated whether the right to authorize the appropriation of the property of individuals did not rest rather upon grounds of general public policy than upon the public purpose to which it was proposed to devote it. There are many cases in which individuals or private corporations have been empowered to appropriate the property of others when the general good demanded it, though the purpose was no more public than it is in any case where benefits are to flow to the community generally from a private enterprise. The case of appropriations for mill-dams, railroads, and drains to improve lands are familiar examples. These appropriations have been sanctioned under an application of the term "public purpose," which might also justify the laying out of private roads, when private property could not otherwise be made available. Upon this general subject the reader is referred to an article by Hon. J. V. Campbell, in the "Bench and Bar," for July, 1871.

¹ Per Tracy, Senator, in Bloodgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. R. Co., 18 Wend. 9, 63. A use is private so long as structures to be put on the land "are to remain under private ownership and control, and no right to their use or to direct their management is conferred upon the public." Matter of Eureka Bason, &c. Co., 60 N. Y. 42. See Belcher Sugar Refining Co. v. St. Louis Elev. Co., 82 Mo. 121. The use must be by the general public of a locality, and not by particular individuals or estates. McQuillen v. Hutton, 42 Ohio St. 202; Ross v. Davis, 37 Ind. 79.

tutes a public use. It has been said by a learned jurist that, "if the public interest can be in any way promoted by the taking of private property, it must rest in the wisdom of the legislature to determine whether the benefit to the public will be of sufficient importance to render it expedient for them to exercise the right of eminent domain, and to authorize an interference with the private rights of individuals for that purpose."¹ It is upon this principle that the legislatures of several of the States have authorized the condemnation of the lands of individuals for mill sites, where from the nature of the country such mill sites could not be obtained for the accommodation of the inhabitants without overflowing the lands thus condemned. Upon the same principle of public benefit, not only the agents of the government, but also individuals and corporate bodies, have been authorized to take private property for the purpose of making public highways, turnpike roads, and canals; of erecting and constructing wharves and basins; of establishing ferries; of draining swamps and marshes; and of bringing water to cities and villages. In all such cases the object of the legislative grant of power is the public benefit derived from the contemplated improvement, whether such improvement is to be effected directly by the agents of the government, or through the medium of corporate bodies or of individual enterprise."²

¹ 2 Kent, Com. 340. [Statute authorizing lands to be flowed by raising a pond for the culture of useful fishes, though the object of the owner is to secure his own pleasure and profit, is constitutional. Turner v. Nye, 154 Mass. 579, 28 N. E. 1048, 14 L. R. A. 487, an extreme case.]

² Walcworth, Chancellor, in Beekman v. Saratoga & Schenectady R. R. Co., 3 Paige, 45, 73, 22 Am. Dec. 679. And see Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245. [As to what is a public use, see Latah County v. Peterson, 2 Idaho, 1118, 20 Pac. 1089, 16 L. R. A. 81, and note. Also note to Pittsburgh W. & Ky. Ry. Co. v. Benwood Iron Wks., 2 L. R. A. 680. For a railway is not for a public use under all circumstances. Its use will determine whether it is. Kettle River Ry. Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co., 41 Minn. 461, 43 N. W. 469, 6 L. R. A. 111; Colorado E. Ry. Co. v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 293; Weidenfield v. Sugar Run Ry. Co., 48 Fed. Rep. 615; Farnsworth v. Line Rock Ry. Co., 83 Me. 440, 22 Atl. 373; Chicago B. & N.

Ry. Co. v. Porter, 43 Minn. 527, 48 N. W. 75; In re Split Rock Cable Road Co., 128 N. Y. 408, 28 N. E. 503, aff. 58 Hun, 351. It is the right to use, rather than extent of use, should determine its character, Butte A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Montana N. Ry. Co., 16 Mont. 594, 41 Pac. 232, 31 L. R. A. 298. Incidental benefit to private enterprise not destroy public character (side track to coal mine). St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Petty, 57 Ark. 359, 21 S. W. 884, 20 L. R. A. 434, and note; Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson, 30 Oreg. 205, 40 Pac. 700, 30 Am. St. 818, 34 L. R. A. 368. For water works to serve the public. State v. City of Newark, 54 N. J. L. 62, 23 Atl. 129; Kountze v. Morris Aqueduct, 58 N. J. L. 303, 33 Atl. 252. Not necessary that works are to serve all inhabitants of the municipality if they are to serve all in a particular district. Pocantico Water Wks. Co. v. Bird, 130 N. Y. 249, 20 N. E. 246. So as to condemnation for purposes of irrigation. Board of Directors of Alameda Irr. Dist. v. Collins, 40 Neb. 41, 64

It would not be entirely safe, however, to apply with much liberality the language above quoted, that "where the public interest can be in any way promoted by the taking of private property," the taking can be considered for a public use. It is certain that there are very many cases in which the property of some individual owners would be likely to be better employed or occupied to the advancement of the public interest in other hands than in their own; but it does not follow from this circumstance alone that they may rightfully be dispossessed. It may be for the public benefit that all the wild lands of the State be improved and cultivated, all the low lands drained, all the unsightly places beautified, all dilapidated buildings replaced by new; because all these things tend to give an aspect of beauty, thrift, and comfort to the country, and thereby to invite settlement, increase the value of lands, and gratify the public taste; but the common law has never sanctioned an appropriation of property based upon these considerations alone; and some further element must therefore be involved before the appropriation can be regarded as sanctioned by our constitutions. The reason of the case and the settled practice of free governments must be our guides in determining what is or is not to be regarded a public use; and that only can be considered such where the government is supplying its own needs, or is furnishing facilities for its citizens in regard

N. W. 1050; Paxton & H. Irr. Co. & L. Co. v. Farmers' & M. Irr. & L. Co., 45 Neb. 884, 64 N. W. 343. Not public purpose where water is to be furnished to landowners only. Bradley v. Fall Brook Irr. Dist., 68 Fed. Rep. 948; rev. Fall Brook Irrigation District v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56. Drainage: Poussinone v. Baldwin, 145 Ind. 139, 44 N. E. 101. Public Parks: United States v. Cooper, 20 D. C. 104. Lands for lig. houses: Chapman v. United States, 190 U. S. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307. Lands for mill improvements: State v. Heppenheimer, 54 N. J. L. 268, 23 Atl. 664. Lands for cemetery though to be owned by private persons, if right of burial common to public. Stannard's Corners Rural Cem. Assn. v. Brandes, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 276; Farneman v. Mt. Pleasant Cem. Assn., 145 Ind. 314, 35 N. E. 271; Matter of Board of Street Opening, 133 N. Y. 329, 51 N. E. 816, 28 Am. St. 640. Condemnation in interest of public health is for public purpose. Van Reipen v. City of Jersey City, 58 N. J. L. 292, 33

Atl. 749. To preserve view of bridge is not public purpose: Parist Steel Co. v. City of Bridgeport, 60 Conn. 278, 22 Atl. 361, 13 L. R. A. 590. Use of lands for public park is public use. Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 252, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361. Grain elevator and warehouse for public convenience is. In re Stewart's Application, 65 Minn. 515, 68 N. W. 268, 33 L. R. A. 427. Lands for union terminal station. Ryan v. Louisville & N. T. Co., 192 Tenn. 111, 50 S. W. 744, 45 L. R. A. 393. Cannot condemn lands for supply pipe line to convey water to city until city has authorized owners of pipe line to supply public with water. Wisconsin Water Co. v. Winans, 85 Wis. 23, 64 N. W. 1003, 20 L. R. A. 692. Draining of agricultural lands across the lands of others, under the provisions of New York statutes and constitution is a taking of private property for private use and in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Petition of Tuthill, 163 N. Y. 132, 57 N. E. 303, 49 L. R. A. 781.]

to those matters of public necessity, convenience, or welfare, which, on account of their peculiar character, and the difficulty — perhaps impossibility — of making provision for them otherwise, it is alike proper, useful, and needful for the government to provide.

Every government is expected to make provision for the public ways, and for this purpose it may seize and appropriate lands. And as the wants of traffic and travel require facilities beyond those afforded by the common highway, over which any one may pass with his own vehicles, the government may establish the higher grade of highways, upon some of which only its own vehicles can be allowed to run, while others, differently constructed, shall be open to use by all on payment of toll. The common highway is kept in repair by assessments of labor and money; the tolls paid upon turnpikes, or the fares on railways, are the equivalents to these assessments; and when these improved ways are required by law to be kept open for use by the public impartially, they also may properly be called highways, and the use to which land for their construction is put be denominated a public use. The government also provides court-houses for the administration of justice; buildings for its seminaries of instruction;¹ aqueducts to convey pure and wholesome water into large towns;² it builds levees to prevent the country being overflowed by the rising streams;³ it may cause drains to be

¹ Williams v. School District, 33 Vt. 271. See Hooper v. Bridgewater, 102 Mass. 512; Long v. Fuller, 88 Pa. 170.

² Reddall v. Bryan, 14 Md. 444; Kane v. Baltimore, 15 Md. 240; Gardner v. Newburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 102, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Ham v. Salem, 100 Mass. 350; Burden v. Stein, 27 Ala. 104; Riche v. Bar Harbor Water Co., 75 Me. 91; Olmsted v. Prop'r's Morris Aqueduct, 46 N. J. L. 495; Lake Pleasanton W. Co. v. Contra Costa W. Co., 67 Cal. 669, 8 Pac. 501. Where land was to be taken for a canal, and it was set forth that "the uses for which said water is intended and designed are mining, irrigation, manufacturing, and household and domestic purposes," it was held a sufficient statement of public uses. Cummings v. Peters, 56 Cal. 593. A canal to bring logs and water to a city is for a public purpose. Dalies Lumbering Co. v. Urquhart, 16 Oreg. 57, 19 Pac. 78. [A taking for the improvement of the navigation of a river is for a public use. Kaukauna Water Power Co.

v. Green Bay and M. Canal Co., 142 U. S. 254, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173. State cannot condemn to create water power for sole purpose of leasing for manufacturing purposes though may lease surplus power where condemnation primarily for public use, Id. Obstruction to use of landing of riparian owner incidental to act of government in improving navigation without actual taking, contact with or flowing of the lands does not give right to compensation. Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578. State may authorize condemnation of water supply system by a city for its use. Long Island Water Supply Co. v. City of Brooklyn, 168 U. S. 656, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718. Fact that such company has a contract with the city to supply it water will not defeat such condemnation; a contract may be condemned like other property. Id.

³ Mithoff v. Carrollton, 12 La. Ann. 185; Cash v. Whitworth, 13 La. Ann. 491; Inge v. Police Jury, 14 La. Ann. 117.

constructed to relieve swamps and marshes of their stagnant water;¹ and other measures of general utility, in which the public at large are interested, and which require the appropriation of private property, are also within the power, where they fall within the reasons underlying the cases mentioned.²

¹ Anderson v. Kerns Draining Co., 14 Ind. 193; Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood County, 8 Ohio St. 333. See a clear statement of the general principle and its necessity in the last mentioned case. The drains, however, which can be authorized to be cut across the land of unwilling parties, or for which individuals can be taxed, must not be mere private drains, but must have reference to the public health, convenience, or welfare. Reeves v. Treasurer, &c., supra. And see People v. Nearing, 27 N. Y. 306. [May condemn for drainage to abate nuisance. Sweet v. Helich, 134 U. S. 359, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43. Term "sanitary" does not indicate public purpose. In re Theresa Drainage District, 90 Wis. 301, 63 N. W. 281; and see Poundstone v. Baldwin, 145 Ind. 183, 44 N. E. 191.] It is said in a New Jersey case that an act for the drainage of a large quantity of land, which in its present condition is not only worthless for cultivation but unfit for residence, and for an assessment of the cost by benefits, is for a purpose sufficiently public to justify an exercise of the right of eminent domain. Matter of Drainage of Lands, 35 N. J. 477. It is competent under the eminent domain to appropriate and remove a dam owned by private parties, in order to reclaim a considerable body of lands flowed by means of it, paying the owner of the dam its value. Talbot v. Hulson, 14 Gray, 417. See the valuable note to Breckman v. Railroad Co., 22 Am. Dec. 869, where the authorities as to what is a public use are collated.

² Such, for instance, as the construction of a public park, which in large cities is as much a matter of public utility as a railway, or a supply of pure water. See Matter of Central Park Extension, 16 Abb. Pr. Rep. 56; Owners of Ground v. Mayor, &c., of Albany, 15 Wend. 374; Brooklyn Park Com'rs v. Armstrong, 45 N. Y. 234, 8 Am. Rep. 79; County Court v. Griswold, 68 Mo. 175. The legislature may authorize land to be taken by an exposition company. Rees'

App., 12 Atl. 427. Or by a boom company for the purposes of a boom. Patterson v. Mississippi, &c., Boom Co., 3 Dill. 465. Or for the purposes of a telegraph line. Turnpike Co. v. News Co., 43 N. J. 381; New Orleans R. R. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., 53 Ala. 211; Pierce v. Drew, 136 Mass. 75. Or sewers in cities. Hidreth v. Lowell, 11 Gray, 345. Or for a market. Re Cooper, 28 Hun, 515. A city may be authorized to appropriate lands in order to fill them up, and thereby abate a nuisance upon them. Dingley v. Boston, 100 Mass. 544. But it may not appropriate a wharf to lease it to a private corporation. Belcher Sugar Refining Co. v. St. Louis Elev. Co., 82 Mo. 121. A private corporation may be empowered to exercise the right of eminent domain to obtain a way along which to lay pipe for the transportation of oil to a railroad or navigable water. West Va. Transportation Co. v. Volcanic Oil & Coal Co., 5 W. Va. 382. It is held in Evergreen Cemetery v. New Haven, 43 Conn. 234; Edgcombe v. Burlington, 43 Vt. 218, and Balch v. Commissioners, 103 Mass. 106; [Farneman v. Mt. Pleasant Cem. Assn., 135 Ind. 344, 35 N. E. 271; Westfield Cem. Assn. v. Danielson, 62 Conn. 319, 26 Atl. 845; Stannard's Corners Rural Cem. Assn. v. Brandes, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 270.] that lands may be appropriated under this power for a cemetery; but in Matter of Deansville Cemetery Association, 66 N. Y. 599, it is decided that this cannot be done for the exclusive use of a private corporation. [Board of Health v. Van Hoesen, 87 Mich. 533, 49 N. W. 594, and cases cited. These cases seem to proceed upon the theory that the right of burial is not common, but only at the will of the corporation owning.] Land may not be taken for a private warehouse and dock company. Matter of Eureka Basin, &c. Co., 96 N. Y. 42; nor for a railroad along the bottom of the Niagara Falls. Matter of Niagara Falls & W. Ry. Co., 108 N. Y. 375, 15 N. E. 429.

The development of mines has been

Whether the power of eminent domain can rightfully be exercised in the condemnation of lands for manufacturing purposes where the manufactories are to be owned, and occupied by individuals is a question upon which the authorities are at variance. Saw-mills, grist-mills, and various other manufactories are certainly a public necessity; and while the country is new, and capital not easily attainable for their erection, it sometimes seems to be essential that government should offer large inducements to parties who will supply this necessity. Before steam came into use, water was almost the sole reliance for motive power; and as reservoirs were generally necessary for this purpose, it would sometimes happen that the owner of a valuable mill site was unable to render it available, because the owners of lands which must be flowed to obtain a reservoir would neither consent to the construction of a dam, nor sell their lands except at extravagant and inadmissible prices. The legislatures in some of the States have taken the matter in hand, and have surmounted the difficulty, sometimes by authorizing the land to be appropriated, and at other times by permitting the erection of the dam, but requiring the mill-owner to pay annually to the proprietor of the land the damages caused by the flowing, to be assessed in some impartial mode.¹ The reasons for such statutes have been growing weaker with the introduction of steam power and the progress of improvement, but their validity has repeatedly been recognized in some of the States, and probably the same courts would continue still to recognize it, notwithstanding the public necessity may no longer appear to demand such laws.² The rights granted by these laws to mill-owners are said by Chief Justice Shaw, of Massachusetts, to be "granted for the better use of the water power, upon considerations of public policy and the general good;"³ and in this view, and in order to render available a valuable property which might otherwise be made of little use by narrow, selfish, and unfriendly conduct on the part of individuals, such laws may perhaps be sustained on the same grounds which support an exercise of the right of eminent held such a matter of public interest as would justify an exercise of the eminent domain. Hand Gold Mining Co. v. Packer, 69 Ga. 419; Dayton Mining Co. v. Seawell, 11 Nev. 894. But see Salt Company v. Brown, 7 W. Va. 191; Consolidated Channel Co. v. Railroad Co., 61 Cal. 261; Edgewood R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 257.

¹ See Angell on Watercourses, c. 12, for references to the statutes on this subject.

² "The encouragement of mills has always been a favorite object with the legislature: and though the reasons for it may have ceased, the favor of the legislature continues." Wolcott Woollen Manufacturing Co. v. Upham, 5 Pick. 292, 294. The practice in Michigan has been different. See Ryerson v. Brown, 55 Mich. 333, 24 Am. Rep. 594.

³ French v. Braintree Manufacturing Co., 23 Pick. 216, 220.

domain to protect, drain, and render valuable the lands which, by the overflow of a river, might otherwise be an extensive and worthless swamp.¹

¹ Action on the case for raising a dam across the Merrimac River, by which a mill stream emptying into that river, above the site of said dam, was set back and overflowed, and a mill of the plaintiff situated thereon, and the mill privilege, were damaged and destroyed. Demurrer to the declaration. The defendant company were chartered for the purpose of constructing a dam across the Merrimac River, and constructing one or more locks and canals, in connection with said dam, to remove obstructions in said river by falls and rapids, and to create a water power to be used for mechanical and manufacturing purposes. The defendants claimed that they were justified in what they had done, by an act of the legislature exercising the sovereign power of the State, in the right of eminent domain; that the plaintiff's property in the mill and mill privilege was taken and appropriated under this right; and that his remedy was by a claim of damages under the act, and not by action at common law as for a wrongful and unwarrantable encroachment upon his right of property. Shaw, Ch. J.: "It is then contended that if this act was intended to authorize the defendant company to take the mill power and mill of the plaintiff, it was void because it was not taken for public use, and it was not within the power of the government in the exercise of the right of eminent domain. This is the main question. In determining it we must look to the declared purposes of the act; and if a public use is declared, it will be so held, unless it manifestly appears by the provisions of the act that they can have no tendency to advance and promote such public use. The declared purposes are to improve the navigation of the Merrimac River, and to create a large mill power for mechanical and manufacturing purposes. In general, whether a particular structure, as a bridge, or a lock, or canal, or road, is for the public use, is a question for the legislature, and which may be presumed to have been correctly decided by them. Commonwealth v. Breed, 4 Pick. 400. That the improvement of the navigation of a river is done for the public use has been too frequently decided and acted upon to require authorities. And so to create a wholly artificial navigation by canals. The establishment of a great mill power for manufacturing purposes, as an object of great public interest, especially since manufacturing has come to be one of the great public industrial pursuits of the Commonwealth, seems to have been regarded by the legislature, and sanctioned by the jurisprudence of the Commonwealth, and in our judgment rightly so, in determining what is a public use, justifying the exercise of right of eminent domain. See St. 1s25, c. 148, incorporating the Salem Mill Dam Corporation; Boston & Roxbury Mill Dam Corporation v. Newman, 12 Pick. 407. The acts since passed, and the cases since decided on this ground, are very numerous. That the erection of this dam would have a strong and direct tendency to advance both these public objects, there is no doubt. We are therefore of opinion that the powers conferred on the corporation by this act were so done within the scope of the authority of the legislature, and were not in violation of the Constitution of the Commonwealth." Hazen v. Essex Company, 12 Cush. 475, 477. See also Boston & Roxbury Mill Corporation v. Newman, 12 Pick. 407; Fiske v. Framingham Manufacturing Co., 12 Pick. 67; Harding v. Goodlett, 3 Yerg. 41, 24 Am. Dec. 546. The courts of Wisconsin have sustained such laws. Newcomer v. Smith, 1 Chand. 71; Tilden v. Voegtlander, 2 Wis. 461; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 693. But with some hesitation in later cases. See Fisher v. Horlickon Co., 10 Wis. 351; Curtis v. Whipple, 24 Wis. 359. And see the note of Judge Redfield to Allen v. Inhabitants of Jay, Law Rep., Aug. 1853, p. 403. And those of Connecticut. Oliver v. Camp, 33 Conn. 532. And of Maine. Jordan v. Woodward, 40 Me. 317. And of Minnesota. Miller v. Troost, 14 Minn. 365. And of Kansas. Vernard v. Cross, 8 Kan. 248; Harding v. Funk, 8 Kan. 315. And of Indiana. Hankins v. Lawrence, 8 Blackf. 266. And they have been enforced elsewhere without question.

On the other hand, it is said that the legislature of New York has never exercised the right of eminent domain in favor of mills of any kind, and that "sites for steam-engines, hotels, churches, and other public conveniences might as well be taken by the exercise of this extraordinary power."¹ Similar views have been taken by the Supreme Courts of Alabama and Michigan.² It is quite possible that, in any State in which this question would be entirely a new one, and where it would not be embarrassed by long acquiescence, or by either judicial or legislative precedents, it might be held that these laws are not sound in principle, and that there is no such necessity, and consequently no such imperative reasons of public policy, as would be essential to support an exercise of the right of eminent domain.³ But accepting as correct the decisions which have been made, it must be conceded that the term "public use," as employed in the law of eminent domain, has a meaning much controlled by the necessity, and somewhat different from that which it bears generally.⁴

Burgess v. Clark, 13 Ired. 109; McAfee's Heirs v. Kennedy, 1 Lit. 92; Smith v. Connolly, 1 T. B. Monr. 58; Shackelford v. Coffey, 4 J. J. Marsh. 49; Crenshaw v. State River Co., 6 Rand. 245; Gammel v. Potter, 6 Iowa 548. The whole subject was very fully considered, and the validity of such legislation affirmed, in Great Falls Manuf. Co. v. Fernald, 47 N. H. 444. And see Asht v. Cummings, 50 N. H. 591. In Head v. Amoskeag Co., 113 U. S. 9, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, such an act was upheld as a regulation of the manner in which the rights of proprietors adjacent to a stream may be enjoyed. In Loughbridge v. Harris, 42 Ga. 500, an act for the condemnation of land for a grist-mill was held unconstitutional, though the tolls were regulated, and discrimination forbidden. In Newell v. Smith, 15 Wis. 101, it was held not constitutional to authorize the appropriation of the property, and leave the owner no remedy except to subsequently recover its value in an action of trespass.

¹ Hay v. Cohoes Company, 3 Barb. 47.

² Ryerson v. Brown, 35 Mich. 333, 24 Am. Rep. 564; Saddler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311. In this last case, however, it was assumed that lands for the purposes of grist-mills which grind for toll, and were required to serve the public impartially, might, under proper legislation, be taken under the right of eminent domain. The case of Loughbridge v. Harris, 42 Ga. 500, is contra. In Tyler v. Bescher, 44 Vt. 648, 8 Am. Rep. 398, it was held not competent, where the mills were subject to no such requirement. See the case, 8 Am. Rep. 398. And see note by Redfield, Am. Law Reg., Aug., 1873, p. 493.

³ See this subject in general discussed in a review of Angell on Watercourses, 2 Am. Jurist, p. 25.

⁴ In People v. Township Board of Salem, 20 Mich. 452, the court consider the question whether a use which is regarded as public for the purposes of an exercise of the right of eminent domain, is necessarily so for the purposes of taxation. They say: "Reasoning by analogy from one of the sovereign powers of government to another is exceedingly liable to deceive and mislead. An object may be public in one sense and for one purpose, when in a general sense and for other purposes it would be idle or misleading to apply the same term. All governmental powers exist for public purposes, but they are not necessarily to be exercised under the same conditions of public interest. The sovereign police power which the State possesses is to be exercised only for the general public welfare, but it reaches to every person, to every kind of business, to every species of property within the Commonwealth. The conduct of every individual, and the

The question what is a public use is always one of law. (a) Defence will be paid to the legislative judgment, as expressed in use of all property and of all rights is regulated by it, to any extent found necessary for the preservation of the public order, and also for the protection of the private rights of one individual against encroachment by others. The sovereign power of taxation is employed in a great many cases where the power of eminent domain might be made more immediately efficient and available, if constitutional principles could suffer it to be resorted to; but each of these has its own peculiar and appropriate sphere, and the object which is public for the demands of the one is not necessarily of a character to permit the exercise of the other."

"If we examine the subject critically, we shall find that the most important consideration in the case of eminent domain is the necessity of accomplishing some public good which is otherwise impracticable; and we shall also find that the law does not so much regard the means as the need. The power is much nearer akin to that of the public police than to that of taxation; it goes but a step farther, and that step is in the same direction. Every man has an abstract right to the exclusive use of his own property for his own enjoyment in such manner as he shall choose; but if he should choose to create a nuisance upon it, or to do anything which would preclude a reasonable enjoyment of adjacent property, the law would interfere to impose restraints. He is said to own his private lot to the centre of the earth, but he would not be allowed to excavate it indefinitely, lest his neighbor's lot should disappear in the excavation. The abstract right to make use of his own property in his own way is compelled to yield to the general comfort and protection of the community, and to a proper regard to relative rights in others. The situation of his property may even be such that he is compelled to dispose of it because the law will not suffer his regular business to be carried on upon it. A needful and lawful species of manufacture may so injuriously affect the health and comfort of the vicinity that it cannot be tolerated in a densely settled neighborhood, and therefore the owner of a lot in that neighborhood will not be allowed to engage in that manufacture upon it, even though it be his regular and legitimate business. The butcher in the vicinity of whose premises a village has grown up finds himself compelled to remove his business elsewhere, because his right to make use of his lot as a place for the slaughter of cattle has become inconsistent with the superior right of the community to the enjoyment of pure air and the accompanying blessings and comforts. The owner of a lot within the fire limits of a city may be compelled to part with the property, because he is unable to erect a brick or stone structure upon it, and the local regulations will not permit one of wood. Eminent domain only recognizes and enforces the superior right of the community against the selfishness of individuals in a similar way. Every branch of needful industry has a right to exist, and the community has a right to demand that it be permitted to exist; and if for that purpose a peculiar locality already in possession of an individual is essential, the owner's right to undisturbed occupancy must yield to the superior interest of the public. A railroad cannot go around the farm of every unwilling person, and the business of transporting persons and property for long distances by rail, which has been found so essential to the general enjoyment and welfare, could never have existed if it were in the power of any unwilling person to stop the road at his boundary, or to demand unreasonable terms as a condition of passing him. The law interferes in these cases, and regulates the relative rights of the owner and of the community with as strict regard to justice and equity as the circumstances will permit. It does not deprive the owner of his property, but it compels him to dispose of so much of it as is essential on equitable terms. While, enactments providing for an appropriation of property, but it will not be conclusive.¹

(a) [The question of whether the use is a public one may become a "federal question," under the "due process of law" clause of the federal constitution. Failbrook Irrigation District v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Missouri Pacific Ry. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130.]

The Taking of Property.

Although property can only be taken for a public use, and the legislature must determine in what cases, it has been long settled that it is not essential the taking should be to or by the State itself, if by any other agency, in the opinion of the legislature, the use can be made equally effectual for the public benefit. There are many cases in which the appropriation consists simply in throwing the property open to use by such persons as may see fit to avail themselves of it; as in the case of common highways and public parks. In these cases the title of the owner is not disturbed, except as it is charged with this burden; and the State defends the easement, not by virtue of any title in the property, but by means of criminal proceedings when the general right is disturbed. But in other cases it seems important to take the title;² and in many of these it is convenient, if not necessary, that the taking be, not by the State, but by the municipality for which the use is specially designed, and to whose care and government it will be confided. When property is needed for a district school-house, it is proper that the district appropriate it; therefore, eminent domain establishes no industry, it so regulates the relative rights of all that no individual shall have it in his power to preclude its establishment." On this general subject see Olmstead v. Camp, 33 Conn. 532, in which it was very fully and carefully considered.

¹ Harding v. Goodlett, 3 Yerg. 40, 24 Am. Dec. 546; Bankhead v. Brown, 25 Iowa, 540; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Lake, 71 Ill. 333; Olmstead v. Camp, 33 Conn. 551; Tyler v. Beacher, 44 Vt. 648; Matter of Deansville Cemetery Association, 56 N. Y. 599, 23 Am. Rep. 86; Matter of Union Ferry Co., 98 N. Y. 139; Matter of Niagara Falls & W. Ry. Co., 108 N. Y. 375, 15 N. E. 429; Loughbridge v. Harris, 42 Ga. 500; Water Works Co. v. Burkhardt, 41 Ind. 364; Scudder v. Trenton, &c. Co., 1 N. J. Eq. 694, 23 Am. Dec. 756; Ryerson v. Brown, 35 Mich. 333, 24 Am. Rep. 564; Beekman v. Railroad Co., 3 Paige, 45, 22 Am. Dec. 679, and note; McQuillen v. Hatton, 42 Ohio St. 202; Savannah v. Hancock, 91 Mo. 54, 3 S. W. 215; In re St. Paul & N. P. Ry. Co., 34 Minn. 227, 26 N. W. 345; [State ex rel. City of Cape Girardeau v.

Engleman, 106 Mo. 628, 17 S. W. 759; Shoemaker v. U. S., 147 U. S. 282, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 861; Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767, 57 N. W. 559, 41 Am. St. 771, 22 L. R. A. 496; Call v. Town of Wilkesboro, 115 N. C. 337, 20 S. E. 468; Wulzen v. Board of Supervisors, 101 Cal. 15, 35 Pac. 353, 40 Am. St. 17, and note; Van Witsen v. Gutman, 79 Md. 465, 29 Atl. 605, 24 L. R. A. 493; Moore v. Sanford, 151 Mass. 285, 24 N. E. 323, 7 L. R. A. 151; Waterloo, &c. Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 128 N. Y. 345, 28 N. E. 358; Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson, 30 Oreg. 205, 48 Pac. 799, 60 Am. St. 818. But see, contra, City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 235, 27 Pac. 664. See extended note, 89 Am. St. 926.]

² The fee is not to be taken unless the purpose requires it. New Orleans, &c. R. R. Co. v. Gay, 32 La. Ann. 471; New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Morris Canal, &c. Co., 44 N. J. Eq. 398, 15 Atl. 227. See Hibernia R. R. Co. v. Camp, 47 N. J. L. 518. There are constitutional provisions in some States which limit the taking for railroads to a mere easement.

and it is strictly in accordance with the general theory as well as with the practice of our government for the State to delegate to the district the exercise of the power of eminent domain for this special purpose. So a county may be authorized to take lands for its court-house or jail; a city, for its town hall, its reservoirs of water, its sewers, and other public works of like importance. In these cases no question of power arises; the taking is by the public; the use is by the public; and the benefit to accrue therefrom is shared in greater or less degree by the whole public.

If, however, it be constitutional to appropriate lands for mill dams or mill sites, it ought also to be constitutional that the taking be by individuals instead of by the State or any of its organized political divisions; since it is no part of the business of the government to engage in manufacturing operations which come in competition with private enterprise; and the cases must be very peculiar and very rare where a State or municipal corporation could be justified in any such undertaking. And although the practice is not entirely uniform on the subject, the general sentiment is adverse to the construction of railways by the State, and the opinion is quite prevalent, if not general, that they can be better managed, controlled, and operated for the public benefit in the hands of individuals than by State or municipal officers or agencies.

And while there are unquestionably some objections to compelling a citizen to surrender his property to a corporation, whose corporators, in receiving it, are influenced by motives of private gain and emolument, so that to them the purpose of the appropriation is altogether private, yet conceding it to be settled that these facilities for travel and commerce are a public necessity, if the legislature, reflecting the public sentiment, decide that the general benefit is better promoted by their construction through individuals or corporations than by the State itself, it would clearly be pressing a constitutional maxim to an absurd extreme if it were to be held that the public necessity should only be provided for in the way which is least consistent with the public interest. Accordingly, on the principle of public benefit, not only the State and its political divisions, but also individuals and corporate bodies, have been authorized to take private property for the construction of works of public utility, and when duly empowered by the legislature so to do, their private pecuniary interest does not preclude their being regarded as public agencies in respect to the public good which is sought to be accomplished.¹

¹ Beckman v. Saratoga & Schenectady; Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., R. R. Co., 3 Paige, 75; 22 Am. Dec. 679; 2 Pet. 245; Buenaparte v. Camden &

The Necessity for the Taking.

The authority to determine in any case whether it is needful to permit the exercise of this power must rest with the State itself; and the question is always one of strictly political character, not requiring any hearing upon the facts or any judicial determination.¹ Nevertheless, when a work or improvement of local importance only is contemplated, the need of which must be determined upon a view of the facts which the people of the vicinity may be supposed best to understand, the question of necessity is generally referred to some local tribunal, and it may even be submitted to a jury to decide upon evidence.² But parties interested have no constitutional right to be heard upon the question, unless the State constitution clearly and expressly recognizes and provides for it. On general principles, the final decision rests with the legislative department of the State;³ and if the question is Ambley R. R. Co., 1 Bald. 295; Bloodgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. R. Co., 18 Wend. 6; Lebanon v. Olcott, 1 N. H. 339; Petition of Mount Washington Road Co., 35 N. H. 134; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 608; Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427; Stevens v. Middlesex Canal, 12 Mass. 466; Boston Mill Dam v. Newman, 12 Pick. 467; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229; Armington v. Barnet, 15 Vt. 745; White River Turnpike v. Central Railroad, 21 Vt. 599; Raleigh & R. R. Co. v. Davis, 2 Dev. & Bt. 451; Whiteman's Ex'r v. Wilmington & R. R. Co., 2 Harr. 514; Bradley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 21 Conn. 294; Olmstead v. Camp, 33 Conn. 532; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 159, 21 Pac. 547.

¹ Varick v. Smith, 5 Paige Ch. 137, 28 Am. Dec. 417; Adridge v. Railroad Co., 2 Stew. & Port. 139, 25 Am. Dec. 307; [St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Petty, 57 Ark. 359, 21 S. W. 884, 20 L. R. A. 424; Van Wilton v. Gutman, 79 Md. 405, 29 Atl. 608, 24 L. R. A. 403; Moore v. Sanford, 151 Mass. 285, 24 N. E. 328, 7 L. R. A. 151; Wisconsin Water Co. v. Winkens, 33 Am. St. 813, 85 Wis. 26, 54 N. W. 1073; Paxton & Hershey Irrigating C. & L. Co. v. Farmer's & M. I. & L. Co., 45 Neb. 884, 84 N. W. 343, 50 Am. St. 685, and note.]

² Iron R. R. Co. v. Ironton, 19 Ohio St. 299. The constitutions of some of the States require the question of the necessity of any specific appropriation to be submitted to a jury; and this requirement cannot be dispensed with. Mansfield, & R. R. Co. v. Clarke, 23 Mich. 519; Arnold v. Decatur, 20 Mich. 77; [Saginaw, & C. Ry. Co. v. Bordner, 198 Mich. 256, 66 N. W. 62. As to what is "necessity," see City of Pasadena v. Stinson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 694; City of Santa Cruz v. Enright, 95 Cal. 105, 30 Pac. 197; Detroit & S. P. Ry. Co. v. City of Detroit, 81 Mich. 502, 46 N. W. 12. Future as well as present needs to be considered. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Faltz, 53 Fed. Rep. 627; Kountze v. Prop. Morris Aqueduct, 58 N. J. L. 303, 33 Atl. 252, 58 N. J. L. 695, 34 Atl. 1099. Is a practical question; Butte & P. Ry. Co. v. Montana U. Ry. Co., 16 Mont. 504, 41 Pac. 232, 31 L. R. A. 298.]

³ United States v. Harris, 1 Sum. 21, 42; Ford v. Chicago, & R. R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; People v. Smith, 21 N. Y. 595; Water Works Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364; Taft's Exec. v. Centrl. Lunatic Asylum, 84 Va. 271, 4 S. E. 697. If the use is public, the legislative determination of necessity is conclusive. Sholl v. German Coal Co., 118 Ill. 427, 19 N. E. 199; Matter of Union Ferry Co., 98 N. Y. 139; [O'Hare v. Chicago, M. & N. Ry. Co., 123 Ill. 151, 28 N. E. 923; Barrett v. Kemp, 91 Iowa, 295, 59 N. W. 76; Lynch v. Forbes, 181 Mass. 302, 87 N. E. 437, 42 Am. St. 402, and extended note; City of Cape Girardeau v. Honck, 123 Mo. 607, 31

referred to any tribunal for trial, the reference and the opportunity for being heard are matters of favor and not of right. The State is not under any obligation to make provision for a judicial contest upon that question. And where the case is such that it is proper to delegate to individuals or to a corporation (a) the power to appropriate property, it is also competent to delegate the authority to decide upon the necessity for the taking.¹

S. W. 333; City of Philadelphia v. Ward, 174 Pa. St. 45, 34 Atl. 458; Douglas v. Byrnes, 50 Fed. Rep. 29; Joplin Consol. Mining Co. v. City of Joplin, 124 Mo. 120, 27 S. W. 496; Mono Canella Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; but see contra Stearnes v. Barre, 78 Vt. 281, 50 Atl. 1086, 87 Am. St. 741. See also note, 87 Am. St. 734. The extent of taking is a legislative question. Steenmaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; United States v. Gettysburgh Elec. Ry. Co., 160 U. S. 658, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, rev. United States v. Tract of Land, &c., 67 Fed. Rep. 512. Courts will relieve against abuse of power to determine necessity. Colorado E. Ry. Co. v. W. Pac. Ry. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 236; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Petty, 57 Ark. 359, 21 S. W. 884, 23 L. R. A. 434; Creston Water Wks. Co. v. McGrath, 89 Iowa, 5-2, 56 N. W. 289; Robinson v. Pa. Ry. Co., 161 Pa. St. 531, 29 Atl. 238.]

¹ People v. Smith, 21 N. Y. 505; Ford v. Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co., 14 Wis. 617; Matter of Albany St., 11 Wend. 152, 25 Am. Dec. 619; Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. 484; Hays v. Risher, 32 Pa. St. 129; North Missouri R. R. Co. v. Lackland, 25 Mo. 515; Same v. Gott, 25 Mo. 540; Bankard v. Brown, 25 Iowa. 540; Contra Costa R. R. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 223; Matter of Fowler, 53 N. Y. 60; N. Y. Central & R. R. Co. v. Met. Gas Co., 63 N. Y. 324; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Lake, 71 Ill. 343; Warren v. St. Paul, &c. R. R. Co., 18 Minn. 844; Smeaton v. Martin, 57 Wis. 574, 15 N. W. 403; State v. Stewart, 74 Wis. 620, 43 N. W. 947. But where a general power to condemn is given, for example, to a railroad company, the necessity for its exercise in the taking of particular property is a judicial question.

Matter of New York Central R. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 407; In re St. Paul, & N. P. Ry. Co., 84 Minn. 227, 25 N. W. 345; Olmsted v. Prop'rs Morris Aqueduct, 46 N. J. L. 495; Tracy v. Elizabethtown, &c. R. R. Co., 80 Ky. 259; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Mateo Water Works, 64 Cal. 123, 28 Pac. 447. In the case first above cited, Denio, J., says: "The question then is, whether the State, in the exercise of the power to appropriate the property of individuals to a public use, where the duty of judging of the expediency of making the appropriation, in a class of cases, is committed to public officers, is obliged to afford to the owners of the property an opportunity to be heard before those officers when they sit for the purpose of making the determination. I do not speak now of the process for arriving at the amount of compensation to be paid to the owners, but of the determination whether, under the circumstances of a particular case, the property required for the purpose shall be taken or not; and I am of opinion that the State is not under any obligation to make provisions for a judicial contest upon that question. The only part of the constitution which refers to the subject is that which forbids private property to be taken for public use without compensation, and that which prescribes the manner in which the compensation shall be ascertained. It is not pretended that the statute under consideration violates either of these provisions. There is therefore no constitutional injunction on the point under consideration. The necessity for appropriating private property for the use of the public or of the government is not a judicial question. The power resides in the legislature. It may be exercised by means of a statute which shall at once designate the property to

(a) [Private corporation cannot be authorized to condemn for the use of a municipality or vice versa. Seattle & Montana Ry. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 150, 34 Pac. 551, 38 Am. St. 866, 22 L. R. A. 217.]

How much Property may be taken.

The taking of property must always be limited to the necessity of the case, and consequently no more can be appropriated in any instance than the proper tribunal shall adjudge to be needed for the particular use for which the appropriation is made. When a part only of a man's premises is needed by the public, the necessity for the appropriation of that part will not justify the taking of the whole, even though compensation be made therefor. The moment the appropriation goes beyond the necessity of the case, it ceases to be justified on the principles which underlie the right of eminent domain.¹ If, however, the statute providing for such be appropriated and the purpose of the appropriation; or it may be delegated to public officers, or, as it has been repeatedly held, to private corporations established to carry on enterprises in which the public are interested. There is no restraint upon the power, except that requiring compensation to be made. And where the power is committed to public officers, it is a subject of legislative discretion to determine what prudential regulations shall be established to secure a discreet and judicious exercise of the authority. The constitutional provision securing a trial by jury in certain cases, and that which declares that no citizen shall be deprived of his property without due process of law, have no application to the case. The jury trial can only be claimed as a constitutional right where the subject is judicial in its character. The exercise of the right of eminent domain stands on the same ground with the power of taxation. Both are emanations of the law-making power. They are the attributes of political sovereignty, for the exercise of which the legislature is under no necessity to address itself to the courts. In imposing a tax, or in appropriating the property of a citizen, or a class of citizens, for a public purpose, with a proper provision for compensation, the legislative act is itself due process of law; though it would not be if it should undertake to appropriate the property of one citizen for the use of another, or to confiscate the property of one person or a class of persons, or a particular description of property, upon some view of public policy, where it could not be said to be taken for a public use. It follows from these views that it is not necessary for the legislature, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, either directly, or indirectly through public officers or agents, to invest the proceedings with the forms or substance of judicial process. It may allow the owner to intervene and participate in the discussion before the officer or board to whom the power is given of determining whether the appropriation shall be made in a particular case, or it may provide that the officers shall act upon their own views of propriety and duty, without the aid of a forensic contest. The appropriation of the property is an act of public administration, and the form and manner of its performance is such as the legislature in its discretion prescribes."

The fact that a road company has purchased a right of way across a man's land and bargained with him to build it, will not preclude its appropriating a right of way over the same land on another line. Cape Girardeau, &c. Road v. Dennis, 67 Mo. 438; [Baltimore, &c. Ry. Co. v. P. W. & K. Ry. Co., 17 W. Va. 512, 843; Railroad Co. v. Blake, 9 Rich. 228. See Lynch v. Forbes, 161 Mass. 302, 87 N. E. 437, 42 Am St. 402.]

¹ By a statute of New York it was enacted that whenever a part only of a lot or parcel of land should be required for the purposes of a city street, if the commissioners for assessing compensation should deem it expedient to include the whole lot in the assessment, they should have power so to do; and the part not wanted for the particular street or improvement should, upon the confirmation of the report, become vested in the appropriation is acted upon, and the property owner accepts the compensation awarded to him under it, he will be precluded by this implied assent from afterwards objecting to the excessive appropriation.¹ And where land is taken for a public work, there is nothing in the principle we have stated which will preclude the appropriation of whatever might be necessary for incidental conveniences: such as the workshops or depot buildings of a railway company,² or materials to be used in the construction of their road, and so on. (a) Express legislative power, however, is needed for these purposes; it will not follow that, because such things are convenient to the accomplishment of the general object, the public may appropriate them without express authority of law; but the power to appropriate must be expressly con-corporation, and might be appropriated to public uses, or sold in case of no such appropriation. Of this statute it was said by the Supreme Court of New York: "If this provision was intended merely to give to the corporation capacity to take property under such circumstances with the consent of the owner, and then to dispose of the same, there can be no objection to it; but if it is to be taken literally, that the commissioners may, against the consent of the owner, take the whole lot, when only a part is required for public use, and the residue to be applied to private use, it assumes a power which, with all respect, the legislature did not possess. The constitution, by authorizing the appropriation of private property to public use, impliedly declares that for any other use private property shall not be taken from one and applied to the private use of another. It is in violation of natural right: and if it is not in violation of the letter of the constitution, it is of its spirit, and cannot be supported. This power has been supposed to be convenient when the greater part of a lot is taken, and only a small part left, not required for public use, and that small part of but little value in the hands of the owner. In such case the corporation has been supposed best qualified to take and dispose of such parcels, or gores, as they have sometimes been called; and probably this assumption of power has been acquiesced in by the proprietors. I know of no case where the power has been questioned, and where it has received the deliberate sanction of this court. Suppose a case where only a few feet, or even inches, are wanted, from one end of a lot to widen a street, and a valuable building stands upon the other end of such lot; would the power be conceded to exist to take the whole lot, whether the owner consented or not? The quantity of the residue of any lot cannot vary the principle. The owner may be very unwilling to part with only a few feet; and I hold it equally incompetent for the legislature thus to dispose of private property, whether feet or acres are the subject of this assumed power." Matter of Albany St., 11 Wen. 151, 25 Am. Dec. 618, per Savage, Ch. J. To the same effect is Dunn v. City Council, Harper, 120. And see Paul v. Detroit, 32 Mich. 108; Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co., 17 W. Va. 812.

¹ Embury v. Conner, 2 N. Y. 511. There is clearly nothing in constitutional principles which would preclude the legislature from providing that a man's property might be taken with his assent, whether the assent was evidenced by deed or not; and if he accepts payment, he must be deemed to assent. See Haskell v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 208.

² Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. Co. v. Wilson, 17 Ill. 123; Low v. Galena & C. U. R. R. Co., 18 Ill. 324; Giesy v. Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 303. Or extra track room. Matter of Staten Island Transit Co., 103 N. Y. 231, 8 N. E. 548.

(a) [A question as to the amount to be taken is a legislative not a judicial one. U. S. v. Gettysburg Elec. Ry. Co., 100 U. S. 693, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.]

ferred, and the public agencies seeking to exercise this high prerogative must be careful to keep within the authority delegated, since the public necessity cannot be held to extend beyond what has been plainly declared on the face of the legislative enactment.

What constitutes a Taking of Property.

Any proper exercise of the powers of government, which does not directly encroach upon the property of an individual, or disturb him in its possession or enjoyment, will not entitle him to compensation, or give him a right of action.¹ If, for instance, the State, under its power to provide and regulate the public highways, should authorize the construction of a bridge across a navigable river, it is quite possible that all proprietary interests in land upon the river might be injuriously affected; but such pro and con cited in notes to Selden v. Jacksonville, 14 L. R. A. 370, and 29 Am. St. 278. Many of which depend upon particular statutes; and Buhl v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 98 Mich. 568, 57 N. W. 829, 23 L. R. A. 392; Dantzer v. Indianapolis Union Ry. Co., 141 Ind. 634, 39 N. E. 229, 84 L. R. A. 766.] Incidental injury to adjoining lot-owners from constructing a tunnel in a street to pass under a river will give no right of action. Transportation Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635. See the case in the Circuit Court, 7 Bliss. 45. But a railroad company cannot be required at its own expense to construct and maintain across its right of way every new highway which may be laid out over it. That would be a taking without just compensation. People v. Lake Shore, &c. Ry. Co., 52 Mich. 277, 17 N. W. 641; Chicago & G. T. Ry. Co. v. Hough, 61 Mich. 597, 28 N. W. 532. [Statute requiring existing railway companies to build farm crossings, their roads having been built when the statute did not require it, is unconstitutional. If such crossings are considered as for public use, it is taking without compensation. People v. D. G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 79 Mich. 471, 44 N. W. 934, 7 L. R. A. 717. The State or its grantees may construct wharves upon its lands under navigable waters without compensation to riparian owners for injuries resulting. Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 2 Wash. 236, 25 Pac. 550, 12 L. R. A. 632.]

¹ Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co., 1 W. & S. 846; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Navigation Co., 14 S. & R. 71; Monongahela Navigation Co. v. Coons, 6 W. & S. 101; Davidson v. Boston & Maine R. R. Co., 3 Cush. 91; Gould v. Hudson River R. R. Co., 12 Barb. 613, and 6 N. Y. 522; Radcliff v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195; Murray v. Menefee, 20 Ark. 561; Hooker v. New Haven & Northampton Co., 14 Conn. 149; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188; Fuller v. Edings, 11 Rich. Law, 239; Eddings v. Seabrook, 12 Rich. Law, 504; Richardson v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 435; Kennett's Petition, 24 N. H. 139; Alexander v. Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 247; Richmond, &c. Co. v. Rogers, 1 Davall. 135; Harvey v. Lackawanna, &c. R. R. Co., 47 Pa. St. 428; Tinkum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 21; Railroad Co. v. Richmond, 98 U. S. 621. The discontinuance of a highway does not entitle parties incommoded thereby to compensation. Fearing v. Irwin, 55 N. Y. 486; [Lerree District No. 9 v. Farmer, 101 Cal. 178, 35 Pac. 559, 23 L. R. A. 388. This is particularly true if such persons are not abutting owners. Stanwood v. City of Malden, 157 Mass. 17, 31 N. E. 702, 16 L. R. A. 591; Glasgow v. City of St. Louis, 107 Mo. 108, 17 S. W. 743. To the effect that vacation of a street is a taking, see Cullen v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Ry. Co., 68 Conn. 211, 23 Atl. 210; Pearsall v. Eaton County Supervisors, 74 Mich. 558, 42 N. W. 77, 4 L. R. A. 193. See cases

injury could no more give a valid claim against the State for damages, than could any change in the general laws of the State, which, while keeping in view the general good, might injuriously affect particular interests.¹ So if by the erection of a dam in order to improve navigation the owner of a fishery finds it diminished in value,² or if by deepening the channel of a river to im-

¹ Davidson v. Boston & Maine R. R. Co., 3 Cush. 91; Transportation Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635.

² Sarunk v. Schaylkil Navigation Co., 14 S. & R. 71. In Green v. Swift, 47 Cal. 536, and Green v. State, 73 Cal. 29, 11 Pac. 602, 14 Pac. 610, it is held that where one finds his land injured in consequence of a change in the current of a river, caused by straightening it, he cannot claim compensation as of right. [A riparian proprietor is entitled to compensation for land taken for public dam, for overflow of his lands, and diversion of water by reason thereof. Kaukauna W. P. Co. v. Green Bay & M. C. Co., 142 U. S. 254, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173. But not, it seems, for injury from washing away soil of banks through reasonable increase of flow of water at times, caused by a dam authorized by the legislature. Brooks v. Cedar Brook & S. C. R. I. Co., 82 Me. 17, 19 Atl. 87, 7 L. R. A. 460; nor for injuries to rice fields by construction of harbor improvements in a navigable stream. Mills v. United States, 48 Fed. Rep. 738, 12 L. R. A. 673; Farist Steel Co. v. City of Bridgeport, 60 Conn. 278, 22 Atl. 531, 13 L. R. A. 590; Ramsey v. N. Y. & C. Ry. Co., 133 N. Y. 79, 30 N. E. 634, 28 Am. St. 600. The construction by the United States of a pier in a navigable river under authority of Congress for the improvement of navigation gives an owner of lands bordering on the river no right to compensation though his access to navigable water be cut off. Saranton v. Wheeler, 113 Mich. 665, 71 N. W. 1691, aff. 179 U. S. 141, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48. Same doctrine, Sage v. New York, 154 N. Y. 61, 47 N. E. 1009, 31 Am. St. 592, 38 L. R. A. 696. A riparian owner on navigable water owns to high-water mark, which is that line below which the lands are so frequently flowed that they are not productive as agricultural lands, and the State cannot, even in aid of public navigation, by artificial means maintain such waters above high-water mark to the injury of riparian owners. In re Minnetonka Lake Improvement, 56 Minn. 513, 58 N. W. 295, 45 Am. St. 494. Below high-water mark the State has full authority and right on navigable waters to do whatever it pleases in aid of public navigation, and any injury resulting incidentally to the riparian owner is damnum absque injuria. In re Minnetonka Lake Improvement, supra. Right in lands flowed under exercise of right of eminent domain is more than a mere easement. It includes the right of exclusive occupation, and carries right to cut ice which forms on the water. Wright v. Woodcock, 86 Me. 113, 29 Atl. 953, 24 L. R. A. 493. See also, on general subject of taking riparian interests in lands, Patten Paper Co. Ltd. v. Kaukauna Water Power Co., 90 Wis. 370, 61 N. W. 1121, 63 N. W. 1019, 28 L. R. A. 443; Priew v. Wisconsin State Land & Imp. Co., 93 Wis. 534, 87 N. W. 918, 83 L. R. A. 645; Carlson v. St. Louis River D. & I. Co., 73 Minn. 128, 75 N. W. 1044, 72 Am. St. 610, 41 L. R. A. 371; Plant Bros. & Co. v. Waterbury, 72 Conn. 531, 43 Atl. 154, 43 L. R. A. 631; Valparaiso v. Hagen, 133 Ind. 337, 54 N. E. 1002, 48 L. R. A. 707. These last two cases are opposed to each other on the question of whether a riparian owner is entitled to compensation for the casting of the sewage of a city upon his lands to their injury. The Connecticut case finds support in Smith v. Sedalia, 152 Mo. 283, 38 S. W. 907, 43 L. R. A. 711, and in Grey ex rel. Simmons v. Paterson, — N. J. —, 45 Atl. 935. The retention of surface water on lot in city, caused by change of grade in street, is not a taking in violation of constitution. Jordan v. Benwood, 42 W. Va. 312, 26 S. E. 256, 57 Am. St. 853, 30 L. R. A. 619. In Maine and Massachusetts where the "great ponds" belong to the State, the taking of a reasonable quantity of water by authority of the State is not a "taking" as against a mill owner with a water power on the outlet. Auburn v.

prove the navigation a spring is destroyed,¹ or by a change in the grade of a city street the value of adjacent lots is diminished,² —

Union Water Power Co., 90 Me. 576, 38 Atl. 561, 38 L. R. A. 188. The diversion of water from its natural course in which it serves as motive power for a mill is in Michigan unlawful, and will be enjoined where such diversion is for drainage purposes only. Stock v. Jefferson, 114 Mich. 357, 72 N. W. 132, 38 L. R. A. 355.]

¹ Commonwealth v. Richter, 1 Pa. St. 467. But in Winkleman v. Des Moines, &c. Ry. Co., 62 Iowa, 11, 17 N. W. 82, the value of a spring destroyed in railroad construction is held recoverable. [Incidental draining of a well through construction of a public work is a "direct injuring" of property within the meaning of that term in a statute authorizing the construction. United States v. Alexander, 148 U. S. 188, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529.] It is justly said by Mr. Justice Miller, in Pumpelly v. The Great Bay, &c. Co., 18 Wall. 166, 180, that the decisions "that for the consequential injury to the property of an individual from the prosecution of improvement of roads, streets, rivers, and other highways for the public good, there is no redress," "have gone to the extreme and limit of sound judicial construction in favor of this principle, and in some cases beyond it; and it remains true that where real estate is actually invaded by superinduced additions of water, earth, sand, or other material, or by having any artificial structure placed on it, so as effectually to destroy or impair its usefulness, it is a taking within the meaning of the Constitution." See also Arimond v. Green Bay, &c. Co., 31 Wis. 316; Aurora v. Reed, 57 Ill. 29, 11 Am. Rep. 1. This whole subject is most elaborately considered by Smith, J., in Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 504. It was decided in that case that, notwithstanding a party had received compensation for the taking of his land for a railroad, he was entitled to a further remedy at the common law for the flooding of his land in consequence of the road being cut through a ridge on the land of another; and that this flooding was a taking of his property within the meaning of the constitution. The cases to the contrary are all considered by the learned judge, who is able to adduce very forcible reasons for his conclusions. [A change in the plan of construction of a railway after condemnation may entitle the owner of lands condemned to additional compensation. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. McDougall, 126 Ill. 111, 18 N. E. 291, 1 L. R. A. 207. The conversion of a public way into a pleasure driveway, and excluding loaded vehicles from it, is not, as against persons desiring to use it with such vehicles, a taking of their property for public use without compensation. Cicero Lumber Co. v. Cicero, 178 Ill. 9, 51 N. E. 758, 63 Am. St. 155, 42 L. R. A. 696.] Compare Aldrich v. Cheshire R. R. Co., 21 N. H. 859; West Branch, &c. Canal Co. v. Mulliner, 68 Pa. St. 357; Bellinger v. N. Y. Central R. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 42; Hatch v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 49; and cases, ante, p. 767.

² British Plate Manufacturing Co. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 794; Matter of Furman Street, 17 Wend. 649; Radoliff's Ex'rs v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195; Graves v. Otis, 2 Hill. 466; Wilson v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 1 Denio. 595; Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 279; Roberts v. Chicago, 26 Ill. 249; Charlton v. Alleghany City, 1 Grant, 208; La Fayette v. Bush, 19 Ind. 326; Macy v. Indianapolis, 17 Ind. 267; Vincennes v. Richards, 23 Ind. 881; Green v. Reading, 9 Watts, 352; O'Connor v. Pittsburg, 18 Pa. St. 187; In re Ridge Street, 23 Pa. St. 391; Callendar v. Marsh, 1 Pick. 418; Creal v. Keokuk, 4 Greene (Iowa), 47; Smith v. Washington, 20 How. 133; Skinner v. Hartford Bridge Co., 29 Conn. 523; Benden v. Nashua, 17 N. H. 477; Pontiac v. Carter, 32 Mich. 164; Goszier v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593; Stewart v. Clinton, 79 Mo. 603; Kehrer v. Richmond, 81 Va. 745; Meth. Epis. Church v. Wyandotte, 31 Kan. 721, 3 Pac. 527. See cases, ante, p. 275, and Cooklin v. New York, &c. Ry. Co., 102 N. Y. 107, 6 N. E. 604; Uline v. New York, &c. R. R. Co., 101 N. Y. 98, 4 N. E. 536; Henderson v. Minneapolis, 32 Minn. 313, 20 N. W. 822; Spellen v. City of Jacksonville, 28 Fla. 578, 10 So. 457, 29 Am. St. 278 and note 14 L. R. A. 870. It seems that where the constitution contains a provision requiring comin these and similar cases the law affords no redress for the injury. So if in consequence of the construction of a public work an injury occurs, but the work was constructed on proper plan and without negligence, and the injury is caused by accidental and extraordinary circumstances, the injured party cannot demand compensation.¹

compensation for property "damaged" for public use, that a change of grade, resulting in damage, gives an action. Rauenstein v. N. Y. L. & W. Ry. Co., 136 N. Y. 538, 32 N. E. 1074, 18 L. R. A. 768; O'Brien v. Philadelphia, 150 Pa. 589, 24 Atl. 1047, 59 Am. St. 832, and note, pp. 835 et seq.; Henderson v. McClain, 102 Ky. 402, 43 S. W. 700, 39 L. R. A. 349; Searle v. City of Lead, 10 S. D. 312, 405, 73 N. W. 101, 913. 39 L. R. A. 345; Pueblo v. Strait, 20 Col. 13, 36 Pac. 789, 46 Am. St. 273, 24 L. R. A. 392; Dickerman v. Duluth, — Minn. —, 92 N. W. 1113; Brown v. City of Seattle, 5 Wash. 35, 31 Pac. 313, 32 Pac. 214, 18 L. R. A. 161. Though property does not abut on the street but on an alley opening into it. Id. There is no taking as against abutting owner where a railway company constructs in a public way a stone abutment nine feet high which reduces the width in front of his premises to ten feet, interfering with access of light and air, and almost destroying access to the abutting property. Garrett v. Lake Roland Elevated R. Co., 79 Md. 277, 29 Atl. 830, 24 L. R. A. 636. Similar cases are Willis v. Winona, 59 Minn. 27, 60 N. W. 814, 26 L. R. A. 142; Home Building & C. Co. v. City of Roanoke, 51 Va. 62, 20 S. E. 505, 27 L. R. A. 551. But see Field v. Barling, 149 Ill. 556, 37 N. E. 850, 24 L. R. A. 490, where it is held that an overhead bridge across an alley which obstructs access of light and air to abutting property is such an injury as must be compensated for though the city owns the alley and authorized the bridge. A similar conclusion was reached in Willamette Iron Works v. Oregon R. & N. Co., 29 Ore. 224, 37 Pac. 1013, 29 L. R. A. 88, which involved a railway bridge approaching in a public street. It is a taking against the constitutional inhibition to require abutting owners in New Hampshire to keep sidewalks free from snow and ice. State v. Jackman, 69 N. H. 318, 41 Atl. 347, 42 L. R. A. 438.] Compare cases, post, p. 812, note. The cases of McComb v. Akron, 15 Ohio, 474, 18 Ohio, 229, and Crawford v. Delaware, 7 Ohio St. 459, are contra. Those cases, however, admit that a party whose interests are injured by the original establishment of a street grade can have no claim to compensation; but they hold that when the grade is once established, and lots are improved in reference to it, the corporation has no right to change the grade afterwards, except on payment of the damages. And see Johnson v. Parkersburg, 16 W. Va. 492, 37 Am. Rep. 779. That if the lateral support to his land is removed by grading a street the owner is entitled to compensation, see O'Brien v. St. Paul, 25 Minn. 331; Buskirk v. Strickland, 47 Mich. 389, 11 N. W. 210. [Parke v. City of Seattle, 5 Wash. 1, 31 Pac. 310, 32 Pac. 82, 20 L. R. A. 68.]

¹ As in Sprague v. Worcester, 13 Gray, 193, where, in consequence of the erection of a bridge over a stream on which a mill was situated, the mill was injured by an extraordinary rise in the stream; the bridge, however, being in all respects properly constructed. [The destruction of oysters by turning the sewage of a city upon their beds is a taking, requiring compensation. Huffnir v. Brooklyn, 162 N. Y. 584, 57 N. E. 175, 48 L. R. A. 421.] In Hamilton v. Vicksburg, & Co. R. R. Co., 119 U. S. 280, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203, the obstruction of a navigable stream by unavoidable delay in rebuilding a lawful bridge was held not actionable. And see Brown v. Cayuga, & Co. R. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 456, where bridge proprietors were held liable for similar injuries on the ground of negligence. And compare Norris v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 28 Vt. 49, with Mellen v. Western R. R. Corp., 4 Gray, 301. And see note on preceding page. The inconvenience from smoke and jar caused by the careful construction and operation of a railroad near property is not actionable. Carroll v. Wis. Cent. R. R. Co., 40 Minn. 165, 41

This principle is peculiarly applicable to those cases where property is appropriated under the right of eminent domain. It must frequently occur that a party will find his rights seriously affected, though no property to which he has lawful claim is actually appropriated. As where a road is laid out along the line of a man's land without taking any portion of it, in consequence of which he is compelled to keep up the whole of what before was a partition fence, one half of which his neighbor was required to support.¹ No property being taken in this case, the party has no relief unless the statute shall give it. The loss is dammum absque injuria. So a turnpike company, whose profits will be diminished by the construction of a railroad along the same general line of travel, is not entitled to compensation.² So where a railroad company, in constructing their road in a proper manner on their own land, raised a high embankment near to and in front of the plaintiff's house, so as to prevent his passing to and from the same with the same convenience as before, this consequential inquiry was held to give no claim to compensation.³ So

N. W. 961; Beseman v. Pa. R. R. Co., 50 N. J. L. 235, 13 Atl. 154. Compare Baltimore & O. R. R. Co. v. Fifth Bapt. Ch., 105 U. S. 317, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Cogswell v. New York, &c. R. R. Co., 103 N. Y. 19, 8 N. E. 587.

¹ Kennett's Petition, 4 Post. 139. See Eddings v. Seabrook, 12 Rich. Law, 504; Slatten v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 29 Iowa, 148; Hong v. Switzer, 61 Ill. 294. [If construction of railway along opposite side of highway causes depreciation of lands, the owner is entitled to compensation for such depreciation as is occasioned by causes not affecting the public generally. Lake Erie & Western Ry. Co. v. Scott, 132 Ill. 429, 24 N. E. 78, 8 L. R. A. 330.] Merely crossing a railroad by another track is not a taking of property. Lehigh V. R. R. Co. v. Dover, &c. R. R. Co., 43 N. J. 528. But this cannot be universally true. See Lake Shore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 100 Ill. 21. Damage for the resulting inconvenience may be allowed as well as for maintaining the crossing. Chicago & W. I. R. R. Co. v. Englewood, &c. Ry. Co., 115 Ill. 375, 4 N. E. 246.

² Troy & Boston R. R. Co. v. Northern Turnpike Co., 13 Barb. 100. See La Fayette Plank Road Co. v. New Albany & Salem R. R. Co., 13 Ind. 90; Richmond, &c. Co. v. Rogers, 1 Duvall, 135.

So an increased competition with a party's business caused by the construction or extension of a road is not a ground of claim. Harvey v. Lackawanna, &c. R. R. Co., 47 Pa. St. 428. "Every great public improvement must, almost of necessity, more or less affect individual convenience and property; and where the injury sustained is remote and consequential, it is dammum absque injuria, and is to be borne as a part of the price to be paid for the advantages of the social condition. This is founded upon the principle that the general good is to prevail over partial individual convenience." Lauding v. Smith, 8 Cow. 146, 149.

³ Richardson v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 465. But quære if this could be so, if the effect were to prevent access from the lot to the highway. In certain Indiana cases it is said that the right of the owner of adjoining land to the use of the highway is as much property as the land itself; that it is appurtenant to the land, and is protected by the constitution. Haynes v. Thomas, 7 Ind. 38; Protzman v. Indianapolis, &c. R. R. Co., 9 Ind. 467; New Albany & Salem R. R. Co. v. O'Daily, 13 Ind. 453. The same doctrine is recognized in Crawford v. Delaware, 7 Ohio St. 452; Street Railway v. Cumminsville, 14 Ohio St. 528; Schneider v. Detroit, 72 Mich. 240, 40 N. W. 329;

the owner of dams erected by legislative authority is without remedy, if they are afterwards rendered valueless by the construction of a canal.¹ And in New York it has been held that, as the land where the tide ebbs and flows, between high and low water mark, belongs to the public, the State may lawfully authorize a railroad company to construct their road along the water front below high-water mark, and the owner of the adjacent bank can claim no compensation for the consequential injury to his interests.² So the granting of a ferry right with a landing on private Columbus & W. Ry. Co. v. Witherow, 82 Ala. 190, 2 So. 23; Shealy v. Chicago, & C. Ry. Co., 72 Wis. 471, 40 N. W. 145. See also Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Smith, 62 Ind. 428; Terre Haute & L. R. R. Co. v. Bissell, 138 Ind. 113, 9 N. E. 144; Indiana B. & W. Ry. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542, 11 N. E. 437; Pekin v. Brereton, 67 Ill. 477; Pekin v. Winkel, 77 Ill. 58; Grand Rapids, & C. R. R. Co. v. Helsel, 38 Mich. 62, 31 Am. Rep. 306. In the Vermont case above cited it was held that an excavation by the company on their own land, so near the line of the plaintiff's that his land, without any artificial weight thereon, slid into the excavation, would render the company liable for the injury; the plaintiff being entitled to the lateral support for his land. But if to bridge a cut made by a railroad in crossing a street the grade in front of a lot is raised, it is held not a taking for a new use, though access to the lot is cut off. Henderson v. Minneapolis, 32 Minn. 319, 20 N. W. 322; Conklin v. New York, & C. Ry. Co., 192 N. Y. 197, 6 N. E. 693. The same principle is followed in Ulline v. New York, & C. R. R. Co., 101 N. Y. 98, 4 N. E. 636.

¹ Susquehanna Canal Co. v. Wright, 9 W. & S. 9; Monongahela Navigation Co. v. Coons, 9 W. & S. 191. [But see Lee v. Pembroke Iron Co., 57 Me. 481, 2 Am. Rep. 56; Trenton Water Power Co. v. Roff, 30 N. J. L. 343; Red River Bridge Co. v. Clarksville, 1 Sneed, 196, 60 Am. Dec. 143.] In any case, if parties exercising the right of eminent domain shall cause injury to others by a negligent or improper construction of their work, they may be liable in damages. Rowe v. Granite Bridge Corporation, 21 Pick. 345; Sprague v. Worcester, 13 Gray, 195. And if a public work is of a character to necessarily disturb the occupation and enjoyment of his estate by one whose land is not taken, he may have an action on the case for the injury, notwithstanding the statute makes no provision for compensation. As where the necessary, and not simply the accidental, consequence was to flood a man's premises with water, thereby greatly diminishing their value. Hooker v. New Haven & Northampton Co., 14 Conn. 146, 15 Conn. 312; Evansville, & C. R. R. Co. v. Dick, 9 Ind. 433; Robinson v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 27 Barb. 512; Trustees of Wabash & Erie Canal v. Spears, 16 Ind. 441; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; Ashley v. Port Huron, 35 Mich. 235. So, where, by blasting rock in making an excavation, the fragments are thrown upon adjacent buildings so as to render their occupation unsafe. Hay v. Colloes Co., 2 N. Y. 159; Tremain v. Same, 2 N. Y. 133; Carman v. Steubenville & Indiana R. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 399; Sunbury & Erie R. R. Co. v. Hummel, 27 Pa. St. 59; Georgetown, & C. R. Co. v. Eagles, 9 C. C. 544, 18 Pac. 696. See Mairs v. Manhattan, & Ass., 89 N. Y. 498. There has been some disposition to hold private corporations liable for all incidental damages caused by their exercise of the right of eminent domain. See Tinsman v. Bevilacqua & Delaware R. R. Co., 20 N. J. 148; Alexander v. Milwaukee, 16 Wis. 247. [Opening of street adjacent to one's property, thus bounding it by streets on three sides and diminishing its value by rendering it unsightly to the public and destroying its privacy, is not a "taking" or "damaging" under the constitution. Peel v. City of Atlanta, 85 Ga. 168, 11 S. E. 582, 8 L. R. A. 787.]

² Gould v. Hudson River R. R. Co., 6 N. Y. 522. And see Stevens v. Paterson, & C. R. R. Co., 34 N. J. 542; Tomlin v. Dubuque, & C. R. R. Co., 32 Iowa, 166,

property within a highway terminating on a private stream is not an appropriation of property,¹ the ferry being a mere continuation of the highway, and the landing place upon the private property having previously been appropriated to public uses.

These cases must suffice as illustrations of the principle stated, though many others might be referred to. On the other hand, any injury to the property of an individual which deprives the owner of the ordinary use of it, is equivalent to a taking, and entitles him to compensation.² Water front on a stream where 7 Am. Rep. 170; [Seranton v. Wheeler, 113 Mich. 565, 71 N. W. 1901, aff. 170, U. S. 141, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Sage v. New York City, 164 N. Y. 61, 47 N. E. 1096, 51 Am. St. 692, 38 L. R. A. 606.] So far as these cases hold it competent to cut off a riparian proprietor from access to the navigable water, they seem to us to justify an appropriation of his property without compensation; for even those courts which hold the fee in the soil under navigable waters to be in the State admit valuable riparian rights in the adjacent proprietor. See Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Stein, 75 Ill. 41. Compare Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. New York, &c. R. R. Co., 23 N. J. Eq. 157. In the case of Railway Co. v. Renwick, 102 U. S. 180, it is decided expressly that the land under the water in front of a riparian proprietor and beyond the line of private ownership, cannot be taken and appropriated to a public purpose without making compensation to the riparian proprietor. This is a very sensible and just decision. See, in the same line, Langdon v. Mayor, 93 N. Y. 129; Kingsland v. Mayor, 110 N. Y. 560, 18 N. E. 435.

¹ Murray v. Menefee, 20 Ark. 561. Compare Prosser v. Wapello County, 18 Iowa, 327.

² Hooker v. New Haven & Northampton Co., 14 Conn. 149; Pumpelly v. Green Bay, &c. Co., 13 Wall. 169; Arimond v. Green Bay, &c. Co., 31 Wis. 816; Ashey v. Port Huron, 35 Mich. 290. [Any restriction or interruption of the common or necessary use of property that destroys its value, or strips it of its attributes, or to say that the owner shall not use his property as he pleases, takes it in violation of a constitutional provision forbidding the taking of private property for public use without compensation.

City of Janesville v. Carpenter, 77 Wis. 283, 46 N. W. 128, 20 Am. St. 123.] The flowing of private lands by the operations of a booming company is a taking of property. Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 808; Weaver v. Mississippi, &c. Co., 28 Minn. 534, 11 N. W. 114. And see cases, p. 786, note 1. The legislature cannot authorize a telegraph company to erect its poles on the lands of a railroad company without compensation. Atlantic, &c. Telegraph Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 6 Ill. 158. [A railway company cannot give authority to a telegraph or telephone company to construct a line of telegraph or telephone along its right of way as against the adjoining proprietor whose lands have been condemned for railway purposes only. American T. & T. Co. v. Smith, 71 Md. 535, 18 Atl. 910, 7 L. R. A. 200. Contra, if constructed in good faith for the use and benefit of the railway in the carrying on of its railway business. Id.] The erection of telephone, telegraph, and electric wire poles on a highway is a new use of it. Board of Trade Tel. Co. v. Barnett, 107 Ill. 507; Merr. Tel. &c. Co. v. Colwell Lead Co., 67 How. Pr. 355; Tiffany v. U. S. Illum. Co., 147 73; [Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Williams, 85 Va. 698, 11 S. E. 153, 8 L. R. A. 420] Chadra, Pierce v. Drew, 153 Mass. 75; Julia Bld'g Ass. v. Bell Tel. Co., 88 Mo. 258. A statute cannot compel a railroad company to allow any one upon payment of one dollar to erect a grain elevator upon its station grounds. State v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 33 Minn. 402, 31 N. W. 305. If under an ordinance an abutter on rebuilding is required to put his house back five feet from the street line, property is taken. In re Crescent St., 118 Pa. St. 506, 12 Atl. 483. [City of St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 527, 22 S. W.

the tide does not ebb and flow is property, and, if taken, must be paid for as such.¹ So with an exclusive right of wharfage upon tide water.² So with the right of the owner of land to use an adjoining street, whether he is owner of the land over which the street is laid out or not.³ So with the right of pasturage in streets, which belongs to the owners of the soil.⁴ So a partial destruction or diminution of value of property by an act of the government which directly and not merely incidentally affects it, is to that extent an appropriation.⁵

It sometimes becomes important, where a highway has been laid out and opened, to establish a different and higher grade of way upon the same line, with a view to accommodate an increased public demand. The State may be willing to surrender the control of the streets in these cases, and authorize turnpike, plank-road, or railroad corporations to occupy them for their purposes; and if it shall give such consent, the control, so far as is neces-

861, 21 L. R. A. 226.] So, if under a statute a road officer cuts a drain on property to draw surface water from a highway. Ward v. Peck, 49 N. J. L. 42, 6 Atl. 895. So, if in grading a street an embankment is placed so as to take up part of an abutting lot, and injure a house on it. Vanderlip v. Grand Rapids, 78 Mich. 622, 16 Am. St. 597, and note, 3 L. R. A. 247, 41 N. W. 677; Broadwell v. Kansas City, 75 Mo. 213. [Use of artificial means to increase the flow of natural gas to the injury of others supplied from some common reservoir, is a taking entitling to compensation. Manufacturers G. & O. Co. v. Indiana N. G. & O. Co., 155 Ind. 401, 57 N. E. 912, 50 L. R. A. 788.

¹ Varick v. Smith, 9 Paige, 547. See Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497.

² Murray v. Sharp, 1 Bosw. 539.

³ Lackland v. North Missouri R. R. Co., 31 Mo. 180. See supra, p. 755, note 3. Abutters, as members of the public who have not bought by a plat, have no right of action for the obstruction of a street under State authority. Gerhard v. Seekonk, 86 Conn. 15, 3 L. R. A. 334, 5 Atl. 133.

⁴ Tonawanda R. R. Co. v. Munger, 5 Denio, 259; Woodruff v. Neal, 28 Conn. 135. In the first case it was held that a by-law of a town giving liberty to the inhabitants to depasture their cows in the public highways under certain regulations, passed under the authority of a general statute empowering towns to pass such by-laws, was of no validity, because it appropriated the pasturage, which was private property, to the public use, without making compensation. The contrary has been held in New York as to all highways laid out while such a statute was in existence; the owner being held to be compensated for the pasturage, as well as for the use of the land for other purposes, at the time the highway was laid out. Griffin v. Martin, 7 Barb. 297; Hardenburgh v. Lockwood, 25 Barb. 9. See also Kerwhacker v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 172, where it was held that by ancient custom in that State there was a right of pasturage by the public in the highways.

⁵ See Glover v. Powell, 10 N. J. Eq. 211; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 604. Even a temporary right to the possession of lands cannot be given by the legislature without provision for compensation. San Mateo Water Works v. Sharpstein, 60 Cal. 254. A provision in the charter of a corporation that it shall not be liable for diverting water is void. Harding v. Stamford Water Co., 41 Conn. 87. [Destruction of crops planted after the location of a railway, but before condemnation or compensation, entitles the tenant planting them to compensation. Lafferty v. Schuylkill River E. S. Ry. Co., 124 Pa. St. 297, 18 Atl. 869, 3 L. R. A. 124.]

sary to the purposes of the turnpike, plank-road, or railway, is thereby passed over to the corporation, and their structure in what was before a common highway cannot be regarded as a public nuisance.¹ But the municipal organizations in the State have no power to give such consent without express legislative permission; the general control of their streets which is commonly given by municipal charters not being sufficient authority for this purpose.² When, however, the public authorities have thus assented, it may be found that the owners of the adjacent lots, who are also owners of the fee in the highway subject to the public easement, may be unwilling to assent to the change, and may believe their interests to be seriously and injuriously affected thereby. The question may then arise, Is the owner of the land, who has been once compensated for the injury he has sustained in the appropriation of his land as a highway, entitled to a new assessment for any further injury he may sustain in consequence of the street being subjected to a change in the use not contemplated at the time of the original taking, but nevertheless in furtherance of the same general purpose?

When a common highway is made a turnpike or a plank-road, upon which tolls are collected, there is much reason for holding that the owner of the soil is not entitled to any further compensa-

¹ See Commonwealth v. Erie & N. E. R. R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339; Tennessee, &c. R. R. Co. v. Adams, 3 Head, 596; New Orleans, &c. R. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 28 La. Ann. 517; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 25; Donnaher's Case, 13 Miss. 649.

² Lackland v. North Missouri R. R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; New York & Harlem R. R. Co. v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 1 Hilt. 562; Milhaup v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 811; State v. Cincinnati, &c. Gas Co., 18 Ohio St. 292; State v. Trenton, 36 N. J. 79; Chamberlain v. Elizabethtown, &c. Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 43; Garnett v. Jacksonville, &c. Co., 20 Fla. 889. In Inhabitants of Springfield v. Connecticut River R. R. Co., 4 Cush. 63, it was held that legislative authority to construct a railroad between certain termini, without prescribing its precise course and direction, would not prima facie confer power to lay out the road on and along an existing public highway. Per Shaw, C. J.: "The whole course of legislation on the subject of railroads is opposed to such a construction. The crossing of public highways by railroads is obviously necessary, and of course warranted; and numerous provisions are industriously made to regulate such crossings, by determining when they shall be on the same and when on different levels, in order to avoid collision; and, when on the same level, what gates, fences, and barriers shall be made, and what guards shall be kept to insure safety. Had it been intended that railroad companies, under a general grant, should have power to lay a railroad over a highway longitudinally, which ordinarily is not necessary, we think that would have been done in express terms, accompanied with full legislative provisions for maintaining such barriers and modes of separation as would tend to make the use of the same road, for both modes of travel, consistent with the safety of travellers on both. The absence of any such provision affords a strong inference that, under general terms, it was not intended that such a power should be given." See also Commonwealth v. Erie & N. E. R. R. Co., 17 Pa. St. 339; Attorney-General v. Morris & Essex R. R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 356.

tion. The turnpike or the plank-road is still an avenue for public travel, subject to be used in the same manner as the ordinary highway was before, and, if properly constructed, is generally expected to increase rather than diminish the value of property along its line; and though the adjoining proprietors are required to pay toll, they are supposed to be, and generally are, fully compensated for this burden by the increased excellence of the road, and by their exemption from highway labor upon it.¹ But it is different when a highway is appropriated for the purposes of a railroad. "It is quite apparent that the use by the public of a highway, and the use thereof by a railroad company, is essentially different. In the one case every person is at liberty to travel over the highway in any place or part thereof, but he has no exclusive right of occupation of any part thereof except while he is temporarily passing over it. It would be trespass for him to occupy any part of the highway exclusively for any longer period of time than was necessary for that purpose, and the stoppages incident thereto. But a railroad company takes exclusive and permanent possession of a portion of the street or highway. It lays down its rails upon, or imbeds them in, the soil, and thus appropriates a portion of the street to its exclusive use, and for its own particular mode of conveyance. In the one case, all persons may travel on the street or highway in their own common modes of conveyance. In the other no one can travel on or over the rails laid down, except the railroad company and with their cars specially adapted to the tracks. In one case the use is general and open alike to all. In the other it is peculiar and exclusive.

"It is true that the actual use of the street by the railroad may not be so absolute and constant as to exclude the public also from its use. With a single track, and particularly if the cars used upon it were propelled by horse-power, the interruption of the public easement in the street might be very trifling and of no practical consequence to the public at large. But this consideration cannot affect the question of right of property, or of the increase of the burden upon the soil. It would present simply a class road cannot be changed to one of the second class without compensation, as the burden on the owner is increased. Bounden v. Kirven, 65 Tex. 159. In Murray v. County Commissioners of Berkshire, 12 Met. 455, it was held that owners of lands adjoining a turnpike were not entitled to compensation when a turnpike was changed to a common highway.

¹ See Commonwealth v. Wilkinson, 15 Pick. 175, 24 Am. Dec. 624; Benedict v. Galt, 3 Barb. 429; Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. 75; State v. Laverack, 34 N. J. 201; Cragin Falls & Cleveland Plank Road Co. v. Cane, 2 Ohio St. 419; Douglass v. Turnpike Co., 22 Md. 219. But see Williams v. Natural Bridge Plank Road Co., 21 Mo. 580. A third-

question of degree in respect to the enlargement of the easement, and would not affect the principle, that the use of a street for the purposes of a railroad imposed upon it a new burden."¹

The case from which we here quote is approved in cases in Wisconsin, where importance is attached to the different effect the common highway and the railroad will have upon the value of adjacent property. "The dedication to the public as a highway," it is said, "enhances the value of the lot, and renders it more convenient and useful to the owner. The use by the railroad company diminishes its value, and renders it inconvenient and comparatively useless. It would be a most unjust and oppressive rule which would deny the owner compensation under such circumstances."²

¹ Wager v. Troy Union R. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 525, 532, approving Williams v. New York Central R. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; Carpenter v. Oswego & Syracuse R. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 655; Mahon v. New York Central R. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 658; Starr v. Camden & Atlantic R. R. Co., 24 N. J. 552; Donnaher's Case, 16 Miss. 649; Thiebault v. Louisville, &c. Ry. Co., 68 Miss. 279, 6 So. 233; Adams v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 39 Minn. 236, 39 N. W. 829; Phipps v. West Md. R. R. Co., 65 Md. 312; Cox v. Louisville, &c. R. R. Co., 48 Ind. 173. In Inhabitants of Springfield v. Connecticut River R. R. Co., 4 Cush. 71, where, however, the precise question here discussed was not involved, Chief Justice Shaw, in comparing railroads with common highways, says: "The two uses are almost, if not wholly, inconsistent with each other, so that taking the highway for a railroad will nearly supersede the former use to which it had been legally appropriated." See also Presbyterian Society of Waterloo v. Auburn & Rochester R. R. Co., 3 Hill. 567; Craig v. Rochester, &c. R. R. Co., 39 Barb. 404; Schurmeier v. St. Paul, &c. R. R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; Gray v. First Division, &c., 13 Minn. 315; Central R. R. Co. v. Hetfield, 29 N. J. 206; South Carolina R. R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546. Under the California Constitution the owner of the fee must be compensated. Weyl v. Sonoma R. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202, 10 Pac. 612. Compare cases, p. 810, note, post. The cases of Philadelphia & Trenton R. R. Co. & Whart. 25, 35 Am. Dec. 202; Struthers v. Railroad Co., 87 Pa. St. 282; Lexington, &c. R. R. Co. v. Applegate, 8

Dana, 289, 33 Am. Dec. 497; Elizabethtown & P. R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 79 Ky. 52; and Morris & Essex R. R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 352, are opposed to the New York cases. And see Wolfe v. Covington, &c. R. R. Co., 15 B. Monr. 404; Com. v. Erie & N. E. R. R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339; Snyder v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 340; Peddleford v. Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co., 34 Md. 463; Houston, &c. R. R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343, 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 503; West Jersey R. R. Co. v. Cape May, &c. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 184; Terre Haute & L. R. R. Co. v. Bissell, 108 Ind. 113, 9 N. E. 114; Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542, 11 N. E. 467; [Reichert v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 61 Ark. 491, 11 S. W. 696, 5 L. R. A. 183.] A gas-light company cannot be authorized to lay its pipes in a country highway without consent of or compensation to the owners of the fee. Bloomfield, &c. Co. v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 356. Nor may a pipe line for natural gas be laid. Sterling's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 35, 2 Atl. 195; [Kimball v. Indianapolis N. G. Co., 124 Ind. 577, 24 N. E. 1066, 8 L. R. A. 602.]

² Ford v. Chicago & Northwestern R. R. Co., 14 Wis. 609, 615; followed in Pomeroy v. Chicago & M. R. R. Co., 15 Wis. 640. The later cases allow compensation only when the fee of the street is in the owner and there is an actual physical interference with the property in the strict sense: Heiss v. Milwaukee, &c. R. R. Co., 69 Wis. 535, 34 N. W. 216; Hanlin v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 61 Wis. 615, 21 N. W. 623; where there was no such interference, distinguishing Buchner

It is not always the case, however, that the value of a lot of land will be enhanced by the laying out of a common highway across it, or diminished by the construction of a railway over the same line afterwards. The constitutional question cannot depend upon the accidental circumstance that the new road will or will not have an injurious effect; though that circumstance is properly referred to, since it is difficult to perceive how a change of use which may possibly have an injurious effect not contemplated in the original appropriation can be considered anything else than the imposition of a new burden upon the owner's estate. In Connecticut, where the authority of the legislature to authorize a railroad to be constructed in a common highway without compensation to land-owners is also denied, importance is attached to the terms of the statute under which the original appropriation was made, and which are regarded as permitting the taking for the purposes of a common highway, and for no other. The reasoning of the court appears to us sound; and it is applicable to the statutes of the States generally.¹

v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 56 Wis. 403, 14 N. W. 273, 60 Wis. 264, 19 N. W. 56, where part of the property was actually taken. In many of the cases noted in the preceding note the right to compensation is based upon the ownership of the fee. In Pennsylvania it is held competent for the legislature, though not necessary, to provide compensation to land-owners when a highway is taken for a railroad. Miffin v. Railroad Co., 16 Pa. St. 182.

¹ Imlay v. Union Branch R. R. Co., 23 Conn. 249, 255. "When land is condemned for a special purpose," say the court, "on the score of public utility, the sequestration is limited to that particular use. Land taken for a highway is not thereby convertible into a common. As the property is not taken, but the use only, the right of the public is limited to the use, the specific use, for which the proprietor has been divested of a complete dominion over his own estate. These are propositions which are no longer open to discussion. But it is contended that land once taken and still held for highway purposes may be used for a railway without exceeding the limits of the easement already acquired by the public. If this is true, if the new use of the land is within the scope of the original sequestration or dedication, it would follow that the railway privileges are not an encroachment on the estate remaining in the owner of the soil, and that the new mode of enjoying the public easement will not enable him rightfully to assert a claim to damages therefor. On the contrary, if the true intent and efficacy of the original condemnation was not to subject the land to such a burden as will be imposed upon it when it is confiscated to the uses and control of a railroad corporation, it cannot be denied that in the latter case the estate of the owner of the soil is injuriously affected by the supervening servitude; that his rights are abridged, and that in a legal sense his land is again taken for public uses. Thus it appears that the court have simply to decide whether there is such an identity between a highway and a railway, that statutes conferring a right to establish the former include an authority to construct the latter.

"The term 'public highway,' as employed in such of our statutes as convey the right of eminent domain, has certainly a limited import. Although, as suggested at the bar, a navigable river or a canal is, in some sense, a public highway, yet an easement assumed under the name of a highway would not enable the public to convert a street into a canal. The highway, in the true meaning of the word, would be destroyed. But as no such destruction of the highway is necessarily involved in the location of a railway track upon it, we are pressed to establish the legal proposition that a highway, such as is referred to in these statutes, means or at least comprehends a railroad. Such a construction is possible only when it is made to appear that there is a substantial practical or technical identity between the uses of land for highway and for railway purposes.

It would appear from the cases cited that the weight of judicial authority is against the power of the legislature to appropriate

"No one can fail to see that the terms 'railway' and 'highway' are not convertible, or that the two uses, practically considered, although analogous, are not identical. Land as ordinarily appropriated by a railroad company is inconvenient, and even impassable, to those who would use it as a common highway. Such a corporation does not hold itself bound to make or to keep its embankments and bridges in a condition which will facilitate the transit of such vehicles as ply over an ordinary road. A practical dissimilarity obviously exists between a railway and a common highway, and is recognized as the basis of a legal distinction between them. It is so recognized on a large scale when railway privileges are sought from legislative bodies, and granted by them. If the terms 'highway' and 'railway' are synonymous, or if one of them includes the other by legal implication, no act could be more superfluous than to require or to grant authority to construct railways over localities already occupied as highways.

"If a legal identity does not subsist between a highway and a railway, it is illogical to argue that, because a railway may be so constructed as not to interfere with the ordinary uses of a highway, and so as to be consistent with the highway right already existing, therefore such a new use is included within the old use. It might as well be urged, that if a common, or a canal, laid out over the route of a public road, could be so arranged as to leave an ample roadway for vehicles and passengers on foot, the land should be held to be originally condemned for a canal or a common, as properly incident to the highway use.

"There is an important practical reason why courts should be slow to recognize a legal identity between the two uses referred to. They are by no means the same thing to the proprietor whose land is taken; on the contrary, they suggest widely different standards of compensation. One can readily conceive of cases where the value of real estate would be directly enhanced by the opening of a highway through it; while its confiscation for a railway at the same or a subsequent time would be a gross injury to the estate, and a total subversion of the mode of enjoyment expected by the owner when he yielded his private rights to the public exigency.

"But essential distinctions also exist between highway and railway powers, as conferred by statute, — distinctions which are founded in the very nature of the powers themselves. In the case of the highway, the statute provides that, after the observance of certain legal forms, the locality in question shall be forever subservient to the right of every individual in the community to pass over the thoroughfare so created at all times. This right involves the important implication that he shall so use the privilege as to leave the privilege of all others as unobstructed as his own; and that he is therefore to use the road in the manner in which such roads are ordinarily used, with such vehicles as will not obstruct, or require the destruction of the ordinary modes of travel thereon. He is not authorized to lay down a railway track, and run his own locomotive and car upon it. No one ever thought of regarding highway acts as conferring railway privileges, involving a right in every individual, not only to break up ordinary travel, but also to exact tolls from the public for the privilege of using the peculiar conveyances adapted to a railroad. If a right of this description is not conferred when a highway is authorized by law, it is idle to pretend that any proprietor is divested of such a right. It would seem that, under such circumstances, the true construction of highway laws could hardly be debatable, and that the absence of legal identity a common highway to the purposes of a railroad, unless at the same time provision is made for compensation to the owners of the fee. These cases, however, have had reference to the common railroad operated by steam. In one of the New York cases¹ it is intimated, and in another case in the same State it was directly decided, that the ruling should be the same in the case of the street railway operated by horse power.² There is generally, however, a very great difference in the two cases, and some of the considerations to which the courts have attached importance could have no application in many cases of common horse railways. A horse railway, as a general thing, will interfere very little with the ordinary use of the way by the public, even upon the very line of the road; and in many cases it would be a relief to an overburdened way, rather than an impediment to the previous use. In Connecticut, after it had been decided, as above shown, that the owner of the fee subject to a perpetual highway was entitled to compensation when the highway was appropriated for an ordinary railroad, it was also held that the authority to lay and use a horse-railway track in a public street was not a new servitude imposed upon the land, for which the owner of the fee would be entitled to damages, but that it was a part of the public use to which the land was originally subjected when taken for a street.³ The same distinction between horse railways and those operated by steam is also taken in recent New York cases.⁴ between the two uses of which we speak was patent and entire.

"Again, no argument or illustration can strengthen the self-evident proposition that, when a railway is authorized over a public highway, a right is created against the proprietor of the fee, in favor of a person, an artificial person, to whom he before bore no legal relation whatever. It is understood that when such an easement is sought or bestowed, a new and independent right will accrue to the railroad corporation as against the owner of the soil, and that, without any reference to the existence of the highway, his land will forever stand charged with the accruing servitude. Accordingly, if such a highway were to be discontinued according to the legal forms prescribed for that purpose, the railroad corporation would still insist upon the express and independent grant of an easement to itself, enabling it to maintain its own road on the site of the abandoned highway. We are of opinion, therefore, as was distinctly intimated by this court in a former case (see opinion of Hinman, J., in Nicholson v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 22 Conn. 74, 85), that to subject the owner of the soil of a highway to a further appropriation of his land to railway uses is the imposition of a new servitude upon his estate, and is an act demanding the compensation which the law awards when land is taken for public purposes." And see South Carolina R. R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 548.

¹ Wager v. Troy Union R. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 526.

² Craig v. Rochester City & Brighton R. R. Co., 39 Barb. 448.

³ Elliott v. Fair Haven & Westville R. R. Co., 32 Conn. 570, 588.

⁴ Brooklyn Central, &c. R. R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. R. Co., 33 Barb. 420; People v. Kerr, 37 Barb. 357, 27 N. Y. 188. See Kellinger v. Railroad Co., 50 N. Y. 208. A horse railroad in a street is not an additional servitude. Hodges v. Balt. Pass. Ry. Co., 68 Md. 603; Texas

But whether the mere difference in the motive power will make different principles applicable is a question which the courts will probably have occasion to consider further. Conceding that the interests of individual owners will not generally suffer, or their use of the highway be incommoded by the laying down and use of the track of a horse railway upon it, there are nevertheless cases where it might seriously impede, if not altogether exclude, the general travel and use by the ordinary modes, and very greatly reduce the value of all the property along the line. Suppose, for instance, a narrow street in a city, occupied altogether by wholesale houses, which require constantly the use of the whole street in connection with their business, and suppose this to be turned over to a street-railway company, whose line is such as to make the road a principal avenue of travel, and to require such constant passage of cars as to drive all drayage from the street. The corporation, under these circumstances, will substantially have a monopoly in the use of the street; their vehicles will drive the business from it, and the business property will become comparatively worthless. And if property owners are without remedy in such case, it is certainly a very great hardship upon them, and a very striking and forcible instance and illustration of damage without legal injury.

When property is appropriated for a public way, and the proprietor is paid for the public easement, the compensation is generally estimated, in practice, at the value of the land itself.¹ If, therefore, no other circumstances were to be taken into the account in these cases, the owner, who has been paid the value of his land, could not reasonably complain of any use to which it might afterwards be put by the public. But, as was pointed out in the Connecticut case,² the compensation is always liable either to exceed or to fall below the value of the land taken, in consequence of incidental injuries or benefits to the owner as proprietor of the land which remains. These injuries or benefits will be estimated with reference to the identical use to which the property is appropriated; and if it is afterwards put to another use, which causes greater incidental injury, and the owner is not allowed further compensation, it is very evident that he has suffered by the change a wrong which could not have been foreseen and pro-

& P. Ry. Co. v. Rosedale St. Ry. Co., 64 Tex. 80; Randall v. Jacksonville, & Co., 19 Fla. 409; Ebenezer v. Evansville St. Ry. Co., 78 Ind. 201; and this though the company is authorized to use steam as a motor. Bridge v. Lewiston, & Co., 79 Me. 353, 10 Atl. 47. See Campbell v.

Metrop. St. Ry. Co., 82 Ga. 320, 9 S. E. 1078.

¹ Murray v. County Commissioners, 12 Met. 455, per Stanc., Ch. J.

² Imlay v. Union Branch R. R. Co., 28 Conn. 249.

vided against. And if, on the other hand, he is entitled in any case to an assessment of damages, in consequence of such an appropriation of the street affecting his rights injuriously, then he must be entitled to such an assessment in every case, and the question involved will be, not as to the right, but only of the quantum of damages. The horse railway either is or is not the imposition of a new burden upon the estate. If it is not, the owner of the fee is entitled to compensation in no case; if it is, he is entitled to have an assessment of damages in every case.

In New York, where, by law, when a public street is laid out or dedicated, the fee in the soil becomes vested in the city, it has been held that the legislature might authorize the construction of a horse railway in a street, and that neither the city nor the owners of lots were entitled to compensation, notwithstanding it was found as a fact that the lot-owners would suffer injury from the construction of the road. The city was not entitled, because, though it held the fee, it held it in trust for the use of all the people of the State, and not as corporate or municipal property; and the land having been originally acquired under the right of eminent domain, and the trust being publici juris, it was under the unqualified control of the legislature, and any appropriation of it to public use by legislative authority could not be regarded as an appropriation of the private property of the city. And so far as the adjacent lot-owners were concerned, their interest in the streets, distinct from that of other citizens, was only as having a possibility of reverter after the public use of the land should cease; and the value of this, if anything, was inappreciable, and could not entitle them to compensation.¹

So in Indiana, in cases where the title in fee to streets in cities and villages is vested in the public, it is held that the adjacent land-owners are not entitled to the statutory remedy for an as-

¹ People v. Kerr, 37 Barb. 357, 27 N. Y. 183. The same ruling as to the right of the city to compensation was had in Savannah & R. R. Co. v. Mayor, &c. of Savannah, 45 Ga. 692. And see Brooklyn Central &c. R. R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. R. Co., 33 Barb. 420; Brooklyn & Newtown R. R. Co. v. Coney Island R. R. Co., 35 Barb. 334; People v. Kerr, 37 Barb. 357; Chapman v. Albany & Schenectady R. R. Co., 10 Barb. 350. And as to the title reverting to the original owner, compare Water Works Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364; Gebhardt v. Reeves, 75 Ill. 301; Heard v. Brooklyn, 60 N. Y. 242. Although, in the case of

People v. Kerr, the several judges seem generally to have agreed on the principle as stated in the text, it is not very clear how much importance was attached to the fact that the fee to the street was in the city, nor that the decision would have been different if that had not been the case. Where land has been dedicated to a city as a levee, the legislature may authorize its use by a railroad without compensation to the city, but the one who has dedicated it must be compensated for the injury to his ultimate fee. Portland & W. V. R. R. Co. v. Portland, 14 Oreg. 188, 12 Pac. 265.

assessment of damages in consequence of the street being appropriated to the use of a railroad; and this without regard to the motive power by which the road is operated. At the same time it is also held that the lot-owners may maintain an action at law if, in consequence of the railroad, they are cut off from the ordinary use of the street.¹ In Iowa it is held that where the title to city streets is in the corporation in trust for the public, the legislature may authorize the construction of an ordinary railroad through the same, with the consent of the city, and without awarding compensation to lot-owners;² or even without the consent of the municipal authorities, and without entitling the city to compensation.³ But the city, without legislative permission, has no power to grant such a privilege, and it will be responsible for all damages to individuals using the street if it shall assume to do so.⁴ In Illinois, in a case where a lot-owner had filed a bill in equity to restrain the laying down of the track of a railroad, by consent of the common council, to be operated by steam in one of the streets of Chicago, it was held that the bill could not be maintained; the title to the street being in the city, which might appropriate it to any proper city purpose.⁵ In Michigan it has ¹ Proetzman v. Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co., 9 Ind. 457; New Albany & Salem R. R. Co. v. O'Daily, 13 Ind. 353; Same v. Same, 12 Ind. 551. Unless the railroad causes a physical disturbance of a right, as where the abutter owns the fee of the street or where his access is cut off, he is not entitled to compensation. Dwenger v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 98 Ind. 153; Terre Haute & L. R. R. Co. v. Biessell, 108 Ind. 113, 9 N. E. 144; Indianapolis B. & W. Ry. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542, 11 N. E. 437. See also Street Railway v. Cumminsville, 14 Ohio St. 523; State v. Cincinnati Gas, &c. Co., 18 Ohio St. 232. In Nebraska although the fee is in the city, the right of access, which is property, may not be cut off without compensation. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Reinbackle, 15 Neb. 279, 18 N. W. 69; Omaha V. R. R. Co. v. Rogers, 15 Neb. 117, 19 N. W. 603. If egress and ingress are not disturbed, no action lies in such case in Tennessee. Iron Mt. R. R. Co. v. Bingham, 87 Tenn. 522, 11 S. W. 705. The rule in Kansas is similar. Ottawa, &c. R. R. Co. v. Larson, 40 Kan. 301, 19 Pac. 661; Kansas, N. & D. Ry. Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 224, 21 Pac. 1051; Central B. U. P. R. R. Co. v. Andrews, 30 Kan. 590, 2 Pac. 677.

² Millburn v. Cedar Rapids, &c. R. R. Co., 12 Iowa, 246; Franz v. Railroad Co., 55 Iowa, 107. See Binard v. Burlington, &c. Ry. Co., 56 Iowa, 440, 23 N. W. 914. Under a statute providing for compensation for laying a track in the street a mere right-angle crossing is not included; Morgan v. Des Moines, &c. Ry. Co., 64 Iowa, 580, 21 N. W. 93; a diagonal crossing is. Enos v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 78 Iowa, 28, 42 N. W. 575.

³ Clinton v. Cedar Rapids, &c. R. R. Co., 24 Iowa, 455.

⁴ Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa, 463, 2 N. W. 1064, 6 N. W. 708, 37 Am. Rep. 256.

⁵ Moses v. Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, & Chicago R. R. Co., 21 Ill. 516, 522. We quote from the opinion of Cabot, Ch. J.: "By the city charter, the common council is vested with the exclusive control and regulation of the streets of the city, the fee-simple title to which we have already decided is vested in the municipal corporation. The city charter also empowers the common council to direct and control the location of railroad tracks within the city. In granting this permission to locate the track in Beach Street, the common council acted under an express power granted by the legislature.

been decided that an abutting lot-owner who does not own the soil of a city street cannot recover for any injury to his freehold

So that the defendant has all the right which both the legislature and the common council could give it, to occupy the street with its track. But the complainant assumes higher ground, and claims that any use of the street, even under the authority of the legislature and the common council, which tends to deteriorate the value of his property on the street, is a violation of that fundamental law which forbids private property to be taken for public use without just compensation. This is manifestly an erroneous view of the constitutional guaranty thus invoked. It must necessarily happen that streets will be used for various legitimate purposes, which will, to a greater or less extent, discommode persons residing or doing business upon them, and just to that extent damage their property; and yet such damage is incident to all city property, and for it a party can claim no remedy. The common council may appoint certain localities where hacks and drays shall stand waiting for employment, or where wagons loaded with hay or wood, or other commodities, shall stand waiting for purchasers. This may drive customers away from shops or stores in the vicinity, and yet there is no remedy for the damage. A street is made for the passage of persons and property; and the law cannot define what exclusive means of transportation and passage shall be used. Universal experience shows that this can best be left to the determination of the municipal authorities, who are supposed to be best acquainted with the wants and necessities of the citizens generally. To say that a new mode of passage shall be banished from the streets, no matter how much the general good may require it, simply because streets were not so used in the days of Blackstone, would hardly comport with the advancement and enlightenment of the present age. Steam has but lately taken the place, to any extent, of animal power for land transportation, and for that reason alone shall it be expelled the streets? For the same reason camels must be kept out, although they might be profitably employed. Some fancy horse or timid lady might be frightened by such uncouth objects. Or is the objection not in the motive power used, but because the carriages are larger than were formerly used, and run upon iron, and are confined to a given track in the street. Then street railroads must not be admitted; they have large carriages which run on iron rails, and are confined to a given track. Their momentum is great, and may do damage to ordinary vehicles or foot passengers. Indeed we may suppose or assume that streets occupied by them are not so pleasant for other carriages, or so desirable for residences or business stands, as if not thus occupied. But for this reason the property owners along the street cannot expect to stop such improvements. The convenience of those who live at a greater distance from the centre of a city requires the use of such improvements, and for their benefit the owners of property upon the street must submit to the burden, when the common council determine that the public good requires it. Cars upon street railroads are now generally, if not universally, propelled by horses, but who can say how long it will be before it will be found safe and profitable to propel them with steam or some other power besides horses? Should we say that this road should be enjoined, we could advance no reason for it which would not apply with equal force to street railroads, so that consistency would require that we should stop all. Nor would the evil which would result from the rule we must lay down stop here. We must prohibit every use of a street which discommodes those who reside or do business upon it, because their property will also be damaged. This question has been presented in other States, and in some instances, where the public have only an easement of the street, and the owner of the adjoining property still holds the fee in the street, it has been sustained; but the weight of authority, and certainly, in our apprehension, all sound reasoning, is the other way." See also Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 25; and Harrison v. New Orleans & N. O. Ry. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462, where a like ruling is made.

All the cases from which we have resulting from the construction of a steam railway in the street under legislative authority, but that he may have an action for any injury consequent on mismanagement amounting to a private nuisance; such as leaving cars standing in the street an unreasonable time, making unnecessary noises, &c.¹ In New York it is held not competent for a city to authorize the construction of an elevated railroad in its streets without making compensation to abutting owners who had bought their lots of the city with a covenant that the streets should be kept open forever.² This quoted assume that the use of the street by the railroad company is still a public use; and an appropriation of a street, or of any part of it, by an individual or company, for his or their own private use, unconnected with any accommodation of the public, would not be consistent with the purpose for which it was originally acquired. Mikesell v. Durkee, 34 Kan. 609, 9 Pac. 278. See Brown v. Duplessis, 14 La. Ann. 842; Green v. Portland, 82 Me. 461.

¹ Grand Rapids, &c. R. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 82, 31 Am. Rep. 306; Same v. Same, 47 Mich. 323, 11 N. W. 212. [The rule seems to have been settled in New York by the case of Fubus v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 596, 24 N. E. 919, 8 L. R. A. 453; that, as against abutting owners, having no title in the bed of the street, the legislature might authorize a steam surface railway therein without compensation to the abutting owner. This broad statement of the rule is subject to the limitation, however, that where the construction rendered ingress and egress seriously difficult or dangerous, the owner is entitled to compensation. Reining v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 157, 28 N. E. 649, 14 L. R. A. 153. This case reviews prior cases.]

² Story v. New York Elevated Railway Co., 90 N. Y. 122. In Lahr v. Metr. Elev. R. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268, 10 N. E. 528, the doctrine was extended to a case where there was no such covenant and the plaintiff whose lot only went to the street line held under mens conveyances, from one whose land had been condemned for use as a public street forever. [Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co., 122 N. Y. 1, 25 N. E. 436, 19 Am. St. 451, 11 L. R. A. 634, one of the so-called "Elevated Railway Cases" presented the question of compensation of an abutting owner for an injury claimed to result from the erection of an elevated railway in the street. There was no claim that the abutter, or any predecessor in title, at the time of the injury complained of, or at any prior time, owned any interest or right in the street, except such as was appurtenant to ownership of lands abutting, which were never, so far as was made to appear, a part of the lands in the street. It was held in the case that an abutting owner had such property rights in the street as might be "taken" against the prohibition of the constitution, and this though that which results in the injury is done under legislative sanction. Anders, J., says: "The judgments for damages which have been recovered and sustained against the elevated roads do not, and cannot, rest upon the ground that the roads are public nuisances, for they were constructed pursuant to statutes; and besides a public nuisance does not create a private cause of action unless a private right exists and is injured by it specially. The only remaining ground upon which they may and do stand is that by the common law the plaintiffs had private rights in the streets before the railways were built or authorized to be built. It is clear, we think, that these rights were not created by the statutes under which the corporations were organized, nor by the construction of the roads; nor do they exist by virtue of the judgment in Story's Case (90 N. Y. 122); but they existed anterior to the construction of the roads, and have simply been defined and protected by the decisions made in the litigations against these corporations. . . . It then becomes material to inquire whether rights of action are cut off because the road was constructed pursuant to legislative authority. The constitution of this State provides 'Nor shall last decision settles a long-pending controversy, and is in harmony with the cases in Indiana and Michigan above referred to. (a)

It is not easy, as is very evident, to trace a clear line of authority running through the various decisions bearing upon the appropriation of the ordinary highways and streets to the use of railroads of any grade or species; but a strong inclination is apparent to hold that, when the fee in the public way is taken from the former owner, it is taken for any public use whatever to which the public authorities, with the legislative assent, may see fit afterwards to devote it, in furtherance of the general purpose of the original appropriation;¹ and if this is so, the owner must be private property be taken for public use without just compensation.' Art. 1, sec. 6. It is settled by Story's Case and Lahr's Case (104 N. Y. 268, 10 N. E. 528), that such rights as plaintiff has in Pearl Street are 'private property' within the meaning of the constitutional provision quoted; and these cases also hold that by the construction and operation of an elevated road in the street in front of an owner's premises, his rights are 'taken for public use' within the meaning of the constitution. It follows that the authority conferred by the legislature to construct the road is not a defence to the action." It is to be noticed that this interpretation of the terms "taking of private property" does not necessarily involve an actual physical invasion of lands of the claimant in order to entitle him to compensation under the constitution, and that it is not necessary that the constitution should provide that compensation shall be made for "injury" or "damage" in order that compensation can be coerced by an abutting owner, though he have no interest in the fee of the street, for injury to his right to ingress and egress, to access of light and air, or for depreciation in value of the abutting property, by reason of the construction and operation of the improvement in the public street. But see these Elevated Railway Cases distinguished from the cases growing out of the so-called "Park Avenue Improvement" Cases in the same court: Fries v. New York & H. R. Co., 169 N. Y. 270, 82 N. E. 368; Muhlker v. N. Y. & H. R. Co., 173 N. Y. 549, 86 N. E. 558. O'Brien, J., in the Fries Case, says: The law is well settled in this State that where the property of an abutting owner is damaged, or even its easements interfered with in consequence of the work of an improvement in a public street conducted under lawful authority, he is without remedy or redress, even though no provision for compensation is made in the statute. Whatever detriment the improvement may be to the abutter in such cases is held to be damnum absque injuria." The Elevated Railway Cases are distinguished in this language: They "proceed upon the principle, that, as against abutting owners, the railroad was unlawfully in the street, as they had not consented to the construction or conveyed the right to interfere with their easements. But in the case at bar, we have an express finding that the defendant had acquired the right as against the plaintiff to use the street for the operation of the railroad. Hence the principles upon which that mass of litigation proceeded have no application to this case." Citing Conabee v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 153 N. Y. 474, 51 N. E. 402. See Lewis v. New York & H. R. Co., 162 N. Y. 202, 66 N. E. 540.]

¹ On this subject see, in addition to the other cases cited, West v. Bancroft, 32 Vt. 367; Kelsey v. King, 32 Barb 410; Ohio & Lexington R. R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana, 289; Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 75; Covington St. R. Co. v. Covington, & C. R. Co. (Ky.), 19 Am. Law Reg. n. s. 765. When, however, land is taken or dedicated specifically for a street, it would seem, although the fee is taken, it is taken for the restricted use only; that is to say, for such uses as streets in cities are commonly put to. See State v. Laverack, 24 N. J. 201; held to be compensated at the time of the original taking for any such possible use; and he takes his chances of that use, or any change in it, proving beneficial or deleterious to any remaining property he may own, or business he may be engaged in; and it must also be held that the possibility that the land may, at some future time, revert to him, by the public use ceasing, is too remote and contingent to be considered as property at all.¹ At the same time it must be confessed that it is difficult to determine precisely how far some of the decisions made have been governed by the circumstance that the fee was, or was not in the public, or, on the other hand, have proceeded on the theory that a railway was only in furtherance of the original purpose of the appropriation, and not to be regarded as the imposition of any new burden, even where an easement only was originally taken.²

(a) See reference to later cases in preceding note.

Railroad Co. v. Shumair, 7 Wall. 272. [The weight of judicial opinion is that an ordinary surface street railway is not an additional servitude, whether operated by horses or electricity. See Fobes v. Rome, W. & O. Ry. Co., 121 N. Y. 505, 24 N. E. 919, 8 L. R. A. 453. Contra, as to electric railway in a public highway: Zehren v. Milwaukee El. Ry. Co., 89 Wis. 83, 74 N. W. 518.]

¹ As to whether there is such possibility of reverter, see Heyward v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 N. Y. 314; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188, 211, per Wright, J.; Plitt v. Cox, 43 Pa. St. 456.

² [The following case illustrates that view of the courts which makes ownership in the fee of the street essential to the right to compensation for the new or added use of the street. O'Brien v. Baltimore Belt Ry. Co., 74 Md. 363, 22 Atl. 141, 10 L. R. A. 128. The following illustrate the view that ownership of the fee is not essential to the right to compensation. Abendroth v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 122 N. Y. 1, 25 N. E. 436, 19 Am. St. 461, 11 L. R. A. 334. Elevated railway, injury to easement of light, air, and access: Kane v. N. Y. El. Ry. Co., 125 N. Y. 194, 26 N. E. 278, 11 L. R. A. 940; Stowers v. Postal Telegraph Co., 68 Mass. 359, 9 So. 355, 12 L. R. A. 564, 24 Am. St. 240. Telegraph line in street: Eraser v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Ry. Co., 130 N. Y. 108, 29 N. E. 95, 14 L. R. A. 681, and note. Can be no damages for injury to easement of light and air if property worth more after than before the improvement: Somers v. Met. El. Ry. Co., 120 N. Y. 578, 29 N. E. 802, 14 L. R. A. 344.] There is great difficulty, as it seems to us, in supporting important distinctions upon the fact that the fee was originally taken for the use of the public instead of a mere easement. If the fee is appropriated or dedicated, it is for a particular use only; and it is a conditional fee, — a fee on condition that the land continue to be occupied for that use. The practical difference in the cases is, that when the fee is taken, the possession of the original owner is excluded; and in the case of city streets, where there is occasion to devote them to many other purposes besides those of passage, but nevertheless not inconsistent, such as for the laying of water and gas pipes, and the construction of sewers, this exclusion of any private right of occupation is important, and will sometimes save controversies and litigation. But to say that when a man has declared a dedication for a particular use, under a statute which makes a dedication the gift of a fee, he thereby makes it liable to be appropriated to other purposes, when the same could not be done if a perpetual easement had been dedicated, seems to be having important distinctions upon a difference which after all is more technical than real, and which in any view does not affect the distinction made. The same reasoning which has sustained the legislature in authorizing a railroad track to be laid down in a city street would support its action in authorizing it to be made

Perhaps the true distinction in these cases is not to be found in the motive power of the railway, or in the question whether the fee-simple or a mere easement was taken in the original appropriation, but depends upon the question whether the railway constitutes a thoroughfare, or, on the other hand, is a mere local convenience. When land is taken or dedicated for a town street, it is unquestionably appropriated for all the ordinary purposes of a town street; not merely the purposes to which such streets were formerly applied, but those demanded by new improvements and new wants. Among these purposes is the use for carriages which run upon a grooved track; and the preparation of important streets in large cities for their use is not only a frequent necessity, which must be supposed to have been contemplated, but it is almost as much a matter of course as the grading and paving.¹ The appropriation of a country highway for the purposes of a railway, on the other hand, is neither usual nor often impor-

into a canal; and the purpose of the original dedication or appropriation would thereby be entirely defeated. Is it not more consistent with established rules to hold that a dedication or appropriation to one purpose confines the use to that purpose; and when it is taken for any other, the original owner has not been compensated for the injury he may sustain in consequence, and is therefore entitled to it now? Notwithstanding a dedication which vests the title in the public, it must be conceded that the interest of the adjacent lot-owners is still property. "They have a peculiar interest in the street, which neither the local nor the general public can pretend to claim; a private right of the nature of an incorporeal hereditament, legally attached to their contiguous grounds, and the erections thereon; an incidental title to certain facilities and franchises assured to them by contracts and by law, and without which their property would be comparatively of little value. This easement, appendant to the lots, unlike any right of one lot-owner in the lot of another, is as much property as the lot itself." Crawford v. Delaware, 7 Ohio St. 437, 439. See some very pertinent and sensible remarks on the same subject by Reaney, J., in Street Railway v. Cambridge, 14 Ohio St. 541. See also Railroad Co. v. Hamletton, 40 Ohio St. 400. It makes no difference that the fee is not in the abutter. Railway Co. v. Lawrence, 38 Ohio St. 41. He has, independent of the ownership of the soil, an interest in the street appurtenant to his lot, for the admission of light and air. Adams v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 34 Minn. 283, 30 N. W. 522. Whether the fee is in him or the public, he is to be paid if a steam railroad is laid in the street, as the use is not for an ordinary street purpose. Theobald v. Louisville, &c. Ry. Co., 68 Miss. 279, 6 So. 250. See Columbus & W. Ry. Co. v. Withrow, 82 Ala. 190, 3 So. 23, and cases p. 797, note 1, supra. [But see contra, Fobes v. Rome, W. & O. Ry. Co., 121 N. Y. 505, 24 N. E. 919, 8 L. R. A. 453.]

¹ Attorney-General v. Railway Co., 125 Mass. 515, 25 Am. Rep. 204; Hiss v. Railway Co., 52 Md. 242, 36 Am. Rep. 871; Covington St. R. Co. v. Covington, &c. R. Co. (Ky.), 19 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 795. See cases p. 794, note 4, supra. If a street railroad is used for passing from place to place on the street, a change in the motive power from horses to steam is not a change in the use. Not the motor but the use of the street is the criterion. Briggs v. Lewiston, &c. R. R. Co., 79 Me. 393, 10 Atl. 47. So where cars were run in trains by steam motors, but the use was no substantial infringement upon the common public right of passage. Newell v. Minneapolis, &c. Ry. Co., 35 Minn. 112, 27 N. W. 839.

tant; and it cannot with any justice be regarded as within the contemplation of the parties when the highway is first established.¹ And if this is so, it is clear that the owner cannot be considered as compensated for the new use at the time of the original appropriation. (a)

¹ A steam railroad in such road is a Co. v. Ingalls, 15 Neb. 123, 16 N. W. new servitude. Hastings & G. I. R. R. 762.

(a) [What will constitute such a new use or additional servitude as will entitle an owner whose rights are subject to a prior use or servitude to compensation?

Steam railway in a public street or highway is: East End St. Ry. Co. v. Doyle, 88 Tenn. 747, 13 S. W. 956, 9 L. R. A. 109; Am. Bank Note Co. v. N. Y. El. Ry. Co., 129 N. Y. 252, 20 N. E. 302; Nichols v. A. A. & Y. Ry. Co., 37 Mich. 361, 49 N. W. 538, 18 L. R. A. 371; Kathman v. Tacoma, O. & G. H. Ry. Co., 11 Wash. 832, 40 Pac. 137; Jones v. Erie & W. V. Ry. Co., 131 Pa. St. 39, 25 Atl. 184, 31 Am. St. 722, and note, 18 L. R. A. 330; Finch v. Riverside & A. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 597; Freiday v. Sioux City Rap. Tran. Co., 92 Iowa, 131, 60 N. W. 656, 26 L. R. A. 246; Western Ry. Co. v. Ala. G. T. Ry. Co., 95 Ala. 272, 11 So. 489, 17 L. R. A. 474; White v. N. W. N. C. Ry. Co., 118 N. C. 610, 18 S. E. 330, 37 Am. St. 637, 22 L. R. A. 627; Schaaf v. Cleveland M. & S. Ry. Co., 66 Ohio, 255, 84 N. E. 145. Central, Henry Gans & Sons Mfg. Co. v. St. L. K. & N. W. Ry. Co., 113 Mo. 308, 20 S. W. 658, 18 L. R. A. 369, 35 Am. St. 565; also in Pennsylvania, unless excavation or embankment injures adjoining property or access is cut off or light and air excluded: Jones v. Erie & W. V. Ry. Co., 131 Pa. St. 30, 25 Atl. 184, 31 Am. St. 722; Montgomery v. Santa Ana & W. Ry. Co., 154 Cal. 183, 37 Pac. 783, 24 L. R. A. 654; use of lines of one railway company by another is not: Miller v. G. B. W. & St. P. Ry. Co., 50 Minn. 169, 60 N. W. 1000, 26 L. R. A. 443; grant by one railway company to another of part of its right of way for construction of tracks: such new line is: Fort Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Jennings, 70 Tex. 573, 13 S. W. 270, 8 L. R. A. 180.

Surface street railway propelled by horses, cable, or electricity is not in a city street. Dean v. Ann Arbor St. Ry. Co., 93 Mich. 329, 53 N. W. 336; State v. Jacksonville St. Ry. Co., 20 Fla. 590, 10 So. 500; Penn. Ry. Co. v. Montgomery Co. & Co., 167 Pa. St. 62, 31 Atl. 468, 46 Am. St. 659, 27 L. R. A. 765; trouton, in country highway, Id. Cumberland Tel. & Telph. Co. v. United El. Ry. Co., 63 Tenn. 492, 29 S. W. 104, 27 L. R. A. 236; Green v. City & Suburban Ry. Co., 78 Md. 234, 28 Atl. 625, 44 Am. St. 288; Ashland & C. S. Ry. Co. v. Faulkner, — Ky. —, 45 S. W. 245, 43 L. R. A. 551; Finch v. Riverside & A. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 597, 25 Pac. 765; Rafferty v. Central Traction Co., 147 Pa. St. 579, 23 Atl. 884; Chicago & C. Terminal Ry. Co. v. Whiting, H. & E. C. St. Ry. Co., 139 Ind. 227, 38 N. E. 314, 47 Am. St. 234, 20 L. R. A. 337; New Jersey ex rel. Kennelly v. Jersey City, 67 N. J. L. 253, 30 Atl. 531, 20 L. R. A. 281; Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. West Chicago S. Ry. Co., 166 Ill. 255, 49 N. E. 1078, 29 L. R. A. 455. Unless constructed in disregard of convenience of abutting owners on a city street, a trolley railway is not: Snyder v. Fort Madison St. Ry. Co., 165 Iowa, 284, 75 N. W. 179, 41 L. R. A. 315; Birmingham T. Co. v. Birmingham R. & E. Co., 119 Ala. 137, 24 So. 502, 43 L. R. A. 233. Electric railway in village street is an additional servitude: Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Milwaukee R. & K. El. Ry., 65 Wis. 591, 10 N. W. 578, 60 Am. St. 136, 37 L. R. A. 856. So held in case of city street, in Jaynes v. Omaha S. Ry. Co., 63 Neb. 681, 74 N. W. 67, 33 L. R. A. 751. Such railway in public country highway is: Zehren v. Milwaukee El. Ry. & L. Co., 99 Wis. 53, 74 N. W. 538, 67 Am. St. 844, 41 L. R. A. 575. Elevated street railway is: Williams v. Brooklyn El. Ry. Co., 125 N. Y. 96, 28 N. E. 1018, (rev. 67 Hun, 591). Cooper, Doane v. Lake Street El. Ry. Co., 155 Ill. 510, 49 N. E. 529, 53 Am. St. 265, 36 L. R. A. 97. See Jaynes v. Omaha St. Ry. Co., 63 Neb. 681, 74 N. W. 67, 33 L. R. A. 751. Substitution of electric motor with trolley system on street railway operated by horses is not: State v. Trenton Pass Ry. Co., 68

The cases thus far considered are those in which the original use is not entirely foreign to the purpose of the new appropriation; and it is the similarity that admits of the question which has been discussed. Were the uses totally different, there could be no question whatever that a new assessment of compensation must be made before the appropriation could be lawful.¹ And in any streets by telegraph and telephone companies and the effect upon the rights of abutting owners, see 52 Cent. Law Jour. 295; Callen v. Columbus M. & S. Ry. Co., 66 Ohio, 282, 64 N. E. 141.] So a city may not condemn a pier to let it to a private corporation. Beid er Sugar Refining Co. v. St. Louis Elev. Co., 82 Mo. 121. As to what use may be made of land in which an easement has been condemned for a railroad station, see Glenn v. Boston, &c. R. R. Corp., 141 Mass. 481, 3 N. E. 96; Hogart v. Vicksburg, &c. R. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 624. Where land has been taken for a street, it cannot be appropriated as a house to confine tramps: Winchester v. Capron, 53 N. H. 995, 4 Atl. 795; nor for the erection of a market building without making compensation. State v. Mayor, &c. of Mobile, 5 Porter, 279, 30 Am. Dec. 564; State v. Laverack,

¹ Where lands were appropriated by a railroad company for its purposes, and afterwards leased out for private occupation, it was held that the owner of the fee was entitled to maintain a writ of entry to establish his title and recover damages for the wrongful use. Proprietors of Locks, &c. v. Nashua & Lowell R. R. Co., 104 Mass. 1, 6 Am. Rep. 151. [Use of vacant portion of railway depot grounds for place of business by customer of the railway company is an additional servitude: Lyon v. McDonald, 75 Tex. 71, 14 S. W. 261, 9 L. R. A. 235. The legislature cannot authorize a commission to compel a railway company to grant the use of its lands to private persons for elevator purposes. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 493, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, rev. 29 Neb. 550, 45 N. W. 785. As to the use of

N. J. L. 693, 34 Atl. 1090, 33 L. R. A. 129; Reid v. Norfolk City Ry. Co., 94 Va. 117, 25 S. E. 428, 36 L. R. A. 274, 64 Am. St. 708.

Telegraph or telephone line in public highway or street is: Pac. Postal Telph. Cable Co. v. Irvine, 49 Fed. Rep. 113; Callen v. Columbus E. E. L. Co., 56 Ohio, 196, 61 N. E. 111; Stowers v. Postal Telph. Cable Co., 68 Miss. 569, 9 So. 366, 24 Am. St. 249, 12 L. R. A. 564; Nicholls v. New York & N. J. Tel. Co., 62 N. J. L. 731, 42 Atl. 589; West Union Telph. Co. v. Williams, 89 Va. 636, 11 S. E. 198, 19 Am. St. 908, 8 L. R. A. 429; Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. Eaton, 170 Ill. 513, 49 N. E. 665, 62 Am. St. 340, 33 L. R. A. 722; Krueger v. Wisconsin Telph. Co., 190 Wis. 96, 81 N. W. 1041, 59 L. R. A. 298. Contra: Cater v. N. W. Telephone Exchange Co., 60 Minn. 639, 63 N. W. 111, 27 L. R. A. 319, 51 Am. St. 543; People v. Eaton, 190 Mich. 298, 59 N. W. 145, 24 L. R. A. 721; Irwin v. Great Southern Telph. Co., 37 La. Ann. 63; Magee v. Overshiner, 159 Ind. 127, 40 N. E. 951, 55 Am. St. 358, 49 L. R. A. 370; State ex rel. National Subway Co. v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 551, 46 S. W. 281, 42 L. R. A. 113. Telegraph line on railway line, if for use of railway is not: Am. Telph. & Telph. Co. v. Pearce, 71 Md. 565, 18 Atl. 910, 7 L. R. A. 293. Contra, if not for use of railway: Id. Poles for electric light wires in country highway are not: Palmer v. Larchmont E. Co., 158 N. Y. 231, 52 N. E. 1092, 43 L. R. A. 672. Pipe line for natural gas in public highway is: Kincaid v. Indianapolis N. G. Co., 124 Ind. 577, 24 N. E. 1969, 19 Am. St. 113, 8 L. R. A. 602. When pipe is laid under walk in city street, it is not: McDevitt v. Peoples N. G. Co., 160 Pa. St. 387, 28 Atl. 948.

Sewer system in a town road is not in Massachusetts: Lincoln v. Comm., 164 Mass. 1. Change of country road to city street is not to create a new servitude: Hudleston Adm. v. City of Eugene, 34 Oreg. 343, 55 Pac. 868, 43 L. R. A. 444. Construction of grain elevator on lands condemned for railway by the railway company or its lessee is not misuse of easement condemned. Gurney v. Minneapolis Union Elevator Co., 63 Minn. 70, 65 N. W. 136, 30 L. R. A. 534.]

case, to authorize lands already taken for one public use to be 34 N. J. 201. The opinion of Beasley, Ch. J., in the New Jersey case, will justify liberal quotations. He says (p. 204): "I think it undeniable that the appropriation of this land to the purposes of a market was an additional burthen upon it. Clearly it was not using it as a street. So far from that, what the act authorized to be done was incongruous with such use; for the market was an obstruction to it, considered merely as a highway.

... When, therefore, the legislature declared that these streets in the city of Paterson might be used for market purposes, the power which was conferred in substance was an authority to place obstructions in these public highways. The consequence is that there is no force in the argument, which was the principal one pressed upon our attention, that the use of these streets for the purpose now claimed is as legitimate as the use of a public highway by a horse railroad, which latter use has been repeatedly sanctioned by the courts of the State. The two cases, so far as related to principle, stand precisely opposite. I have said that a market is an obstruction to a street, that it is not a use of it as a street, but, if unauthorized, is a nuisance. To the contrary of this, a horse railroad is a new mode of using a street as such, and it is precisely upon this ground that it has been held to be legal. The cases rest upon this foundation. That a horse railway was a legitimate use of a highway was decided in Hinchman v. Paterson Horse Railroad Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 76; and, in his opinion, Chancellor Greene assigns the following as the reasons of his judgment: 'The use of the road is nearly identical with that of the ordinary highway. The motive power is the same. The noise and jarring of the street by the cars is not greater, and ordinary less, than that produced by omnibuses and other vehicles in ordinary use. Admit that the nature of the use, as respects the travelling public, is somewhat variant, how does it prejudice the land-owner? Is his property taken? Are his rights as a land-owner affected? Does it interfere with the use of his property any more than the ordinary highway?' It is clear that this reasoning can have no appropriate application to a case in which it appears that the use of the street is so far from being nearly identical with that of the ordinary highway that in law it has always been regarded as an injury to such public easement, and on that account an indictable offence.

"I regard, then, a right to hold a market in a street as an easement additional to, and in a measure inconsistent with, its ordinary use as a highway. The question therefore is presented, Can such easement be conferred by the legislature on the public without compensation to the land-owner? I have already said that from the first it has appeared to me this question must be answered in the negative. I think the true rule is, that land taken by the public for a particular use cannot be applied under such a sequestration to any other use to the detriment of the land-owner. This is the only rule which will adequately protect the constitutional right of the citizen. To permit land taken for one purpose, and for which the land-owner has been compensated, to be applied to another and additional purpose, for which he has received no compensation, would be a mere evasion of the spirit of the fundamental law of the State. Land taken and applied for the ordinary purpose of a street would often be an improvement of the adjacent property; an appropriation of it to the uses of a market would, perhaps, as often be destructive of one-half the value of such property. Compensation for land, therefore, to be used as a highway, might, and many times would be, totally inadequate compensation if such land is to be used as a public market place. Few things would be more unjust than, when compensation has been made for land in view of one of these purposes, to allow it to be used without compensation for the other. The right of the public in a highway consists in the privilege of passage, and such privileges as are annexed as incidents by usage or custom, as the right to make sewers and drains, and to lay gas and water pipes. These subordinate privileges are entirely consistent with the primary use of the highway, and are no detriment to the land-owner. But I am not aware of any case in which it has been held that the public has any right in a highway which is incongruous with the purpose for which it was originally created, and which at the same time is injurious to the proprietor of the soil. Such certainly has not been the course of judicial decision in our own courts. Indeed the cases appear to be all ranged on the opposite side. I have shown that the legalization of the use of a street by a horse railroad has been carefully placed on the ground that such an appropriation of the street was merely a new mode of its legitimate and ordinary use. The rule now adopted excludes by necessary implication the hypothesis that the dedication of a street to a new purpose, inconsistent with its original nature, would be legal with respect to the uncompensated land-owner. But beyond this it has been expressly declared that such superadded use would be illegal. In the opinion of Mr. Justice Haines, in Starr v. Camden & Atlantic R. R. Co., 24 N. J. 502, it is very explicitly held that the constitution of this State would prevent the legislature from granting to a railroad company a right to use a public highway as a bed for their road without first making compensation to the owner of the soil. And in the case of Hinchman v. The Paterson Horse Railroad Co., already cited, Chancellor Greene quotes these views, and gives the doctrine the high sanction of his own approval. See also the Central R. R. Co. v. Metcalf, 20 N. J. 206."

appropriated to another, there must be distinct and express legislative authority.¹

The learned judge then distinguishes Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. 76, and quotes, as sustaining his own views, State v. Mayor, &c. of Mobile, 5 Porter, 279, 60 Am. Dec. 564; Trustees of Presbyterian Society v. Auburn & Rochester R. R. Co., 8 H. L. 507; Williams v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; Angell on Highways, § 243 et seq., and cases cited. [A public park may be taken for rapid transit railway: Suburban Rapid Transit Co. v. City of New York, 125 N. Y. 310, 23 N. E. 525, rev. 60 Hun, 577. Highway for railway: Louisville & W. Ry. Co. v. Whitley Co. Court, 95 Ky. 215, 24 S. W. 204, 44 Am. St. Rep. 220, note; Chicago & Northwestern Ry. Co. v. Chicago, 151 Ill. 348, 37 N. E. 842; City of Valparaiso v. Chicago & Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 122 Ind. 457, 24 N. E.

249; modified in Lake Erie & Western Ry. Co. v. City of Kokomo, 130 Ind. 224, 29 N. E. 780; Minneapolis Western Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis & St. Louis Ry. Co., 61 Minn. 502, 63 N. W. 1035. Part of school house site may be taken for a public way, though such taking to some extent diminishes its usefulness: East-hampton v. Hampshire County, 154 Mass. 424, 28 N. E. 238, 13 L. R. A. 157.]

¹ In re Boston, &c. R. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 457; State v. Montclair R. Co., 35 N. J. 328; Railroad Co. v. Dayton, 23 Ohio St. 510; Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa, 403, 2 N. W. 1064, 6 N. W. 706, 37 Am. Rep. 216; [Suburban Rap. Trans. Co. v. City of N. Y., 125 N. Y. 310, 23 N. E. 525, rev. 60 Hun, 577. Wharves of railway company, for public wharves, authority for may be implied, if implication is clear. In re Mayor of City of New York, 135 N. Y. 253, 31 N. E. 1043, 31 Am. St. 525. Railway lands for street crossing with viaduct rather than at grade, not under general authority to cross. Ill. Cent. Ry. Co. v. City of Chicago, 141 Ill. 589, 30 N. E. 1044, 17 L. R. A. 530. Railway depot grounds for street: Cin., Wab. & M. Ry. Co. v. City of Anderson, 139 Ind. 490, 38 N. E. 167, 47 Am. St. 285, citing previous Indiana cases and others. Colorado E. Ry. Co. v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 293.] In a case where a steamboat company's dock was suffered to be taken by a railroad, it was said that the test of whether land is thus held for public use "appears to be not what the owner does or may choose to do, but what under the law it must do, and whether a public trust is impressed upon it." Matter of New York, L. & W. R. R. Co., 99 N. Y. 12, 1 N. E. 27. One railroad may condemn an easement to cross another. East St. Louis Conn. Ry. Co. v. East St. Louis, &c. Co., 108 Ill. 255; Toledo A. & C. Ry. Co. v. Detroit, &c. R. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564, 29 N. W. 500; [Minn. & St. Louis Ry. Co. v. Minn. West. Ry. Co., 61 Minn. 502, 63 N. W. 1035; United N. J. Ry. & Canal Co. v. Nat'l Docks & N. J. J. C. Ry. Co., 52 N. J. L. 90, 18 Atl. 574; Nat'l Docks & N. J. J. C. Ry. Co. v. State, 53 N. J. L. 217, 21 Atl. 570, 26 Am. St. 421; Mem-

Although the regulation of a navigable stream will give to the persons incidentally affected no right to compensation, yet if the stream is diverted from its natural course, so that those entitled to its benefits are prevented from making use of it as before, the deprivation of this right is a taking which entitles them to compensation, notwithstanding the taking may be for the purpose of creating another and more valuable channel of navigation.¹ The owners of land over which such a stream flows, although they do not own the flowing water itself, yet have a property in the use this & C. Ry. Co. v. Birmingham S. & T. R. Ry. Co., 39 Ala. 571, 11 So. 342, 18 L. R. A. 103.] When by agreement it already has a crossing, a further one may be condemned. Chicago & W. I. R. R. Co. v. Ill. Centr. R. R. Co., 113 Ill. 153. One railroad may not condemn a strip lengthwise of another without express legislative authority. Alexandria & F. Ry. Co. v. Alexandria, &c. R. R. Co., 75 Va. 789; Barre R. R. Co. v. Montpelier, &c. R. R. Co., 61 Vt. 1, 17 Atl. 923, 4 L. R. A. 785; [Seattle & M. Ry. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 159, 34 Pac. 551, 38 Am. St. 873, 22 L. R. A. 217; Minn. & St. Louis Ry. Co. v. Minn. West. Ry. Co., 61 Minn. 592, 63 N. W. 1035; Tare Providence & W. Ry. Co., 17 R. I. 324, 21 Atl. 955.] Nor may it take a considerable portion of another's yard unless absolutely necessary. Appeal of Sharon Ry., 122 Pa. St. 533, 17 Atl. 234, 9 Am. St. 133, and note, 137. But see Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 112 Ill. 539. As to the right of condemnation where a track is already laid in a narrow pass, see Anniston, &c. R. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, &c. R. R. Co., 82 Ala. 237, 2 So. 719; Montana Centr. Ry. Co. v. Helena, &c. Co., 6 Mont. 416, 12 Pac. 916; Denver & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Denver, &c. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 857; Ill. Centr. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 122 Ill. 473, 13 N. E. 140. If by necessary implication under the circumstances such power is intended to be granted, a lengthwise condemnation is valid. Providence, &c. R. R. Co. v. Norwich, &c. R. R. Co., 138 Mass. 277. Streets may be opened across tracks: St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis, 35 Minn. 141, 27 N. W. 500; Prest & D. & H. C. Co. v. Whitehall, 90 N. Y. 21; but not without express authority, across necessary depot grounds acquired by condemnation. Prospect of that water as it flows past them, for the purpose of producing mechanical power, or for any of the other purposes for which they can make it available, without depriving those below them of the like use, or encroaching upon the rights of those above; and this property is equally protected with any of a more tangible character.¹

Park, &c. R. R. Co. v. Williamson, 91 N. Y. 552, or by purchase: St. Paul Union Depot Co. v. St. Paul, 30 Minn. 359, 15 N. W. 684. Compare New York & L. B. R. R. Co. v. Drummond, 43 N. J. L. 644. Nor may a ditch be located lengthwise of a railroad right of way. Baltimore & O. &c. R. R. Co. v. North, 193 Ind. 486, 3 N. E. 144. Without such authority a railroad may not condemn land dedicated as a levee: Oregon Ry. Co. v. Portland, 9 Oreg. 231; nor a school district, a poor farm for school site. Appeal of Tyrone School Dist., 15 Atl. 667. The existing use must be actual and in good faith. Rochester, H. & L. R. R. Co. v. New York, &c. Co., 119 N. Y. 128, 17 N. E. 680; Matter of Rochester H. & L. R. R. Co., Id. 119, 17 N. E. 678; New York & A. R. R. Co. v. New York, &c. R. R. Co., 11 Abb. N. C. 388. See also cases, p. 757, note 3, ante. When for a way land already used for that purpose is taken, everything upon it is also taken; such as flagstones, bridges, culverts, &c.; and the assessment of damages should cover the whole: Ford v. County Commissioners, 94 Me. 408; also any buildings which it may be necessary to destroy. Lafayette, &c. R. R. Co. v. Winslow, 63 Ill. 219. [Legislature cannot authorize the taking by one from another of property held for a public use to be held by that other for the same use. Cary Library v. Bliss, 151 Mass. 394, 25 N. E. 92, 7 L. R. A. 765.]

¹ People's Canal Appraisers, 13 Wend. 855. And see Hatch v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 49; Bellinger v. New York Central R. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 42; Gardner v. Newburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 182, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Thunder Bay, &c. Co. v. Spoonbury, 31 Mich. 332; Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 588, 37 Am. Rep. 235.

What Interest in Land can be taken under the Right of Eminent Domain.

Where land is appropriated to the public use under the right of eminent domain, and against the will of the owner, we have seen how careful the law is to limit the public authorities to their precise needs, and not to allow the dispossession of the owner from any portion of his freehold which the public use does not require. This must be so on the general principle that the right, being based on necessity, cannot be any broader than the necessity which supports it. For the same reason, it would seem that, in respect to the land actually taken, if there can be any conjoint occupation of the owner and the public, the former should not be altogether excluded, but should be allowed to occupy for his private purposes to any extent not inconsistent with the public use. As a general rule, the laws for the exercise of the right of eminent domain do not assume to go further than to appropriate the use, and the title in fee still remains in the original owner. In the common highways, the public have a perpetual easement, but the soil is the property of the adjacent owner, and he may make any use of it which does not interfere with the public right of passage, and the public can use it only for the purposes usual with such ways.² And when the land ceases to be used by the public as a way, the owner will again become restored to his complete and exclusive possession, and the fee will cease to be encumbered with the easement.³

¹ Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. 284, 35 N. Y. 454; Gardner v. Newburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 162, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 688, 37 Am. Rep. 265.

² In Adams v. Rivers, 11 Barb. 300, a person who stood in the public way and abused the occupant of an adjoining lot was held liable in trespass as being unlawfully there, because not using the highway for the purpose to which it was appropriated. See, as to what is a proper use of highway by land, Bliss v. South Hadley, 145 Mass. 91, 13 N. E. 352; Galline v. Lowell, 144 Mass. 431, 11 N. E. 723; by water, Sterling v. Jackson, 69 Mich.

488, 37 N. W. 845. Hay standing on land which has been condemned for right of way belongs to the land-owner. Bailey v. Sweeney, 64 N. H. 236, 9 Atl. 543. So of ice. Julien v. Woodsmall, 82 Ind. 508. Where in the course of a sewer improvement the fee of an island is not taken, the gravel taken from it may be used elsewhere in the sewer work. Titus v. Boston, 140 Mass. 164, 21 N. E. 310.

³ Dean v. Sullivan R. R. Co., 22 N. H. 316; Blake v. Rich, 34 N. H. 282; Henry v. Dubuque & Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Iowa, 288; Weston v. Foster, 7 Met. 297; Quimby v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 23

It seems, however, to be competent for the State to appropriate the title to the land in fee, and so to altogether exclude any use by the former owner, except that which every individual citizen is entitled to make, if in the opinion of the legislature it is needful that the fee be taken.¹ The judicial decisions to this effect proceed upon the idea that, in some cases, the public purposes cannot be fully accomplished without appropriating the complete title; and where this is so in the opinion of the legislature, the same reasons which support the legislature in their right to decide absolutely and finally upon the necessity of the taking will also support their decision as to the estate to be taken. The power, it is said in one case, "must of necessity rest in the legislature, in order to secure the useful exercise and enjoyment of the right in question. A case might arise where a temporary use would be all that the public interest required. Another case might require the permanent and apparently the perpetual occupation and enjoyment of the property by the public, and the right to take it must be coextensive with the necessity of the case, and the measure of compensation should of course be graduated by the nature and the duration of the estate or interest of which the owner is deprived."² And it was therefore held, where the statute provided that lands might be compulsorily taken in fee-simple for the purposes of an almshouse extension, and they were taken accordingly, that the title of the original owner was thereby entirely divested, so that when the land ceased to be used for the public purpose, the title remained in the municipality which had appropriated it, and did not revert to the former owner or his heirs.³ And it does not seem to be uncommon to provide that,

Vt. 387; Giesy v. Cincinnati, &c. R. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 508. See Skullman v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 78 Iowa, 404, 43 N. W. 275, ante, p. 706, note 1.

¹ Roanoke City v. Berkowitz, 80 Va. 510. See Matter of Amsterdam Water Commissioners, 93 N. Y. 851. This, however, is forbidden by the Constitution of Illinois of 1870, in the case of land taken for railroad tracks. Art. 2, § 18. And we think it would be difficult to demonstrate the necessity for appropriating the fee in case of any thoroughfare; and if never needful, it ought to be held incompetent. See New Orleans, &c. R. R. Co. v. Gay, 32 La. Ann. 471. [Any easement or right connected with land may be taken as well as the absolute fee. Joinston v. Old Colony R. Co., 18 R. I. 642, 29 Atl. 594, 49 Am. St. 800.]

² Heyward v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 N. Y. 314, 325. See also Dingley v. Boston, 100 Mass. 544; Brooklyn Park Com'rs v. Armstrong, 2 Lans. 429; s. c. on appeal, 45 N. Y. 234, and 6 Am. Rep. 79.

³ Heyward v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 N. Y. 314. And see Baker v. Johnson, 2 Ill. 342; Wheeler v. Rochester, &c. R. R. Co., 12 Barb. 227; Munger v. Tonawanda R. R. Co., 4 N. Y. 349; Rexford v. Knight, 11 N. Y. 308; Commonwealth v. Fisher, 1 Pen. & Watts. 462; De Varaigne v. Fox, 2 Barb. 95; Coster v. N. J. R. R. Co., 23 N. J. 227; Pitt v. Cox, 43 Pa. St. 486; Brooklyn Park Com'rs v. Armstrong, 45 N. Y. 234, 6 Am. Rep. 79; Water Works Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364. Compare Gebhardt v. Reeves, 75 Ill. 301.

in the case of some classes of public ways, and especially of city and village streets, the dedication or appropriation to the public use shall vest the title to the land in the State, county, or city; the purposes for which the land may be required by the public being so numerous and varied, and so impossible of complete specification in advance, that nothing short of a complete ownership in the public is deemed sufficient to provide for them. In any case, however, an easement only would be taken, unless the statute plainly contemplated and provided for the appropriation of a larger interest.¹

The Damaging of Property.

In addition to providing for compensation for the taking of property for public use, several States since 1869 have embodied in their constitutions provisions that property shall not be "damaged" or "injured" in the course of public improvements without compensation.² The construction of these provisions has not been uniform. In some cases they are held to require compensation only where like acts done by an individual would warrant the recovery of damages at common law.³ In others a ¹ Barclay v. Howell's Lessee, 6 Pet. 498; Rust v. Lowe, 6 Mass. 90; Jackson v. Rutland & B. R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 150; Jackson v. Hathaway, 15 Johns. 447.

² Constitution of Alabama, Art. XIII, § 7; Arkansas, Art. II, § 22; California, Art. I, § 14; Colorado, Art. II, § 14; Georgia, Bill of Rights, I, § 3; Illinois, Art. II, § 13; Louisiana, Art. 159; Missouri, Art. I, § 20; Nebraska, Art. I, § 21; Pennsylvania, Art. I, § 8; Texas, Art. I, § 17; West Virginia, Art. III, § 3.

³ The purpose was to impose on corporations "having the right of eminent domain a liability for consequential damages from which they had been previously exempt," when for doing the same act an individual would have been liable. Edmondson v. Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 316, 2 Atl. 404. "Injured" means such legal wrong as would have been the subject of an action for damages at common law. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Marcant, 119 Pa. St. 641, 13 Atl. 630; Pa. S. V. R. R. Co. v. Walsh, 124 Pa. St. 544, 17 Atl. 186. "In all cases, to warrant a recovery it must appear that there has been some direct physical disturbance of a right, either public or private, which the plaintiff enjoys in connection with his property and which gives to it an additional value, and that by reason of such disturbance he has sustained a special damage with respect to his property in excess of that sustained by the public generally. In the absence of any statutory or constitutional provisions on the subject, the common law afforded redress in all such cases, and we have no doubt it was the intention of the framers of the present constitution to require compensation to be made in all cases where but for some legislative enactment an action would lie at the common law." Mackey, J., in Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 61; followed in Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Rude v. St. Louis, 93 Mo. 403, 6 S. W. 257. To the same effect is Trinity & S. Ry. Co. v. Meadows, 73 Tex. 32, 3 L. R. A. 503, 11 S. W. 145; [Austin v. Augusta T. Ry. Co., 108 Ga. 671, 34 S. E. 552, 47 L. R. A. 755. To "damage" property within the meaning of that term as used in the Georgia constitution there must be some physical interference with property or with a right or use appurtenant to property. A railway company is not liable, therefore, to the owner of real property for diminution in the market value resulting from the making of noise or broader scope has been given to them.¹ Compensation has been awarded under them for the laying of a railroad track in the street, the fee of which the abutter does not own;² for a change in the grade of the street;³ for cutting off egress by it;⁴ and for sending forth of smoke and cinders causing personal inconvenience and discomfort only to the occupants. Austin v. Terminal Ry. Co., 108 Ga. 571, 34 S. E. 852, 47 L. R. A. 755. Under constitution providing for compensation where property is "injured," one whose property is depreciated, in common with others of the general public, by reason of noise, smoke, etc., resulting from the ordinary operation of a railway, and suffered by the public generally, is not entitled to compensation. But if by reason of the near location of a turn-table this depreciation is unusual he is entitled to compensation. Louisville Ry. Co. v. Foster, 22 Ky. L. 458, 57 S. W. 480, 50 L. R. A. 813.] In Alabama the provision in case of a change of grade is held to cover only such alterations as could not have been anticipated at the time of the first taking. City Council of Montgomery v. Townsend, 80 Ala. 489. The English statute covering the same ground as these provisions receives substantially the same construction as that put upon them in the Pennsylvania cases noted above. Caledonian Ry. Co. v. Walker's Trustees, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 259.

¹ The word "damaged" embraces more than physical invasions of property. It is not restricted to cases where the owner is entitled to recover as for a tort at common law. Reardon v. San Francisco, 86 Cal. 492, 6 Pac. 517. The language is intended to cover "all cases in which even in the proper prosecution of a public work or purpose the right or property of any person in a pecuniary way may be injuriously affected." Gulf C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 487. See Gottschalk v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 14 Neb. 550, 18 N. W. 475, 17 N. W. 120; Hot Springs R. R. Co. v. Williamson, 45 Ark. 429; Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 386; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Col. 113, 2 Pac. 6;

Denver Circle R. R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Col. 493, 15 Pac. 714. The damages are not restricted to such as could reasonably have been anticipated when the structure was built. Omaha & R. V. R. R. Co. v. Standen, 22 Neb. 343, 35 N. W. 153. [Depreciation in value by reason of noise, smoke, and vibration incident to the operation of a railway near by, but entirely on lands of private persons, is "damage" within meaning of the term in the constitution, though no land taken. Gainesville, H. & W. Ry. Co. v. Hall, 78 Tex. 169, 14 S. W. 259, 9 L. R. A. 298.]

² Hot Springs R. R. Co. v. Williamson, 45 Ark. 429; Columbus & W. Ry. Co. v. Witherow, 82 Ala. 190, 3 So. 23. Denver v. Bayer, 7 Col. 113, 2 Pac. 6; Denver & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Bourne, 11 Col. 59, 16 Pac. 839; McMahon v. St. Louis, &c. Ry. Co., 41 La. Ann. 827, 6 So. 640; Gulf C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 487; Gottschalk v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 14 Neb. 550, 18 N. W. 475, 17 N. W. 120. [Reining v. N. Y. L. & W. Ry. Co., 128 N. Y. 157, 623, 28 N. E. 640, 14 L. R. A. 133; Jones v. Erie & W. V. Ry. Co., 151 Pa. St. 30, 25 Atl. 134, 31 Am. St. 722, 17 L. R. A. 758. So damages have been awarded under such circumstances though no such specific constitutional provision. Kansas N. & D. Ry. Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 234, 21 Pac. 1051, 16 Am. St. 479.] So of a street railroad. Campbell v. Metrop. St. Ry. Co., 82 Ga. 820, 9 S. E. 1078. In Illinois it is so held as to a track in a road: Chicago & W. I. R. R. Co. v. Ayres, 100 Ill. 511; but not as to one laid in the street of a city by its permission under legislative authority. Olney v. Wharf, 115 Ill. 519, 5 N. E. 360. Nor can a railroad which crosses a street complain that another crosses it in the street. Kansas City, St. J., &c. R. R. Co. v. St. Joseph, &c. Co., 97 Mo. 457, 10 S. W. 826.

³ Reardon v. San Francisco, 86 Cal.

⁴ Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64; Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Chicago, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. Hazels, 26 Neb. 384, 42 N. W. 93. So if access is rendered dangerous where not cut off. Pa. S. V. R. R. Co. v. Walsh, 124 Pa. St. 544, 17 Atl. 186, 10 Am. St. 611. See also Quigley v. Pa. S. V. R. R. Co., 121 Pa. St. 35, 16 Atl. 478.

other damage from the construction of public works.¹ It has been denied, however, where a railway viaduct has been built on the other side of a narrow street from the plaintiff's lot;² and where the street has been rendered impassable at some distance from the property of the complaining party;³ and where the damage results from the operation and not the construction of the work.⁴

Compensation for Property Taken.

It is a primary requisite, in the appropriation of lands for public purposes, that compensation shall be made therefor. Eminent domain differs from taxation in that, in the former case, the citizen is compelled to surrender to the public something beyond his due proportion for the public benefit. The public seize and appropriate his particular estate, because of a special need for it, and not because it is right, as between him and the government, that he should surrender it.⁵ To him, therefore, the benefit and protection he receives from the government are not sufficient compensation; for those advantages are the equivalent for the taxes he pays, and the other public burdens he assumes in common with the community at large. And this compensation must be 462, 6 Pac. 317; Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 329; Moon v. Atlanta, 70 Ga. 611; Sheehy v. Kansas City, &c. Co., 94 Mo. 574, 7 S. W. 579; New Brighton v. Peirson, 197 Pa. St. 289; Hutchinson v. Parkersburg, 25 W. Va. 226. So as to the establishment of the grade. Harmon v. Omaha, 17 Neb. 548, 23 N. W. 503. But if after a grade is established one buys and the walk is then cut down to grade, there is no damage. Denver v. Vernia, 8 Col. 399, 8 Pac. 656. In Alabama there is none, if the change might have been anticipated. City Council of Montgomery v. Townsend, 80 Ala. 489.

¹ In Omaha Horse Ry. Co. v. Cable Tramway Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 727, the laying of a cable road by the side of a horse railroad was held a damaging. So of the erection of a bridge near a ferry. Mason v. Harper's Ferry B. Co., 17 W. Va. 396. But the clogging of a stream caused by the removal of timber incidental to proper railroad construction is not a ground for damages. Trinity & S. R. Ry. Co. v. Meadows, 73 Tex. 32, 11 S. W. 145.

² Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472, 9 Atl. 871; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa.

St. 541, 13 Atl. 690, 4 Am. St. 653. [See Pennsylvania, &c. Ry. v. Walsch, 124 Pa. St. 544, 17 Atl. 186, 10 Am. St. 611, where these cases are interpreted as holding that the constitutional provision was not intended to apply to injuries which are the result of the operation of the railway, as distinguished from such as result from its construction. It is here held that where access to abutting property is cut off or rendered dangerous, the provision is applicable.]

³ Rude v. St. Louis, 23 Mo. 468, 6 S. W. 257; East St. Louis v. O'Flynn, 119 Ill. 200, 10 N. E. 335.

⁴ Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541, 13 Atl. 690, 4 Am. St. 653. See Caledonian Ry. Co. v. Walker's Trustees, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 259. Nor may damages be given for negligence in the construction. Edmundson v. Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 312, 2 Atl. 404; Atlanta v. Word, 78 Ga. 276. Contra, Omaha & R. V. R. R. Co. v. Standen, 22 Neb. 343, 35 N. W. 183.

⁵ People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 274; Booth v. Woodbury, 32 Conn. 118.

pecuniary in its character, because it is in the nature of a payment for a compulsory purchase.¹

The time when the compensation must be made may depend upon the peculiar constitutional provisions of the State. In some of the States, by express constitutional direction, compensation must be made before the property is taken. No constitutional principle, however, is violated by a statute which allows private property to be entered upon and temporarily occupied for the purpose of a survey and other incipient proceedings, with a view to judging and determining whether or not the public needs require the appropriation, and, if they do, what the proper location shall be; and the party acting under this statutory authority would neither be bound to make compensation for the temporary possession, nor be liable to action of trespass.² When, however, the land has been viewed, and a determination arrived at to appropriate it, the question of compensation is to be considered; and in the absence of any express constitutional provision fixing the time and the manner of making it, the question who is to take the property — whether the State, or one of its political divisions or municipalities, or, on the other hand, some private corporation — may be an important consideration.

When the property is taken directly by the State, or by any municipal corporation by State authority, it has been repeatedly held not to be essential to the validity of a law for the exercise of the right of eminent domain, that it should provide for making compensation before the actual appropriation. It is sufficient if provision is made by the law by which the party can obtain compensation, and that an impartial tribunal is provided for assessing it.³ The decisions upon this point assume that, when the

¹ The effect of the right of eminent domain against the individual "amounts to nothing more than a power to oblige him to sell and convey when the public necessities require it." Johnson, J., in Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 145. And see Brishaw v. Rogers, 20 Johns. 103, per Spencer, Ch. J.; People v. Mayor, &c. of Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 413; Carson v. Coleman, 11 N. J. Eq. 106; Young v. Harrison, 6 Ga. 130; United States v. Minnesota, &c. R. R. Co., 1 Minn. 127; Railroad Co. v. Ferris, 26 Tex. 588; Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427; State v. Graves, 19 Md. 351; Wackler v. Chicago, 61 Ill. 142, 147. [Constitutional requirement of compensation is not satisfied by taxing back on portion of lands not taken, the value of

that taken and the amount of damages for injury to that not taken. This results in a taking without compensation. City of Bloomington v. Latham, 142 Ill. 462, 32 N. E. 509, 18 L. R. A. 457.] The power of a treaty is such that it may take private property without compensation. Cornet v. Winton, 2 Yerg. 143.

² Bloodgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. Co., 14 Wend. 51, and 18 Wend. 9; Cushman v. Smith, 34 Me. 247; Nichols v. Somerset, &c. R. R. Co., 43 Me. 333; Mercer v. McWilliams, Wright (Ohio), 132; Walther v. Warner, 35 Mo. 277; Fox v. W. P. R. R. Co., 31 Cal. 568; State v. Seymour, 35 N. J. 47, 53.

³ Bloodgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. Co., 15 Wend. 9; Rogers v. Brad-

State has provided a remedy by resort to which the party can have his compensation assessed, adequate means are afforded for its satisfaction; since the property of the municipality, or of the State, is a fund to which he can resort without risk of loss.¹ It

shaw, 20 Johns. 744; Calking v. Baldwin, 4 Wend. 647, 21 Am. Dec. 168; Case v. Thompson, 6 Wend. 634; Fletcher v. Auburn & Syracuse R. R. Co., 25 Wend. 462; Rexford v. Knight, 11 N. Y. 208; Taylor v. Marcy, 25 Ill. 518; Callison v. Hedrick, 15 Gratt. 244; Jackson v. Winn's Heirs, 4 Lit. 323; People v. Green, 8 Mich. 493; Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. 485, 497, per Verplanck, Senator; Gardner v. Newburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 162, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Charlestown Branch R. R. Co. v. Middlesex, 7 Met. 78; Harper v. Richardson, 22 Cal. 251; Baker v. Johnson, 2 Hill, 342; People v. Hayden, 6 Hill, 359; Orr v. Quimby, 54 N. H. 590; Ash v. Cummings, 50 N. H. 591; White v. Nashville, &c. R. R. Co., 7 Heisk. 518; Simms v. Railroad Co., 12 Heisk. 621; State v. Messenger, 27 Minn. 119, 6 N. W. 457; Chapman v. Gates, 54 N. Y. 132; Hamersley v. New York, 56 N. Y. 635; Loweree v. Newark, 38 N. J. 151; Brook v. Hiscen, 40 Wis. 674; Long v. Fuller, 68 Pa. St. 170 (case of a school district); Smeaton v. Martin, 57 Wis. 354, 16 N. W. 493; Com'rs of State Park v. Henry, 38 Minn. 236, 36 N. H. 874. [Provision requiring payment into court in case of an appeal from assessment, of double the amount of the assessment, is adequate. Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas Ry. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 40 L. ed. U. S. 138, and note, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Backus v. Fort St. Union Depot Co., 159 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. U. S. 853, and note, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Consumer's Gas Trust Co. v. Harless, 131 Ind. 446, 29 N. E. 1002, 15 L. R. A. 595. But provision for payment into court of only the amount awarded is not sufficient. Harrisburg C. & C. T. R. Co. v. Harrisburg & M. E. Ry. Co., 177 Pa. St. 585, 35 Atl. 850, 34 L. R. A. 433.] The same rule applies to the United States. Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Garland, 25 Fed. Rep. 521: "Although it may not be necessary, within the constitutional provision, that the amount of compensation should be actually ascertained and paid before property is thus taken, it is, I apprehend, the settled doctrine, even as respects the State itself, that at least certain and ample provision must first be made by law (except in cases of public emergency), so that the owner can coerce payment through the judicial tribunals or otherwise without any unreasonable or unnecessary delay; otherwise the law making the appropriation is no better than blank paper. Bloodgood v. Mohawk & Hudson R. R. Co., 18 Wend. 9. The provisions of the statute prescribing the mode of compensation in cases like the present, when properly understood and administered, come fully up to this great fundamental principle; and even if any doubt could be entertained about their true construction, it should be made to lean in favor of the one that is found to be most in conformity with the constitutional requisite." People v. Hayden, 6 Hill, 359, 361; [Branson v. Gee, 25 Oreg. 492, 36 Pac. 527, 24 L. R. A. 355; Old Colony Ry. Co. v. Framingham Water Co., 163 Mass. 591, 27 N. E. 662, 18 L. R. A. 332; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.] "A provision for compensation is an indispensable attendant upon the due and constitutional exercise of the power of depriving an individual of his property." Gardner v. Newburg, 2 Johns. Ch. 162, 168, 7 Am. Dec. 526; Buffalo, &c. R. R. Co. v. Ferris, 26 Tex. 588; Ash v. Cummings, 50 N. H. 591, 613; Haverhill Bridge Proprietors v. County Com'rs, 133 Mass. 120, 4 Am. Rep. 518; Langford v. Com'rs of Ramsey Co., 16 Minn. 575; Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Telegraph Co., 46 Ga. 43. [Statute making no provision for measuring compensation is void. Mulligan v. City of Perth-Amboy, 52 N. J. L. 132, 18 Atl. 670. See also Tuttle v. Justice of Knox County, 89 Tenn. 157, 14 S. W. 486; Cherokee Nation v. Southern K. Ry. Co., 135 U. S. 641, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.]

¹ In Commissioners, &c. v. Bowie, 34 Ala. 461, it was held that a provision by

is essential, however, that the remedy be one to which the party can resort on his own motion; (a) if the provision be such that only the public authorities appropriating the land are authorized to take proceedings for the assessment, it must be held to be void.¹ But if the remedy is adequate, and the party is allowed to pursue it, it is not unconstitutional to limit the period in which he shall resort to it, and to provide that, unless he shall take proceedings for the assessment of damages within a specified time, all right thereto shall be barred.² The right to compensation, when property is appropriated by the public, may always be waived;³ and law that compensation, when assessed, should be paid to the owner by the county treasurer, sufficiently secured its payment: And see Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 Ohio St. 433; Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray, 417; Chapman v. Gates, 54 N. Y. 182. But it is not competent to leave compensation to be made from the earnings of a railroad company. Conn. Riv. R. R. Co. v. Commissioners, 127 Mass. 50, 34 Am. Dec. 538. [As to whether sufficient where provision is for payment out of special fund of municipality, see In re Lincoln Park, 44 Minn. 279, 46 N. W. 355.]

¹ Shepardson v. Milwaukee & Beloit R. R. Co., 6 Wis. 395; Powers v. Bears, 12 Wis. 213. See McCann v. Sierra Co., 7 Cal. 121; Colton v. Rossi, 9 Cal. 595; Ragatz v. Dubuque, 4 Iowa, 313. An impartial tribunal for the ascertainment of the damage must exist when the land is taken. State v. Perth Amboy, 52 N. J. L. 132, 18 Atl. 879. But in People v. Hayden, 6 Hill, 359, where the statute provided for appraisers who were to proceed to appraise the land as soon as it was appropriated, the proper remedy of the owner, if they failed to perform this duty, was held to be to apply for a mandamus. If land is taken without provision for compensation, the owner has a common-law remedy. Hooker v. New Haven & Co. Co., 16 Conn. 148, 33 Am. Dec. 477. The party making an appropriation may abandon it if the terms, when ascertained, are not satisfactory.

Lamb v. Schotter, 54 Cal. 319. But not after judgment; Drath v. Burlington, & C. R. Co., 15 Neb. 367, 18 N. W. 717; nor after verdict when an appeal has been taken and entry made. Witt v. St. Paul, & C. R. Co., 35 Minn. 494, 23 N. W. 161. But see Denver & N. O. R. R. Co. v. Lamborn, 8 Col. 389, 8 Pac. 582, contra.

² People v. Green, 8 Mich. 499; Charlestown Branch R. R. Co. v. Middlesex, 7 Met. 78; Rexford v. Knight, 11 N. Y. 308; Taylor v. Marcy, 25 Ill. 518; Callison v. Hedrick, 15 Gratt. 244; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 13 Cal. 229; Harper v. Richardson, 22 Cal. 251; Cupp v. Commissioners of Seneca, 19 Ohio St. 173; Cage v. Traver, 20 Miss. 585. [See Snohomish County v. Haywood, 11 Wash. 429, 30 Pac. 652, to the effect that compensation must not be dependent upon application for it. Contra, Branson v. Gee, 25 Oreg. 462, 36 Pac. 627, 24 L. R. A. 355.]

³ Matter of Albany St., 11 Wend. 149, 25 Am. Dec. 618; Brown v. Worcester, 13 Gray, 31; ante, p. 259. [Unconditional consent in writing to construction is waiver of compensation. White v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 139 N. Y. 19, 34 N. E. 887. Knowledge of construction without objection is not a waiver. Maysville & B. S. Ry. Co. v. Ingram, 19 Ky. L. 833, 30 S. W. 2. See further upon this question of waiver, Abendroth v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 122 N. Y. 1, 25 N. E. 496, 19 Am. St. 461, 11 L. R. A. 624; Pennsylvania Co. v. Platt, 47 Ohio, 893, 25 N. E. 1028; a failure to apply for and have the compensation assessed, when reasonable time and opportunity and a proper tribunal are afforded for the purpose, may well be considered a waiver.

(a) [Hickman v. City of Kansas, 120 Mo. 119, 25 S. W. 225, 23 L. R. A. 658. The constitutional guarantee is for the protection of a right and not for the redress of a wrong; and a rule which permits land to be taken without proof of the right to do so, and casts upon the owner the burden of instituting proceedings to save his property, does not meet the constitutional requirement. Stearns v. Barre, 78 Vt. 281, 50 Atl. 1086, 87 Am. St. 781.]

Where, however, the property is not taken by the State, or by a municipality, but by a private corporation which, though for this purpose to be regarded as a public agent, appropriates it for the benefit and profit of its members, and which may or may not be sufficiently responsible to make secure and certain the payment, in all cases, of the compensation which shall be assessed, it is certainly proper, and it has sometimes been questioned whether it was not absolutely essential, that payment be actually made before the owner could be divested of his freehold.¹ Chancellor Kent has expressed the opinion that compensation and appropriation should be concurrent. "The settled and fundamental doctrine is, that government has no right to take private property for public purposes without giving just compensation; and it seems to be necessarily implied that the indemnity should, in cases which will admit of it, be previously and equitably ascertained, and be ready for reception, concurrently in point of time with the actual exercise of the right of eminent domain."² And while this is not an inflexible rule unless in terms established by the constitution, it is so just and reasonable that statutory provisions for taking private property very generally make payment precede or accompany the appropriation, and by several of the State constitutions this is expressly required.³ And on general principles it is essential that an adequate fund be provided from which the owner of Quackenbush v. District of Columbia, 20 D. C. 300. Acquiescence in construction is waiver; Merchant, Union Barb-wire Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 79 Iowa, 613, 44 N. W. 609.]

¹ This is the intimation in Shepardson v. Milwaukee & Beloit R. R. Co., 6 Wis. 605; Powers v. Bears, 12 Wis. 213; State v. Graves, 19 Mich. 351; Dronberger v. Reed, 11 Ind. 420; Lowerre v. Newark, 83 N. J. 151. [Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co.,—Neb.—, 62 N. W. 128.] But see Calking v. Baldwin, 4 Wend. 667, 21 Am. Dec. 165.

² 2 Kent, 308, note.

³ The Constitution of Florida provides "that private property shall not be taken or applied to public use, unless just compensation be first made therefor." Art. 1, § 14. See also, to the same effect, Constitution of Colorado, art. 1, § 15; Constitution of Georgia, art. 1, § 17; Constitution of Iowa, art. 1, § 18; Constitution of Kansas, art. 12, § 4; Constitution of Kentucky, art. 13, § 14; Constitution of Maryland, art. 1, § 40; Constitution of Minnesota, art. 1, § 13; Constitution of Mississippi, art. 1, § 13; Constitution of Missouri, art. 2, § 21; Constitution of Nevada, art. 1, § 8; Constitution of Ohio, art. 1, § 13; Constitution of Pennsylvania, art. 1, § 10. The Constitution of Indiana, art. 1, § 21, and that of Oregon, art. 1, § 10, require compensation to be first made, except when the property is appropriated by the State. The Constitution of Alabama, art. 1, § 24, and of South Carolina, art. 1, § 25, are in legal effect not very different. A construction requiring payment before appropriation is given to the Constitution of Illinois. Cook v. South Park Com'rs, 51 Ill. 115, and cases cited; Phillips v. South Park Com'rs, 119 Ill. 626, 10 N. E. 230.

the property can certainly obtain compensation; it is not competent to deprive him of his property, and turn him over to an action at law against a corporation which may or may not prove responsible, and to a judgment of uncertain efficacy.¹ For the consequence would be, in some cases, that the party might lose his estate without redress, in violation of the inflexible maxim upon which the right is based.

What the tribunal shall be which is to assess the compensation must be determined either by the constitution or by the statute which provides for the appropriation. The case is not one where, as a matter of right, the party is entitled to a trial by jury, unless the constitution has provided that tribunal for the purpose.² Nevertheless, the proceeding is judicial in its character, and the party in interest is entitled to have an impartial tribunal, and the usual rights and privileges which attend judicial investigations.³ It is not competent for the State itself to fix the compensation through the legislature, for this would make it the judge in its own cause.⁴ And, if a jury is provided, the party must have the ordinary opportunity to appear when it is to be impanelled, that he may make any legal objections.⁵ And he has the same

¹ Shepardson v. Milwaukee & Beloit R. R. Co., 6 Wis. 606; Waither v. Warner, 25 Mo. 277; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 15 Cal. 229; Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427; Memphis & Charleston R. R. Co. v. Payne, 37 Miss. 700; Henry v. Dubuque & Pacific R. R. Co., 10 Iowa. 540; Ash v. Cummings, 60 N. H. 581; Carr v. Georgia R. R. Co., 1 Ga. 524; Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Telegraph Co., 45 Ga. 43; Yazoo Delta Levee Board v. Dancy, 65 Miss. 355, 3 So. 608; State v. Melver, 88 N. C. 686. Statutory provisions for a deposit under an order of court pending a contest about compensation, in order that the work may not be delayed, are valid. Ex parte Reynolds, 52 Ark. 340, 12 S. W. 570, citing St. Louis & S. F. R. R. Co. v. Evans, &c. Brick Co., 85 Mo. 307; Centr. B. U. P. R. R. Co. v. Atchison, &c. Co., 28 Kan. 453; Wagner v. Railway Co., 58 Ohio St. 32. See also McClain v. People, 9 Col. 190, 11 Pac. 85. [Upon question of whether provision for payment out of a special fund of a municipality is sufficient, see In re Lincoln Park, 44 Minn. 209, 46 N. W. 555.]

² Petition of Mount Washington Co., 35 N. H. 144; Ligat v. Commonwealth, 19 Pa. St. 456, 460; Rich v. Chicago, 59 Ill.

286; Ames v. Lake Superior, &c. R. R. Co., 21 Minn. 241; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Oliver v. Union, &c. R. R. Co., 83 Ga. 257, 9 S. E. 1080.

³ Rich v. Chicago, 59 Ill. 286; Cook v. South Park Com'rs, 61 Ill. 115; Ames v. Lake Superior, &c. R. R. Co., 21 Minn. 241. [Question of compensation is a judicial one and not for the legislature. Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.] Whatever notices, &c., the law requires, must be given. People v. Kniskern, 54 N. Y. 52; Powers's Appeal, 29 Mich. 504. A judgment for damages where a railroad has entered without paying is enforceable against a purchaser of the road upon foreclosure. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. R. Co. v. Harvey, 107 Pa. St. 319.

⁴ Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 7 Pick. 844, 11 Pet. 420, 571, per McLean, J. And see Rhine v. McKinney, 53 Tex. 834; Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Col. 72, 1 Pac. 635.

⁵ People v. Tallman, 56 Barb. 222; Booneville v. Ormrod, 26 Mo. 193. That it is essential to any valid proceedings for the appropriation of land to public uses that the owner have notice and an

right to notice of the time and place of assessment that he would have in any other case of judicial proceedings, and the assessment will be invalid if no such notice is given.¹ These are just, as well as familiar rules, and they are perhaps invariably recognized in legislation.

It is not our purpose to follow these proceedings, and to attempt to point out the course of practice to be observed, and which is so different under the statutes of different States. An inflexible rule should govern them all, that the interest and exclusive right of the owner is to be regarded and protected so far as may be consistent with a recognition of the public necessity. While the owner is not to be dispossessed until compensation is provided, neither, on the other hand, when the public authorities have taken such steps as finally to settle upon the appropriation, ought he to be left in a state of uncertainty, and compelled to wait for compensation until some future time, when they may see fit to use his land. The land should either be his or he should be paid for it. Whenever, therefore, the necessary steps have been taken on the part of the public to select the property to be taken, locate the public work, and declare the appropriation, the owner becomes absolutely entitled to the compensation, whether the public proceed at once to occupy the property or not. If a street is legally established over the land of an individual, he is entitled to demand payment of his damages, without waiting for the street to be opened.² And if a railway line is located across his land, and the opportunity to be heard, see Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co. v. Pittsburg, &c. R. R. Co., 17 W. Va. 512. A jury, without further explanation in the law, must be understood as one of twelve persons. Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167. See ante, p. 455. Where a jury is the constitutional tribunal, it is not waived by failure to demand it. Port Huron, &c. Ry. Co. v. Callanan, 61 Mich. 12, 27 N. W. 717. Nor can a court of chancery usurp its functions. Clark v. Drain Com'r, 50 Mich. 618, 16 N. W. 167. It must act even where an officer only takes material from an individual's land to repair roads. Henderson v. State, 44 Ohio St. 208, 6 N. E. 245. It need not, where the amount of a deposit is to be fixed, pending a final determination of compensation. Ex parte Reynolds, 52 Ark. 530, 12 S. W. 570. But see Wagner v. Railway Co., 38 Ohio St. 32. The jury may not disregard testimony and determine compensation solely upon its view of the land. Grand Rapids v. Perkins, 78 Mich. 93, 43 N. W. 1937.

¹ Hood v. Finch, 8 Wis. 381; Dickey v. Tension, 27 Mo. 373; Powers's Appeal, 20 Mich. 594. Notice by publication may be sufficient. Holing v. Kaw Valley Ry. Co., 130 U. S. 559, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Houseman, 41 Kan. 300, 304, 21 Pac. 284. As to the right to order reassessments, see Clark v. Miller, 54 N. Y. 528.

² Philadelphia v. Dickson, 38 Pa. St. 247; Philadelphia v. Dyer, 41 Pa. St. 423; Hallock v. Franklin County, 2 Met. 558; Harrington v. County Commissioners, 22 Pick. 263; Blake v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 66; Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276; County of Peoria v. Harvey, 18 Ill. 354; Shaw v. Charlestown, 8 Allen. 538; Hampton v. Coffin, 4 N. H. 517; Clough v. Unity, 18 N. H. 75. And where a city thus appropriates land for a street, it would not be allowed to set up, in defence damages are appraised, his right to payment is complete, and he cannot be required to wait until the railway company shall actually occupy his premises, or enter upon the construction of the road at that point. It is not to be forgotten, however, that the proceedings for the assessment and collection of damages are statutory, and displace the usual remedies; that the public agents who keep within the statute are not liable to common-law action;¹ that it is only where they fail to follow the statute that they render themselves liable as trespassers;² though if they construct their work in a careless, negligent, and improper manner, by means of which carelessness, negligence, or improper construction a party is injured in his rights, he may have an action at the common law as in other cases of injurious negligence.³

The principle upon which the damages are to be assessed is always an important consideration in these cases; and the circumstances of different appropriations are sometimes so peculiar that it has been found somewhat difficult to establish a rule that shall always be just and equitable. If the whole of a man's estate is taken, there can generally be little difficulty in fixing upon the measure of compensation; for it is apparent that, in such a case, he ought to have the whole market value of his premises, and he cannot reasonably demand more. The question is reduced to one of market value, to be determined upon the testimony of those who have knowledge upon that subject, or whose business or experience entitles their opinions to weight. It may be that, in such a case, the market value may not seem to the owner an adequate compensation; for he may have reasons peculiar to himself, springing from association, or other cause, which make him unwilling to part with the property on the estimate of his neighbors; but such reasons are incapable of being taken into account in legal proceedings, where the question is one of compensation in money, inasmuch as it is manifestly impossible to measure them by any standard of pecuniary value. Concede to the government a right to appropriate the property on paying for it, and we are at once remitted to the same standards for estimating values which are applied in to a demand for compensation, its own irregularities in the proceedings taken to condemn the land. Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276; Chicago v. Wheeler, 25 Ill. 478.

¹ East & West India Dock, &c. Co. v. Gattke, 15 Jur. 61; Kimble v. White Water Valley Canal, 1 Ind. 286; Mason v. Kennebec, &c. R. R. Co., 31 Me. 215; Aldrich v. Cheshire R. R. Co., 21 N. H. 362; Brown v. Beatty, 34 Miss. 227; Pet- tibone v. La Crosse & Milwaukee R. R. Co., 14 Wis. 443; Vilas v. Milwaukee & Mississippi R. R. Co., 15 Wis. 233.

² Dean v. Sullivan R. R. Co., 23 N. H. 318; Furniss v. Hudson River R. R. Co., 5 Sandf. 551.

³ Lawrence v. Great Northern R. Co., 20 L. J. Q. B. 293; Bagnal v. London & N. W. R., 7 H. & N. 423; Brown v. Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 486.

other cases, and which necessarily measure the worth of property by its value as an article of sale, or as a means of producing pecuniary returns.

When, however, only a portion of a parcel of land is appropriated, just compensation may perhaps depend upon the effect which the appropriation may have on the owner's interest in the remainder, to increase or diminish its value, in consequence of the use to which that taken is to be devoted, or in consequence of the condition in which it may leave the remainder in respect to convenience of use. If, for instance, a public way is laid out through a tract of land which before was not accessible, and in consequence it is given a front, or two fronts, upon the street, which furnish valuable and marketable sites for building lots, it may be that the value of that which remains is made, in consequence of taking a part, vastly greater than the whole was before, and that the owner is benefited instead of damaged by the appropriation. Indeed, the great majority of streets in cities and villages are dedicated to the public use by the owners of lands, without any other compensation or expectation of compensation than the increase in market value which is expected to be given to such lands thereby; and this is very often the case with land for other public improvements, which are supposed to be of peculiar value to the locality in which they are made. But where, on the other hand, a railroad is laid out across a man's premises, running between his house and his out-buildings, necessitating, perhaps, the removal of some of them, or upon such a grade as to render deep cuttings or high embankments necessary, and thereby greatly increasing the inconveniences attending the management and use of the land, as well as the risks of accidental injuries, it will often happen that the pecuniary loss which he would suffer by the appropriation of the right of way would greatly exceed the value of the land taken, and to pay him that value only would be to make very inadequate compensation.

It seems clear that, in these cases, it is proper and just that the injuries suffered and the benefits received by the proprietor, as owner of the remaining portion of the land, should be taken into account in measuring the compensation. This, indeed, is generally conceded; but what injuries shall be allowed for, or what benefits estimated, is not always so apparent. The question, as we find it considered by the authorities, seems to be, not so much what the value is of that which is taken, but whether what remains is reduced in value by the appropriation, and if so, to what extent; in other words, what pecuniary injury the owner sustains by a part of his land being appropriated. But, in estimating either the injuries or the benefits, those which the owner sustains or receives in common with the community generally, and which are not peculiar to him and connected with his ownership, use, and enjoyment of the particular parcel of land, should be altogether excluded, as it would be unjust to compensate him for the one, or to charge him with the other, when no account is taken of such incidental benefits and injuries with other citizens who receive or feel them equally with himself, but whose lands do not chance to be taken.¹

¹ In Somerville & Easton R. R. Co. v. Doughty, 22 N. J. 486, a motion was made for a new trial on an assessment of compensation for land taken by a railroad company, on the ground that the judge in his charge to the jury informed them "that they were authorized by law to ascertain and assess the damages sustained by the plaintiff to his other lands not taken and occupied by the defendants; to his dwelling-house, and other buildings and improvements, by reducing their value, changing their character, obstructing their free use; by subjecting his buildings to the hazards of fire, his family and stock to injury and obstruction in their necessary passage across the road; the inconvenience caused by embankments or excavations, and, in general, the effect of the railroad upon his adjacent lands, in deteriorating their value in the condition they were found, whether adapted for agricultural purposes only, or for dwellings, stores, shops, or other like purposes."

"On a careful review of this charge," says the judge, delivering the opinion of the court, "I cannot see that any legal principle was violated, or any unsound doctrine advanced. The charter provides that the jury shall assess the value of the land and materials taken by the company, and the damages. The damages here contemplated are not damages to the land actually occupied or covered by the road, but such damages as the owner may sustain in his other and adjacent lands not occupied by the company's road. His buildings may be reduced in value by the contiguity of the road and the use of engines upon it. His lands and buildings, before adapted and used for particular purposes, may, from the same cause, become utterly unfitted for such purposes. The owner may be incommoded by high embankments or deep excavations on the line of the road, his buildings subjected to greater hazard from fire, his household and stock to injury and destruction, unless guarded with more than ordinary care. It requires no special experience or sagacity to perceive that such are the usual and natural effects of railroads upon the adjoining lands, and which necessarily deteriorate not only their marketable but their intrinsic value. The judge, therefore, did not exceed his duty in instructing the jury that these were proper subjects for their consideration in estimating the damages which the plaintiff might sustain by reason of the location of this road upon and across his lands." And in the same case it was held that the jury, in assessing compensation, were to adopt as the standard of value for the lands taken, not such a price as they would bring at a forced sale in the market for money, but such a price as they could be purchased at, provided they were for sale, and the owner asked such prices as, in the opinion of the community, they were reasonably worth; that it was matter of universal experience that land would not always bring at a forced sale what it was reasonably worth, and the owner, not desiring to sell, could not reasonably be required to take less. In Sater v. Burlington & Mount Pleasant Plank Road Co., 1 Iowa, 380, 393, Isell, J., says: "The terms used in the constitution, 'just compensation,' are not ambiguous. They undoubtedly mean a fair equivalent; that the person whose property is taken shall be made whole. But while the end to be attained is plain, the mode of arriving at it is not without its difficulty. On due consideration, we see no more practical rule than to first ascertain the fair marketable value of the premises over which the proposed improvement is to pass, irrespective of such improvement, and also a like value of the same, in the condition

The question, then, in these cases, relates first to the value of the land appropriated; which is to be assessed with reference to what it is worth for sale, in view of the uses to which it may be applied, and not simply in reference to its productiveness to the owner in the condition in which he has seen fit to leave it.¹ Second, if less than the whole estate is taken, then there is further to be considered how much the portion not taken is increased or diminished in value in consequence of the appropriation.²

in which they will be immediately after the land for the improvement has been taken, irrespective of the benefit which will result from the improvement, and the difference in value to constitute the measure of compensation. But in ascertaining the depreciated value of the premises after that part which has been taken for public use has been appropriated, regard must be had only to the immediate, and not remote, consequence of the appropriation; that is to say, the value of the remaining premises is not to be depreciated by heaping consequence on consequence. While we see no more practical mode of ascertainment than this, yet it must still be borne in mind that this is but a mode of ascertainment; that, after all, the true criterion is the one provided by the constitution, namely, just compensation for the property taken." See this rule illustrated and applied in Henry v. Dabague & Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Iowa, 390, where it is said: "That the language of the constitution means that the person whose property is taken for public use shall have a fair equivalent in money for the injury done him by such taking; in other words, that he shall be made whole so far as money is a measure of compensation, we are equally clear. This just compensation should be precisely commensurate with the injury sustained by having the property taken; neither more nor less." And see Richmond, &c. Co. v. Rogers, 1 Duval, 135; Robinson v. Robinson, 1 Duval, 102; Holton v. Milwaukee, 31 Wis. 27; Rent's Case, 77 Pa. St. 275; East Brandywine, &c. R. R. Co. v. Renck, 78 Pa. St. 454. [The compensation to which owner is entitled for land taken for a street includes in addition to the value of land taken such expenses as are naturally incident to the taking, like cost of moving fence and the like. City of Detroit v. Beecher, 78 Mich. 454, 42

N. W. 886, 4 L. R. A. 813; but not future and contingent expenses like assessments for improvements, nor for removing snow from sidewalks, for grading or paving. Id.]

¹ Matter of Furman Street, 17 Wend. 649; T. & W. Canal Co. v. Archer, 9 Gill & J. 479; Sater v. Burlington, &c. R. R. Co., 1 Iowa, 386; Parks v. Boston, 15 Pick. 200; First Parish, &c. v. Middlesex, 7 Gray, 100; Dickenson v. Inhabitants of Fitchburg, 13 Gray, 546; Lexington v. Long, 31 Mo. 309; Moulton v. Newburyport Water Co., 137 Mass. 161. The compensation should be the fair cash market value of the land taken; Brown v. Calumet R. Ry. Co., 125 Ill. 609, 18 N. E. 286; including that of appurtenances used in connection with it; Chicago, S. F. & C. Ry. Co. v. Ward, 128 Ill. 349, 18 N. E. 828, 21 N. E. 532; but not the value of an illegal use; Kingsland v. Mayor, 119 N. Y. 693, 18 N. E. 435. While its value as mineral land may be considered; Doud v. Mason City, &c. Ry. Co., 78 Iowa, 468, 41 N. W. 65; the estimated specific value of minerals it may not. Reading & P. R. R. Co. v. Balthaser, 119 Pa. St. 472, 13 Atl. 294. Where railroad land is taken, the reasonable expectation of future use is to be considered. Portland & R. R. Co. v. Deering, 78 Me. 61, 2 Atl. 570. The availability of land for a bridge site or ferry landing may be considered; Little Rock Juno, Ry. Co. v. Woodruff, 49 Ark. 581, 5 S. W. 732; Little Rock & F. S. Ry. Co. v. McGehee, 41 Ark. 202; but not the enhanced value due to the proposed improvement. Shenandoah V. R. R. Co. v. Shepherd, 26 W. Va. 672. Nor can the damage to the ferry privilege by building a bridge be compensated for. Moses v. Sanford, 11 Lea, 731. Compare Mason v. Harper's Ferry B. Co., 17 W. Va. 396.

² Deaton v. Polk, 9 Iowa, 504; Parks

But, in making this estimate, there must be excluded from consideration those benefits which the owner receives only in common

v. Boston, 15 Pick. 198; Dickenson v. Fitchburg, 18 Gray, 648; Harvey v. Lackawanna, &c. R. R. Co., 47 Pa. St. 428; Newby v. Platte County, 25 Mo. 258; Pacific R. R. Co. v. Chrystal, 25 Mo. 514; Somerville & Easton R. R. Co. ads. Doughty, 22 N. J. 485; Carpenter v. Landaff, 42 N. H. 216; Troy & Boston R. R. Co. v. Lee, 13 Barb. 169; Tide-water Canal Co. v. Archer, 9 Gill & J. 479; Winona & St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Waldron, 11 Minn. 515; Nicholson v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 22 Conn. 74; Nichols v. Bridgeport, 20 Conn. 169; Harding v. Funk, 8 Kan. 315; Holton v. Milwaukee, 31 Wis. 27. If the whole tract is not taken, the value of the part taken as part of the whole should be allowed. Chicago, B. & N. R. R. Co. v. Bowman, 122 Ill. 565, 13 N. E. 814; Balfour v. Louisville, &c. R. R. Co., 62 Miss. 598; Asher v. Louisville, &c. R. R. Co., 87 Ky. 381, 8 S. W. 864. As to how far different lots or subdivisions used as one tract are to be held one parcel within this rule, see Port Huron, &c. Ry. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 505, 15 N. W. 582; Wilcox v. St. Paul, &c. Ry. Co., 85 Minn. 439, 29 N. W. 148; Cox v. Mason City, &c. R. Co., 77 Iowa, 29, 41 N. W. 475; Ham v. Wisconsin, &c. Ry. Co., 61 Iowa, 716, 17 N. W. 157; Northeastern Neb. Ry. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42, 53, 40 N. W. 604, 609; Cameron v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 42 Minn. 75, 43 N. W. 785; Potts v. Penn. S. V. R. R. Co., 119 Pa. St. 278, 18 Atl. 291. "Compensation is an equivalent for property taken, or for an injury. It must be ascertained by estimating the actual damage the party has sustained. That damage is the sum of the actual value of the property taken, and of the injury done to the residue of the property by the use of that part which is taken. The benefit is, in part, an equivalent to the loss and damage. The loss and damage of the defendant is the value of the land the company has taken, and the injury which the location and use of the road through his tract may cause to the remainder. The amount which may be assessed for these particulars the company admits that it is bound to pay. But, as a set-off, it claims credit for the benefit the defendant has received from the construction of the road. That benefit may consist in the enhanced value of the residue of his tract. When the company has paid the defendant the excess of his loss or damage over and above the benefit and advantage he has derived from the road, he will have received a just compensation. It is objected that the enhanced salable value of the land should not be assessed as a benefit to the defendant, because it is precarious and uncertain. The argument admits that the enhanced value, if permanent, should be assessed. But whether the appreciation is permanent and substantial, or transient and illusory, is a subject about which the court is not competent to determine. It must be submitted to a jury, who will give credit to the company according to the circumstances. The argument is not tenable, that an increased salable value is no benefit to the owner of land unless he sells it. This is true if it be assumed that the price will decline. The chance of this is estimated by the jury, in the amount which they may assess for that benefit. The sum assessed is therefore (so far as human foresight can anticipate the future) the exponent of the substantial increase of the value of the land. This is a benefit to the owner, by enlarging his credit and his ability to pay his debts or provide for his family, in the same manner and to the same extent as if his fortune was increased by an acquisition of property." Greenville & Columbia R. R. Co. v. Partlow, 5 Rich. 428. And see Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Heister, 8 Pa. St. 445; Matter of Albany Street, 11 Werd. 149, 25 Am. Dec. 618; Upton v. South Reading Branch R. R., 8 Cush. 600; Proprietors, &c. v. Nashua & Lowell R. R. Co., 10 Cush. 385; Mayor, &c. of Lexington v. Long, 31 Mo. 399; St. Louis, &c. R. R. Co. v. Richardson, 45 Mo. 496; Little Miami R. R. Co. v. Collett, 3 Ohio St. 182; Bipelow v. West Wisconsin R. R. Co., 27 Wis. 478. In Newby v. Platte County, 25 Mo. 258, the right to assess benefits was referred to the taxing power; but this seems not necessary, and indeed somewhat difficult on principle. See Sutton's Heirs v. Louis- with the community at large in consequence of his ownership of other property,¹ and also those incidental injuries to other property, ville, 5 Dana, 28. [In measuring compensation for a taking it is not competent to increase compensation by any amount as the increase of value caused by the projected improvement. Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361.]

¹ Dickenson v. Inhabitants of Fitchburg, 13 Gray, 549; Childs v. New Haven, &c. R. R. Co., 135 Mass. 253; Newby v. Platte County, 25 Mo. 258; Pacific R. R. Co. v. Chrystal, 25 Mo. 544; Carpenter v. Landaff, 42 N. H. 218; Mount Washington Co.'s Petition, 35 N. H. 134; Penrice v. Wallis, 37 Miss. 172; Haislip v. Wilmington, &c. R. R. Co., 102 N. C. 378, 8 S. E. 926; Omaha v. Schaller, 25 Neb. 522, 42 N. W. 727; Railroad Co. v. Foreman, 24 W. Va. 632; Palmer Co. v. Ferris, 17 Pick. 58; Meacham v. Fitchburg R. R. Co., 4 Cush. 291, where the jury were instructed that, if they were satisfied that the laying out and constructing of the railroad had occasioned any benefit or advantage to the lands of the petitioner through which the road passed, or lands immediately adjoining or connected therewith, rendering the part not taken for the railroad more convenient or useful to the petitioner, or giving it some peculiar increase in value compared with other lands generally in the vicinity, it would be the duty of the jury to allow for such benefit, or increase of value, by way of set-off, in favor of the railroad company; but, on the other hand, if the construction of the railroad, by increasing the convenience of the people of the town generally as a place for residence, and by its anticipated and probable effect in increasing the population, business, and general prosperity of the place, had been the occasion of an increase in the salable value of real estate generally near the station, including the petitioner's land, and thereby occasioning a benefit or advantage to him, in common with other owners of real estate in the vicinity, this benefit was too contingent, indirect, and remote to be brought into consideration in settling the question of damages to the petitioner for taking his particular parcel of land. Upton v. South Reading Branch R. R. Co.,

8 Cush. 600. See Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; Chicago, B. & N. R. R. Co. v. Bowman, 122 Ill. 595, 13 N. E. 814. [This rule is applicable as well where the claim is for a "damaging" of property where such constitutional provisions exist as where it is for a "taking." Hickman v. Kansas City, 120 Mo. 110, 25 S. W. 225, 23 L. R. A. 658; Randolph v. Board of Freeholders, 63 N. J. L. 155, 41 Atl. 960. See Wagner v. Gage County, 3 Neb. 237.] Remote and speculative benefits are not allowed. Whitely v. Miss. &c. Co., 38 Minn. 523, 38 N. W. 753. Locating a depot near a lot is not a special benefit. Washburn v. Milwaukee, &c. R. R. Co., 59 Wis. 364, 18 N. W. 328. It has sometimes been objected, with great force, that it was unjust and oppressive to set off benefits against the loss and damage which the owner of the property sustains, because thereby he is taxed for such benefits, while his neighbors, no part of whose land is taken, enjoy the same benefits without the loss; and the courts of Kentucky have held it to be unconstitutional, and that full compensation for the land taken must be made in money. Sutton v. Louisville, 5 Dana, 28; Rice v. Turnpike Co., 7 Dana, 81; Jacob v. Louisville, 9 Dana, 114. So in Mississippi. Natchez, J. & C. R. R. Co. v. Currie, 62 Miss. 506. And some other States have established, by their constitutions, the rule that benefits shall not be deducted. See cases, note 4, 825. That the damage and benefits must be separately assessed and returned by the jury where part only of the land is taken, see Detroit v. Daly, 68 Mich. 603, 37 N. W. 11. But the cases generally adopt the doctrine stated in the text; and if the owner is paid his actual damages, he has no occasion to complain because his neighbors are fortunate enough to receive a benefit. Greenville & Columbia R. R. Co. v. Partlow, 5 Rich. 428; Mayor, &c. of Lexington v. Long, 31 Mo. 360. Benefits to the adjacent property owned in severalty may be deducted from damage to property owned jointly. Wilcox v. Meriden, 57 Conn. 120, 17 Atl. 366.

such as would not give to other persons a right to compensation;¹ while allowing those which directly affect the value of the remainder of the land not taken, such as the necessity for increased fencing, and the like.² And if an assessment on these principles makes the benefits equal the damages, and awards the owner nothing, he is nevertheless to be considered as having received full compensation, and consequently as not being in position to complain.³ But in some States, by constitutional provision or by statute, the party whose property is taken is entitled to have the value assessed to him without any deduction for benefits.⁴

The statutory assessment of compensation will cover all consequential damages which the owner of the land sustains by means

¹ Somerville, &c. R. R. Co. v. ad. Douglass, 22 N. J. 495; Dorlan v. East Brandywine, &c. R. R. Co., 48 Pa. St. 520; Proprietors, &c. v. Nashua & Lowell R. R. Co., 10 Cush. 386; Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 18 B. Monr. 736; Winona & St. Peter's R. R. Co. v. Denman, 10 Minn. 267; Shenandoah V. R. R. Co. v. Shepherd, 28 W. Va. 612; Stone v. Inh. of Heath, 135 Mass. 531; Com'r's Dickinson Co. v. Hogan, 39 Kan. 606, 18 Pac. 611. So of increased danger from fire in case a railroad is laid out. Texas & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Cella, 42 Ark. 526; Setzler v. Pa. &c. R. R. Co., 112 Pa. St. 56, 4 Atl. 370.

² Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Heister, 8 Pa. St. 443; Greenville & Columbia R. R. Co. v. Partlow, 5 Rich. 428; Dearborn v. Railroad Co., 24 N. H. 179; Carpenter v. Landaff, 42 N. H. 218; Dorlan v. East Brandywine, &c. R. R. Co., 48 Pa. St. 520; Winona & St. Peter's R. R. Co. v. Denman, 10 Minn. 267; Mount Washington Co.'s Petition, 35 N. H. 194. Where a part of a meeting-house lot was taken for a highway, it was held that the anticipated annoyance to worshippers by the use of the way by noisy and dissolute persons on the Sabbath, could form no basis for any assessment of damages. First Parish in Woburn v. Middlesex County, 7 Gray, 106.

³ White v. County Commissioners of Norfolk, 2 Cush. 391; Whitman v. Boston & Maine R. R. Co., 3 Allen, 133; Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 180; State v. Kansas City, 89 Mo. 54, 14 S. W. 615; Rosa v. Davis, 97 Ind. 79. The benefits upon the owner's property not taken, but in the assessment district, may exceed the damages. Genet v. Brooklyn, 99 N. Y. 290, 1 N. E. 777. But it is not competent for the commissioners who assess the compensation to require that which is to be made to be wholly or in part in anything else than money. An award of "one hundred and fifty dollars, with a wagon-way and stop for cattle," is void, as undertaking to pay the owner in part in conveniences to be furnished him, and which he may not want, and certainly cannot be compelled to take instead of money. Central Ohio R. R. Co. v. Holler, 7 Ohio St. 220. See Rockford, &c. R. R. Co. v. Coppinger, 66 Ill. 510; Toledo, A. & N. Ry. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42, 23 N. W. 455. [Compensation cannot be made by charging the owner with the amount of it, as a special tax on that portion of his lands not taken: Bloomington v. Latham, 142 Ill. 462, 32 N. E. 508, 18 L. R. A. 487.]

⁴ Wilson v. Rockford, &c. R. R. Co., 59 Ill. 273; Carpenter v. Jennings, 77 Ill. 250; Todd v. Kankakee, &c. R. R. Co., 78 Ill. 530; Atlanta v. Central R. R. Co., 53 Ga. 120; Koestenbader v. Peirce, 41 Iowa, 204; Britton v. Des Moines, &c. R. R. Co., 59 Iowa, 540, 13 N. W. 710; Pacific Coast Ry. Co. v. Porter, 74 Cal. 261, 15 Pac. 774; Leroy & W. R. R. Co. v. Ross, 40 Kan. 598, 20 Pac. 197; Giesy v. Cincinnati, &c. R. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 208; Woodfolk v. Nashville R. R. Co., 2 Swan, 422; Memphis v. Bolton, 9 Heisk. 508. In Illinois benefits may not be set off against the value of the land taken, but may be against damage to land not taken. Harwood v. Bloomington, 124 Ill. 48, 16 N. E. 91.

of the construction of the work, except such as may result from negligence or improper construction,¹ and for which an action at the common law will lie, as already stated. (a)

¹ Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co. v. Yeiser, 8 Pa. St. 366; O'Connor v. Pittsburgh, 18 Pa. St. 187; Aldrich v. Cheshire R. R. Co., 21 N. H. 359; Dearborn v. Boston, Concord, & Montreal R. R. Co., 24 N. H. 179; Eaton v. Boston C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; Dodge v. County Commissioners, 8 Met. 380; Brown v. Providence, W. & B. R. R. Co., 5 Gray, 35; Mason v. Kennebec & Portland R. R. Co., 31 Me. 215; Bellinger v. N. Y. Central R. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 42; Hatch v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 49; Slatten v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 29 Iowa, 148; Whitelouse v. Androscoggin R. R. Co., 52 Me. 208; Denver City Irrig. Co. v. Middaugh, 12 Col. 434, 21 Pac. 565; [Stark v. Philadelphia, 195 Pa. St. 101, 45 Atl. 678, 49 L. R. A. 600; Hunt v. Iowa Cent. Ry. Co., 86 Iowa, 16, 52 N. W. 628, 41 Am. St. 473; Gainesville, &c. Ry. Co. v. Hall, 78 Tex. 129, 14 S. W. 239, 22 Am.

St. 42, and note.] But see Roushange v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 115 Ind. 106, 17 N. E. 198. The rule applies to cases of purchase instead of condemnation. North & W. B. Ry. Co. v. Swank, 105 Pa. St. 555; Cassidy v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 141 Mass. 174, 5 N. E. 142; Houston & E. T. Ry. Co. v. Adams, 58 Tex. 476. The rule covers a case where a right of action existed for a former invalid condemnation. Dunlap v. Toledo, &c. Ry. Co., 50 Mich. 470, 15 N. W. 555. A corporation appropriating property under the right of eminent domain is always liable for any abuse of the privilege or neglect of duty under the law under which they proceed. Fehr v. Schuylkill Nav. Co., 69 Pa. St. 161; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; Terre Haute, &c. R. R. Co. v. McKinley, 33 Ind. 274; Nelson v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 58 Wis. 516, 17 N. W. 810.

(a) [Compensation. — The question of compensation may arise in one of three classes of cases: —

A. Where the whole interest of a particular owner is taken in a particular tract. — Here, as stated in the text, the amount of compensation is generally held to be the market value of that interest at the time of the taking. Chicago, K. & W. Ry. Co. v. Parsons, 51 Kan. 408, 32 Pac. 1083; Texas, W. Ry. Co. v. Cave, 80 Tex. 137, 15 S. W. 786. When taken by municipality, at time of determination to take: Shannahan v. City of Waterbury, 63 Conn. 420, 28 Atl. 611; In re Condemnation of Land for a State House, 19 R. I. 852, 33 Atl. 523. In some jurisdictions compensation is assessed at market value at time of assessment: Leeds v. Camden & A. Ry. Co., 53 N. J. L. 220, 233, 23 Atl. 168, 189. Where the compensation is fixed in an appellate proceeding, assessment is as of the time of the assessment appealed from: Ellsworth v. Chicago & I. W. Ry. Co., 91 Iowa, 386, 53 N. W. 78; Forsyth Boulevard v. Forsyth, 127 Mo. 417, 30 S. W. 188. At time of filing of petition for appraisal: Fremont, E. & M. V. Ry. Co. v. Bates, 40 Neb. 381, 58 N. W. 950. The assessment must be irrespective of prospective general, as distinguished from special, benefits, resulting from the improvement: Shoemaker v. U. S., 147 U. S. 282, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Bauman v. Ross, 137 U. S. 548, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960, 42 L. ed. U. S. 270, and note; Louisville and N. Ry. Co. v. Ingram, 12 Ky. L. 456, 14 S. W. 534; West Va., P. & T. Ry. Co. v. Gibson, 94 Ky. 234, 21 S. W. 1055; Benton v. Town of Brookline, 151 Mass. 250, 23 N. E. 846; May v. City of Boston, 158 Mass. 21, 32 N. E. 902; (by virtue of statute in Massachusetts); Harris v. Schuylkill River E. S. Ry. Co., 141 Pa. St. 242, 21 Atl. 550, 23 Am. St. Rep. 278. Contra, Sanitary District of Chicago v. Loughran, 160 Ill. 362, 43 N. E. 359. May consider effect of improvements previously made. In re Condemnation of Land for State House, 19 R. I. 852, 33 Atl. 523; Bowditch v. City of Boston, 164 Mass. 107, 41 N. E. 132. See further De Benneville v. Philadelphia. — Pa. St. —, 53 Atl. 521. It is market value for any legitimate use: Muller v. So. Pac. B. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 240, 23 Pac. 265; Seattle and M. Ry. Co. v. Morphine, 4 Wash. 448, 30 Pac. 720; North. Pac. & M. Ry. Co. v. Forbis, 15 Mont. 452, 39 Pac. 571, 48 Am. St. 602; Alloway v. City of Nashville, 88

Tenn. 510, 13 S. W. 123, 8 L. R. A. 123. Value for special use, only competent as assisting to fix market value: Miss. & R. R. Boom Co. v. Patterson, 85 U. S. 403; Denver & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Griffith, 17 Col. 598, 81 Pac. 171; Fales v. Town of E. Hampton, 182 Mass. 422, 88 N. E. 1120; N. Pacif. & M. Ry. Co. v. Forbis, supra; Currie v. Waverly & N. Y. B. Ry. Co., 52 N. J. L. 381, 20 Atl. 55, 19 Am. St. 452; Harris v. Schuylkill Riv. E. S. Ry. Co., 141 Pa. St. 242, 21 Atl. 590, 23 Am. St. 278; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 50, 25 Pac. 977, 11 L. R. A. 904. Not prospective, but present value: Omaha Bell Ry. Co. v. McDermott, 25 Neb. 714, 41 N. W. 648; Lee v. Springfield Water Power Co., 176 Pa. St. 223, 35 Atl. 184; Penn. S. V. Ry. Co. v. Cleary, 125 Pa. St. 442, 17 Atl. 408, 11 Am. St. 913. Not what its value may be to any particular person: City of Santa Ana v. Harlan, 99 Cal. 538, 84 Pac. 224. If, in addition to material property, a franchise is destroyed, compensation should cover value of material thing and also of the franchise: Clarion Turnpike & Bridge Co. v. Clarion Co., 172 Pa. St. 243, 33 Atl. 580.

B. Where part only of a single tract is taken. — In this case the rule is variously stated as follows: (1) Difference between the value of the whole tract just before and just after the improvement is made: Chicago, P. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Eaton, 136 Ill. 9, 26 N. E. 575; Evansville & R. Ry. Co. v. Swift, 125 Ind. 34, 27 N. E. 420; Struthers v. Phila. & D. C. Ry. Co., 174 Pa. St. 291, 34 Atl. 445; West Va. P. & T. Ry. Co. v. Gibson, 84 Ky. 234, 21 S. W. 1055; Driscoll v. City of Taunton, 160 Mass. 450, 36 N. E. 435; Ridgman & M. Ry. Co. v. Humphreys, 90 Va. 425, 18 S. E. 991; St. Louis, A. & T. Ry. Co. v. Henderson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 32 S. W. 143; Mo. Pac. Ry. Co. v. Porter, 112 Mo. 361, 20 S. W. 568. This allows consideration of benefits and injuries common to whole community. (2) Value of part taken as a portion of whole and damage to remainder: Omaha So. Ry. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818, 58 N. W. 289; Liverman v. Roanoke & T. Ry. Co., 114 N. C. 612, 19 S. E. 64; Greeley S. L. Ry. Co. v. Yount, 7 Col. App. 159, 42 Pac. 1023; L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co. v. City of Chicago, 151 Ill. 359, 37 N. E. 880; Orth v. City of Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 230, 65 N. W. 1029; Comstock v. Clearfield & M. Ry. Co., 169 Pa. St. 582, 32 Atl. 431, 17 L. R. A. 785; State v. Hudson County Board, &c., 55 N. J. L. 58, 25 Atl. 322. In State v. Sup. Ct. of King Co., — Wash. —, 70 Pac. 484, the measure of damages allowed was the value of that taken and depreciation of portion not taken, disregarding benefits. Upon principle, damages common to all in the community should not be compensated for. See citations, post. Benefits accruing to owner by reason of the construction of the improvement and not common to general public, which enhance the value of lands not taken, but which were part of the same parcel, a portion of which was taken, should be considered in determining compensation. Butchers Slaughtering & Melting Ass'n v. Commonwealth, 163 Mass. 386, 40 N. E. 176; Goodwine v. Evans, 134 Ind. 202, 33 N. E. 1031. Benefits common to all in the community should not be considered in fixing damages. Spencer v. Metropolitan Street Ry. Co., 120 Mo. 154, 23 S. W. 128, 22 L. R. A. 868; Beveridge v. Lewis, — Cal. —, 70 Pac. 1053. Injury to business by reason of taking of lands for right of way is held not recoverable. Bailey v. Boston & P. Ry. Co., — Mass. —, 68 N. E. 203; Sawyer v. Conn., — Mass. —, 65 N. E. 52; following Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622. If there is a grant of a portion of a tract of land for a public use, such grant will operate to prevent recovery of damages for injuries to portion not taken. Watts v. Norfolk & Western Ry. Co., 29 W. Va. 193, 19 S. E. 521, 23 L. R. A. 674. Where lands have been subdivided into lots, but not separated in ownership, all belonging naturally to the particular tract are to be considered in determining compensation. Metropolitan W. S. El. Ry. v. Johnson, 159 Ill. 494, 42 N. E. 871; Cox v. Mason City & Ft. Dodge Ry. Co., 77 Iowa, 29, 41 N. W. 475; Atchison & N. Ry. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240, 51 N. W. 842, 33 Am. St. 637; Currie v. Waverly & N. Y. B. Ry. Co., 52 N. J. L. 381, 20 Atl. 55, 19 Am. St. 452; Lincoln v. Commonwealth, 164 Mass. 398, 41 N. E. 482; Bischoff v. N. Y. El. Ry. Co., 138 N. Y. 257, 33 N. E. 1073; Kremer v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 151 Minn. 15, 52 N. W. 977, 38 Am. St. 468. If lots not adjacent, though parts of same general tract, they cannot be considered. Wellington v. Boston & M. Ry. Co., 104 Mass. 880, 41 N. E. 652; Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. Paul Ry. Co., 42 Minn. 75, 43 N. W. 785.

Though adjacent, if not used together, they should not be considered. Koerper v. St. P. & N. P. Ry. Co., 42 Minn. 340, 44 N. W. 105. Separation of parcels by highway, railway, canal, or the like, may defeat the consideration of all as one tract dependent upon, whether or not they are occupied and used as one tract. White v. Met. W. S. El. Ry. Co., 154 Ill. 629, 39 N. E. 270; Union El. Co. v. Kansas City Sub. Belt Ry. Co., — Mo. —, 53 S. W. 925; Cameron v. P. & L. E. Ry. Co., 157 Pa. St. 617, 27 Atl. 698, 22 L. R. A. 443; Duluth & W. Ry. Co. v. West, 51 Minn. 163, 53 N. W. 137. Upon the question as to what lands are to be regarded as a part of the parcel taken, see Sharpe v. United States, 50 C. C. A. 597, 112 Fed. Rep. 893, 57 L. R. A. 992, and extended note in 57 L. R. A. 992.

C. Where there is no actual taking, but such interference as directly affects and injures some right of property. — No new principle is involved in such cases, but compensation is assessed at the difference between the value of the property before and after the construction of the improvement. Nicks v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. Ry. Co., 84 Iowa, 27, 59 N. W. 222; City of Bloomington v. Pollock, 141 Ill. 346, 31 N. E. 145; Beale v. City of Boston, 136 Mass. 53, 43 N. E. 1020. This condition arises most often in cases where there is a change in grade, or some new use granted of a public way, claimed, by an abutting owner who does not own the land under the street, to be injurious to him. The following cases illustrate the view of such courts as hold that each owner may be entitled to compensation. Adams v. Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co., 80 Minn. 280, 39 N. W. 629, 1 L. R. A. 493. Followed in Lamm v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 45 Minn. 71, 47 N. W. 455, 10 L. R. A. 238; Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. Ry. Co. v. Larsen, 40 Kan. 391, 19 Pac. 685, 2 L. R. A. 53. The so-called "Elevated Railway" Cases are of this class: Abendroth v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 122 N. Y. 1, 25 N. E. 495, 19 Am. St. 461; Arbenz v. Wheeling & Harrisburg Ry. Co., 33 W. Va. 1, 16 S. E. 14, 5 L. R. A. 371. Much more is it true, where the adjoining proprietor owns the fee in the street. Reichert v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 5 Ark. 491, 11 S. W. 693, 5 L. R. A. 185. Many of the cases holding that abutting proprietors may be entitled to compensation though no actual taking, are cases involving the construction of constitutional provisions providing for compensation where property is "damaged" for public use. Blair v. Charleston, 43 W. Va. 62, 26 S. E. 341, 35 L. R. A. 852, will illustrate. The injury must be peculiar as distinguished from such as is common to all in the neighborhood. Campbell v. Met. St. Ry. Co., 32 Ga. 320, 9 S. E. 1078; Ft. Worth & N. O. Ry. Co. v. Garon, — Tex. —, 29 S. W. 734; Blair v. Charleston, 43 W. Va. 62, 26 S. E. 341, 35 L. R. A. 852. Generally it may be said that in assessing the amount of compensation the nature of the taking or injury should be considered. If permanent, the prospective as well as present injury is an element in the proper measure of such compensation. Jay v. Grindstone-Neck Water Co., 85 Me. 109, 28 Atl. 1052; City of Centraia v. Wright, 135 Ill. 561, 41 N. E. 217; Highland Avenue & B. R. Co. v. Matthews, 99 Ala. 24, 19 So. 237, 14 L. R. A. 492. See notes, ante, pp. 811, 822 et seq., for other cases on these and similar propositions as to compensation. Where lands of railway company are condemned for street crossing, those expenses more properly the result of the exercise of the police power of the State are not assessable. Such are the expenses of erecting gates, planking the crossing, and maintaining a flagman: Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, 163 U. S. 226, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 351. Only nominal damages can be allowed as against a telegraph company for constructing telegraph line along and on lands of railway company through an agricultural country. Mobile & O. Ry. Co. v. Postal T. C. Co., 101 Tenn. 62, 48 S. W. 571, 41 L. R. A. 403. See case between same parties, 75 Miss. 731, 20 So. 270, 45 L. R. A. 223. Wife is not entitled to compensation for her inchoate right of dower in lands taken. Flynn v. Flynn, 171 Mass. 312, 60 N. E. 850, 68 Am. St. 427, 42 L. R. A. 98.]

CHAPTER XVI.

THE POLICE POWER OF THE STATES.

FREQUENTLY when questions of conflict between national and State authority are made, and also when it is claimed that government has exceeded its just powers in dealing with the property and controlling the actions of individuals, it becomes necessary to consider the extent and pass upon the proper bounds of another State power, which, like that of taxation, pervades every department of business and reaches to every interest and every subject of profit or enjoyment. We refer to what is known as the police power.

The police of a State, in a comprehensive sense, embraces its whole system of internal regulation, by which the State seeks not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offences against the State, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizens with citizens those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights, and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own so far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others.¹

¹ Blackstone defines the public police and economy as "the due regulation and domestic order of the kingdom, whereby the inhabitants of a State, like members of a well-governed family, are bound to conform their general behavior to the rules of propriety, good neighborhood, and good manners, and to be decent, industrious, and inoffensive in their respective stations." 4 Bl. Com. 162. Jeremy Bentham, in his General View of Public Offences, has this definition: "Police is in general a system of precaution, either for the prevention of crimes or of calamities. Its business may be distributed into eight distinct branches: 1. Police for the prevention of offences; 2. Police for the prevention of calamities; 3. Police for the prevention of endemic diseases; 4. Police of charity; 5. Police of interior communications; 6. Police of public amusements; 7. Police for recent intelligence; 8. Police for registration." Edinburgh ed. of Works, Part IX, p. 167. Under the head of police for charity may be classed the provision which it is now customary with all enlightened States to make for the custody and care, and if possible the cure, of insane persons. That the State, for the protection of others, may cause such persons to be restrained of their liberty is undoubted, and it has been common to provide that this may be done on the certificate of physicians to the diseased mental condition. But while confinement on such a certificate may be justified when no mistake is made as to the fact, it is certain that it cannot be if the person deprived of his liberty was not in truth at the time insane. No number of physicians can be given the power to take from a sane man his liberty, without a public investigation in which he may produce his witnesses; and any legislation assuming to confer such power would be void. On this general subject the following cases are of interest: Anderson v. Burrows, 4 C. & P. 210; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 1 El. & El. 420; Colby v. Jackson, 12 N. H. 528; Look v. Dean,

In the present chapter we shall take occasion to speak of the police power principally as it affects the use and enjoyment of property; the object being to show the universality of its presence, and to indicate, so far as may be practicable, the limits which settled principles of constitutional law assign to its interference.

No definition of the power can be more complete and satisfactory than some which have been given by eminent jurists in deciding cases which have arisen from its exercise, and which have been so often approved and adopted, that to present them in any other than the language of the decisions would be unwise, if not inexcusable. Says Chief Justice Shaw, "We think it is a settled principle, growing out of the nature of well-ordered civil society, that every holder of property, however absolute and unqualified may be his title, holds it under the implied liability that his use of it shall not be injurious to the equal enjoyment of others having an equal right to the enjoyment of their property, nor injurious to the rights of the community. All property in this Commonwealth is . . . held subject to those general regulations which are necessary to the common good and general welfare. Rights of property, like all other social and conventional rights, are subject to such reasonable limitations in their enjoyment as shall prevent them from being injurious, and to such reasonable restraints and regulations established by law as the legislature, under the governing and controlling power vested in them by the constitution, may think necessary and expedient. This is very different from the right of eminent domain, — the right of a government to take and appropriate private property whenever the public exigency requires it, which can be done only on condition of providing a reasonable compensation therefor. The power we allude to is rather the police power; the power vested in the legislature by the constitution to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws, statutes, and ordinances, either with penalties or without, not repugnant to the constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the Commonwealth, and of the subjects of the same. It is much easier to perceive and realize the existence and sources of this power than to mark its boundaries, or prescribe limits to its exercise."¹

108 Mass. 116; Van Dusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90; Morton v. Sims, 64 Ga. 298; In re Gannon, 18 R. I. 537, 18 Atl. 159.

¹ Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush 53, 84. See also Commonwealth v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 55; Hart v. Mayor &c. of Albany, 9 Wend. 571; New Albany & Salem R. R. Co. v. Tilton, 12 Ind. 3; Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Kercheval, 16 Ind. 84; Ohio & Missis-

"This police power of the State," says another eminent judge, "extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property within the State. According to the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non ledas, which being of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which every one may so use his own as not to injure others." And again: [By this] "general police power of the State, persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens, in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the State; of the perfect right in the legislature to do which, no question ever was, or, upon acknowledged general principles, ever can be made, so far as natural persons are concerned."¹ And neither the power itself, nor the discretion to exercise it as need may require, can be bargained away by the State.²

Where the Power is located. In the American constitutional system, the power to establish the ordinary regulations of police has been left with the individual States, and it cannot be taken from them, either wholly or in part, and exercised under legislation of Congress.³ Neither can the national government, through issippi R. R. Co. v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 140; People v. Draper, 25 Barb. 344; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; Police Commissioners v. Louisville, 3 Bush, 597; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Taney, Ch. J., in License Cases, 5 How. 504, 583; White, Ch. J., in Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 124. [Brown, J., in Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, says of this power of the State, that "It is generally conceded to include everything essential to the public safety, health, and morals, and to justify the destruction or abatement by summary proceedings of whatever may be regarded as a public nuisance. Under this power it has been held that the state may order the destruction of a house falling to decay, or otherwise endangering the lives of passers-by; the demolition of such as are in the path of a conflagration; the slaughter of diseased cattle; the prohibition of wooden buildings in cities; the regulations of railways and other means of public conveyance, and of interments in burial grounds; the restrictions of objectionable trades to certain localities; the compulsory vaccination of children; the confinement of the insane or those afflicted with contagious diseases; the restraint of vagrants, beggars, and habitual drunkards; the suppression of obscene publications and houses of ill-fame and the prohibition of gambling houses and places where intoxicating liquors are sold."

See article in 36 Am. L. Rev. 681, tracing in some measure the judicial development of the doctrine of the police power.]

¹ Redfield, Ch. J., in Thorpe v. Rutland & Burlington R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140, 143. See the maxim, Sic utere, &c. — "Enjoy your own property in such manner as not to injure that of another," — in Broom, Legal Maxims. (5th Am. ed.) p. 327; Wharton, Legal Maxims. No. XC. See also Turbeville v. Stampe, 1 Ld. Raym. 264; and 1 Salk. 13; Jeffries v. Williams, 5 Exch. 792; Humphries v. Brogden, 12 Q. B. 733; Pixley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520; Philadelphia v. Scott, 81 Pa. St. 80.

² Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 33, citing Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645.

³ So decided in United States v. De Witt, 9 Wall. 41, in which a section of the Internal Revenue Act of 1867 —

any of its departments or officers, assume any supervision of the police regulations of the States. All that the federal authority can do is to see that the States do not, under cover of this power, invade the sphere of national sovereignty, obstruct or impede the exercise of any authority which the Constitution has confided to the nation, or deprive any citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution.¹

Conflict with Federal Authority. But while the general authority of the State is fully recognized, it is easy to see that the power might be so employed as to interfere with the jurisdiction of the general government; and some of the most serious questions regarding the police of the States concern the cases in which authority has been conferred upon Congress. In those cases it has sometimes been claimed that the ordinary police jurisdiction is by necessary implication excluded, and that, if it were not so, the State would be found operating within the sphere of the national powers, and establishing regulations which would either abridge the rights which the national Constitution undertakes to render absolute, or burden the privileges which are conferred by law of Congress, and which therefore cannot properly be subject to the interference or control of any other authority. But any accurate statement of the theory upon which the police power rests will render it apparent that a proper exercise of it by which undertook to make it a misdemeanor to mix for sale naphtha and illuminating oils, or to sell oil of petroleum inflammable at a less temperature than 110° Fahrenheit; — was held to be a mere police regulation, and as such void within the States. That the States may pass such laws, see Patterson v. Commonwealth, 11 Bush, 311. A license may be required for the peddling of patented articles. People v. Russell, 49 Mich. 617, 14 N. W. 568. On the general subject of the police power of the States, see also United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542. But the States cannot, by police regulations, interfere with the control by Congress over inter-state commerce. Post, pp. 867, 868, 867, and notes.

¹ See this subject considered at large in the License Cases, 5 How. 504, the Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, and the Slaughter-House Case, 16 Wall. 36; People v. Compagnie Gén., 107 U. S. 59, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247. The Fourteenth Amendment does not limit the subjects in relation to which the police power of the State may be exercised. Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Minneapolis & St. Louis Ry. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207, and cases cited. Congress has no power to authorize a business within a State which is prohibited by the State. License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, per Chase, Ch. J. In Canada, power over sales of liquor is in the Dominion parliament, and, after license in pursuance of its authority, the provincial parliament cannot forbid. Severn v. The Queen, 2 Can. Sup. Ct. 71; Mayor, &c. v. The Queen, 3 Can. Sup. Ct. 505. [Action in the nature of police regulation is void if against the express provisions of the constitution though otherwise within the general power to make police regulations. State v. Fraeblich, 115 Wis. —, 91 N. W. 115. On the constitutional limitations of the police power, see 55 Cent. L. Jour. 225.]

the State cannot come in conflict with the provisions of the Constitution of the United States. If the power extends only to a just regulation of rights with a view to the due protection and enjoyment of all, and does not deprive any one of that which is justly and properly his own, it is obvious that its possession by the State, and its exercise for the regulation of the property and actions of its citizens, cannot well constitute an invasion of national jurisdiction, or afford a basis for an appeal to the protection of the national authorities.

Obligation of Contracts. The occasions to consider this subject in its bearings upon the clause of the Constitution of the United States which forbids the States passing any laws impairing the obligation of contracts have been frequent and varied; and it has been held without dissent that this clause does not so far remove from State control the rights and properties which depend for their existence or enforcement upon contracts, as to relieve them from the operation of such general regulations for the good government of the State and the protection of the rights of individuals as may be deemed important. All contracts and all rights, it is declared, are subject to this power; (a) and not only may regula-

(a) [What shall be the public policy of a State is determined by itself, and is subject to no Federal control unless it contravenes the Federal Constitution or some treaty or congressional statute conformable thereto. Hartford Fire Insurance Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 176 U. S. 91, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33. And the Federal courts will enforce the public policy of a State in regard to usurious contracts. Missouri, K. & T. Trust Co. v. Krumsieg, 172 U. S. 351, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179. But the public policy of a State cannot be extended to the infringement of rights acquired outside of the State, nor can the State penalize acts merely collateral to the enjoyment of such rights. In 1834 Louisiana enacted "that any person . . . who in any manner whatever does any act to effect for himself, or for another, insurance on property then in this State, in any marine insurance company which has not complied in all respects with the laws of this State, shall be subject to a fine of," &c. This came under consideration in Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. A. was a citizen of La. resident in New Orleans. He was an exporter of cotton from N. O. to the ports of Great Britain and of the Continent. As incidental to his business, he entered in N. Y. City into a contract of insurance with the Atl. M. Ins. Co. of that city, which contract was for an open policy of $200,000. This contract was to be performed entirely within the State of N. Y. and was there entirely valid. Under it, whenever A. made a shipment of cotton which he desired insured, he notified the insurance company by mail or by telegraph, and the insurance attached to the parcel specified at the instant of despatch of the letter or telegram. Upon receipt of the notification, the insurance company made out a special policy of insurance upon the parcel and delivered it to A.'s agent in N. Y. who thereupon paid the premium. The insurance company never complied with the conditions prescribed by Louisiana to be observed by all marine insurance companies doing business therein. A. mailed in N. O., in compliance with the conditions of the contract, a letter addressed to the insurance company, specifying a particular cargo of cotton then shipped upon which insurance was to attach and for this L. filed its petition against him, praying judgment for the penalty, which was decreed. A. sued out a writ of error, alleging that the action of L. deprived him of his liberty and his prop-tions which affect them be established by the State, but all such regulations must be subject to change from time to time, as the general well-being of the community may require, or as the circumstances may change, or as experience may demonstrate the necessity.¹

¹ In the case of Thorpe v. Rutland & Burlington R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140, a question arose under a provision in the Vermont General Railroad Law of 1849, which required each railroad corporation to erect and maintain fences on the line of its road, and also cattle-guards at all farm and road cross-ings, suitable and sufficient to prevent cattle and other animals from getting upon the railroad, and which made the corporation and its agents liable for all damages which should be done by its agents or engines to cattle, horses, or other animals thereon, if occasioned by the want of such fences and cattle-guards. It was not disputed that erty without due process of law. The U. S. Supreme Court reversed the action of the L. court, and, in giving the opinion of the court, Mr. Justice Peckham said: "The act done within the limits of the State, under the circumstances of this case and for the purpose therein mentioned, we hold a proper act, one which defendants were at liberty to perform, and which the State legislature had no right to prevent, at least with reference to the Federal Constitution. . . . In the privilege of pursuing an ordinary calling or trade and of acquiring, holding, and selling property [which earlier in the opinion, had been declared to be included in the liberty of the citizen] must be embraced the right to make all proper contracts in relation thereto, and although it may be conceded that this right to contract in relation to persons or property, or to do business within the jurisdiction of the State, may be regulated and sometimes prohibited when the contracts or business conflict with the policy of the State as contained in the statutes, yet the power does not and cannot extend to prohibiting the citizen from making contracts of the nature involved in this case outside of the limits and jurisdiction of the State, and which are also to be performed outside of such jurisdiction; nor can the State legally prohibit its citizens from doing such an act as writing this letter of notification, even though the property which is to be insured may at the time when such insurance attaches be within the limits of the State. The mere fact that a citizen may be within the limits of a particular State does not prevent his making a contract outside its limits while he himself remains within it. Miliken v. Pratt, 126 Mass. 374, 28 Am. Rep. 241; Tilden v. Blair, 21 Wall. 241. The contract in this case was thus made. It was a valid contract, made outside of the State, to be performed outside of the State, although the subject was property temporarily within the State. As the contract was valid in the place where made and where it was to be performed, the party to the contract upon whom is devolved the right or duty to send the notification in order that the insurance provided for by the contract may attach to the property specified in the shipment mentioned in the notice, must have liberty to do that act and to give that notification within the limits of the State, any prohibition of the State statute to the contrary notwithstanding. The giving of the notice is a mere collateral matter; it is not the contract itself, but is an act performed pursuant to a valid contract which the State had no right or jurisdiction to prevent its citizens from making outside the limits of the State." But in Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207, it was held that a State may in pursuance of its public policy penalize any act done within its borders, looking toward the formation of contract relations with foreign corporations which it has forbidden to do business within its borders. The State may regulate the formation of contracts of insurance within its borders, and the parties are powerless to waive the benefits of such regulation. Equitable Life A. S. v. Clements, 140 U. S. 220, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822. See Nutting v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 553, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; aff. 175 Mass. 153, 55 N. E. 895, in which the cases of Hooper and Allgeyer are distinguished and reconciled.]

Perhaps the most striking illustrations of the principle here stated will be found among the judicial decisions which have held this provision would be valid as to such corporations as might be afterwards created within the State; but in respect to those previously in existence, and whose charters contained no such provision, it was claimed that this legislation was inoperative, since otherwise its effect would be to modify, and to that extent to violate, the obligation of the charter-contract. "The case," says the court, "resolves itself into the narrow question of the right of the legislature, by general statute, to require all railways, whether now in operation or hereafter to be chartered or built, to fence their roads upon both sides, and provide sufficient cattle-guards at all farm and road crossings, under penalty of paying all damages caused by their neglect to comply with such requirements. . . . We think the power of the legislature to control existing railways in this respect may be found in the general control over the police of the country, which resides in the law-making power in all free States, and which is, by the fifth article of the bill of rights of this State, expressly declared to reside perpetually and inalienably in the legislature; which is, perhaps, no more than the enunciation of a general principle applicable to all free States, and which cannot therefore be violated so as to deprive the legislature of the power, even by express grant to any mere public or private corporation. And when the regulation of the police of a city or town, by general ordinances, is given to such towns and cities, and the regulation of their own internal police is given to railroads to be carried into effect by their by-laws and other regulations, it is of course always, in all such cases, subject to the superior control of the legislature. That is a responsibility which legislatures cannot divest themselves of if they would.

"So far as railroads are concerned, this police power which resides primarily and ultimately in the legislature is twofold: 1. The police of the roads, which, in the absence of legislative control, the corporations themselves exercise over their operatives, and to some extent over all who do business with them, or come upon their grounds, through their general statutes, and by their officers. We apprehend there can be no manner of doubt that the legislature may, if they deem the public good requires it, of which they are to judge, and in all doubtful cases their judgment is final, require the several railroads in the State to establish and maintain the same kind of police which is now observed upon some of the more important roads in the country for their own security, or even such a police as is found upon the English railways, and those upon the continent of Europe. No one ever questioned the right of the Connecticut legislature to require trains upon all of their railroads to come to a stand before passing draws or bridges; or of the Massachusetts legislature to require the same thing before passing another railroad. And by parity of reasoning may all railways be required so to conduct themselves as to other persons, natural or corporate, as not unreasonably to injure them or their property. And if the business of railways is specially dangerous, they may be required to bear the expense of erecting such safeguards as will render it ordinarily safe to others, as is often required of natural persons under such circumstances.

"There would be no end of illustrations upon this subject. . . . It may be extended to the supervision of the track, tending switches, running upon the time of other trains, running a road with a single track, using improper rails, not using proper precaution by way of safety-beams in case of the breaking of axle-trees, the number of brakemen upon a train with reference to the number of cars, employing intemperate or incompetent engineers and servants, running beyond a given rate of speed, and a thousand similar things, most of which have been made the subject of legislation or judicial determination, and all of which may be. Hegeman v. Western R. Co., 10 Barb. 353.

"2. There is also the general police power of the State, by which persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens, in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the State; of the perfect right that the rights insured to private corporations by their charters, and the manner of their exercise, are subject to such new regulations as from time to time may be made by the State with a view to the public protection, health, and safety, and in order to guard properly the rights of other individuals and corporations. Although these charters are to be regarded as contracts, and the rights assured by them are inviolable, it does not follow that these rights are at once, by force of the charter-contract, removed from the sphere of State regulation, and that the charter implies an undertaking, on the part of the State, that in the same way in which their exercise is permissible at first, and under the regulations then existing, and those only, may the corporators continue to exercise their rights while the artificial existence continues. The obligation of the contract by no means extends so far; but, on the contrary, the rights and privileges which come into existence under it are placed upon the same footing with other legal rights and privileges of the citizen, and subject in like manner to proper rules for their due regulation, protection, and enjoyment.

in the legislature to do which no question ever was or, upon acknowledged general principles, ever can be, made, so far as natural persons are concerned. And it is certainly calculated to excite surprise and alarm that the right to do the same in regard to railways should be made a serious question." And the court proceed to consider the various cases in which the right of the legislature to regulate matters of private concern with reference to the general public good has been acted upon as unquestioned, or sustained by judicial decisions; and quote, as pertinent to the general question of what laws are prohibited on the ground of impairing the obligation of contracts, the language of Chief Justice Marshall in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 529, that "the framers of the Constitution did not intend to restrain the States in the regulation of their civil institutions, adopted for internal government, and that the instrument they have given us is not to be so construed." See, to the same effect, Snyder v. Moore, 8 Barb. 358; Walton v. Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. Co., 8 Barb. 399; Galena & Chicago U. R. R. Co. v. Loomis, 13 Ill. 518; Fitchburg R. R. v. Grand Junction R. R. Co., 1 Allen. 552; Veazie v. Mayo, 45 Me. 599; Peters v. Iron Mountain R. R. Co., 23 Mo. 167; Grannahan v. Hannibal, &c. R. R.

Co., 30 Mo. 546; Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Kercheval, 10 Ind. 84; Galena & Chicago U. R. R. Co. v. Appleby, 28 Ill. 283; Bair v. Milwaukee, &c. R. R. Co., 20 Wis. 254; State v. Mathews, 44 Mo. 523; Commissioners, &c. v. Hulyoke Water Power Co., 104 Mass. 446; Railroad Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 599; Toledo, &c. R. R. Co. v. Deacon, 68 Ill. 9; Ames v. Lake Superior, &c. R. R. Co., 21 Minn. 241; N. W. Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 70 Ill. 634; State v. New Haven, &c. Co., 43 Conn. 351. [Missouri, K. & T. Trust Co. v. Krumseig, 172 U. S. 354, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Matthews v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 121 Mo. 238, 24 S. W. 691, 25 L. R. A. 161, and note. Upon the proposition that police regulations are subject to change, from time to time, as the public welfare may demand, without impairing the obligation of contract, see Pingree v. Michigan Central Ry. Co., 118 Mich. 514, 78 N. W. 635, 65 L. R. A. 274, where the charter gave to the company the right to fix rates for passenger carriage within the maximum of three cents per mile, and it was held that any subsequent attempt to fix rates was unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contract. See, also, Detroit v. Detroit Cit. St. Ry. Co., 154 U. S. 368, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.]

The limit to the exercise of the police power (a) in these cases must be this: the regulations must have reference to the comfort, safety, or welfare of society; they must not be in conflict with any of the provisions of the charter; and they must not, under pretence of regulation, take from the corporation any of the essential rights and privileges which the charter confers. In short, they must be police regulations in fact, and not amendments of the charter in curtailment of the corporate franchise.¹

(a) [Police regulations cannot be purely arbitrary nor purely for the promotion of private interests. A statute requiring railroads and transportation companies to turn over to a storage company or public warehouseman all property which the consignee fails to call for or receive within twenty days after its arrival is unconstitutional. State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68 Minn. 351, 71 N. W. 400, 38 L. R. A. 672. A gift element carried on by a merchant in connection with his business and involving no element of chance cannot be prohibited. Long v. State, 73 Md. 527, 21 Atl. 663, 74 Md. 365, 22 Atl. 4, 12 L. R. A. 425. In State v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 55 S. W. 627, 48 L. R. A. 295, an act of the legislature which was aimed at department stores of any considerable magnitude was considered and held void. The act divided commodities into twenty-eight groups, and provided that in cities having fifty thousand inhabitants or more, any merchant who employed more than fifteen persons in the same establishment and sold more than one group of commodities should be subject to a certain license fee, not less than three hundred dollars per group. No provision for inspection or other regulation was made. The court held that the whole scheme was an unwarranted attempt at discrimination against large merchants. In discussing the limits of the police power, Robinson, J., in giving the opinion of the court, said: "In order to sustain legislation of the character of the act in question as a police measure, the courts must be able to see that its object [operation] to some degree tends towards the prevention of some offence or manifest evil, or has for its aim the preservation of the public health, morals, safety, or welfare. If no such object is discernible, but the mere guise and masquerade of public control, under the name of 'An Act to Regulate Business and Trade, &c.,' is adopted, that the liberty and property rights of the citizens may be invaded, the courts will strike down the act as unwarranted. Mere legislative assumption of the right to direct and regulate the channel and course into which the private energies of the citizen may flow, or the attempt to abridge or hamper his right to pursue any lawful calling or avocation which he may choose without unreasonable regulation or molestation, have ever been condemned in all free government." For an ordinance of similar purpose, similarly disposed of, see Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 194, 55 N. E. 797, 48 L. R. A. 261, and for cases on department stores and their regulation, see note to this case in L. R. A.; see also People v. Coolidge, 124 Mich. 694, 83 N. W. 694, 50 L. R. A. 493. Police regulations cannot be purely arbitrary; e.g., barbers cannot be singled out from men of all trades and callings and alone deprived of right to work on Sunday. Eben v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 43 N. E. 1198, 32 L. R. A. 659; Ex parte Jentzsch, 112 Cal. 468, 44 Pac. 803, 32 L. R. A. 634; contra, People v. Haynor, 149 N. Y. 195, 43 N. E. 541, 31 L. R. A. 683. Mines shipping by rail or by water cannot be singled out and alone compelled to provide special facilities for coal weighing. Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 43 N. E. 624, 32 L. R. A. 445. Upon extent of police power, see State v. Schlemmer, 42 Ia. Ann. 1166, 8 So. 307, 10 L. R. A. 135, and note. Restrictions upon the use of property by its owner cannot be purely arbitrary. They must be in some degree necessary to protect the legitimate interests of others. A riparian owner cannot be prevented from driving piles upon his own land and erecting buildings upon such piles, where they neither impede the flow materially nor interfere with navigation. Janesville v. Carpenter, 77 Wis. 288, 46 N. W. 128, 8 L. R. A. 898, and note; State v. Gilman, 33 W. Va. 146, 10 S. E. 288, 6 L. R. A. 847; Northwestern Telephone & E. Co. v. Minneapolis, 81 Minn. 140, 83 N. W. 527, 83 N. W. 69, 53 L. R. A. 175. But see Summerville v. Pressley, 33 S. C. 56, 11 S. E. 545, 8 L. R. A. 854, and note. Non-performance of an impossibility cannot be made a crime. Port Huron v. Jenkinson, 77 Mich. 414, 43 N. W. 923, 6 L. R. A. 54. Nor can any other police regulation be purely arbitrary. Noel v. People, 167 Ill. 587, 58 N. E. 616. See also Adgeyer v. Louisiana, note a, p. 833, ante; also many of the cases in note 1, p. 595, and note a, p. 15, ante.]

The maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, is that which lies at the foundation of the power; and to whatever enactment affecting the management and business of private corporations it cannot fairly be applied, the power itself will not extend. It has accordingly been held that where a corporation was chartered with the right to take toll from passengers over their road, a subsequent statute authorizing a certain class of persons to go toll free was void.² This was not a regulation of existing rights, but it took from the corporation that which they before possessed,

¹ Washington Bridge Co. v. State, 18 Conn. 53; Bailey v. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co., 4 Harr. 389; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189; Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aiken, 264; Miller v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 21 Barb. 513; People v. Jackson & Michigan Plank Road Co., 9 Mich. 255, 307; Sloan v. Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Mo. 24; Attorney-General v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 35 Wis. 425. In Benson v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 10 Barb. 223, 245, it is said, in considering a ferry right granted to a city: "Franchises of this description are partly of a public and partly of a private nature. So far as the accommodation of passengers is concerned, they are publici juris; so far as they require capital and produce revenue, they are privati juris. Certain duties and burdens are imposed upon the grantees, who are compensated therefor by the privilege of levying ferriage, and security from spoliation arising from the irrevocable nature of the grant. The State may legislate touching them, so far as they are publici juris. Thus, laws may be passed to punish neglect or misconduct in conducting the ferries, to secure the safety of passengers from danger and imposition, &c. But the State cannot take away the ferries themselves, nor deprive the city of their legitimate rents and profits." And see People v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 32 Barb. 102, 116; Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 66 Pa. St. 41; Hogeman v. Western R. R., 13 N. Y. 9. [Powers granted to corporations are to be narrowly construed where their exercise is injurious to the public welfare, and a power granted by charter to one railroad "to connect with any railroad running in the same direction with this road, and where there may be any portion of another road which may be used by this company" does not authorize the consolidation of two parallel and competing lines, and a subsequently enacted constitutional prohibition of such consolidation does not impair the obligation of a contract, even if it could be held that the deprivation of a long granted but yet unused power were such impairment. Pearsall v. Great N. R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, and Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 101 U. S. 677, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714, aff. 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476. State may compel insurance companies doing business within its borders to make full reports concerning their business and their financial condition. Eagle Ins. Co. v. Ohio, 153 U. S. 446, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868.] After the organization of a company for electric communication, it may be required to obtain the approval of its plans by city commissioners before laying wires in the streets. People v. Squire, 107 N. Y. 593, 14 N. E. 820. A provision that an insurance policy referring to the application shall not be received in evidence unless such application is attached to it, is valid as to policies issued thereafter by an existing company. New Era Life Ins. Co. v. Musser, 120 Pa. St. 384, 14 A. 155.

² Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aiken, 264. Of course the charter reserved no right to make such an amendment.

namely, the right to tolls, and conferred upon individuals that which before they had not, namely, the privilege to pass over the road free of toll. "Powers," it is said in another case, "which can only be justified on this specific ground [that they are police regulations], and which would otherwise be clearly prohibited by the Constitution, can be such only as are so clearly necessary to the safety, comfort, and well-being of society, or so imperatively required by the public necessity, as to lead to the rational and satisfactory conclusion that the framers of the Constitution could not, as men of ordinary prudence and foresight, have intended to prohibit their exercise in the particular case, notwithstanding the language of the prohibition would otherwise include it."¹ And it was therefore held that an act subsequent to the charter of a plank-road company, and not assented to by the incorporators, which subjected them to a total forfeiture of their franchises for that which by the charter was cause for partial forfeiture only, was void as impairing the obligation of contracts.² And even a provision in a corporate charter, empowering the legislature to alter, modify, or repeal it would not authorize a subsequent act which, on pretence of amendment, or of a police regulation, would have the effect to appropriate a portion of the corporate property to the public use.³ And where by its charter the corporation was em-

¹ Christiancy, J., in People v. Jackson & Michigan Plank Road Co., 9 Mich. 285, 397. Compare Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 66 Pa. St. 41. Where the corporation by its charter has the right to fix its own tolls for a specified period, the legislature is without the power to regulate them till that period has expired. Sloan v. Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Mo. 24, 21 Am. Rep. 337.

² Ibid. And see State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189.

³ Detroit v. Plank Road Co., 48 Mich. 140, 5 N. W. 275. It has been held that the reservation of a right to amend or repeal would not justify an act requiring a railroad company to cause a proposed new street or highway to be taken across their track, and to cause the necessary embankments, excavations, and other work to be done for that purpose at their own expense; thus not only appropriating a part of their property to another public use, but compelling them to fit it for such use. Miller v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 21 Barb. 513; People v. Lake Shore, &c. Ry. Co., 52 Mich. 277, 17 N. W. 841; Chicago & G. T. Ry. Co. v.

Hough, 61 Mich. 507, 28 N. W. 532. Contra, Portland & R. R. Co. v. Deering, 78 Me. 61, 2 Atl. 670; even if there is no reservation in the charter of the right to alter, &c. Boston & M. R. R. Co. v. Com'rs, 79 Me. 388, 10 Atl. 113. Companies may be compelled to put in farm crossings at their own expense. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co. v. Willenborg, 117 Ill. 203, 7 N. E. 608. See also Montclair v. New York, &c. Ry. Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 436, 18 Atl. 242. This, however, can scarcely be a more severe exercise of the power than is the amendment to the charter of a railroad corporation which limits the rates of fare and freight which may be charged; for the exercise of this might be carried to an extent which would annihilate the whole value of railroad property. The power, however, is very fully sustained, where the right to amend is reserved in the charter. Attorney-General v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 35 Wis. 425; Blake v. Winona, &c. R. R. Co., 19 Minn. 418, 18 Am. Rep. 345; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155; Piek v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 6 Biss. 177. See a like rule applied to a ferry company in Par- powered to construct over a river a certain bridge, which must necessarily constitute an obstruction to the navigation of the river, a subsequent amendment making the corporation liable for such obstruction was held void, as in effect depriving the corporation of the very right which the charter assured to it.¹ So where the charter reserved to the legislature the right of modification after the incorporators had been reimbursed their expenses in constructing the bridge, with twelve per cent interest thereon, an amendment before such reimbursement, requiring the construction of a fifty-foot draw for the passage of vessels, in place of one of thirty-two feet, was held unconstitutional and void.² So it has been held that a power to a municipal corporation to regulate the speed of railway carriages would not authorize such regulation, except in the streets and public grounds of the city; such being the fair construction of the power, and the necessity for this police regulation not extending further.³ But there are decisions on this point which are the other way.⁴

On the other hand, the right to require existing railroad corporations to fence (a) their track, and to make them liable for all ker v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 100 Mass. 306. A requirement that rates of fare and freight shall be annually fixed and published is legitimate as an exercise of the police power. Railroad Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 599. For discussion of the right of the State to fix rates see post, pp. 871-875, notes. It is no impairment of the obligation of the charter of a railroad company to pass laws to prevent extortion and unjust discrimination. Illinois Cent. R. R. Co. v. People, 95 Ill. 313, 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1e8. That the issuing and taking up of tickets and coupons of tickets by common carriers may be regulated by statute, see Fry v. State, 60 Ind. 352.

¹ Barney v. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co., 4 Harr. 369. Compare Commonwealth v. Pa. Canal Co., 60 Pa. St. 41, 5 Am. Rep. 329.

² Washington Bridge Co. v. State, 18 Conn. 53.

³ State v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. 170.

⁴ Crawley v. Burlington, &c. Ry. Co., 85 Iowa, 638, 20 N. W. 467, 22 N. W. 918. See Merz v. Missouri R. Ry. Co., 88 Mo. 672. In Buffalo & Niagara Falls R. R. Co. v. Buffalo, 5 Ill. 299, it was held that a statutory power in a city to regulate the running of cars within the corporate limits would justify an ordinance entirely prohibiting the use of steam for propelling cars through any part of the city. And see Great Western R. R. Co. v. Decatur, 33 Ill. 381; Branson v. Philadelphia, 47 Pa. St. 329; Whitson v. Franklin, 34 Ind. 392. Affirming the general right to permit the municipalities to regulate the speed of trains, see Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Haggerty, 67 Ill. 173; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Lewis, 79 Pa. St. 33; Haas v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 41 Wis. 44. That the legislature may compel railroad companies to carry impartially for all, see Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. People, 67 Ill. 11; Cincinnati, &c. R. R. Co. v. Cook (Ohio), 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 317; Louisville, N. O. & T. Ry. Co. v. State, 66 Miss. 692, 6 So. 203; but an act abrogating the requirement of impartial carriage is void as to inter-state transportation. The Sue, 22 Fed. Rep. 843. But if the carriage is of persons from State to State, the State has no such control. Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485. See Carton v. Illinois Cent. R. R. Co., 59 Iowa, 148, 13 N. W. 67, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 305. See cases, post, pp. 846, 873.

(a) [Other landowners may be required to fence their lands also, and may be denied the right to recover for trespasses by domestic animals unless their lands are beasts killed by going upon it, has been sustained on two grounds: first, as regarding the division fence between adjoining proprietors, and in that view being but a reasonable provision for the protection of domestic animals; and second, and chiefly, as essential to the protection of persons being transported in the railway carriages.¹ Having this double purpose in view, the owner of

¹ Thorpe v. Rutland & Burlington R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140; New Albany & Salem R. R. Co. v. Tilton, 12 Ind. 8; Same v. Maiden, 12 Ind. 10; Same v. McNamara, 11 Ind. 543; Ohio & Mississippi R. R. Co. v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 140; Madison & Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Whiteneck, 8 Ind. 217; Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Townsend, 10 Ind. 38; Same v. Kercheval, 16 Ind. 84; Corwin v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 42; Horn v. Atlantic & St. Lawrence R. R. Co., 35 N. H. 169, and 36 N. H. 440; Pawcett v. York & North Midland R. R. Co., 15 Jur. 173; Smith v. Eastern R. R. Co., 35 N. H. 356; Bulkley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 27 Conn. 479; Jones v. Galena, &c. R. R. Co., 16 Iowa, 6; Winona, &c. R. R. Co. v. Waldron, 11 Minn. 515; Bradley v. Buffalo, &c. R. R. Co., 34 N. Y. 429; Sawyer v. Vermont, &c. R. R. Co., 105 Mass. 106; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Riblet, 66 Pa. St. 184, 5 Am. Rep. 369; Kaass Pacific R. R. Co. v. Mower, 16 Kan. 573; Wilder v. Maine Central R. R. Co., 25 Me. 352; Biewette v. Wyandotte, &c. R. R. Co., 72 Mo. 583. [State may enforce such regulations by making railroad companies liable for all damages that may be suffered by any individual through their non-compliance. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Emmons, 149 U. S. 264, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.] The Minnesota statute imposes no duty toward children. Fitzgerald v. St. Paul, &c. Ry. Co., 23 Minn. 326, 13 N. W. 168. As to the degree of care required of railroad companies in keeping up their fences, compare Antidel v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 23 Wis. 145; Lemmon v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 82 Iowa. 151; Carey v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 61 Wis. 71, 20 N. W. 648; Chicago, &c. R. R. v. Barrie, 55 Ill.

226, and cases cited therein. It is competent to make the company liable for double the value of stock killed in consequence of the neglect to fence. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Humes, 116 U. S. 512, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Barnett v. Railroad Co., 58 Mo. 60, 30 Am. Rep. 778; Speelman v. Railroad Co., 71 Mo. 434; Tredway v. Railroad Co., 43 Iowa. 527; Little Rock, &c. R. R. Co. v. Payne, 83 Ark. 813, 34 Am. Rep. 55; Cairo, &c. R. R. Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 97, 34 Am. Rep. 112. Contra, Atclison, &c. R. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Nev. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 386. A much higher attorney fee than is allowed in other cases cannot be imposed by law in actions against a railroad for stock killing. Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. Ry. Co., 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289. Compare Peoria, D. & E. Ry. Co. v. Dugan, 109 Ill. 537. A statute making railroad companies liable for injuries by fire communicated by their locomotive engines was sustained, as to companies previously in existence, in Lyman v. Boston & Worcester R. R. Co., 4 Cush. 288; Rodemacher v. Milwaukee, &c. R. R. Co., 41 Iowa. 297, 20 Am. Rep. 592; Gorman v. Pacific Railroad, 20 Mo. 441. [regardless of the question of negligence. Matthews v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 121 Mo. 298, 24 S. W. 591, 25 L. R. A. 161, and note; aff. 165 U. S. 1, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Grissell v. Housatonic Ry. Co., 54 Conn. 447, 9 Atl. 127, 1 Am. St. 138. A statute authorizing full recovery by a passenger against a public carrier of passengers for injuries resulting from the carriage is constitutional though negligence of the carrier is not made an element of the course of action. Clark v. Russell, 97 Fed. Rep. 900; St. Louis, &c. Ry. Co. v. Matthews, 165 U. S. 1, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.] But a statute making a fenced as required. Poindexter v. May, 98 Va. 143, 34 S. E. 971, 47 L. R. A. 588. And a law permitting half of a party wall to be placed upon the land of an adjoining proprietor, even against his will, is good. Swift v. Calnan, 102 Iowa, 206, 71 N. W. 233, 37 L. R. A. 462.]

beasts killed or injured may maintain an action for the damage suffered, notwithstanding he may not himself be free from negligence.¹ But it would, perhaps, require an express legislative declaration that the corporation should be liable for the beasts thus destroyed to create so great an innovation in the common law. The general rule, where a corporation has failed to obey the police regulations established for its government, would not make the corporation liable to the party injured, if his own negligence contributed with that of the corporation in producing the injury.²

The State may also regulate the grade of railways, and prescribe how, and upon what grade, railway tracks shall cross each other; and it may apportion the expense of making the necessary crossings between the corporations owning the roads.³ And railroad liable for cattle killed irrespective of negligence is bad. Jensen v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 6 Utah, 253, 21 Pac. 994, 4 L. R. A. 724; Breienberg v. Montana, &c. Ry. Co., 8 Mont. 271, 20 Pac. 314. And it is not competent to make railroad companies liable for injuries for which they are in no way responsible. It is therefore held that an act imposing upon railroad companies the expense of coroners' inquests, burial, &c. of persons who may die on its cars, or be killed by collision, &c. is invalid as applied to cases where the company is not in fault. Ohio, &c. R. R. Co. v. Lackey, 78 Ill. 55. That it is as competent to lessen the common-law liabilities of railroad companies as to increase them, see Kirby v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 506. And see Camden & Amboy R. R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. 523; True v. Hannibal, &c. R. R. Co., 49 Mo. 438.

¹ Corwin v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 42; Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Townsend, 10 Ind. 38; Jeffersonville, &c. R. R. Co. v. Nichols, 30 Ind. 321; Same v. Parkhurst, 34 Ind. 591; Snydam v. Moore, 8 Barb. 358; Fawcett v. York & North Midland R. Co., 15 Jur. 173; Waldron v. Rensselaer & Schenectady R. R. Co., 8 Barb. 360; Horn v. Atlantic & St. Lawrence R. R. Co., 35 N. H. 169; O'Bannon v. Louisville, &c. R. R. Co., 8 Bush, 348; Illinois Cent. R. R. Co. v. Arnold, 47 Ill. 173; Hinman v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 28 Iowa, 491; Quackenbush v. Wisconsin, &c. R. R. Co., 62 Wis. 411, 22 N. W. 519; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Webb, 18 Neb. 215, 24 N. W. 700. [And a State

may make a railroad company liable for all property lost through fires arising from its locomotives, whether through its negligence or not. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 185 U. S. 1, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243, aff. 121 Mo. 238, 24 S. W. 591, 25 L. R. A. 181.]

² Jackson v. Rutland & Burlington R. R. Co., 25 Vt. 150. And see Marshe v. N. Y. & Erie R. R. Co., 14 Barb. 384; Joliet & N. I. R. R. Co. v. Jones, 20 Ill. 221; Tonawanda R. R. Co. v. Munger, 5 Denio, 255, and 4 N. Y. 340; Price v. New Jersey R. R. Co., 81 N. J. 229; Drake v. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 240. In Indianapolis & Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Kercheval, 16 Ind. 84, it was held that a clause in the charter of a railroad corporation which declared that when the incorporators should have procured a right of way as therein provided, they should be seized in fee-simple of the right to the land, and should have the sole use and occupation of the same, and no person, body corporate or politic, should in any way interfere therewith, molest, disturb, or injure any of the rights and privileges thereby granted, &c., would not take from the State the power to establish a police regulation making the corporation liable for cattle killed by their cars. [Jensen v. Union P. R. Co., 6 Utah, 253, 21 Pac. 994, 4 L. R. A. 724, holds that railroad cannot in the absence of negligence on its part be made liable for stock killed by it.]

³ Fitchburg R. R. Co. v. Grand Junction R. R. Co., 1 Allen, 552, and 4 Allen, 138; Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co. v. S. W. Pa. R. R. Co., 77 Pa. St. 173. They may

it may establish regulations requiring existing railways to ring the bell or blow the whistle of their engines immediately before passing highways at grade, or other places where their approach might be dangerous to travel,¹ or to station flagmen at such or any other dangerous places.² And it has even been intimated that it might be competent for the State to make railway corporations liable as insurers for the safety of all persons carried by them, in the same manner that they are by law liable as carriers of goods; though this would seem to be pushing the police power to an extreme.³ But those statutes which have recently become be required to put up depots at railroad junctions. State v. Wabash, &c. Ry. Co., 83 Mo. 144. Part of the expense of changing grade to overhead crossings may be laid upon a town. Appeal of Westbrook, 57 Conn. 95, 17 Atl. 368. The legislature may regulate the speed at highway and other crossings. Rockford, &c. R. R. Co. v. Hilder, 72 Ill. 235. "While the franchise of a railroad company licenses generally unlimited speed, power is reserved to the legislature to regulate the exercise of the franchise for public security." Ryan, Ch. J., in Horn v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 38 Wis. 463. The regulation is in faciem vite. Haas v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 41 Wis. 44. But running at unlawful speed does not impose an absolute liability. Louisville, N. O. & T. Ry. Co. v. Caster, — Miss. —, 6 So. 358. [The State, acting directly or through a city council, may compel the railway companies over whose tracks a viaduct extends to repair the same, and may apportion among them the expense of such repair, although the viaduct was built at the joint expense of the railway companies and the city, acting under agreement. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, aff. 47 Neb. 549, 66 N. W. 624. A railway company may be required to pay the whole expense of change of grade at a crossing. New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Town of Bristol, 151 U. S. 550, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437, aff. 62 Conn. 527, 28 Atl. 122.]

¹ "The legislature has the power, by general laws, from time to time, as the public exigencies may require, to regulate corporations in their franchises, so as to provide for the public safety. The provision in question is a mere police regulation, enacted for the protection and safety of the public, and in no manner interferes with or impairs the powers conferred on the defendants in their act of incorporation." Galena & Chicago U. R. R. Co. v. Loomis, 13 Ill. 548. And see Stuyvesant v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 Cow. 588; Benson v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 10 Barb. 223; Bulkeley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 27 Conn. 486; Venzie v. Mayo, 45 Me. 560; 49 Me. 156; Galena & Chicago U. R. R. Co. v. Dill, 22 Ill. 264; Same v. Appleby, 28 Ill. 283; Ohio & Mississippi R. R. Co. v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 140; Clark's Adm'r v. Hannibal & St. Jo. R. R. Co., 38 Mo. 202; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Triplett, 38 Ill. 482; Commonwealth v. Eastern R. R. Co., 103 Mass. 254, 4 Am. Rep. 555; Kaminitsky v. R. R. Co., 25 S. C. 53.

² Toledo, &c. R. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37; Western & A. R. R. Co. v. Young, 81 Ga. 387, 7 S. E. 912. In many States now there are railroad commissioners appointed by law, with certain powers of supervision, more or less extensive. Respecting these it has been said in Maine: "Our whole system of legislative supervision through the railroad commissioners acting as a State police over railroads is founded upon the theory that the public duties devolved upon railroad corporations by their charter are ministerial, and therefore liable to be thus enforced." Railroad Commissioners v. Port and &c. R. R. Co., 63 Me. 269, 18 Am. Rep. 208.

³ Thorpe v. Rutland & Burlington R. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140. Carriers of goods are liable as insurers, notwithstanding they may have been guiltless of negligence, because such is their contract with the shipper when they receive his goods for transportation; but carriers of persons assume no such obligations at the common, and which give an action to the representatives of persons killed by the wrongful act, neglect, or default of another, may unquestionably be made applicable to corporations previously chartered, and may be sustained as only giving a remedy for a wrong for which the common law had failed to make provision.¹ And it cannot be doubted that there is ample power in the legislative department of the State to adopt all necessary legislation for the purpose of enforcing the obligations of railway companies as carriers of persons and goods to accommodate the public impartially, and to make every reasonable provision for carrying with safety and expedition.²

common law, and where a company of individuals receive from the State a charter which makes them carriers of persons, and chargeable as such for their own default or negligence only, it may well be doubted if it be competent for the legislature afterwards to impose upon their contracts new burdens, and make them respond in damages where they have been guilty of no default. In other words, whether that could be a proper police regulation which did not assume to regulate the business of the carrier with a view to the just protection of the rights and interests of others, but which imposed a new obligation, for the benefit of others, upon a party guilty of no neglect of duty. But perhaps such a regulation would not go farther than that in Stanley v. Stanley, 26 Me. 181, where it was held competent for the legislature to pass an act making the stockholders of existing banks liable for all corporate debts thereafter created; or in Peters v. Iron Mountain R. R. Co., 23 Mo. 107, and Grannahan v. Hannibal & C. R. R. Co., 30 Mo. 646, where an act was sustained which made companies previously chartered liable for the debts of contractors to the workmen whom they had employed. [That a statute creating such absolute liability is valid, is held in Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689, 82 N. W. 26, 65 L. R. A. 810.]

¹ Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Paulk, 24 Ga. 352; Chosa River Steamboat Co. v. Barclay, 30 Ala. 120. In Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R. v. State, 22 N. H. 215, a statute making railroad corporations liable to indictment and fine, in case of the loss of life by the negligence or carelessness of the proprietors or their servants, was adjudged constitutional, as applicable to corporations previously in existence. To an indictment or action under a like Massachusetts act contributory negligence is no defence. Comm. v. Boston, & C. R. R., 134 Mass. 211; Merrill v. Eastern R. R., 139 Mass. 228, 1 N. E. 548, 139 Mass. 252, 29 N. E. 666.

² Railroad employees may be required to be examined to test their fitness, and for color-blindness. Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; McDonald v. State, 81 Ala. 279; Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. State, 83 Ala. 71, 3 So. 702, 128 U. S. 96, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28. [The entire expenses of the State railroad commission, including salaries of commissioners, may be assessed upon the railroad companies operating within the State in proportion to their operated track mileage. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbs, 142 U. S. 886, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265, aff. 27 S. C. 385, 4 S. E. 49; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 85 Ala. 619, 5 So. 311, 7 L. R. A. 266, contra.] On this subject in general, see Redf. on Railw. c. 32, sec. 2; Louisville, & C. R. R. Co. v. Burke, 6 Cold. 45; New Albany & Salem R. R. Co. v. Tilton, 12 Ind. 3; Buckley v. N. Y. & N. H. R. R. Co., 27 Conn. 479; Ohio & Mississippi R. R. Co. v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 140; Bradley v. Buffalo, & C. R. R. Co., 84 N. Y. 427; Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co. v. State, 32 N. H. 215; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Riblet, 66 Pa. St. 164, 5 Am. Rep. 360. And see other cases cited, ante, pp. 839, 840, notes. [That telephone companies are common carriers and must render their services impartially to all who may apply for them, see Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 627, 76 N. W. 171, 45

Restraints on Sale of Liquors. Those statutes which regulate or altogether prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage have also been, by some persons, supposed to conflict with the federal Constitution. Such of them, however, as assume to regulate merely, and to prohibit sales by other persons than those who are licensed by the public authorities, have not suggested any serious question of constitutional power. They are but the ordinary police regulations, such as the State may make in respect to all classes of trade or employment.¹ But those which undertake altogether to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage have been assailed as violating express provisions of the national Constitution, and also as subversive of fundamental rights, and therefore not within the grant of legislative power.

That legislation of this character was void, so far as it affected imported liquors or such as might be introduced from one State into another, because in conflict with the power of Congress over commerce, was strongly urged in the License Cases before the Supreme Court of the United States; but that view did not obtain the assent of the court. Opinions were expressed by a majority

L. R. A. 113. Upon power to regulate the consolidation of competing railroads, see State v. Montana Ry. Co., 21 Mont. 221, 53 Pac. 623. 45 L. R. A. 271, and note thereto in L. R. A. Upon duty of a railroad company to furnish cars to shippers, see Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. Campbell, 91 Tex. 551, 45 S. W. 2, 43 L. R. A. 225, and note. Carriers of goods may be compelled to forward within a certain time after receiving them. Bagg v. Wilmington, C. & A. R. Co., 109 N. C. 270, 14 S. E. 79, 14 L. R. A. 536. Street railways may be required to provide screens for protection of motormen. State v. Whitaker, 180 Mo. 59, 60 S. W. 1038; State v. Nelson, 52 Ohio St. 88, 39 N. E. 22, 26 L. R. A. 317; State v. Hoskins, 38 Minn. 35, 59 N. W. 545, 25 L. R. A. 759, and note.]

¹ Bale v. State, 7 Gill. 326; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 450; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449; License Cases, 5 How. 604; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 39; State v. Almond, 2 Houst. 612. [Plumb v. Christie, 103 Ga. 686, 30 S. E. 759, 42 L. R. A. 181.] That a territory may make such laws: Terr. v. Con- nell, — Ariz. —, 16 Pac. 209. That such laws may be applied to corporations chartered to manufacture liquors, as well as to others, see Commonwealth v. Intoxicating Liquors, 115 Mass. 153; Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25. That, when the prohibition is total, even a druggist cannot sell as medicine on a physician's prescription, see Woods v. State, 36 Ark. 36, 38 Am. Rep. 22. [And a licensed pharmacist may be required to take out a special liquor license before he shall be permitted to use spirituous liquors in the preparation of pharmacist's compounds. Gray v. Connecticut, 150 U. S. 74, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Conn. v. Fowler, 96 Ky. 166, 28 S. W. 786, 33 L. R. A. 839. Upon constitutionality of laws regulating sale of liquors, see note to, 28 L. ed. U. S. 659. Sale of other commodities in rooms where sale of liquors is authorized may be prohibited. State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 44 N. E. 469, 33 L. R. A. 313.] Sales within certain hours may be forbidden. Hedderich v. State, 101 Ind. 564. A farmer may be forbidden to give cider on Sunday to an intoxicated person. Altenburg v. Com., 126 Pa. St. 602, 17 Atl. 799.

of the court that the introduction of imported liquors into a State, and their sale in the original packages as imported, could not be forbidden, because to do so would be to forbid what Congress, in its regulation of commerce, and in the levy of imposts, had permitted;¹ but it was conceded by all, that when the original package was broken up for use or for retail by the importer, and also when the commodity had passed from his hands into the hands of a purchaser, it ceased to be under Congressional protection as an import, or a part of foreign commerce, and became subject to the laws of the State, and might be taxed for State purposes, and the sale regulated by the State like any other property.² It was also decided, in these cases, that the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the States did not exclude regulations by the States, except so far as they might come in conflict with those established by Congress; and that, consequently, as Congress had not undertaken to regulate commerce in liquors between the States, a law of New Hampshire could not be held void which punished the sale, in that State, of gin purchased in Boston and sold in New Hampshire, notwithstanding the sale was in the cask in which it was imported, but by one not licensed by the selectmen.³ The authority of the License Cases is, however, seriously impaired by late decisions of the same court. Upon the principle, now well settled,⁴ that the failure of Congress to act as to matters directly affecting interstate commerce is equivalent to a declaration that it shall be free, it is held a State has no power to prevent the bringing of liquor into it from another ¹ Taney, Ch. J., 5 How. 504, 574; McClellan, J., 5 How. 589; Cutron, J., 5 How. 608. And see Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 553; Tierman v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328, 335; Bradford v. Stevens, 10 Gray, 379; State v. Robinson, 49 Me. 285.

² Daniel, J., held that the right to regulate was not excluded, even while the packages remained in the hands of the importer unbroken (p. 612). See also the views of Grier, J. (p. 631). [See, in this connection, Re Wilson, 8 Mackey (D. C.), 341, 12 L. R. A. 624. While the liquor is yet in the original package, the State may prohibit and punish its sale to a person of known intemperate habits. Com. v. Zeit, 135 Pa. 615, 21 Atl. 7, 11 L. R. A. 602.]

³ This rule has lately been followed in Iowa. Collins v. Ellis, 77 Iowa, 181, 41 N. W. 571; Leisy v. Hardin, 78 Iowa, 286, 43 N. W. 188. [Same case, 135 U. S. 100, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.] See Waterbury v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 334, 14 Atl. 604; People v. Lyng, 74 Mich. 576, 42 N. W. 139, rev. in 145 U. S. 161, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725. See also Bode v. State, 7 Gill, 326; Jones v. People, 14 Ill. 196; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 200; Santa v. State, 2 Iowa, 165, 292; Commonwealth v. Clapp, 5 Gray, 97; Metropolitan Board v. Barré, 34 N. Y. 857; Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25; Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243, 9 Atl. 384; Lang v. Lynch, 38 Fed. Rep. 439; State v. Colough, 78 Me. 401, 6 Atl. 4. In Iowa it is held competent to except from the general prohibition of the sale of wines all those made from fruit grown in the State. State v. Stucker, 68 Iowa, 496, 12 N. W. 483. But this seems not in harmony with Tierman v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123.

⁴ See p. 688, note 2.

State, and that it cannot prohibit the sale within it of liquor in the original package by a non-resident.¹ But the manufacture of

¹ Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 125 U. S. 465, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681. In the former case a majority of the court held that the statute could not be upheld as an inspection law nor as a sanitary law; that it was a regulation of commerce, although its purpose was to perfect the policy of the State as to intemperance; and left undecided the question of the right of the State to forbid the sale of the liquor when imported. In the latter case this point is distinctly ruled, so far as the case of the sale by a foreigner or non-resident in the original package is concerned, [the court holding that the State is powerless to prohibit or regulate the sale by the importer in the original package, fol. Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419.] For the State rulings upon it, see cases p. 846, note 3, supra. [Directly after the decision of Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, Congress enacted the so-called Wilson Bill, providing that "All fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquors or liquids transported into any State or territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall upon arrival in such State or territory be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or territory enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquids or liquors had been produced in such State or territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise." 26 Stat. at Large, 318, chap. 728. In re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 546, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865, it was held that this enactment permitted the law of Kansas, prohibiting and penalizing the manufacture, sale, or barter of "any spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented, or other intoxicating liquors" to extend to all such liquors imported into the State. In Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265, was considered the validity of the State Dispensary Law of South Carolina, which, as it then stood, required that "no wines or liquors, except domestic wines, should be manufactured or sold, except through the agency of a State board of control, a commissioner and certain county dispensers, and after an inspection by a State chemist. Packages of wines and liquors made in other States and imported by a resident of the State for his own use, and in the possession of railroad companies which, as common carriers, had brought the packages within the State, were seized and confiscated as contraband by constables of the State." The court held "that when a State recognizes the manufacture, sale, and use of intoxicating liquors as lawful, it cannot discriminate against the bringing of such articles in, and importing them from other States; that such legislation is void as a hindrance to interstate commerce, and an unjust preference of the products of the enacting State as against similar products of the other States," and that therefore "as respected residents of the State of South Carolina desiring to import foreign wines and liquors for their own use, the act in question in that case was void." The statute was thereupon modified in such manner as to permit the importation, but to require that before any such importation the intending importer should "first certify to the [official] chemist . . . the quantity and kind of liquor proposed to be imported, together with the name and place of business of the person, firm, or corporation from whom it is desired to purchase, accompanying such certificate with the statement that the proposed consignor has been requested to forward a sample of such liquor to the said chemist. . . . Upon the receipt of said sample, the said chemist shall immediately proceed to test the same, and . . . [upon finding it pure, &c.] shall issue a certificate to that effect," which should be attached to the consignment. Any package imported without such certificate was to be confiscated and destroyed. This provision was considered in Vanee v. Vandercook Co., 170 U. S. 438, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674, and held invalid as an unlawful interference with interstate commerce. In Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634, it was held that the importation was not completed until the goods had been delivered to the consignee, or at any rate intoxicating liquor within the State may be forbidden although intended solely for exportation.¹

until the carrier ceased to hold them as carrier. The Iowa law forbidding transportation from place to place within the State did not apply to the station agent who unloaded a box containing whiskey from a freight car and wheeled it into the railway company's freight warehouse, there to await delivery to the consignee. And in State v. Holeyman, 65 S. C. 207, 31 S. E. 332, 33 S. E. 393, 45 L. R. A. 567, it was held that, despite the Dispensary Law, a person might purchase liquors outside the State and himself transport them from the place of purchase to his home, and there keep them for his own use, because such act was interstate commerce, and the Wilson Law did not permit the State law to attach until the liquors had reached their destination. For other cases on South Carolina Dispensary Law, see State v. Aiken, 42 S. C. 222, 20 S. E. 321, 26 L. R. A. 345; McCullough v. Brown, 41 S. C. 225, 19 S. E. 458, 23 L. R. A. 410. For a construction of the Alabama Dispensary Law, see Sheppard v. Dowling, 127 Ala. 1, 28 So. 731, 85 Am. St. 68. Upon interstate sales of intoxicating liquors and State regulation thereof, see a valuable note to 42 L. ed. U. S. 1689. Upon liquor legislation generally, see Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S., 255, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97; Re Caswell, 18 R. I. 345, 29 Atl. 257, 27 L. R. A. 82, 85, and note; State v. Creedon, 73 Iowa, 553, 43 N. W. 675, 7 L. R. A. 295; Lemly v. State, 70 Miss. 241, 12 So. 22, 29 L. R. A. 645, and note; Tragesser v. Gray, 72 Md. 259, 29 Atl. 905, 9 L. R. A. 750, and note; and Veon v. Crenson, 133 Pa. 45, 20 Atl. 565, 9 L. R. A. 811, and note. Upon what is an original package, see Austin v. Tennessee, 170 U. S. 343, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, in which it was held that a cigarette package three inches long and an inch and a half wide, containing ten cigarettes, was not an original package where many such were deposited by the shipper in a basket owned by the express company and by that company carried to consignee in the same basket and poured out on consignee's counter; whether, if each small package had been addressed to consignee, the holding would have been otherwise, quære; see concurring opinion by Mr. Justice White. For a similar holding with regard to cigarette packages, see McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 465, 73 N. W. 1641, 39 L. R. A. 484. See also State v. Chapman, 1 S. D. 414, 47 N. W. 411, 10 L. R. A. 432; Keith v. State, 91 Ala. 2, 8 So. 353, 10 L. R. A. 430. Upon the Constitutional protection of the "original package," see 55 Cent. L. Jour. 342, and 35 Am. L. Rev. 563. For further cases upon interstate commerce, see Fuqua v. Pabst Brewing Co., 90 Tex. 298, 38 S. W. 29, 750, 35 L. R. A. 241; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Taber, 98 Ky. 503, 32 S. W. 138, 33 S. W. 18, 34 L. R. A. 685; Houston Direct Navigation Co. v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 89 Tex. 1, 32 S. W. 830, 30 L. R. A. 718; State v. Wheelock, 95 Iowa, 377, 64 N. W. 620, 30 L. R. A. 420; Hopkins v. Lewis, 84 Iowa, 650, 51 N. W. 255, 15 L. R. A. 397 (original package); Lang v. Lynch, 38 Fed. Rep. 489, 4 L. R. A. 331. After a railroad has stored such liquor in its warehouse for several days, it ceases to be a carrier and becomes amenable to the law. State v. Creedon, 73 Iowa, 556, 43 N. W. 673. See also State v. O'Neil, 53 Vt. 140, 2 Atl. 553; [aff. 144 U. S. 323, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693. A State may not prohibit the sale within its borders of oleomargarine manufactured in another State, so long as such substance is recognized by Congress as a legitimate article of commerce. Schoonenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757. On oleomargarine in original packages, see Re Gooch, 44 Fed. Rep. 275, 19 L. R. A. 830. Nor is it permitted to indirectly accomplish such prohibition by requiring all oleomargarine sold within its borders to be colored pink or otherwise adulterated. Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758. Upon prohibition of sale of oleomargarine, manufacturer intends, at his convenience, to export such liquors to foreign countries or to other States." Lamar, J., p. 24.

¹ Kidd v. Pearson, 125 U. S. 1, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6. "The manufacture of intoxicating liquors in a State is none the less a business within that State, because the

These State laws, known as Prohibitory Liquor Laws, the purpose of which is to prevent altogether the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, so far as legislation can accomplish that object, cannot be held void as in conflict with the fourteenth amendment.¹ And in several cases it has been held that the fact that such laws may tend to prevent or may absolutely preclude the fulfilment of contracts previously made is no objection to their validity.² Any change in the police laws, or indeed in any other laws, might have a like consequence.

The same laws have also been sustained, when the question of conflict with State constitutions, or with general fundamental principles, has been raised. They are looked upon as police regulations established by the legislature for the prevention of intemperance, pauperism, and crime, and for the abatement of nuisances.³ It has also been held competent to declare the liquor see Conn. v. Miller, 181 Pa. 118, 18 Atl. 938, 6 L. R. A. 332, and note. State may prohibit the sale within its borders of adulterated articles designed to defraud the consumer, e. g. oleomargarine colored to imitate butter. Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, aff. 158 Mass. 280, 80 N. E. 1127, 16 L. R. A. 822; see also State v. Capital Cyl. Dairy Co., 62 Ohio. 850, 57 N. E. 62; McCann v. Conn., 198 Pa. 509, 48 Atl. 470; State v. Rogers, 95 Me. 94, 49 Atl. 684. Use of oleomargarine in a soldier's home which is under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress is not subject to control by the State. Ohio v. Thomas, 178 U. S. 279, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.]

¹ If the State so determines, it may forbid the manufacture, sale, and use of liquor as prejudicial to public health, safety, and morals, even though thereby existing property is depreciated in value without compensation. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 278; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6. See also Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97; Prohibitory Am. Cases, 24 Kan. 790; Re Intox. Liquors, 25 Kan. 751, 37 Am. Rep. 284. Nor is permission for sale by druggists, and no others, class legislation. Id. See Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25. [In Noel v. State, 187 Ill. 587, 58 N. E. 616, 52 L. R. A. 287, it is held that a law restricting the sale of patent medicines by others than registered pharmacists was void.]

² People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179. Contracts cannot hamper or impede the State power of police. Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25.

³ Commonwealth v. Kendall, 12 Cosh. 414; Commonwealth v. Clapp, 5 Gray, 97; Commonwealth v. Howe, 18 Gray, 26; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa, 292; Our House v. State, 4 Greene (Iowa), 172; Zumbach v. State, 4 Greene (Iowa), 526; State v. Doney, 8 Iowa, 396; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 479; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244; Jones v. People, 14 Ill. 196; State v. Prescott, 27 Vt. 194; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; Gill v. Parker, 31 Vt. 619. Compare Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 501; Messmer v. State, 11 Ind. 484; Wynhamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378. See State v. Kennedy, 18 R. I. 403, 17 Atl. 51. So of local prohibitory laws. Whitney v. Township Board, 71 Mich. 254, 32 N. W. 40; State v. Berlin, 21 S. C. 222; Burnside v. Lincoln Co. Ct., 86 Ky. 423, 6 S. W. 276; Ex parte Campbell, 74 Cal. 29, 15 Pac. 318. The territories may pass such laws. Terr. v. O'Connor, 5 Dak. 397, 41 N. W. 746; Terr. v. Guyot, 9 Mont. 49, 22 Pac. 134. But the mere keeping of liquor for another cannot be made a crime. State v. Gilman, 33 W. Va. 146, 10 S. E. 284. In Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243, 9 Atl. 384; Lang v. Lynch, 38 Fed. Rep. 489, the State law forbidding suits for the price of liquors sold out kept for sale a nuisance, and to provide legal process for its condemnation and destruction, and to seize and condemn the building occupied as a dram-shop on the same ground.¹ And it is only where, in framing such legislation, care has not been taken to observe those principles of protection which surround the persons and dwellings of individuals, securing them against unreasonable searches and seizures, and giving them a right to trial before condemnation, that the courts have felt at liberty to declare that it exceeded the proper province of police regulation.² Perhaps there is no instance in which the power of the legislature to make such regulations as may destroy the value of property, without compensation to the owner, appears in a more striking light than in the case of these statutes. The trade in alcoholic drinks being lawful, and the capital employed in it being fully protected by law, the legislature then steps in, and by an enactment based on general reasons of public utility, annihilates the traffic, destroys altogether the employment, and reduces to a nominal value the property on hand. Even the keeping of that, for the purposes of sale, becomes a criminal offence; and, without any change whatever in his own conduct or employment, the merchant of yesterday becomes the criminal of to-day, and the very building in which he lives and conducts the business which to that moment was lawful becomes the subject of legal proceedings, if the statute shall so declare, and liable to be proceeded against for a forfeiture.³ A statute which can do this must be of the State to evade the State law, was sustained and applied notwithstanding the contract was valid where made. The general rule is, however, that if the contract is valid where made, it is valid everywhere. See Sortwell v. Hughes, 1 Curtis, 244; Adams v. Coulliard, 102 Mass. 167; Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253; Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Roetike v. Philip Best Brewing Co., 33 Mich. 340; Webber v. Donnelly, 33 Mich. 469; [Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 421, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884.]

¹ American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet. 358; Our House v. State, 4 Greene (Iowa), 172; Lincoln v. Smith, 27 Vt. 328; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Oviatt v. Pond, 29 Conn. 472; State v. Robinson, 33 Maine, 638; License Cases, 5 How. 504; State v. Barrels of Liquor, 47 N. H. 369; Commonwealth v. Intoxicating Liquors, 167 Mass. 396; Pearson v. Distill. Co., 72 Iowa, 348, 34 N. W. 1; Craig v. Werthmuller, 78 Iowa, 598, 43

N. W. 606. A statute providing for the appointment of guardians for drunkards is competent under the police power, and its operation would not be an unlawful deprivation of property. Devin v. Scott, 34 Ind. 67. [Possession of opium without having license therefor may be made a crime. Mon Luck v. Sears, 29 Oreg. 421, 44 Pac. 693, 82 L. R. A. 738.]

² Hibbard v. People, 4 Mich. 125; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 1; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140, 2 Atl. 586; ante, 431, note. Compare Meschmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 484; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378.

³ See Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Kaufman v. Postal, 73 Iowa, 691, 35 N. W. 643; Whitney v. Township Board, 71 Mich. 234, 30 N. W. 40; Tanner v. Alliance, 29 Fed. Rep. 196; Menken v. Atlanta, 73 Ga. 658, 2 S. E. 559. In a number of the States, statutes have recently been passed to make the owners of premises on which traffic in in-justified upon the highest reasons of public benefit; but, whether satisfactory or not, the reasons address themselves exclusively to the legislative wisdom.

Taxing Forbidden Occupations. Questions have arisen in regard to these laws, and other State regulations, arising out of the imposition of burdens on various occupations by Congress, with a view to raising revenue for the national government. These burdens are imposed in the form of what are called license fees; and it has been claimed that, when the party paid the fee, he was thereby licensed to carry on the business, despite the regulations which the State government might make upon the subject. This view, however, has not been taken by the courts, who have regarded the congressional legislation imposing a license fee as only a species of taxation, without the payment of which the business could not lawfully be carried on, but which, nevertheless, did not propose to make any business lawful which was not lawful before, or to relieve it from any burdens or restrictions imposed by the regulations of the State. The licenses give no authority, and are mere receipts for taxes.¹

Other Regulations affecting Commerce. Numerous other illustrations might be given of the power in the States to make regulations affecting commerce, which are sustainable as regulations of police.² Among these, quarantine regulations and health laws toxicating liquors is carried on responsible for all damages occasioned by such traffic. It is believed to be entirely competent for the legislature to pass such statutes. Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509. But whether they can apply in cases where leases have previously been made must be a serious question.

¹ License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462; Purveyor v. Commonwealth, 5 Wall. 475; Commonwealth v. Holbrook, 10 Allen, 200; Black v. Jacksonville, 36 Ill. 301; Terr. v. O'Connor, 5 Dak. 397, 41 N. W. 746; They are not contracts. Martin v. State, 26 Neb. 371, 36 N. W. 554. Nor does their payment preclude enforcement of penalties for selling in the Indian country. United States v. Forty-three Gallons of Whiskey, 108 U. S. 491, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 909. A State may tax a business notwithstanding the State constitution forbids its being licensed. Youghblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 409, 20 Am. Rep. 654. As to when license fees are taxes, see ante, p. 283, and note. State taxation does not forbid further municipal taxation for regulation. Wolf v. Lansing, 53 Mich. 387, 19 N. W. 38; Frankfort v. Aughe, 114 Ind. 77, 15 N. E. 872.

See remarks of Grier, J. in License Cases, 5 How. 504, 632; Meeker v. Van Rensselaer, 15 Wend. 337. A liquor law may annul a previous license, and not be invalid on that ground. See ante, p. 400, note. Under the police power, the dealing in liquors even for lawful purposes may be restricted to persons approved for moral character. In re Ruth, 32 Iowa, 250. Compare People v. Haug, 65 Mich. 549, 37 N. W. 21.

² As to the right to fix rates for railroad transportation, see cases, pp. 872-875, post. [But it is not open to a State to compel "through trains" carrying interstate commerce to stop at every county-seat through which they pass, provided "local trains" furnish ample accommodation for the traffic of such places. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752, rev. 175 Ill. 359, 51 N. E. 842; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, 183 U. S. 142, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1099, rev. 143 Ill. 434, 33 N. E. 173, 19 L. R. A. 119. See, in this of every description will readily suggest themselves, and these are or may be sometimes carried to the extent of ordering the connection, State v. Gladson, 57 Minn. 385, 59 N. W. 487, 24 L. R. A. 502; aff. 193 U. S. 427, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627. Upon regulations of commerce by State laws, see notes to 39 L. ed. U. S. 311, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041, 37 L. ed. U. S. 218, 32 L. ed. U. S. 229, 24 C. C. A. 13, and 13 L. R. A. 107. A State may compel a railroad operating within its limits and engaged in interstate commerce to stop at least three trains each way (if so many run) each day at each town of three thousand or more inhabitants on its line long enough to take on and let off passengers. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465. And it may compel every passenger train whose route lies entirely within the State to stop at every county-seat, even though the train carries mail and its road is a land grant road. Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627, aff. 57 Minn. 385, 59 N. W. 487, 24 L. R. A. 502. A State may make a common carrier contracting to carry property between any two points, whether within or without the State, liable for any injury to such property that may arise through its negligence or that of any connecting carrier to whom it may deliver such property in order to complete the performance of the contract. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann & Smizer, 174 U. S. 580, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755, aff. 133 Mo. 59, 33 S. W. 71, 35 L. R. A. 110. And when the loss or injury occurs beyond the carrier's own line, he may still be made liable "unless within a reasonable time after demand made, he shall give satisfactory proof to the consignor that the loss or injury did not occur while the thing was in his charge." Richmond & A. R. Co. v. Patterson Tobacco Co., 169 U. S. 311, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335. Upon State taxes and penalties as affecting commerce, see Bangor v. Smith, 83 Me. 422, 22 Atl. 379, 13 L. R. A. 683, and note. A State may regulate the extent to which a common carrier may by contract relieve himself from his common-law liabilities. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 134, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289. Upon such contracts, see note to 42 L. ed. U. S. 688, in which the cases are collected. Upon interstate and foreign transportation, see Mo. P. R. Co. v. Stenwood, 84 Tex. 125, 19 S. W. 455, 17 L. R. A. 643, and note; and as to whether shipments between two points within the same State can ever be interstate commerce, see Houston D. Nav. Co. v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 89 Tex. 1, 32 S. W. 883, 30 L. R. A. 713. In the absence of Congressional regulation, a State may prohibit the running of all freight-trains (including interstate) on Sunday. Hennington v. Georgia, 133 U. S. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086, aff. 90 Ga. 376, 17 S. E. 1009. State may prohibit the consolidation of parallel and competing lines. Pearson v. Grt. N. R. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, and Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714, aff. 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476. May by penalty in the absence of Congressional regulation enforce the delivery of telegrams to addresses within its borders. W. U. Tel. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634, aff. 40 Ga. 254, 17 S. E. 83; but not beyond its borders. W. U. Tel. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126, 1 Inters. Com. R. 306. State may make it an offence to have in one's possession game intended to be shipped beyond the borders of the State, such game having been killed within the State, even though within the open season. Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 619, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, aff. 61 Ct. 144, 22 Atl. 1012, 13 L. R. A. 894, 3 Inters. Com. R. 782. Upon relation between State police power and Federal commerce power, see note to 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041. State may regulate the fisheries within a marine league of its shores. Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559. In the absence of Congressional regulation, a State may make it an offence to solicit a seaman to desert from any vessel within its jurisdiction. Re Young, 36 Oreg. 247, 59 Pac. 707, 48 L. R. A. 153; Handel v. Chaplin, 111 Ga. 800, 36 S. E. 979, 51 L. R. A. 720. State may absolutely prohibit sale within its borders of specified kinds of game and fish during specified seasons of year. People v. O'Neil, 110 Mich. 324, 28 N. W. 227, 33 L. R. A. 696. May make it a criminal offence to send money outside destruction of private property when infected with disease or otherwise dangerous.¹ These regulations have generally passed

the State to be waged upon a horse-race. Ex parte Lacy, 93 Va. 159, 24 S. E. 930, 31 L. R. A. 822. May make interstate telegraph company responsible for negligence within the State in transmission of interstate message. W. U. Tel. Co. v. Howell, 95 Ga. 134, 22 S. E. 280, 39 L. R. A. 158. Where corporation derives its franchise from the State it is subject to State law in regard to exempting itself by contract from liabilities of common carrier, even though the contract relates to interstate commerce. St. Jos. & G. H. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 403, 55 N. W. 957, 22 L. R. A. 335. State may regulate pressure of natural gas transported through pipes to other States. Jameson v. Indiana N. Gas & Oil Co., 128 Ind. 553, 28 N. E. 76, 12 L. R. A. 552. But cannot forbid its exportation. State v. Indiana & O. Oil & M. Co., 129 Ind. 575, 22 N. E. 778, 6 L. R. A. 579, and note. For other cases upon State laws and interstate commerce, see Barrows v. Delta Transportation Co., 103 Mich. 582, 64 N. W. 501, 29 L. R. A. 468; State v. W. U. Tel. Co., 113 N. C. 213, 18 S. E. 289, 22 L. R. A. 570; State v. Indiana & I. S. R. Co., 153 Ind. 59, 32 N. E. 817, 18 L. R. A. 502; Re Sanders, 52 Fed. Rep. 802, 18 L. R. A. 549; Mo. Pac. R. Co. v. Sherwood, 84 Tex. 125, 14 S. W. 456, 17 L. R. A. 643, and note; Dwyer v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co., 75 Tex. 572, 12 S. W. 1001, 7 L. R. A. 478, and cases cited note 1, post, 854. Agent of non-resident organ company who travels with an organ, selling it when he can or taking orders for others and delivering them when received, is engaged in interstate commerce and not liable to State peddler's tax. French v. State. — Tex. Crim. App. —, 58 S. W. 1015, 52 L. R. A. 190. Goods manufactured in another State to fill orders taken by traveling salesman, and shipped into the State, consigned to the maker, and delivered by the agent to the person ordering, are the subject of interstate commerce, and the agent cannot be subjected to a State license tax in the State where delivered. Wyoming v. Williamson, 9 Wyo. 200, 22 Pac. 7-7, 52 L. R. A. 108. See also Adkins v. Richmond, 68 Va. 91, 34 S. E. 967, 81 Am. St. 705, 47 L. R. A. 583.]

¹ It is usual, either by general law or by municipal charters, to confer very extensive powers upon local boards of health, under which, when acting in good faith, they may justify themselves in taking possession of, parading, or even destroying the buildings or other property of the citizen, when the public health or comfort demands such strong measures. See Harrison v. Baltimore, 1 Gil., 264; Van Wormer v. Albany, 15 Wend. 262; Coe v. Shultz, 47 Barb. 34; Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80. [Hurst v. Warner, 102 Mich. 238, 60 N. W. 440, 23 L. R. A. 484, and see also note in L. R. A. upon quarantine regulations by health authorities. See also Rasmussen v. Idaho, 181 U. S. 198, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, aff. — Idaho, —, 50 Pac. 903, 52 L. R. A. 78. State may regulate the heating apparatus used in passenger cars, and may exempt from such regulations railroad lines less than fifty miles long. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 828, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. But a State cannot compel a railroad company to furnish double-decked cars for sheep shipped in interstate commerce, nor can it regulate the transportation charges on such shipments. Stanley v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 190 Mo. 435, 13 S. W. 706, 8 L. R. A. 549. A statute of Louisiana empowered the State Board of Health to exclude healthy persons from entering localities where disease was prevalent, whether coming from within or without the State. The question was raised by the Board refusing emigrants from France a landing. The authority was upheld. Compagnie Francaise v. Louisiana St. Bd. of Health, 186 U. S. 389, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811. See 34 Am. L. Rev. 722.]

They may forbid offensive trades being carried on in populous districts. Ex parte Sander, 33 Cal. 273; Metropolitan Board v. Heister, 37 N. Y. 391; Live Stock, &c. Association v. Crescent City, &c. Co., 15 Wall. 36; Wynneamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Coe v. Shultz, 47 Barb. 34; Ashbrook v. Commonwealth, 1 Bush, 139; Taunton v. Taylor, 156 Mass. 254; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659; Dillon Mun. Corp. v. 35; Potter's Dwarfs on Stat. 468. See State v. Board of Health, 16 Mo. App. 8. The disinfec-unchallenged. The right to pass inspection laws, and to levy duties so far as may be necessary to render them effectual, is also undoubted, and is expressly recognized by the Constitution.¹

tion of all imported rags at the expense of the shipper may be required. Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co., 144 Mass. 523, 11 N. E. 929. [State may prohibit the bringing in of cattle affected with contagious disease (Texas fever), and may make a shipper and carrier liable for all loss arising from importation of such cattle. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488, 878, aff. 50 Kan. 634, 44 Pac. 632. See, upon Texas cattle acts, Grimes v. Eddy, 126 Mo. 198, 28 S. W. 753, 26 L. R. A. 638, and note. See also Habo v. Rasmussen, — Idaho, —, 59 Pac. 933, 52 L. R. A. 78, aff. 181 U. S. 198, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, and Smith v. St. Louis & S. W. Ry. Co., 181 U. S. 248, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603, aff. 20 Tex. Civ. App. 451, 49 S. W. 627. This last case is authority for the general doctrine that reasonable quarantine regulations of the State do not conflict with the power of the federal government to regulate commerce.] That the business is lawful in itself, and proper to be carried on somewhere, is no objection to the regulation. Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315; Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25.

If they forbid the keeping of swine in certain parts of a city, their regulations will be presumed reasonable and needful. Commonwealth v. Patch, 97 Mass. 221, citing with approval Pierce v. Bartrum, Cowp. 249. And though they cannot be vested with authority to decide finally upon one's right to property when they proceed to interfere with it as constituting a danger to health, yet they are vested with quasi-judicial power in deciding upon what constitutes a nuisance, and all presumptions favor their actions. See Van Warner v. Albany, 15 Wend. 262; Kennedy v. Phelps, 10 La. Ann. 227; Metropolitan Board v. Heister, 37 N. Y. 621; Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 89. And they may unquestionably be vested with very large power to establish pest-houses, and make very stringent regulations to prevent the spread of contagious diseases. As to the power of the public authorities to establish a public slaughter-house, or to require all slaughtering of beasts to be done at one establishment, see Milwaukee v. Gross, 21 Wis. 241; Live Stock, &c. Association v. Crescent City, &c. Co., 16 Wall. 38. Compare, as to right to establish monopolies, Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344. [A State cannot require all sheep to be dipped before being brought within its borders, without regard to whether they are diseased or not. State v. Duckworth, — Idaho, —, 51 Pac. 456, 39 L. R. A. 365.] The license of a board of health is not a defence to an indictment for a nuisance. Garrett v. State, 49 N. J. L. 94, 7 Atl. 25.

A regulation forbidding the growing of rice within a city, on the ground of injurious effect upon health, was held valid in Green v. Savannah, 6 Ga. 1. [Bowlers may be required to be furnished upon dry emery wheels. People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 527, 66 N. W. 382, 32 L. R. A. 856, and upon power to protect health of employees, see note hereto in L. R. A. Orders of boards of health must be reasonable, and an order prohibiting all persons until further order from getting off any train or boat within the State is void, though made as a quarantine regulation against yellow fever prevalent in some places, because applicable as well to persons from non-infected as from infected districts. Wilson v. Alabama G. S. Ry. Co., 77 Miss. 714, 28 So. 667, 52 L. R. A. 357. See on compulsory vaccination, 4 Law Notes, 224, 54 Cent. L. Jour. 351.]

¹ Art. 1, § 10, clause 2. See Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Hospes v. O'Brien, 24 Fed. Rep. 145. A prohibition of the sale of meat unless inspected by State officers twenty-four hours before the slaughter of the animal is void as excluding dressed beef brought from other States. Minnesota v. Barber, 135 U. S. 313, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Swift v. Sutphin, 39 Fed. Rep. 630; In re Christian, Id. 636; Ex parte Kieffer, 49 Fed. Rep. 340. [A State may prohibit the sale within its borders of fertilizers and fertilizing materials that have not been officially inspected, and may collect a reasonable charge for inspection by its official inspector. A charge of 25 cents

But certain powers which still more directly affect commerce may sometimes be exercised where the purpose is not to interfere with congressional legislation, but merely to regulate the times and manner of transacting business with a view to facilitate trade, secure order, and prevent confusion.

An act of the State of New York declared that the harbor-masters appointed under the State laws should have authority to regulate and station all ships and vessels in the stream of the East and North rivers, within the limits of the city of New York, and the wharves thereof, and to remove from time to time such vessels as were not employed in receiving and discharging their cargoes to make room for such others as required to be more immediately accommodated, for the purpose of receiving and discharging theirs; and that the harbor-masters or either of them should have authority to determine how far and in what instances it was the duty of the masters and others, having charge of ships or vessels, to accommodate each other in their respective situations; and it imposed a penalty for refusing or neglecting to obey the directions of the harbor-masters or either of them. In a suit brought against the master of a steam vessel, who had refused to move his vessel a certain distance as directed by one of the harbor-masters, in order to accommodate a new arrival, it was insisted on the defence that the act was an unconstitutional invasion of the power of Congress over commerce, but it was sustained as being merely a regulation prescribing the manner of exercising individual rights over property employed in commerce.¹

a ton for such inspection is not unreasonable. Patapasco Guano Co. v. Board of Agr. of N. C., 171 U. S. 346, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862. Upon State inspection laws, see note to 11 L. R. A. 179. But power of inspection cannot be made a pretext for discrimination against products of other States. Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 62, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855; Brimmer v. Reisman, 138 U. S. 79, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213. Nor can it embarrass interstate commerce by its police regulations and inspection laws, even though such are expressly applicable to its domestic commerce also. Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862. A State cannot require convict-made goods brought from other States to be so marked. People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 1, 51 N. E. 267, 42 L. R. A. 460.]

¹ Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 349, 351. Woodworth, J., in this case, states very clearly the principle on which police regulations, in such cases, are sustainable: "It seems to me the power exercised in this case is essentially necessary for the purpose of protecting the rights of all concerned. It is not, in the legitimate sense of the term, a violation of any right, but the exercise of a power indispensably necessary, where an extensive commerce is carried on. If the harbor is crowded with vessels arriving daily from foreign parts, the power is incident to such a state of things. Disorder and confusion would be the consequence, if there was no control. . . . The right assumed under the law would not be upheld, if exerted beyond what may be considered a necessary police regulation. The line between what would be a clear invasion of right on the one hand, and regulations not lessening the value of the right, and calculated for the benefit of all, must be distinctly marked. . . . Police regulations are legal and binding, because for

The line of distinction between that which constitutes an interference with commerce, and that which is a mere police regulation, is sometimes exceedingly dim and shadowy, and it is not to be wondered at that learned jurists differ when endeavoring to classify the cases which arise. It is not doubted that Congress has the power to go beyond the general regulations of commerce which it is accustomed to establish, and to descend to the most minute directions, if it shall be deemed advisable;¹ and that to whatever extent ground shall be covered by those directions, the exercise of State power is excluded. Congress may establish police regulations, as well as the States; confining their operation to the subject over which it is given control by the Constitution.² But as the general police power can better be exercised the general benefit, and do not proceed to the length of impairing any right, in the proper sense of that term. The sovereign power in a community, therefore, may and ought to prescribe the manner of exercising individual rights over property. It is for the better protection and enjoyment of that absolute dominion which the individual claims. The power rests on the implied right and duty of the supreme power to protect and by statutory regulations; so that, on the whole, the benefit of all is promoted. Every public regulation in a city may, and does in some sense, limit and restrict the absolute right that existed previously. But this is not considered as an injury. So far from it, the individual, as well as others, is supposed to be benefited. It may, then, be said that such a power is incident to every well-regulated society, and without which it could not well exist." See Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. 299; Owners of the James Gray v. Owners of the John Frazer, 21 How. 184; Benedict v. Netherbolt, 1 Robertson, 184; Steamship Co. v. Jaffe, 2 Wall. 450; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572; Port Wardens v. The Ward, 14 La. Ann. 289; Graham v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 731; Cisco v. Roberts, 36 N. Y. 202. [State may require all coal-boats and barges to be gauged, and may appoint official gaugers and prescribe their fees. Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 150 U. S. 550, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.]

¹ Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 216, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

² See, for the distinction between the general regulation of commerce, which is under the exclusive control of Congress, and the local regulations which are mere aids to commerce, and are generally left to the States, Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, per Field, J., and cases, pp. 688-691, ante. [And see Harmon v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 395, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466, and note thereto in 37 L. ed. U. S. 216. State may require intersecting railroads to establish facilities for interchange of traffic at junction points, and to establish joint rates via such points, even though interstate commerce be thereby affected. Wisconsin M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 175 U. S. 287, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113, aff. 71 Minn. 519, 74 N. W. 883, 40 L. R. A. 389. A statute of the State of Kentucky with a long and short haul provision was held to apply to commerce within the State and not to contravene the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, though the enforcement of the statute might in some measure affect commerce generally. But this effect is incidental, not direct. "Interference with the commercial power of the general government to be unlawful must be direct and not merely the incidental effect of the enforcement of the police power of the State." Louisville & N. Ry. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95, and cases cited in the opinion. The statute construed in Louisville & N. Ry. Co. v. Kentucky, just cited, was before the Federal Supreme Court again in Louisville & N. Ry. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, in which it is held that as applied to interstate commerce the statute is invalid.] A State under the supervision of the local authority, and mischiefs are not likely to spring therefrom so long as the power to arrest collision resides in the national courts, the regulations which are made by Congress do not often exclude the establishment of others by the State covering very many particulars. Moreover, the regulations of commerce are usually, and in some cases must be, general and uniform for the whole country; while in some localities, State and local policy will demand peculiar regulations with reference to special and peculiar circumstances.

The State of Maryland passed an act requiring all importers of foreign goods, by the bale or package, &c., to take out a license, for which they should pay fifty dollars, and, in case of neglect or refusal to take out such license, subjected them to certain forfeitures and penalties. License laws are of two kinds: those which require the payment of a license fee by way of raising a revenue, and are therefore the exercise of the power of taxation; and those which are mere police regulations, and require the payment only of such license fee as will cover the expense of the license and of enforcing the regulation.¹ The Maryland act seems to fall properly within the former of these classes, and it was held void as in conflict with that provision of the Constitution which prohibits a State from laying any impost, &c., and also with the clause which declares that Congress shall have the power to regulate commerce. The reasoning of the court was this: Sale is the object of all importation of goods, and the power to allow importation must therefore imply the power to authorize the sale of the thing imported; that consequently a penalty inflicted for selling an article in the character of importer was in opposition to the act of Congress, which authorized importation; that a power to tax an article in the hands of the importer the instant it was landed was the same in effect as a power to tax it whilst entering the port; that consequently the law of Maryland was obnoxious to the law may require all locomotive engineers to be examined and licensed, even those engaged in inter-state transportation. Such a law imposes no burden upon inter-state commerce, and is valid in the absence of Congressional regulation. Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564. The same principle applies to an act requiring an examination of railroad employees for color blindness, to be paid for by the railroad company. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28. Contra, as to payment by the company. Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v.

Baldwin, 55 Ala. 519, 5 So. 311. Sunday trains may be forbidden by a State. State v. Railroad Co., 24 W. Va. 753. See also W. U. Tel. Co. v. Mayer, 38 Fed. Rep. 352. [A bridge spanning the Ohio river at Cincinnati and Covington is an instrument of inter-state commerce, and neither Ohio nor Kentucky has power to fix the tolls to be demanded for passage over it. Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.

¹ Ash v. People, 11 Mich. 347. See ante, p. 283. Also Dillon, Mon. Corp. §§ 291-294, and notes.

charge of unconstitutionality, on the ground of its violating the two provisions referred to.¹ And a State law which required the master of every vessel engaged in foreign commerce to pay a certain sum to a State officer, on account of every passenger brought from a foreign country into the State, or before landing any alien passenger, was held void for similar reasons.² Nor can a State forbid the conduction from it of natural gas in pipes.³

On the other hand, a law of the State of New York was sustained which required, under a penalty, that the master of every vessel arriving from a foreign port should report to the mayor or recorder of the city of New York an account of his passengers; the object being to prevent New York from being burdened by an influx of persons brought thither in ships from foreign countries and the other States, and to that end to require a report of the names, places of birth, &c., of all passengers, that the necessary steps might be taken by the city authorities to prevent them from becoming chargeable as paupers.⁴ And a State regulation of pilots and pilotage was held unobjectionable, though it was conceded that Congress had full power to make regulations on the same subject, which, however, it had not exercised.⁵ These several

¹ Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419. See Tieman v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123, and cases pp. 688-691, 848, ante. A State cannot enforce a penalty upon a telegraph company for failure to deliver a message sent from it to another State. Western U. Tel. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1128. That a penalty may be imposed upon one selling from the original package oleomargarine colored to deceive, though brought from another State, such sale being prohibited by local law, see Waterbury v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 634, 14 Atl. 604; [Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, and see French v. State, — Tex. Cr. App. —, 58 S. W. 1015, 52 L. R. A. 160; State v. Willingham, 8 Wyo. 290, 62 Pac. 797, 52 L. R. A. 198].

² Passenger Cases, 7 How. 288; People v. Compagnie Gén., 107 U. S. 52, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247. See also Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 584, where a State law imposing a special tax on every Chinese person over eighteen years of age for each month of his residence in the State was held unconstitutional, as in conflict with the power of Congress over commerce. In Canada, provincial legislation on commerce is void; the authority being with the Dominion Parliament. Severn v. The Queen, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. (Ont.) 70.

³ State v. Indiana & O. G. & M. Co., 120 Ind. 575, 22 N. E. 778; [Manufacturer's Gas & Oil Co. v. Indiana Natural Gas & O. Co., 156 Ind. 679, 69 N. E. 169, 60 N. E. 1080, 63 L. R. A. 134].

⁴ City of New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 132. See also State v. The Constitution, 42 Cal. 578. [But an act which requires a carrier who brings into the State a non-resident, who within one year thereafter becomes a pauper, to remove him if so requested by the State officers, or to pay for his support, is void. Bangor v. Smith, 83 Me. 422, 22 Atl. 379, 18 L. R. A. 686, and note.]

⁵ Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. 299. See Barnaby v. State, 21 Ind. 450; Steamship Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 460; Cisco v. Roberts, 86 N. Y. 292; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572. As to State control of harbors, see Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691. [Until Congress acts in the matter, there is no Federal objection to a city's regulation of the speed of railway trains (even when they are engaged in inter-state commerce) within the city

cases, and the elaborate discussions with which the decisions in each were accompanied, together with the leading case of Gibbons v. Ogden,¹ may be almost said to exhaust the reasoning upon the subject, and to leave little to be done by those who follow beyond the application of such rules for classification as they have indicated.

Sunday Laws. We have elsewhere referred to cases in which laws requiring all persons to refrain from their ordinary callings on the first day of the week have been held not to encroach upon the religious liberty of those citizens who do not observe that day as sacred. Neither are they unconstitutional as a restraint upon trade and commerce, or because they have the effect to destroy the value of a lease of property to be used on that day, or to make void a contract for Sunday services.² There can no longer be any question, if any there ever was, that such laws may be supported as regulations of police.³ limits. Erb. v. Morasch, 177 U. S. 584, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819. But a city cannot levy a license tax upon tugs engaged in towing vessels engaged in inter-state commerce. Harmon v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 398, 13 Sup. Ct. 306; and see note to this case in 37 L. ed. U. S. 216, upon State control of inter-state commerce.]

¹ 9 Wheat. 1. And see Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 718.

² Lindenmuller v. People, 33 Barb. 648. Forbidding Sunday transportation of freight is not void though incidentally affecting inter-state traffic. State v. Railroad Co., 24 W. Va. 783. [This in the absence of Congressional regulation. Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086, aff. 90 Ga. 343, 17 S. E. 1909. See also Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com., 93 Va. 749, 24 S. E. 837, 34 L. R. A. 105; Dugan v. State, 125 Ind. 139, 25 N. E. 171, 9 L. R. A. 321.] And see Ex parte Andrews, 18 Cal. 678; Ex parte Bird, 19 Cal. 139; ante, p. 686, and notes.

³ Specht v. Commonwealth, 8 Pa. St. 312; Commonwealth v. Jeandelle, 2 Grant, 506; City Council v. Benjamin, 2 Strob. 508; State v. Amba, 29 Mo. 214; St. Louis v. Cafferata, 24 Mo. 94; Kurtz v. People, 33 Mich. 279; Vogelsohn v. State, 9 Ind. 112; Schliet v. State, 31 Ind. 245; Foltz v. State, 33 Ind. 215; Shover v. State, 10 Ark. 259; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387; Lindenmuller v. People, 33 Barb. 648; Ex parte Andrews,

18 Cal. 678; Ex parte Bird, 19 Cal. 139; Hudson v. Geary, 4 R. I. 485; Frolickstein v. Mobile, 40 Ala. 723; State v. Barker, 18 Vt. 105; Commonwealth v. Colton, 8 Gray, 488; Commonwealth v. Hyneman, 101 Mass. 30; Commonwealth v. Has, 122 Mass. 40; Augusta & C. R. R. Co. v. Renz, 55 Ga. 126; [State v. Hogriever, 152 Ind. 632, 58 N. E. 921, 45 L. R. A. 504 (prohibiting playing baseball where fee is charged); State v. Powell, 58 Ohio St. 224, 50 N. E. 360, 41 L. R. A. 864 (prohibiting playing baseball)] The statutes forbidding ordinary employments on Sunday make exceptions for cases of necessity and charity. The execution of a will is not "work, labor, or business," and therefore not forbidden by the Sunday laws. Bennet v. Brooks, 9 Allen, 118; George v. George, 47 N. H. 27. As to what are works of necessity or charity, see Stanton v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 14 Allen, 455; McClary v. Lowell, 44 Vt. 116; Logan v. Matthews, 6 Pa. St. 417; Connolly v. Boston, 117 Mass. 64, 19 Am. Ren. 546; Yonaski v. State (Ind.), 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 40, and note, p. 42, where the authorities are collected; Commonwealth v. Louisville & C. R. R. Co., 80 Ky. 291; Stone v. Graves, 145 Mass. 335, 13 N. E. 903; Com. v. Marzynski, 149 Mass. 68, 21 N. E. 228; Ungericht v. State, 119 Ind. 319, 21 N. E. 1082; Hennersdorf v. State, 25 Tex. App. 597, 8 S. W. 926; Nelson v. State, 25 Tex. App. 599, 8 S. W. 927;

Law of the Road. The highways within and through a State are constructed by the State itself, which has full power to provide all proper regulations of police to govern the action of persons using them, and to make from time to time such alterations in these ways as the proper authorities shall deem proper.¹ A very common regulation is that parties meeting shall turn to the right; the propriety of which none will question. So the speed of travel may be regulated with a view to safe use and general protection, and to prevent a public nuisance.² So beasts may be prohibited from running at large, under the penalty of being seized and sold.³ And it has been held competent under the same power to require the owners of urban property to construct and keep in repair and free from obstructions the sidewalks in front of it, and in case of their failure to do so to authorize the public authorities to do it at the expense of the property,⁴ the courts distinguishing this from

Handy v. St. Paul, &c. Pub. Co., 41 Minn. 188, 42 N. W. 872; Spiane v. Com., — Pa. St. —, 12 Atl. 431; [Petit v. Minnesota, 177 U. S. 164, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, and note on "Constitutionality of statutes making it unlawful for barbers to carry on their business on Sunday," in 44 L. ed. U. S. 718. See also People v. Bellet, 90 Mich. 151, 57 N. W. 1094; 22 L. R. A. 676; Judeford v. State, 75 Md. 610, 28 Atl. 495; 22 L. R. A. 721, and note; Quarles v. State, 55 Ark. 10, 17 S. W. 299, 14 L. R. A. 112, and note; Com. v. Waldman, 140 Pa. 89, 21 Atl. 248, 11 L. R. A. 573; Ex parte Kennedy, — Tex. Cr. —, 58 S. W. 921, 51 L. R. A. 270.]

¹ As to the right to change the grade of a street from time to time without liability to parties incidentally injured, see ante, p. 235.

² Commonwealth v. Worcester, 8 Pick. 492; Commonwealth v. Stodder, 2 Cush. 592; Day v. Green, 4 Cush. 433; People v. Jenkins, 1 Hill. 459; People v. Roe, 1 Ill. 470; Washington v. Nashville, 1 Swan. 177; State v. Feley, 31 Iowa, 527; [State may regulate the placing of electric wires in streets and subways. New York v. Squire, 145 U. S. 173, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889, aff. 167 N. Y. 508, 14 N. E. 820, 14 Daly, 154, 165.]

³ McKee v. McKee, 8 B. Monr. 433; Municipality v. Blanc, 1 La. Ann. 385; Whitfield v. Longest, 3 Irel. 268; Gosselink v. Campbell, 4 Iowa. 236; Roberts v. Ogle, 50 Ill. 459; Commonwealth v. Curtis, 9 Allen, 205; Brophy v. Hyatt, 10

Col. 223, 15 Pac. 399; [Haigh v. Bell, 41 W. Va. 19, 23 S. E. 695, 31 L. R. A. 131.] This applies to beasts of non-residents. Mayor of Cartersville v. Latham, 67 Ga. 753; Rose v. Hardie, 98 N. C. 44, 4 S. E. 41. The payment of a fine by the owner cannot be required as a condition of their release, under general charter power of this kind. Whitox v. Henning, 58 Wis. 144, 15 N. W. 435.

⁴ Godard, Petitioner, 16 Pick. 504; Bonsall v. Mayor of Lebanon, 19 Ohio, 418; Paxson v. Sweet, 1 Green (N. J.) 159; Lowell v. Hadley, 8 Met. 180; Washington v. Mayor, &c. of Nashville, 1 Swan. 177; Mayor, &c. v. Maberry, 6 Hunn. 398; Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 274, 309, per Christman, J.; Matter of Dorance St., 4 R. I. 239; Dellois v. Barker, 4 R. I. 445; Hart v. Brooklyn, 56 Barb. 226; Sands v. Richmond, 31 Gratt. 571, 31 Am. Rep. 742; Palmer v. Way, 6 Col. 106. And see Macon v. Patty, 57 Miss. 378, 34 Am. Rep. 451; Smith v. Kingston, 120 Pa. St. 357, 14 Atl. 170. In Minnesota this right is exercised under the taxing power. Hennepin Co. v. Bartleson, 27 Minn. 343, 14 N. W. 222. In Arkansas the duty may be enforced by a fine. James v. Pine Bluff, 45 Ark. 199, 4 S. W. 730. Compare Port Huron v. Jackson, 77 Mich. 414, 43 N. W. 923. In Pennsylvania it has been held competent to require the owners of city lots, in front of which sewers are constructed, to pay the expense thereof in proportion to the street front. Philadelphia v. Tryon, 35 taxation, on the ground of the peculiar interest which those upon whom the duty is imposed have in its performance, and their peculiar power and ability to perform it with the promptness which the good of the community requires.¹

Navigable Waters. Navigable waters are also a species of public highway, and as such come under the control of the States. The term "navigable," at the common law, was only applied to those waters where the tide ebbed and flowed, but all streams which were of sufficient capacity for useful navigation, though not called navigable, were public, and subject to the same general rights which the public exercised in highways by land.² In this country there has been a very general disposition to consider all streams public which are useful as channels for commerce wherever they are found of sufficient capacity to float to market the products of the mines, of the forests, or of the tillage of the country through which they flow.³ And if a stream is of sufficient capacity for the floating of rafts and logs in the condition in which it generally appears by nature, it will be regarded as public, notwithstanding there may be times when it becomes too dry and shallow for the purpose. "The capacity of a stream, which generally appears by the nature, amount, importance, and necessity of the business

Pa. St. 401; Stroud v. Philadelphia, 61 Pa. St. 255. And see Boston v. Shaw, 1 Met. 150; Hildreth v. Lowell, 11 Gray, 845; Cone v. Hartford, 28 Conn. 363; State v. Jersey City, 5 Dutch 441. [And a street-railway company may be required to pave the street for a reasonable width along its tracks, even though the power to make such requirement was not reserved when the company was authorized to occupy the streets with its tracks, Sioux City St. R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Storrie v. Houston City St. R. Co., 92 Tex. 123, 46 S. W. 703, 44 L. R. A. 716. Upon liability of street-railways for paving assessments, see note to 46 L. R. A. 193.]

¹ See especially the case of Godard, Petitioner, 15 Pick. 504, for a clear and strong statement of the grounds on which such legislation can be supported. Also Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 837; Cooley on Taxation, 398. In Illinois it seems not to be competent to compel the building of sidewalks or the keeping of them free of snow by the owners of abutting lots under the police power. Ottawa v. Spencer, 40 Ill. 211; Gridley v. Bloomington, 88 Ill. 554, 30 Am. Rep. 566. [Likewise in New Hampshire. State v. Jackman, 69 N. H. 318, 41 Ath. 347, 42 L. R. A. 438.]

² Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18; Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. 277.

³ Brown v. Chadbourne, 51 Me. 9; Knox v. Chalmers, 42 Me. 150; Lancey v. Clifford, 54 Me. 487; Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 253; Scott v. Wilson, 3 N. H. 321; Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. 236; Munson v. Hungerford, 6 Barb. 205; Browne v. Seofield, 8 Barb. 239; Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. 284, 30 Barb. 9, and 35 N. Y. 454; Cates v. Wadlington, 1 McCord. 580; Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. 199; Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 519; Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18; Depew v. Board of Commissioners, &c., 5 Ind. 8; Board of Commissioners v. Pilge, 5 Ind. 13; Stuart v. Clark, 2 Swan, 9; Elder v. Barnes, 6 Humph. 378; Dalrymple v. Mead, 1 Grant's Cases, 197; Commissioners of Homochitto River v. Withers, 29 Miss. 21; Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 678; Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 450; Little Rock, M. &c. Ry. Co. v. Brooks, 33 Ark. 463; McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa, 1; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445, 8 Am. Rep. 621.

done upon it, must be the criterion. A brook, although it might carry down saw-logs for a few days, during a freshet, is not therefore a public highway. But a stream upon which and its tributaries saw-logs to an unlimited amount can be floated every spring, and for the period of from four to eight weeks, and for the distance of one hundred and fifty miles, and upon which unquestionably many thousands will be annually transported for many years to come, if it be legal so to do, has the character of a public stream for that purpose. So far the purpose is useful for trade and commerce, and to the interests of the community. The floating of logs is not mentioned by Lord Hale [in De Jure Maris], and probably no river in Great Britain was, in his day, or ever will be, put to that use. But here it is common, necessary, and profitable, especially while the country is new; and if it be considered a lawful mode of using the river, it is easy to adapt well-settled principles of law to the case. And they are not the less applicable because this particular business may not always continue; though if it can of necessity last but a short time, and the river can be used for no other purpose, that circumstance would have weight in the consideration of the question."¹ But if the stream was not thus useful in its natural condition, but has been rendered susceptible of use by the labors of the owner of the soil, the right of passage will be in the nature of a private way, and the public do not acquire a right to the benefit of the owner's labor, unless he sees fit to dedicate it to their use.²

All navigable waters are for the use of all the citizens; and there cannot lawfully be any exclusive private appropriation of any portion of them.³ The question what is a navigable stream

¹ Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. 288; Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 519; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; Weise v. Smith, 8 Oreg. 445, 8 Am. Rep. 621; Bucki v. Cone, 25 Fla. 1, 6 So. 160; Gaston v. Mace, 33 W. Va. 14, 10 S. E. 60. Compare Hubbard v. Bell, 54 Ill. 110; Haire v. Hall, 17 Oreg. 165, 20 Pac. 831. [That a State may create boom companies, authorize them to improve waterways and to take tolls for floating logs through them in booms, even though such regulations indirectly affect inter-state commerce (there being no Congressional regulations hereon), and compel such companies to submit to official inspection of their booms and to pay for such inspection, see Lindsay & P. Co. v. Muller, 176 U. S. 129, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326. Whether a log boom corresponds to the requirements of a State statute authorizing log booms, and is thus exempt from the general prohibition of obstructions "not affirmatively authorized by law," as contained in the river and harbor act of 1890, is a Federal question. United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., 176 U. S. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343. Upon obstruction of navigable streams by log booms, see note attached to this case in 44 L. ed. U. S. 437.]

² Wadsworth's Adm'r v. Smith, 11 Me. 278; Ward v. Warner, 8 Mich. 508.

³ Commonwealth v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. 180; Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. 432; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. 1; Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts, 434. One cannot acquire a prescriptive right to impede floatage. Collins v. Howard, 65 N. H. 190, 18 Atl. 794. They are equally for the use of the pub-

would seem to be a mixed question of law and fact;¹ and though it is said that the legislature of the State may determine whether a stream shall be considered a public highway or not,² yet if in fact it is not one, the legislature cannot make it so by simple declaration, since, if it is private property, the legislature cannot appropriate it to a public use without providing for compensation.³

The general right to control and regulate the public use of navigable waters is unquestionably in the State; but there are certain restrictions upon this right growing out of the power of Congress over commerce. Congress is empowered to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States; and wherever a river forms a highway upon which commerce is conducted with foreign nations or between States, it must fall under the control of Congress, under this power over commerce. (a) The circumstance, however, that a stream is navigable, and capable of being used for foreign or inter-state commerce, does not exclude regulation by the State, if in fact Congress has not exercised its power in regard to it;⁴ or having exercised it, the State law does lie in the winter when covered with ice; and one who cuts a hole in the ice in an accustomed way, by means of which one passing upon the ice is injured, has been held liable to an action for the injury. French v. Camp, 18 Me. 433. But this rule is now modified, at least as to the Penobscot at Bangor, upon the ground that the right of ice harvesting is at such a place superior to that of travel. Woodman v. Pitman, 79 Me. 456, 10 Atl. 321. An obstruction to a navigable stream is a nuisance which any one having occasion to use it may abate. Inhabitants of Arundel v. McCulloch, 10 Mass. 70; State v. Moffett, 1 Greene (Iowa), 247; Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 38; Larson v. Furlong, 63 Wis. 323, 23 N. W. 584.

¹ See Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445, 8 Am. Rep. 621; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 88, 5 So. 663.

² Glover v. Powell, 10 N. J. Eq. 211; American River Water Co. v. Amsden, 6 Cal. 443; Baker v. Lewis, 83 Pa. St. 801.

³ Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. 284, 35 N. Y. 454.

⁴ Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245. In this case it was held that a State law permitting a creek navigable from the sea to be dammed so as to exclude vessels altogether, was not opposed to the Constitution of the United States, there being no legislation by Congress with which it would come in conflict. And see Wheeling Bridge Case, 13 How. 518, and 18 How. 421. By the ordinance of 1787 and the enabling acts passed at the admission of several States, it was provided that navigable waters within them should be "common highways and forever free." This has been not come in conflict with the congressional regulations, or interfere with the rights which are permitted by them.

(a) [Permission granted by Congress to use waters for irrigation of arid lands and in aid of mining industry, does not include right to use waters above point of navigability to such an extent as seriously to interfere with navigability below that point. United States v. Rio Grande Dam & L. Co., 174 U. S. 690, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, rev. 9 N. M. 292, 61 Pac. 674. But subject to such qualification, the rights of riparian owners are determined by the State law. St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. Bd. of Water Comm'rs, 168 U. S. 349, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. Where the waters are capable of navigation only between points within the State, the State control is complete. Com. v. King, 150 Mass. 221, 22 N. E. 905, 5 L. R. A. 598. State may compel construction of fishways in dams. State v. Meek, 112 Iowa, 338, 84 N. W. 3, 61 L. R. A. 414.]

The decisions of the federal judiciary in regard to navigable waters seem to have settled the following points:—

1. That no State can grant an exclusive monopoly for the navigation of any portion of the waters within its limits upon which commerce is carried on under coasting licenses granted under the authority of Congress,¹ since such a grant would come directly in conflict with the power which Congress has exercised. But a State law granting to an individual an exclusive right to navigate the upper waters of a river, lying wholly within the limits of the State, separated from tide water by falls impassable for purposes of navigation, and not forming a part of any continuous track of commerce between two or more States, or with a foreign country, does not come within the reason of this decision, and cannot be declared void as opposed to the Constitution of the United States.²

repeatedly held to refer not to physical obstructions but to the imposition of duties for the right to navigate them, that is, to political regulations hampering the freedom of commerce. Cardwell v. Amer. Bridge Co., 113 U. S. 206, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, &c. R. R. Co., 119 U. S. 280, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Huss v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Sands v. Manistee R. Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 238, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Williamette Iron B. Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811. In the last case, Bradley, J., says: "The clause in question cannot be regarded as establishing the police power of the United States over the rivers of Oregon, or as giving to the federal courts the right to hear and determine, according to federal law, every complaint that may be made of an impediment in, or an encroachment upon, the navigation of those rivers. We do not doubt that Congress, if it saw fit, could thus assume the care of said streams, in the interest of foreign and inter-state commerce; we only say that, in our opinion, it has not done so by the clause in question. And although, until Congress acts, the States have the plenary power supposed, yet when Congress chooses to act, it is not concluded by anything that the States have done from assuming entire control of the matter, and abating any erections that may have been made, and preventing any others from being made except in conformity with such regulations as it may impose." [States may improve the navigability of waters accessible to inter-state commerce in the absence of repugnant Congressional legislation. Stockton v. Powell, 29 Fla. 1, 10 So. 688, 15 L. R. A. 42.]

¹ Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1. The case was the well-known historical one, involving the validity of the grant by the State of New York to Robert Fulton and his associates of the exclusive right to navigate the waters of that State with vessels propelled by steam. This subject is further considered in Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713; and in The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 657, in which the meaning of the term "navigable waters of the United States" is defined. And see Craig v. Kline, 65 Pa. St. 389, 3 Am. Rep. 636.

² Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568. The exclusive right granted in this case was to the navigation of the Penobscot River above Old Town, which was to continue for twenty years, in consideration of improvements in the navigation to be made by the grantees. Below Old Town there were a fall and several dams on the river, rendering navigation from the sea impossible. And see McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush, 447. It is no infraction of the public right for a city to permit individuals to put up sheds upon its piers, thereby excluding the general public, in

2. The States have the same power to improve navigable waters which they possess over other highways;¹ and where money has been expended in making such improvement, it is competent for the State to impose tolls on the commerce which passes through and has the benefit of the improvement, even where the stream is one over which the regulations of commerce extend.²

3. The States may authorize the construction of bridges over navigable waters, for railroads as well as for every other species of highway, notwithstanding they may to some extent interfere with the right of navigation.³ If the stream is not one which is subject to the control of Congress, the State law permitting the erection cannot be questioned on any ground of public inconvenience. The legislature must always have power to determine what public ways are needed, and to what extent the accommodation of travel over one way must yield to the greater necessity for another. But if the stream is one over which the regulations of Congress extend, the question is somewhat complicated, and it becomes necessary to consider whether such bridge will interfere with the regulations or not. But the bridge is not necessarily unlawful, because of constituting, to some degree, an obstruction to commerce, if it is properly built, and upon a proper plan, and if the general traffic of the country will be aided rather furtherance of commerce. People v. Baltimore, &c. R. R. Co., 117 N. Y. 159, 22 N. E. 1923.

¹ The improvement of a stream by State authority will give no right of action to an individual incidentally injured by the improvement. Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co., 1 W. & S. 246. See Thunder Bay, &c. Co. v. Speechley, 31 Mich. 333.

² Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 513, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Sands v. Manistee River Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 288, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Palmer v. Cuyahoga Co., 3 McLean, 223; Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn. 7; Thames Bank v. Lovell, 18 Conn. 506; McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush, 447; Illinois, &c. Co. v. Peoria Bridge, 38 Ill. 437; Benjamin v. Manistee, &c. Co., 42 Mich. 628, 4 N. W. 463; Nelson v. Cheboygan Nav. Co., 44 Mich. 7, 6 N. W. 998, 38 Am. Rep. 222; Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 728; Com'r's Sinking Fund v. Green, &c. Nav. Co., 70 Ky. 73.

³ See Commonwealth v. Breed, 4 Pick. 460; Depew v. Trustees of W. and E.

Canal, 6 Ind. 8; Dover v. Portsmouth Bridge, 17 N. H. 290; Illinois, &c. Co. v. Peoria Bridge, 38 Ill. 437. Under the Wisconsin Constitution a stream wholly within the State may not be completely obstructed; Sweeney v. Chicago, &c. Ry. Co., 60 Wis. 60, 18 N. W. 756; but one between it and Minnesota may be temporarily, by authority of the latter State. Keator L. Co. v. St. Croix B. Corp., 72 Wis. 32, 38 N. W. 523. [And a State may declare a bridge which obstructs navigation upon a river wholly within the State a nuisance, and order its removal or modification, although the approval of the Secretary of War may have been given, under authority of act of Congress, for the erection of the bridge. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 335, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357. But a State has no power to regulate tolls upon a bridge used solely for inter-state commerce. Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1987.]

than impeded by its construction. There are many cases where a bridge over a river may be vastly more important than the navigation; and there are other cases where, although the traffic upon the river is important, yet an inconvenience caused by a bridge with draws would be much less seriously felt by the public, and be a much lighter burden upon trade and travel, than a break in a line of railroad communications necessitating the employment of a ferry. In general terms it may be said that the State may authorize such constructions, provided they do not constitute material obstructions to navigation; but whether they are to be regarded as material obstructions or not is to be determined in each case upon its own circumstances. The character of the structure, the facility afforded for vessels to pass it, the relative amount of traffic likely to be done upon the stream and over the bridge, and whether the traffic by rail would be likely to be more accommodated by the want of the bridge than the traffic by water with it, are all circumstances to be taken into account in determining this question. It is quite evident that a structure might constitute a material obstruction on the Ohio or the Mississippi, where vessels are constantly passing, which would be unobjectionable on a stream which a boat only enters at intervals of weeks or months. The decision of the State legislature that the erection is not an obstruction is not conclusive; but the final determination will rest with the federal courts, who have jurisdiction to cause the structure to be abated, if it be found to obstruct unnecessarily the traffic upon the water. Parties constructing the bridge must be prepared to show, not only the State authority, and that the plan and construction are proper, but also that it accommodates more than it impedes the general commerce.¹

¹ See this subject fully considered in the Wheeling Bridge Case, 18 How. 518. See also Columbus Insurance Co. v. Peora Bridge Co., 6 McLean, 79; Same v. Cortesius, 6 McLean, 209; Jolly v. Terre Haute Drawbridge Co., 6 McLean, 267; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 W. & M. 461; Commissioners of St. Joseph Co. v. Pilger, 6 Ind. 13.

It is, perhaps, doubtful in view of late decisions of the same court whether the Wheeling Bridge Case, involving the Ohio River, is to be given as broad an effect as has sometimes been supposed. It has several times since its decision been held that, in the absence of federal regulation, a bridge may be built under State authority across a river wholly within it, though it be capable of use in inter-state commerce and such use is thereby materially obstructed. Carlswell v. Amer. Bridge Co., 113 U. S. 295, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, &c. R. R. Co., 119 U. S. 280, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Escanaba Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Williamette Iron B. Co. v. Hatch, 126 U. S. 1, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811. In this last case, a quotation from which is on p. 824, supra, though the decision is carefully limited to the case involved,—a river wholly within the State of Oregon, but leading to a port of entry,—the ruling in the Wheeling Bridge Case is also closely limited to the facts arising in it, and the case is but distinguished. In the Wheeling case, it is said the court applied principles of international law,

4. The States may lawfully establish ferries over navigable waters, and grant licenses for keeping the same, and forbid unlicensed persons from running boats or ferries without such license. This also is only the establishment of a public way, and it can make no difference whether or not the water is entirely within the State, or, on the other hand, is a highway for inter-state or foreign commerce.¹

5. The States may also authorize the constructions of dams across navigable waters; and where no question of federal authority is involved, the legislative permission to erect a dam will exempt the structure from being considered a nuisance,² and it would seem also that it must exempt the party constructing it from liability to any private action for injury to navigation, so long as he keeps within the authority granted, and is guilty of no negligence.³

6. To the foregoing it may be added that the State has the same power of regulating the speed and general conduct of ships or other vessels navigating its water highways, that it has to regulate the speed and conduct of persons and vehicles upon the ordinary highway; subject always to the restriction that its and passed on the force of a pre-constitutional compact of Virginia, and from the decision no inference is to be drawn that the courts of the United States claim authority to regulate all bridges below ports of entry, and to treat all State legislation in such cases as void.

¹ Conway v. Taylor's Ex'r, 1 Black, 603; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 395, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27; [Nixon v. Reid, 8 S. D. 507, 67 N. W. 57, 32 L. R. A. 315.] In these cases the State license law was sustained as against a vessel enrolled and licensed under the laws of Congress. And see Fanning v. Gregorie, 16 How. 524. But the State may not tax the capital stock of a ferry company of another State, whose only business within the former State is discharging and receiving persons and property passing between the States. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 193, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. Under a power to amend the charter of a ferry company, the legislature may regulate the tolls chargeable by it. Parker v. Metropolitan, &c. R. R. Co., 109 Mass. 506. [But not the tolls chargeable on inter-state commerce. See Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.] Ferry rights may be so regulated as to rates of ferrriage, and ferry franchises and privileges so controlled in the hands of grantees and lessees, that they shall not be abused to the serious detriment or inconvenience of the public. Where this power is given to a municipality, it may be recalled at any time. People v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 32 Barb. 102.

² Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245; Brown v. Commonwealth, 3 S. & R. 273; Bacon v. Arthur, 4 Watts, 437; Hogg v. Zanesville Co., 5 Ohio, 410; Neaderhouser v. State, 28 Ind. 257. And see Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219; Depew v. Trustees of W. & E. Canal, 5 Ind. 8; Woodburn v. Kilbourne Manuf. Co., 1 Bissell, 546, 1 Abb. U. S. 158; Hinchman v. Patterson, 30 R. R., 17 N. J. Eq. 76; Stoughton v. State, 5 Wis. 291.

³ See Bailey v. Philadelphia, &c. R. R. Co., 4 Harr. 389; Rosan v. Walter, 10 Watts, 88; Parker v. Cutler Mill Dam Co., 21 Me. 353; Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co., 1 W. & S. 346; Depew v. Trustees of W. & E. Canal, 5 Ind. 8.

regulations must not come in conflict with any regulations established by Congress for foreign commerce or that between the States.¹

Levees and Drains. Where, under legislative authority, the construction of levees and embankments is required, to protect from overflow and destruction considerable tracts of country, assessments are commonly levied for the purpose on the owners of lands lying on or near the streams or bodies of water from which the danger is anticipated. But if the construction should be imposed as a duty upon residents or property owners in the neighborhood, so that they should be compelled to turn out periodically or in emergencies, and give personal attention and labor to the construction of the necessary defences against overflow and inundation, it is not perceived that there could be any difficulty in supporting such a regulation as one of police, or of resting it upon the same foundations which sustain the regulations in cities, by which duties are imposed on the occupants of buildings to take certain precautions against fires, not for their own protection exclusively, but for the protection of the general public.² Laws imposing on the owners the duty of draining large tracts of land which in their natural condition are unproductive, and are a source of danger to health, may be enacted under the same power,³ though in general the taxing power is employed for the purpose;⁴ and sometimes land is appropriated under the eminent domain.⁵

¹ People v. Jenkins, 1 Hill, 469; People v. Roe, 1 Hill, 470. As to the right of regulation in general, see Harrigan v. Lumber Co., 129 Mass. 560, 37 Am. Rep. 387. As to the right to regulate fisheries in navigable waters, see Gentile v. State, 29 Ind. 409; Phipps v. State, 22 Md. 380; People v. Reed, 47 Barb. 235; Drew v. Hilliker, 56 Vt. 541; Chambers v. Church, 14 R. I. 328.

² Cooley on Taxation, 401, 402. See State v. Newark, 27 N. J. 185, 194, per Kimer, J.; Crowley v. Copley, 2 La. Ann. 320. In Pennsylvania it has been held that the State cannot, as a measure of police, compel the owner of lands bounded on inland tide-water to construct embankments to exclude the natural flow of the water, but that where the State constructs them at its own expense, and leaves them in possession of the owner, it may impose on him the duty of repair. Philadelphia v. Scott, 81 Pa. St. 80.

³ See State v. City Council of Charleston, 12 Rich. 702, 733; Wurts v. Hoag-

land, 114 U. S. 606, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086. The taking of property for drainage purposes is in the exercise of this power. Winslow v. Winslow, 85 N. C. 24. Under it the cost of such an improvement made by the public authorities may be imposed upon the property benefited according to benefits. Bryant v. Robbins, 70 Wis. 258, 35 N. W. 545; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 451, 17 N. W. 889. It is competent to require a lot-owner to fill up at his own expense a lot which otherwise would become a nuisance. Nickerson v. Boston, 131 Mass. 306.

⁴ Reeves v. Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St. 333; Sessions v. Crunkilton, 20 Ohio St. 349; Egyptian Levee Co. v. Hardin, 27 Mo. 495; McGehee v. Mathis, 21 Ark. 40; Yeatman v. Crandall, 11 La. Ann. 220; Scuffletown Fence Co. v. McAllister, 12 Bush, 312; Davidson v. New Orleans, 93 U. S. 97.

⁵ Commissioners who are empowered to straighten a river to protect a country against inundation are not liable person-

Regulations of Civil Rights and Privileges. Congress, to give full effect to the fourteenth amendment to the federal Constitution, passed an act in 1875, which provided that all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities, and privileges of inns, public conveyances on land and water, theatres and other places of public amusement, subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law, and applicable alike to citizens of every race and color, regardless of any previous condition of servitude.¹ As the general power of police is in the States, and not in the federal government, the power of Congress to make so sweeping a provision may possibly be brought in question;² but as the States have undoubted right to legislate for the purpose of securing impartiality in the accommodations afforded by innkeepers and common carriers, and as the proprietors of theatres and other places of public amusement are always subject to the license and regulation of the law, a corresponding enactment by the State would seem to be competent, and has been sustained as a proper regulation of police.³

ally for incidental injuries to individuals. Neither is there any claim against the public. Green v. Swift, 47 Cal. 533; Green v. State, 73 Cal. 29, 11 Pac. 692, 14 Pac. 519.

¹ Laws of 1875, c. 114.

² In 1883 the act was held unconstitutional. The Fourteenth Amendment, says Bond v. J., does not "invest Congress with power to legislate upon subjects which are within the domain of State legislation, but to provide modes of relief against State legislation or State action of the kinds referred to." It does not authorize Congress to create a code of municipal law for the regulation of private rights; but to provide modes of redress against the operation of State laws and the action of State officers, executive and judicial, when these are subversive of the fundamental rights specified in the amendment." Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

³ Dunnell v. State, 48 Miss. 621. [A State may require railroads operating wholly within its borders to furnish separate passenger cars or separate compartments in a single passenger car for white persons and for negroes, and may make it a criminal offence for a person of one race to occupy the car or compartment set apart for the use of the other. Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1188, aff. 45 La. Ann. 80, 11 So. 948, 18 L. R. A. 639. And it seems that a railroad engaged in inter-state commerce may be compelled to comply with such regulations so far as its domestic traffic is concerned. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 328, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191. That carriers of passengers may of their own motion make similar regulations, see Chilton v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co., 114 Mo. 88, 21 S. W. 457, 19 L. R. A. 263. See also Anderson v. Louisville & N. Ry. Co., 91 Tenn. 44, 17 S. W. 893. In Younger v. Judah, 111 Mo. 393, 19 S. W. 1199, 33 Am. St. 327, 16 L. R. A. 538, it was held that the proprietor of a theatre might, in the absence of a State statute forbidding, prohibit colored persons from attending his theatre, except they took seats in the balcony. The principle applied was that under the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; the Fourteenth Amendment did not control the conduct of private persons, but the action of the State, and was not applicable to a regulation established by a private person for the conduct of his business, though of a quasi public character. In Cisco v. School Board, 161 N. Y. 598, Regulation of Business Charges. In the early days of the common law it was sometimes thought necessary, in order to prevent extortion, to interfere, by royal proclamation or otherwise, and establish the charges that might be exacted for certain commodities or services. The price of wages was oftener regulated than that of anything else, the local magistrates being generally allowed to exercise authority over the subject. The practice was followed in this country, and prevailed to some extent up to the time of independence. Since then it has been commonly supposed that a general power in the State to regulate prices was inconsistent with constitutional liberty. It has nevertheless been conceded that in some cases this might be done, and the question of the bounds to legislative power has been made prominent in what are known as the Chicago Warehouse Cases. The legislature of Illinois, on the supposition that warehouse charges at Chicago were excessive and unfair, undertook to limit them to a maximum. They also required warehousemen to take out licenses and observe various regulations, which are not important here, and imposed certain penalties for a refusal to observe the statute. The validity of the legislation was affirmed by the State court, which overruled various objections made on constitutional grounds, among which was, that in effect it deprived warehousemen of their property without due process of law. The warehousemen denied wholly the right of the legislature to prescribe charges for private services, or for the use of private property, and it was urged by them that, if admitted at all, no bounds could be set to it. The court, in sustaining the power, placed it upon the same ground with the right to regulate the charges of hackmen, draymen, public ferrymen, and public millers.¹ The case being removed to the federal Supreme Court, the decision of the State court was affirmed, and the principle fully approved. The ground of the decision appears to be that the employment of these warehousemen is a public or quasi public employment; that their property in the business is "affected with a public interest," and thereby brought under that general power of control which the State possesses in the case of other public employments. Says Mr. Chief Justice Waite: "Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial,

66 N. E. 81. It was held that the State may provide separate schools for white and black pupils.]

¹ Munn v. People, 69 Ill. 80. In this case, Justices McAllister and Stout dissented.

and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, &c., and in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all these subjects, and we think it has never yet been successfully contended that such legislation came within any of the constitutional prohibitions against interference with private property."¹ Some of the cases here referred to seem plain enough. Ferries are public highways, and when individuals are permitted to establish them, they are allowed the sovereign prerogative of charging and collecting tolls; and tolls can never be taken except by permission of the State, which generally ought to and does prescribe their limits. A hackman exercises a public employment in the public street; one which affords peculiar opportunities for impositions and frauds, and requires special supervision, inasmuch that it is commonly thought necessary to prohibit one making himself such except with permission of the State, and the number is sometimes limited so as in effect to give special privileges. The rates of toll, when mills grind for toll, are usually fixed by law; (a) but there is nothing exclusive in this: the parties may make their own bargains, and the legislative rate only controls where the parties by implication have apparently acted in reference to it. In England, formerly, the lords of manors, as mill-owners, had exclusive rights; and where an exclusive right exists in one's favor, to compel the public to deal with him, there can be no doubt of the right in the State to compel him to deal fairly with the public. Such a right existed in the English warehouse case of Alnutt v. Ingitts,² in which the Court of King's Bench denied the right of the warehousemen to fix their own charges at discretion, when the public, under exclusive privileges which the warehousemen possessed, were compelled to deal with them.³

¹ Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 125.

In this case, Justices Field and Strong dissented. This case is followed in New York with reference to the grain elevators at Buffalo. People v. Bald, 117 N. Y. 1, 22 N. E. 870, 682, 5 L. R. A. 559, and note, two judges dissenting. [Sustained in Bald v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468. Principle reaffirmed in Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857, aff. 2 N. D. 482, 52 N. W. 408.]

² 12 East, 527.

³ In Munn v. People, 60 Ill. 82, 91, Chief Justice Brace in speaking of the power to "make all needful rules and regulations respecting the use and enjoyment of property," speaks of similar instances in which the exercise of it in the State has been unquestioned, and among them, "in delegating power to municipal bodies to regulate charges of hackmen and draymen, and the weight and price of bread." Regulating the weight of

(a) [See, e. g., State v. Edwards, 83 Me. 102, 20 Atl. 947, 23 L. R. A. 594.]

What circumstances shall affect property with a public interest is not very clear. The mere fact that the public have an interest bread is common, and necessary to prevent imposition; but regulating the price of bread we should suppose would now meet with such resistance anywhere, as would require a distinct determination upon its constitutional rightfulness. How the baker can have the price of that which he sells prescribed for him, and not the merchant or the day-laborer, is not apparent. Indeed, to admit the power seems to render necessary the recognition of the principle that there is and can be no limit to legislative interference but such as legislative discretion from time to time may prescribe. [But all such regulations must not be unreasonable, — i. e. they must not amount to a taking of property without "due process," or to a deprivation of the "equal protection of the laws." Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630, and especially the cases cited in note to 44 L. ed. U. S. 417. And see Reagan v. F. L. & Trust Co., 154 U. S. 332, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 593, 59 Pac. 633, 35 L. R. A. 420, a very valuable opinion; Brymer v. Butler Water Co., 170 Pa. 231, 33 Atl. 249, 33 L. R. A. 290; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 283, 22 Pac. 979, 1046, 6 L. R. A. 754; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids. — Iowa, — 91 N. W. 1084; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 593, 59 Pac. 633, 35 L. R. A. 420, 62 Am. St. 247, and Mr. Freeman's note to this case in 62 Am. St. 257. See further, upon control of the rates of public service companies, 18 Harvard L. Rev. 246 and 353. In Cutting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co., 184 U. S. 79, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60, Justice Bower discusses at some length the status of this law on the regulation of rates as established by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, distinguishing between the business of a "public character" and that of a "private contractor." But in deciding "the public have an interest," He says: "The present scope of the decision of this court is restricted to the power of the legislature in regulating rates" is: "As to those individuals and corporations who have devoted their property to a use in which the public has an interest, although not engaged in a work of a confessedly public character, there has been no further ruling than that the State may prescribe and enforce reasonable charges. What shall be the test of reasonableness in those charges is absolutely undiscussed." "As to parties engaged in performing a public service while the power to regulate has been sustained, negatively the court has held that the legislature may not prescribe rates which, if enforced, would amount to a confiscation of property. But it has not held affirmatively that the legislature may not enforce rates which stop only this side of confiscation and leave the property in the hands and under the care of the owners without any remuneration for its use." "It has declared that the present value of the property is the basis by which the test of reasonableness is to be determined, although the actual cost is to be considered, and that the value of the services rendered to each individual is also to be considered. It has also ruled that the determination of the legislature is to be presumed to be just, and must be upheld unless it clearly appears to result in forcing unreasonable and unjust rates." See also note to 5 L. R. A. 550. What regulations are reasonable in a particular case must be determined from a consideration of the particular case. Hardly any general rule can be laid down, except that rates so low as not to cover running expenses are always unreasonably low. Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198. Nor can any such regulation prescribed by a State be made to apply to interstate commerce. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Healey & Lewis, 158 U. S. 15, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; upon State control over railroads, see Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. U. S. 678, and note. The reasonableness of rates is to be determined by considering their effect upon the traffic of the entire system, and not merely upon some particular portion of it. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 155 U. S. 643, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484. The State's power to regulate rates which affect only internal commerce is not affected by the fact that the carrier in the existence of the business, and are accommodated by it, cannot be sufficient, for that would subject the stock of the merchant, and his charges, to public regulation. The public have an interest in every business in which an individual offers his wares, his merchandise, his services, or his accommodations to the public; but his offer does not place him at the mercy of the public in respect to charges and prices. If one is permitted to take upon himself a public employment, with special privileges which only the State can confer upon him, the case is clear enough; and it seems to have been the view of both courts in this case, that the circumstances were such as to give the warehousemen in Chicago, who were the only persons affected by the legislation, a "virtual" monopoly of the business of receiving and forwarding the grain of the country to and from that important point, and by the very fact of monopoly to give their business a public character, affect the property in it with a public interest, and render regulation of charges indispensable.¹ is chartered by Congress. Reagan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 154 U. S. 413, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000. The prescribed rates will not be pronounced unreasonable in a suit between friendly contestants upon an agreed statement of facts. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 349, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460. The determination of the rates to be charged is a legislative function and cannot be undertaken by the courts. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 827, 78 N. W. 171, 45 L. R. A. 113. But as the courts will not enforce a rate unreasonably low, neither will they enforce one that is unreasonably high, nor will any person carrying on a business affected with a public interest be allowed to make arbitrary discriminations in rates between patrons. Griffin v. Goldsboro Water Co., 122 N. C. 209, 30 S. E. 319, 41 L. R. A. 240. Rates prescribed will not be pronounced unreasonably low where there is no proof that they will cause a diminution of dividends. Winchester & L. T. Road Co. v. Croxton, 98 Ky. 730, 34 S. W. 315, 38 L. R. A. 177; and upon legislative power to control rates, see note thereto in L. R. A. Canals used for the distribution of irrigation waters for hire are subject to State regulation. White v. Farmers' Burleigh Canal & R. Co., 22 Col. 130, 43 Pac. 1028, 31 L. R. A. 828. Where rates are determined by earnings it is proper to include earnings from inter-state traffic, as the rates fixed apply only to State traffic. Osborn v. Wabas' R. Co., 126 Mich. 113, 85 N. W. 409, s. c. 123 Mich. 609, 82 N. W. 526. For other cases upon regulation of rates, see Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Jones, 149 Ill. 361, 37 N. E. 247, 24 L. R. A. 141; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 54 Ark. 101, 15 S. W. 18, 11 L. R. A. 482, and note, aff. 150 U. S. 542, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Steenerson v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 63 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 713. For other cases upon powers of railroad commissions, see Atlantic Ex. Co. v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 111 N. C. 463, 18 S. E. 213, 13 L. R. A. 503; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa, 312, 45 N. W. 98, 12 L. R. A. 489, and note; Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472, 792; Bearley v. Erie Ry. Co., 162 N. Y. 290, 62 N. E. 488.]

¹ See what is said by Dwoss, Ch. J., in 69 Ill. 88-89, and by Winds, Ch. J., in 94 U. S. 131. In Attorney-General v. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co., 35 Wis. 423, 683, Chief Justice Ryan, in his very able opinion affirming the right to fix railroad charges by amendment to charters which reserved the power of amendment, intimated decided views in favor of the authority under the general power of police. That right would probably be claimed on the ground that railroads receive special privileges from the State; the emi-

The phrase "affected with a public interest" has been brought into recent discussions from the treatise De Portibus Maris of Lord nenent domain being always employed in their favor, and sometimes the power of taxation.

The question of the power of the State legislature to regulate the charges of common carriers for the transportation of persons and property within the State, is fully determined in the affirmative by the decisions of the federal Supreme Court. In Railroad Company v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 599, an act was sustained which provided, 1. That each railroad company should annually, in a month named, fix its rates for the transportation of passengers and freight; 2. That it should on the first day of the next month cause a printed copy of such rates to be put up in all its stations and depots, and to be kept up during the year; 3. That the failure to comply with these requirements, or the charging of a higher rate than was posted, should subject the offending company to penalties. In the warehouse case of Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, the power to limit charges was directly involved, and was affirmed, as it was in Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155. The State may limit the amount of charges for transportation, provided such regulation does not amount to a taking of property by compelling carrying without reward, unless restrained by contract in the charter. But the charter power to fix rates does not forbid such regulation. Railroad Com. Cases, 115 U. S. 307, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 348, 349, 358, 361, 1161; Dow v. Bebbelman, 125 U. S. 680, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1928; Georgia R. R. & B. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Miller, 132 U. S. 75, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34. The charges for business done wholly within the State may thus be regulated although a road affected may run through several States. Railroad Com. Cases, supra. The reasonableness of charges is a judicial question. [And for its determination the cost of doing the business must be known as well as the gross earnings to be yielded under the rates in question. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386. The cases upon reasonableness of State limitation of railroad rates are collected in a note to 44 L. ed. U. S. 417. Courts should not interfere except in a perfectly clear case. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 733, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894. See also Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 493, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, mod. in 171 U. S. 501, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 888; Reagan v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 154 U. S. 362, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047. State cannot require railway company to carry shipper of live stock free from transportation charges. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Campbell, 61 Kan. 433, 59 Pac. 1051, 78 Am. St. 328.] A State cannot empower a commission to fix rates finally without opportunity for a judicial hearing on the question of their reasonableness. Chicago, M. & St. Paul Ry. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702. But in Camden, & C. R. R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. 623, and Phila. & C. R. R. Co. v. Bowers, 4 Houst. 595, it was held that there was no power to regulate rates where no such authority was reserved in the charter, and see cases at end of note. In these cases no question arose of the application of the power to contracts for transportation through the State, or from or to points within a State and other points outside; but in Peik v. Chicago, & C. R. R. Co., 94 U. S. 164, it was decided that the State had power to prescribe a maximum of charges to be made by railroad companies, not only for transporting persons or property within the State, but also persons or property taken up outside the State and brought within it, or taken up inside and carried without. Note was made in the case that Congress had established no regulation with which the State statute would conflict. But this case is substantially overruled as to this point by Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, where the Illinois statute forbidding a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul in the same direction was held inapplicable to the case of a continuous voyage from a point within to a point without the State, as an interference with inter-state commerce. Like rulings have been made in several cases. Carten v. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co., 59 Iowa, 145, 13

Hale, where the important passage is as follows: "A man for his own private advantage may, in a port or town, set up a wharf or

N. W. 67; State v. Chicago, & C. Ry. Co., 70 Iowa, 162, 35 N. W. 398; Com. v. Housatonic R. R., 143 Mass. 264, 9 N. E. 647; Hardy v. Atchison, & C. R. R. Co., 22 Kan. 685, 5 Pac. 6. Nor may the State control rates between two points within it, if the transit is in part through another State. State v. Chicago, & C. Ry. Co., 40 Minn. 267, 41 N. W. 1047; Sternberger v. Railroad Co., — Ga. —, 7 S. E. 805. See Cotton Exchange v. Ry. Co., 21 S. C. R. 375. Contra, Com. v. Lehigh V. R. R. Co., — Pa. St. —, 17 Atl. 179; [Campbell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 26 Iowa, 687, 63 N. W. 351, 17 L. R. A. 446.] See Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. State, 72 Tex. 404, 10 S. W. 81. [State cannot regulate tolls upon interstate commerce. Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.]

See further Providence Coal Co. v. Prov. & W. R. R. Co., 15 R. I. 303, 4 Atl. 354; Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Becker, 32 Fed. Rep. 849; Parker v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 103 Mass. 590; People v. Boston, & C. R. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 559; Chicago, & C. R. R. Co. v. People, 67 Ill. 1; Ranges v. People, 91 Ill. 256; Fidler v. Chicago, & C. R. R. Co., 31 Iowa, 188; Council Bluffs v. Kansas City, & C. R. R. Co., 45 Iowa, 338; Attorney-General v. Railroad Companies, 35 Wis. 425; Peik v. Chicago, & C. R. R. Co., 3 Biss. 177; Bake v. Winona, & C. R. R. Co., 19 Minn. 418, 18 Am. Rep. 345, s.c. in error, 94 U. S. 189; Chicago, & C. R. R. Co. v. Ackley, 34 U. S. 179. [While a State may restrict a railroad to reasonable rates, it cannot compel lower rates to one class of persons than another, nor can it fix in advance a period during which the prescribed rates shall be observed. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355, rev. 114 Mich. 460, 72 N. W. 228. But where the railroad receives its franchises after the adoption of a statute requiring such companies to issue 1000 mile tickets at specified reduced rates it is bound to obey. It cannot complain that it is thereby deprived of property without due process. Nor does such a law, where the tickets are good only within the State operate as a regulation of inter-state commerce, although the road is engaged in such commerce. Purdy v. Erie R. Co., 152 N. Y. 42, 56 N. E. 508, 48 L. R. A. 969; State v. Omaha & Council Bluffs Ry. & Bridge Co., 113 Iowa, 30, 84 N. W. 983, 62 L. R. A. 315. An act of the New York legislature requiring railway companies to issue mileage tickets was held invalid, as being neither the exercise of the power to fix rates, or of the power of police regulation, in Beardsley v. N. Y. L. E. & W. Ry. Co., 162 N. Y. 230, 56 N. E. 488. A statute requiring one railway company to accept mileage issued by another is invalid for requiring one company to accept passengers on the credit of another. Attorney-General v. Boston & Albany Ry. Co., 160 Mass. 62, 35 N. E. 252. Reasonableness of rates must be determined upon consideration of facts existing at the time such rates are to be enforced. Smyth v. Ames, 171 U. S. 391, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 888, mod. decrees in 139 U. S. 456, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. Upon regulation of rates by statute see Winchester & L. T. Road Co. v. Croxton, 93 Ky. 739, 34 S. W. 513, 33 L. R. A. 177, and note, and Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 99 Ky. 132, 35 S. W. 129, 33 L. R. A. 209, and note; also Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. Closser, 126 Ind. 348, 26 N. E. 159, 9 L. R. A. 754, and note, and St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gal. 54 Ark. 101, 15 S. W. 18, 11 L. R. A. 452, and note; aff. 156 U. S. 919, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484. The reasonable value of the property at the time is to be considered rather than its original cost. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804. Toll roads come under the same principles as railroads. Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sanford, 164 U. S. 578, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298. A State cannot, under its general power to prevent discrimination among shippers, compel a railroad to permit private persons to erect an elevator adjacent to its sidings and upon its lands, where such elevator would be used by these persons and others for the storage of their own grain, even though the railroad has granted such privilege to other shippers. Such action would be a taking of private crane, and may take what rates he and his customers can agree for cramage, wharfage, house-lage, passage; for he doth no more than is lawful for any man to do, viz., makes the most of his own. If the king or subject have a public wharf unto which all persons that come to that port must come and unlade or lade their goods as for the purpose, because they are the wharves only licensed by the queen, or because there is no other wharf in that port, as it may fall out where a port is newly erected; in that case there cannot be taken arbitrary and excessive duties for cramage, wharfage, passage, &c., neither can they be enhanced to an immoderate rate; but the duties must be reasonable and moderate, though settled by the king's license or charter. For now the wharf, crane, and other conveniences are affected with a public interest, and they cease to be juris privati only; as if a man set out a street in new building on his own land; it is now no longer bare private interest, but is affected by a public interest."

If the case of a street thrown open to the public is an apt illustration of the public interest Lord Hale had in mind, the interest is very manifest. It will be equally manifest in the case of the wharf, if it is borne in mind that the title to the soil under navigable water in England is in the Crown, and that wharves can only be created by express or implied license, and can only be made available by making use of this public property in the soil. If, then, by public permission, one is making use of the public property, and he chances to be the only one with whom the public can deal in respect to the use of that property, it seems entirely reasonable to say that his business is affected with a public interest which requires him to deal with the public on reasonable terms.

In the following cases we should say that property in business was affected with a public interest: 1. Where the business is one the following of which is not of right, but is permitted by the State as a privilege or franchise. Under this head would be comprised the business of setting up lotteries, of giving shows, &c., of property for private uses. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150. Company having franchise to lay gas-pipes in street may be restricted to reasonable rates and compelled to abstain from discrimination among patrons. Rushville v. Rushville Nat. Gas Co., 192 Ind. 575, 28 N. E. 863, 15 L. R. A. 321, and note. For various State cases passing upon question of interstate commerce, see State v. Stripling, 113 Ala. 125, 21 So. 490, 35 L. R. A. 81; W. Union Tel. Co. v. Eubank, 160 Ky. 591, 38 S. W. 1098, 33

L. R. A. 711; State v. Scott, 98 Tenn. 254, 32 S. W. 1, 35 L. R. A. 161; Fugate v. Palst Brewing Co., 90 Tex. 298, 38 S. W. 29, 750, 35 L. R. A. 241; Mechann v. Eddy, 132 Mo. 59, 33 S. W. 71, 35 L. R. A. 119; aff. 170 U. S. 589, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 114, 25 S. E. 249, 35 L. R. A. 497; LeFrier v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 84 Me. 287, 24 Atl. 848, 17 L. R. A. 111; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Dismukes, 94 Ala. 131, 10 So. 289, 19 L. R. A. 113; State v. Higgs, 44 La. Ann. 770, 11 So. 74.]

keeping billiard-tables for hire, and of selling intoxicating drinks when the sale by unlicensed parties is forbidden; also the cases of toll-bridges, &c. 2. Where the State, on public grounds, renders to the business special assistance, by taxation or otherwise. (a) 3. Where, for the accommodation of the business, some special use is allowed to be made of public property or of a public easement. 4. Where exclusive privileges are granted in consideration of some special return to be made to the public. Possibly there may be other cases.

Miscellaneous Cases. It would be quite impossible to enumerate all the instances in which the police power is or may be exercised, because the various cases in which the exercise by one individual of his rights may conflict with a similar exercise by others, or may be detrimental to the public order or safety, are infinite in num-

(a) [As by granting the power of eminent domain. Where a corporation has such special privileges it must serve the public without discrimination. Inter-Ocean Publishing Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 435, 56 N. E. 822, 48 L. R. A. 596; Haugen v. Albina Light & W. Co., 21 Oreg. 411, 28 Pac. 244, 14 L. R. A. 424; Richmond N. Gas Co. v. Clawson, 155 Ind. 659, 58 N. E. 1049, 51 L. R. A. 744. See also People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 22 N. E. 708, 8 L. R. A. 497. Where no especial privilege or aid is received, the corporation must be left free to contract as it pleases. State v. Associated Press, 153 Mo. 410, 60 S. W. 91. The legislature cannot fix by statute the measure of compensation to be paid by a city for labor or other services it may be compelled to employ. This principle applied in a case where the statute provided that the same rate of wages must be paid on city contracts as laborers in like occupation received in the same locality. People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, 169 N. Y. 1, 59 N. E. 716, 52 L. R. A. 814, 82 Am. St. 605. For other cases involving similar principles, see Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 28 N. E. 1126, 14 L. R. A. 825, 81 Am. St. 533, declaring invalid an act forbidding withholding of wages for imperfection in work; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 389, 32 N. E. 334, 17 L. R. A. 853, holding that an act relating to the payment of wages to miners upon basis of quantity of coal mined was invalid; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 10 S. E. 285, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. 603, are cases in which acts to secure coal miners, and others laboring in certain factories, the payment of their wages at regular intervals and in lawful money only, were held void. Contra, Hancock v. Yaden, 121 Ind. 366, 23 N. E. 253, 6 L. R. A. 576; Avent-Beattyville Coal Co. v. Comm., 93 Ky. 218, 23 S. W. 502, 28 L. R. A. 273; Agee v. Smith, 7 Wash. 471, 35 Pac. 379, and see note to State v. Goodwill, supra, 25 Am. St. 879, on the Fourteenth Amendment considered with relation to Special Privileges, Burdens and Restrictions. Other cases on the subject are, State v. Fire Creek, & C. Co., 33 W. Va. 188, 10 S. E. 288, 6 L. R. A. 359, 25 Am. St. 601; Fraser v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 31 N. E. 395, 16 L. R. A. 422; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 35 N. E. 62, 22 L. R. A. 849, 37 Am. St. 206; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 22 S. W. 350, 21 L. R. A. 789; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, aff. 103 Tenn. 421, 63 S. W. 955, 78 Am. St. 682. In this last case a statute of Tennessee requiring the redemption in cash of store orders or other evidences of indebtedness issued by employers in payment of wages earned by employees is held to be constitutional. Followed in Dayton Coal and Iron Co. v. Barton, 156 U. S. 23, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5. The case of People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, supra, is authority for the doctrine that a municipal corporation, as to matters affecting its property and private contracts, has the same status as private corporations and individuals. Clark v. State, 142 N. Y. 101, 38 N. E. 817, is distinguished.]

her and in variety. (a) And there are other cases where it becomes necessary for the public authorities to interfere with the control by individuals of their property, and even to destroy it, where the owners themselves have fully observed all their duties to their fellows and to the State, but where, nevertheless, some controlling public necessity demands the interference or destruction. A strong instance of this description is where it becomes necessary to take, use, or destroy the private property of individuals to prevent the spreading of a fire, the ravages of a pestilence, the advance of a hostile army, or any other great public calamity.¹ Here the individual is in no degree in fault, but his interest must yield to that "necessity" which "knows no law." The establishment of limits within the denser portions of cities and villages, within which buildings constructed of inflammable materials shall not be erected or repaired, may also, in some cases, be equivalent to a destruction of private property; but regulations for this purpose have been sustained notwithstanding this result.² Wharf lines may also be established for the general good, even though they prevent the owners of water-fronts from building out on soil which constitutes private property.³ And, whenever the legisla-

¹ Saltpetre Case, 12 Coke, 13; Mayor, &c. of New York v. Lord, 18 Wend. 126; Russell v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 2 Deno. 431; Sanborn v. Gentry, 3 Cal. 69; Hale v. Lawrence, 21 N. J. 714; American Fruit Works v. Lawrence, 21 N. J. 248; Meeker v. Van Bunselaer, 15 Wend. 397; McDonald v. Redwing, 13 Minn. 28; Philadelphia v. Scott, 81 Pa. St. 89; Dillon, Mun. Corp. §§ 769-770; [Aitken v. Wells River, 70 Vt. 508, 40 Atl. 823, 41 L. R. A. 666.] And see Jones v. Richmond, 18 Grant. 517, for a case where the municipal authorities purchased and took possession of the liquor of a city about to be occupied by a capturing military force, and destroyed it to prevent the disorders that might be anticipated from free access to intoxicating drinks under the circumstances. [But this case is overruled in Walace v. Richmond, 94 Va. 204, 28 S. E. 582, 66 L. R. A. 554.] And as to appropriation by military authorities, see Harmay v. Mitchell, 1 Batch. 549; s. c. in error, 13 How. 115.

² Republican v. Daquet, 2 Yeates, 400;

Wadleigh v. Gilman, 12 Me. 403, 28 Am. Dec. 188; Brady v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 11 Mich. 425; Monroe v. Hoffman, 28 La. Ann. 651, 20 Am. Rep. 349; King v. Davenport, 98 Ill. 395, 38 Am. Rep. 89; Klingler v. Bickel, 117 Pa. St. 524, 11 Atl. 555; McCloskey v. Kreling, 76 Cal. 511, 18 Pac. 433. See cases, ante, p. 284, note. [Milk cows infected with tuberculosis may be destroyed without compensation to owner. Error on part of inspector and consequent destruction of healthy cows does not give owner any claim against the State. Houston v. State, 98 Wis. 481, 74 N. W. 111, 42 L. R. A. 39. Peach trees infected with yellows may be destroyed. State v. Main, 89 Conn. 128, 37 Atl. 80, 38 L. R. A. 623. Milk of a quality below a prescribed standard may be destroyed. Deems v. Baltimore, 80 Md. 164, 30 Atl. 648, 23 L. R. A. 541.]

³ Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53. See Hart v. Mayor, &c. of Albany, 9 Wend. 571, 24 Am. Dec. 165. [Height of buildings fronting on Copley Square, Boston, may be limited to ninety feet.

(a) [Compulsory education laws are upheld as within the police power of the State. State v. Jackson. — N. H. —, 53 Atl. 1021; State v. Bailey, 157 Ind. 824, 61 N. E. 719, 58 L. R. A. 435.]

ture deem it necessary to the protection of a harbor to forbid the removal of stones, gravel, or sand from the beach, they may establish regulations to that effect under penalties, and make them applicable to the owners of the soil equally with other persons. Such regulations are only "a just restraint of an injurious use of property, which the legislature have authority" to impose.¹

Atty.-Genl. v. Williams, 178 Mass. 330, 59 N. E. 812, aff. 18 — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.]

¹ Commonwealth v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 55. A statute which prohibited the having in possession of game birds after a certain time, though killed within the lawful time, was sustained in Phelps v. Racey, 62 N. Y. 10. But such statute is held in Michigan not to cover a case where the birds were killed out of the State. People v. O'Neil, 71 Mich. 825, 39 N. W. 1. That the State may prohibit the sale of arms to minors, see State v. Cabell, 1 Lea. 714. [Also the carrying of dangerous weapons, Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; State v. Workman, 85 W. Va. 367; 14 S. E. 9, 14 L. R. A. 690, and note; State may regulate the taking of fish, and may summarily confiscate nets and seines used in fishing in violation of its regulations. Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, aff. 136 N. Y. 225, 23 N. E. 878, 7 L. R. A. 134. State control of fisheries in high seas extends one marine league from shore. Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559. State may require guides in its woods and through its lakes to be licensed and to report upon condition of its game and forests. State v. Snowman, 94 Me. 93, 46 Atl. 815, 50 L. R. A. 544, 80 Am. St. 880. Fact that game was lawfully killed on an Indian reservation and is to be shipped to another State does not exempt it from State police regulations after it leaves the reservation and before it passes out of the State. Selkirk v. Stevens, 72 Minn. 335, 75 N. W. 386, 40 L. R. A. 759. Cold-storage of game lawfully killed and intended to be kept until next open season and then sold is a wrongful having in possession, and law punishing same is constitutional. Haggerty v. St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co., 143 Mo. 238, 44 S. W. 1174, 49 L. R. A. 151. Upon governmental control over right of fishery, see People v. Truckee Lumber Co., 116 Cal. 397, 48 Pac. 374, 89 L. R. A. 681, and note. State may absolutely prohibit sale of specified game and fish within its borders during specified seasons of year. People v. O'Neil, 110 Mich. 324, 68 N. W. 227, 83 L. R. A. 698. May control the taking of game by a person upon his own lands. Peters v. State, 96 Tenn. 682, 36 S. W. 299, 33 L. R. A. 114, People v. Van Pelt, 129 Mich. —, 90 N. W. 424. For other cases sustaining game laws, see State v. Chapel, 64 Minn. 130, 66 N. W. 205, 32 L. R. A. 181; State v. Mrozinski, 59 Minn. 465, 61 N. W. 660, 27 L. R. A. 70; Com. v. Gilbert, 160 Mass. 157, 35 N. E. 454, 22 L. R. A. 439; State v. Lewis, 134 Ind. 259, 33 N. E. 1024, 20 L. R. A. 52; People v. Bridges, 142 Ill. 30, 81 N. E. 115, 16 L. R. A. 684; State v. Geer, 61 Conn. 144, 22 Atl. 1012, 13 L. R. A. 804, and note; aff. 161 U. S. 519, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Am. Exp. Co. v. People, 133 Ill. 649, 24 N. E. 758, 9 L. R. A. 138; James v. Wood, 82 Me. 173, 19 Atl. 160, 8 L. R. A. 448, and note; Smith v. State, 155 Ind. 611, 58 N. E. 1044, 51 L. R. A. 404; Com. v. Chase-Davidson Co., 22 Ky. L. 727, 58 S. W. 609; State v. Dow, 70 N. H. 283, 47 Atl. 734, 53 L. R. A. 314. Game laws cannot authorize seizure of carcasses or parts thereof in course of inter-state transportation. Bennett v. Am. Exp. Co., 83 Me. 236, 22 Atl. 159, 13 L. R. A. 63. Nor can they prohibit the exportation of fish while permitting commerce in them at home. Territory v. Evans, 2 Idaho. 627, 23 Pac. 282, 7 L. R. A. 288. Nor can they affect the right to import and deal in fish imported from foreign countries. People v. Buffalo Fish Co., 164 N. Y. 93, 58 N. E. 34, 52 L. R. A. 893. Ordinance making mere possession of a lottery ticket a misdemeanor is valid. Ex parte McClain, 134 Cal. 110, 66 Pac. 69, 54 L. R. A. 779. A statute making the herding of sheep within two miles of an inhabited dwelling unlawful is a valid exercise of the police power. Sifers v. Johnson, — Idaho —, 65 Pac. 709, 54 L. R. A. 785.

So a particular use [or disposition (a)] of property may sometimes be forbidden, where, by a change of circumstances, and without the fault of the owner, that which was once lawful, proper, and unobjectionable has now become a public nuisance, endangering the public health or the public safety. (b) Mill-dams are sometimes destroyed upon this ground;¹ and churchyards which

A statute prohibiting sale of game out of season is valid as applied to game imported into the State. Ex parte Maier, 103 Cal. 478, 37 Pac. 402, 42 Am. St. 129.

¹ Miller v. Craig, 11 N. J. Eq. 176. And offensive manufactures may be stopped. Coe v. Schultz, 47 Barb. 64. Public wells may be filled up. Ferrenbach v. Turner, 85 Mo. 416. [Deposit of sawdust in lake from which the water-supply of a city is derived may be prohibited, and a riparian owner who has long been accustomed to deposit therein sawdust from his mill cannot claim that by such regulation he is deprived of his property without compensation. State v. Griffin, 69 N. H. 1, 39 Atl. 260, 41 L. R. A. 177; People v. Truckee Lumber Co., 116 Cal. 397, 48 Pac. 374, 39 L. R. A. 581.] See League v. Journey, 26 Tex. 172; ante, p. 880, and cases cited in note.

(a) [The owners of lands may be prevented from allowing natural gas to waste or escape from wells which he has sunk for oil. Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, aff. 150 Ind. 698, 50 N. E. 1125. See note on "Property in petroleum oil or gas" in 44 L. ed. U. S. 729. See also State v. Ohio Oil Co., 150 Ind. 21, 49 N. E. 809, 47 L. R. A. 627; Townsend v. Stato, 147 Ind. 624, 47 N. E. 19, 37 L. R. A. 244. Fish commissioners may place fish in streams flowing over private lands, and fishing therein may be prohibited for three years thereafter. State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 At. 1090, 43 L. R. A. 290. But a solvent debtor cannot be denied the right to transfer property to a preferred creditor. Third Nat. Bk. v. Divine Grocery Co., 97 Tenn. 603, 37 S. W. 360, 34 L. R. A. 445. Mine operator may be compelled to stop excavating five feet from boundary of his lands unless he secures written consent of adjoining proprietor. Mapel v. John, 42 W. Va. 30, 24 S. E. 608, 32 L. R. A. 860.]

(b) [A administrative boards may be empowered to exclude unvaccinated pupils from the public schools when there is reason to fear the outbreak of a small-pox epidemic. Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 59 N. E. 89, 50 L. R. A. 84. May be authorized to require all persons to be vaccinated unless some rule of the Constitution forbids. State v. Hay, 159 N. C. 939, 35 S. E. 469, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. 601; Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 30 S. E. 850, 42 L. R. A. 175; Bissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 32 Atl. 348, 29 L. R. A. 251. See Mathews v. Bd. of Education, 127 Mich. 530, 80 N. W. 1039, 54 L. R. A. 730, and State v. Burdge, 95 Wis. 390, 70 N. W. 347, 37 L. R. A. 157, where it is held that this requirement in the absence of imminent danger is void. Duffield v. School Dist., 102 Pa. 476, 29 Atl. 742, 25 L. R. A. 152. And a municipal corporation in enforcing compulsory vaccination is not liable for damage arising from the unintentional use of impure vaccine. Wyatt v. Rome, 195 Ga. 312, 31 S. E. 183, 42 L. R. A. 180. State may compel placing and maintenance of water-closets in habitations capable of connection with sewer. Com. v. Roberts, 155 Mass. 281, 29 N. E. 522, 16 L. R. A. 400. Owners of tenement-houses may be compelled to furnish city water on each floor. Health Dept. v. Rector of Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 39 N. E. 833, 27 L. R. A. 710. Operators of electric street-car lines may be compelled to provide screens for the protection of their motor-men. State v. Nelson, 52 Ohio St. 88, 39 N. E. 22, 25 L. R. A. 317; State v. Hoskins, 68 Minn. 35, 59 N. W. 545, 25 L. R. A. 759, and note; State v. Whitaker, 190 Mo. 53, 60 S. W. 1068. Statute forbidding lodging house keepers to permit more than a specified number of persons from occupying the same room is void as discriminating against them and in favor of the keepers of other places of public entertainment. Baney v. The People, 190 Ill. 28, 60 N. E. 98, 54 L. R. A. 838, 58 Am. St. 116.]

prove, in the advance of urban population, to be detrimental to the public health, or in danger of becoming so, are liable to be closed against further use for cemetery purposes.¹ The keeping of gunpowder in unsafe quantities in cities or villages;² the sale of poisonous drugs, unless labelled; allowing unmuzzled dogs to be at large when danger of hydrophobia is apprehended;³ or the keeping for sale

¹ Brick Presbyterian Church v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 5 Cow. 538; Coates v. Mayor, &c. of New York, 7 Cow. 604; Kincal's Appeal, 66 Pa. St. 411, 5 Am. Rep. 377. As to the general power of regulation of places of burial, see Woodlawn Cemetery v. Everett, 118 Mass. 344; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co., 70 Ill. 191; Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 642, 9 N. W. 845. And see ante, pp. 284, 351-355, notes. The legislature may authorize a municipal corporation to remove the dead from a cemetery within it. Craig v. First Presb. Church, 88 Pa. St. 42, 32 Am. Rep. 417. [But if owners of cemetery lots are permitted to use them for burial purposes, other persons cannot be prohibited from purchasing such lots and using them for such purposes. Matter of Boken, 115 Cal. 372, 47 Pac. 55, 36 L. R. A. 618. Municipality may be prohibited further use of its lands for burial purposes. Newark v. Watson, 50 N. J. L. 607, 29 Atl. 487, 24 L. R. A. 843.]

² Fonte v. Fire Department, 6 Hill, 99; Williams v. Augusta, 4 Ga. 509; Davenport v. Richmond, 81 Va. 633. And see License Cases, 5 How. 504, 509, per McLean, J.; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 127, per Stear, Ch. J.

³ Morey v. Brown, 42 N. H. 373; Washington v. Meigs, 1 MacArthur, 53. Dogs are subject to such regulations as the legislature may prescribe, and it is not unconstitutional to authorize their destruction, without previous adjudication, when found at large without being licensed and collared according to the statutory regulation. Blair v. Forehand, 100 Mass. 136; [Walker v. Towle, 150 Ind. 639, 59 N. E. 29, 53 L. R. A. 749; Gibson v. Harrison, 63 Ark. 355, 63 S. W. 959, 54 L. R. A. 268.] State v. Topeka, 36 Kan. 74, 12 Pac. 310. And see Carter v. Daw, 16 Wis. 238; Morey v. Brown, 42 N. H. 373; Ex parte Cooper, 9 Tex. App. 480, 30 Am. Rep. 152. As a measure of internal police, the State has the power to encourage the keeping of sheep, and to discourage the keeping of dogs by imposing a penalty upon the owner of a dog for keeping the same. Mitchell v. Williams, 27 Ind. 62. Or by imposing a dog tax for a fund to indemnify sheep owners for losses suffered from dogs. Van Horn v. People, 46 Mich. 183, 9 N. W. 246. [Or to limit the amount which can be recovered for injury to them or destruction of them to the amount at which they were returned for taxation in the last preceding annual assessment. Sentell v. N. O. & C. R. Co., 159 U. S. 638, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633. An ordinance compelling a person to kill his dog on a finding of a justice of the peace that he "is satisfied that the dog has attacked a person and is dangerous" is void. People ex rel. Shand v. Tighe, 30 N. Y. Sup. 308.] A person may be forbidden to keep more than two cows within a certain part of a city. In re Linehan, 72 Cal. 114, 13 Pac. 170. A law prohibiting the bringing of Texas and Cherokee cattle into the State because of the tendency to communicate a dangerous and fatal disease to other cattle, was sustained in Yeazel v. Alexander, 58 Ill. 234. It has since, however, been questioned, and in Railroad Company v. Husen, 95 U. S. 405, such an act was held to be an invasion of the power of Congress over interstate commerce. See also Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485. But a statute is valid which makes one who has in his possession in Iowa Texas cattle, which have not wintered in the North, liable for damage done by them to other cattle. Kimmish v. Ball, 129 U. S. 217, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Finlay, 38 Kan. 550, 19 Pac. 951; [Grimes v. Eddy, 126 Mo. 158, 28 S. W. 756, 26 L. R. A. 638, and note upon validity and construction of statutes concerning infected animals. Idaho v. Rasmussen, — Idaho, —, 50 Pac. 933, 52 L. R. A. 78, aff. 181 U. S. 198, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504. Peach trees infected with yellows may be destroyed. State v.

unwholesome provisions, or other deleterious substances, — are all subject to be forbidden under this power.¹ And, generally, it may be said that each State has complete authority to provide for the abatement of nuisances, whether they exist by the fault of individ-

Main: 59 Conn. 125, 37 Atl. 80, 36 L. R. A. 623.]

¹ The manufacture and sale of any oleaginous substance designed to take the place of butter may be forbidden, though it is beautiful and marked "oleomargarine butter." Such provision is a valid exercise of the police power. Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 674, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 902, 1257, aff. 114 Pa. St. 295, 7 Atl. 913; Butler v. Chambers, 83 Mich. 69, 33 N. W. 308. So of the sale of oleomargarine colored to deceive. Waterbury v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 534, 14 Atl. 694. In New York an act like the Pennsylvania statute was held bad as prohibiting an industry because it competed with another. People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 2 N. E. 29. But a later act was sustained, as aimed to prevent deception, which forbade the sale of a like product made in imitation or semblance, or designed to take the place of natural butter. People v. Arensburg, 105 N. Y. 125, 11 N. E. 277. Oleomargarine may be required to be stamped. Pierce v. Maryland, 63 Md. 564, or colored pink. State v. Marshall, 64 N. H. 549, 15 Atl. 210. [But not when brought from another State. Collins v. New Hampshire, 173 U. S. 39, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768, rev. State v. Myers, 42 W. Va. 822, 26 S. E. 509. For many other cases on oleomargarine, see note, p. 847. See also State v. Capital City Dairy Co., 62 Ohio St. 379, 57 N. E. 62, 57 L. R. A. 181, and cases cited in note.] The sale of milk below a certain standard of purity may be forbidden, though it be mixed with pure water. Com. v. Waite, 11 Allen, 291; People v. Capperly, 191 N. Y. 634, 4 N. E. 107; State v. Campbell, 54 N. H. 492, 13 Atl. 585; State v. Smyth, 14 R. I. 190; [State v. Schlenker, 112 Iowa, 642, 84 N. W. 698, 51 L. R. A. 347, 84 Am. St. 399. And needs of cows supplying milk for public consumption may be compelled to be registered, and they and the premises where they are kept to be inspected and kept in a sanitary condition. State v. Broadbent, 89 Md. 565, 40 Atl. 771, 45 L. R. A. 438. Milk offered for sale, if below a prescribed standard, may be summarily destroyed. Deems v. Baltimore, 80 Md. 164, 30 Atl. 648, 20 L. R. A. 541; see in this connection, State v. Du Paquier, 46 La. Ann. 577, 15 So. 502, 25 L. R. A. 162. The addition of any adulterant, even though it be harmless and be added to preserve the milk, may be prohibited. State v. Schlenker, 112 Iowa, 642, 84 N. W. 698, 51 L. R. A. 347, 84 Am. St. 399. Statute prohibiting sale of cream as cream which contains less than twenty per cent of fat, is valid. State v. Crescent City Creamery Co., 83 Minn. 284, 86 N. W. 307, 54 L. R. A. 460, 85 Am. St. 424. A statute prohibiting the manufacture and sale of "any substance or compound made in imitation of yellow butter" and not made "wholly of cream or milk," is constitutional. State v. Rogers, 95 Me. 94, 49 Atl. 504, 85 Am. St. 395; People v. Rotter, — Mich. —, 91 N. W. 137, seeming to overrule Northwestern Manufacturing Co. v. Judge, 58 Mich. 381, 25 N. W. 372, 55 Am. Rep. 693. The opinion in People v. Rotter collects the authorities on this question. See also People v. Biesacker, 169 N. Y. 53, 61 N. E. 900, 88 Am. St. 534, 57 L. R. A. 178. The legislature of the State may declare that a nuisance, which is such in fact, and may create a commission with power to determine whether the conditions defined by the act exist. Los Angeles County v. Spencer, 126 Cal. 679, 59 Pac. 202, 77 Am. St. 217.] The sale of fertilizers may be regulated to prevent deception. Steiner v. Ray, 84 Ala. 93, 4 So. 172. [And baking-powder manufacturers may be compelled to publish upon the labels of the cans in which they pack their powders a list of the ingredients of such powders. State v. Sherod, 80 Minn. 416, 83 N. W. 417, 50 L. R. A. 600. Sale of alum baking-powders may be prohibited. State v. Layton, 169 Md. 474, 61 S. W. 171. On "Summary Abatement of Nuisances by Boards of Health," see 2 Columbia L. Rev. 203.]

uals or not,¹ and even though in their origin they may have been permitted or licensed by law.²

¹ See Miller v. Craig, 11 N. J. Eq. 175; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242; Watertown v. Mayor, 139 Mass. 315. One of the powers most commonly conferred upon municipal corporations is that to declare and abate nuisances. The general authority is commonly given to the common council or other legislative body, but so far as the nuisances are supposed to be injurious to the public health, jurisdiction in respect to them is likely to be conferred upon boards of health. Where nuisances are spoken of in statutes delegating this authority, public nuisances must be understood as intended, and for whatever is merely a private nuisance individuals must seek their own remedy. The delegation of this authority over nuisances is very apt to raise troublesome questions, and the authority itself is likely to be taken to be broader than it is. It is first to be understood that nothing is a public nuisance when the law itself—either common or statute—authorizes. Pittsburgh, &c. R. R. Co. v. Brown, 57 Ind. 45, 33 Am. Rep. 73; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Joliet, 75 Ill. 25. And therefore if the municipal authority should assume to declare something which was entirely lawful by the law of the State to be a nuisance, the declaration would be a mere nullity because in conflict with the superior law. An illustration is found in a case where a city declared the occupation by a railroad company of certain grounds where it had been lawfully located to be a nuisance, and forbade its longer continuance. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Joliet, 75 Ill. 25. Whether any particular thing or act is or is not permitted by the law of the State must always be a judicial question, and therefore the question what is and what is not a public nuisance must be judicial, and it is not competent to delegate it to the local legislative or administrative boards. Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497; Wrexford v. People, 14 Mich. 41; State v. Street Commissioners, 30 N. J. 280; Everett v. Council Bluffs, 45 Iowa, 63; Hutton v.

Camden, 32 N. J. 122, 23 Am. Rep. 203; St. Louis v. Sennuckelberg, 7 Mo. App. 536. The local declaration that a nuisance exists is therefore not conclusive, and the party concerned may contest the fact in the courts. Ex parte O'Leary, 65 Miss. 80, 3 So. 144; Hennessey v. St. Paul, 37 Fed. Rep. 565; [Evansville v. Miller, 146 Ind. 613, 45 N. E. 1054, 38 L. R. A. 191.] There being no charter power to declare a nuisance, an ordinance declaring dense smoke a nuisance is void. St. Paul v. Gillilan, 36 Minn. 208, 31 N. W. 49; [St. Louis v. Henzeberg P. & P. Co., 141 Mo. 375, 42 S. W. 954, 39 L. R. A. 551.] So as to a prohibition of all lime-kilns in a city: State v. Mott, 81 Md. 207; and of all laundries. In re Sam Kee, 31 Fed. Rep. 680. All picnics cannot be made nuisances. Poyer v. Des Plaines, 18 Ill. App. 225. In Kennedy v. Board of Health, 2 Pa. St. 368, it was held competent for the legislature to make such local declaration conclusive; but this seems questionable. It is entirely competent, however, to confer upon the municipalities the authority to supersede the general law in respect to those matters which are found to be injurious in their locality, and to create as to them a new class of public offences. Thus, under proper legislation, a municipal council may make the selling of spirituous liquors with in their jurisdiction a nuisance: Goddard v. Jacksonville, 15 Ill. 588; [McManus v. State, — Kan. —, 70 Pac. 709; Davis v. Auld, 96 Me. 559, 53 Atl. 118.] or the selling of goods on Sunday: Melpherson v. Chebanse, 114 Ill. 46, 28 N. E. 454; or the keeping of a bowling alley for hire: Tanner v. Albion, 5 Hill, 121; or an offensive manufactory: Kennedy v. Phelps, 10 La. Ann. 227; or a slaughter-house within certain specified limits: Metropolitan Board of Health v. Heister, 37 N. Y. 661; [or the maintenance of a privy vault on premises adjoining a public sewer: Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 233, 38 Atl. 1, 38 L. R. A. 305.] or a private hospital: Milne v. Davidson, 5 ler v. Kansas, 125 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Davenport v. Richmond, 51 Va. 656.

² See Beer Company v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 653, ante, p. 499, and note; Mug-

The State has also a right to determine what employments shall be permitted, and to forbid those which are deemed prejudicial to the public good. Under this right it forbids the keeping of gambling houses, and other places where games of chance or skill are played for money, the keeping for sale of indecent books and pictures, the keeping of houses of prostitution, (a) and the resort thereto, and in some States the sale of intoxicating drinks as a

Mart. N. S. 409, 10 Am. Dec. 189; or the erection of wooden buildings: King v. Davenport, 28 Ill. 205; or the running at large of swine: Roberts v. Ogil, 50 Ill. 436; Whitfield v. Longest, 6 Ired. 218; Crosby v. Warren, 1 Blm. 285; or the unreasonable occupation of public waters: Tourne v. Lee, 8 Mart. N. S. 648, 20 Am. Dec. 209; or the use of steam as motive power for cars in the streets: North Chicago C. R. Co. v. Lake View, 193 Ill. 267; or the emitting of dense smoke in the city: Harmon v. Chicago, 110 Ill. 481. And if in any of these cases there was doubt whether what was forbidden was a nuisance at the common law, the municipal declaration would, as to the future, resolve the doubt but could not operate retrospectively. If a municipal corporation proceeds to abate a nuisance, it possesses for that purpose only the rights of any private person, and if injury results to an individual, it must justify its action by showing that a nuisance existed in fact. Wood on Nuisances, §§ 738, 739; Welch v. Stowell, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 332; Brigman v. Bristol, 65 Me. 426, 20 Am. Rep. 711; Mayor of Amherst v. Mitchell, 73 Ga. 897, 5 S. E. 201. [Except as to such things as are nuisances per se, or in their very nature, a person charged with maintaining them is entitled to be heard upon the question of whether it be a nuisance. Western & A. Ry. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 113 Ga. 537, 38 S. E. 606, 54 L. R. A. 244.] But a municipal corporation may order the removal of a nuisance at the expense of the person creating or responsible for it. Salem v. Eastern R. R. Co., 98 Mass. 431. And this is frequently done in the case of city lots which are a nuisance in their natural condition, or have become so by the act or neglect of the owner. The municipal order for removal is conclusive: Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. 421, 22 Am. Dec. 421; though when it is to be done at the cost of the owner he is not concluded as to the cost by the action of the corporation, but has a right to be heard as to the terms: Salem v. Eastern R. R. Co., 98 Mass. 431; and in Kentucky on the question of nuisance, Joyce v. Woods, 78 Ky. 386. If the corporation is itself chargeable with creating the nuisance, the cost of abating it cannot be imposed upon the owner. Weeks v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 242; Hannibal v. Richards, 82 Mo. 310. See Banning v. Commonwealth, 2 Dav. 65. If it has expressly permitted it, it can abate only after a judicial decision. Everett v. Marguerite, 51 Mich. 459, 18 N. W. 140. The abatement must be made by the removal of that in which the nuisance consists. King v. Rosewell, 2 Salk. 459; Ely v. Supervisors of Niagara, 35 N. Y. 297; State v. Keenan, 5 R. I. 497; Müller v. Birch, 32 Tex. 208. And it must be done without inflicting unnecessary injury. Babcock v. Buffalo, 50 N. Y. 238; Weil v. Racord, 24 N. J. Eq. 193. See Ferguson v. Selma, 43 Ala. 328; and on the subject in general, Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659. [Upon municipal power over nuisances affecting safety, health, and personal comfort, see note to 33 L. R. A. 305; over buildings and other structures as nuisances, note to 58 L. R. A. 161. To the effect that private persons may not abate a common nuisance, so declared by statute, see State v. Stork, 63 Kan. 529, 64 Pac. 243, 54 L. R. A. 919.]

(a) [Prostitutes may be restricted to a limited area of a town. L'Hote v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 387, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788, aff. 51 La. Ann. 93, 44 L. R. A. 394, 24 So. 468. As to power of a city over houses of prostitution, see State v. Karstendiek, 49 La. Ann. 1231, 22 So. 315, 39 L. R. A. 529, and People v. Hanrahan, 75 Mich. 611, 42 N. W. 1124, 4 L. R. A. 751.] beverage.¹ These several kinds of business have a tendency which is injurious and demoralizing; and this tendency is recognized even in States where they are not forbidden, and they are subjected to regulations with a view to reducing their evils to a minimum. The regulation is likely to take the form of a license, for which a fee is exacted to cover the expense of supervision, and the days and hours when the business shall be suffered will perhaps also be prescribed. (a) Where an occupation like gaming or the sale of demoralizing articles is altogether prohibited, it is not uncommon to provide that whatever is kept for use or sale in violation of the law shall be forfeited by the owner, and, after judicial hearing, condemned and destroyed.² And taxes are some-

¹ The sale of opium may be forbidden. State v. Ah Chew, 16 Nev. 59. Where sale of liquors is allowed, it is common to require closing of places of sale on Sunday; and it is held competent to enact that the lighting up of such a place on that day shall be prima facie evidence of guilt. Alqua v. Zimmerlin, 35 Ohio St. 507. Where a municipal ordinance permits sales, the license may be forfeited for violation of the ordinance. Ottumwa v. Schwab, 52 Iowa, 515, 3 N. W. 529. Municipal authorities empowered to close drinking places "temporarily" cannot order them closed "till further order," but must define the time. State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 258. The keeping open after hours cannot be made a breach of the peace allowing arrest without a warrant. People v. Haug, 68 Mich. 349, 37 N. W. 21. [A State has no power to bind itself to permit lotteries to be carried on. Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199, following Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814. But it cannot prohibit a gift enterprise in connection with merchandising where there is no element of chance involved. Long v. State, 73 Md. 527, 21 Atl. 683, 12 L. R. A. 89, 74 Md. 505, 22 Atl. 4, 12 L. R. A. 425. For trading stamp legislation held constitutional, see State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 77, 46 Atl. 234, 84 Am. St. 818, 48 L. R. A. 775. Upon power to regulate liquor-selling, see Giozza v. Fernan, 148 U. S. 557, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047;

Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 80, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13. State may forbid the making of options for the sale of commodities, even though the parties actually contemplate a transfer of the commodities. Booth v. People, 185 Ill. 43, 57 N. E. 798, 50 L. R. A. 762, 78 Am. St. 229, aff. 184 U. S. 425, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. Regulate sale of intoxicating liquors, and grant or refuse licenses therefor. De Walt's Appeal, 180 Pa. 577, 42 Atl. 1117, 45 L. R. A. 393. Prohibit keeping of a place where money is received to be bet on horse-races, even though place is kept by agent of inter-state telegraph company and money is transmitted by telegraph to another State. State v. Harbourn, 70 Conn. 484, 49 Atl. 173, 40 L. R. A. 607. Regulate horse-racing and the use of race-tracks therefor. State v. Roby, 142 Ind. 168, 41 N. E. 145, 23 L. R. A. 213. Liquor-selling may be restricted to citizens of the United States, and applicants for license may be required to be required to secure approval of specified commissioners. Tragesser v. Gray, 73 Md. 250, 20 Atl. 305, 9 L. R. A. 780, and note. See further on control of liquor-traffic, Altenburgh v. Conn., 123 Pa. 602, 17 Atl. 790, 4 L. R. A. 543.]

² Id., p. 849, note. [Such machines may be summarily seized and destroyed. Bd. of Police Comm'rs v. Wagner, 93 Md. 182, 48 Atl. 455; and see Lawton v. Steele and other cases, in note 2, page 875.]

(a) [Where there is no regulation, the fee imposed is not a license-fee but a tax, and if it does not conform to the constitutional requirements for a tax the imposition is void. State v. Moore, 113 N. C. 697, 18 S. E. 842, 22 L. R. A. 472. See also Jacksonville v. Ledwith, 26 Fla. 163, 7 So. 855, 9 L. R. A. 69.]

times imposed with a view to discourage occupations which are injurious in their tendency, but which the State does not venture to prohibit.¹

So the most proper business may be regulated to prevent its becoming offensive to the public sense of decency,² or for any other reason injurious or dangerous;³ and rules for the conduct of the

¹ Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406.

² Like the keeping and exhibition of stallions and bulls in public places. Nolin v. Franklin, 4 Yerg. 193.

³ Watertown v. Mayo, 100 Mass. 315; Blydenburg v. Miles, 39 Conn. 484; Taylor v. State, 35 Wis. 208. The sale of any pistol except the navy pistol may be forbidden. Dabbs v. State, 38 Ark. 353. One operating a co-operative cheese factory may be required to give bonds. Hawthorn v. People, 109 Ill. 92. The sale of goods, except at one's regular place of business, near camp meeting grounds may be forbidden. Meyers v. Baker, 120 Ill. 567, 12 N. E. 79; Com. v. Beurse, 139 Mass. 542. An inn-keeper may be required to take out a license. B. stick v. State, 47 Ark. 129, 14 S. W. 470. But the manufacture of tobacco on any floor of a tenement house, if such floor is used as a residence, may not be forbidden. In re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98. [State may regulate the occupation or business of barbers, and may require barbers to pass an examination and pay a reasonable license-fee therefor, in order to insure proper degree of competency and to protect the health of their patrons. State v. Zeno, 79 Minn. 80, 81 N. W. 748, 48 L. R. A. 88. But such regulations as limit the right of a citizen to contract with reference to his own property must have some recognizable tendency to promote the public welfare. They cannot be purely arbitrary. Dennis v. Moses, 18 Wash. 537, 52 Pac. 333, 40 L. R. A. 392; State v. Wagener, 77 Minn. 483, 80 N. W. 633, 778, 1134, 43 L. R. A. 442. Manufacturers may be compelled to pay their employees their wages weekly in Massachusetts. Rs House Bill No. 1230, 163 Mass. 589, 40 N. E. 713, 28 L. R. A. 344; and upon power to regulate time of payment of wages, see note to this case in L. R. A., also upon requirement that wages be paid in lawful money, note to 28 L. R. A. 273, and Dixon v. Poe,—

Ind.—, 55 N. E. 518. In Pennsylvania it is held that insurance business may be confined to corporations. Commonwealth v. Vrooman, 154 Pa. 390, 30 Atl. 217, 25 L. R. A. 259. State may provide that answer by applicant for insurance shall not bar recovery unless wilfully false, material, and made without agent's knowledge of falsity, and unless it induced the company to issue the policy. J. Hancock M. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 59 Ohio St. 45, 51 N. E. 546, aff. in 181 U. S. 73, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635. Statute providing that if insurance company shall fail to pay loss when due it shall be liable for 12 per cent additional is held valid in Fidelity and Casualty Co. v. Allibone, 90 Tex. 800, 32 S. W. 632. But see Railway Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, where similar statute as to contracts between railway companies and their employees is held void. Upon power to regulate insurance, see State v. Stone, 118 Mo. 388, 24 S. W. 184, 25 L. R. A. 243, and Noble & W. v. Mitchell, 100 Ala. 519, 14 So. 581, 25 L. R. A. 238, and note. Ticket brokerage may be prohibited. Burdick v. People, 149 Ill. 600, 36 N. E. 948, 24 L. R. A. 152, and note; State v. Corbett, 57 Minn. 846, 59 N. W. 317, 24 L. R. A. 438; Com. v. Keary, 198 Pa. 590, 48 Atl. 472. But all regulations of business that is not in itself deleterious to the general good must be reasonable. They cannot be arbitrary, and if they are so the courts will set them aside. Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 82 Pac. 879, 19 L. R. A. 727. An act forbidding one not a registered pharmacist to sell patent medicines is void as unreasonable. Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 58 N. E. 616, 62 L. R. A. 287. Plumbers may be required to procure a certificate of competency from a State board of examiners, and to be registered. Singer v. State, 72 Md. 464, 19 Atl. 1044, 9 L. R. A. 551; People v. Warden, 144 N. Y. 529, 39 N. E. 686, 27 L. R. A. 718.]

most necessary and common occupations are prescribed when from their nature they afford peculiar opportunities for imposition and fraud.¹ Cities commonly provide markets where provisions may be exposed for sale; and these are subjected to careful regulations, and furnished with official inspectors to whom every dealer may be required to exhibit his stock. (a) Dealers may also be compelled to take out a license, and the license may be refused to a person of bad reputation, or taken away from a party detected in dishonest practices.² For dealings in the markets, weights

¹ E. g., the business of insuring lives or property. Ward v. Farwell, 37 Ill. 693; Lottrop v. Steadman, 42 Conn. 583. [That of itinerant vendors. State v. Foster, 21 R. I. 251, 43 Atl. 60, 69 L. R. A. 339. State may require that coal mined shall be weighed before being screened, and that miners shall be paid according to weights thus determined, where the parties are left free to determine by contract the rate to be paid. State v. Wilson, 61 Kan. 32, 58 Pac. 981, 47 L. R. A. 71. See further on statutes requiring weighing of coal before screening. Re Preston, 63 Ohio, 425, 59 N. E. 101, 52 L. R. A. 523, 81 Am. St. 642, and cases cited in the opinion. Statute forbidding discharge of an employee because of membership in a labor organization is invalid. State v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 590, 99 N. W. 1098; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 193, 31 S. W. 751, 20 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. 443; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 58 N. E. 1007, 80 Am. St. 176. That commission merchants dealing in farm produce shall take out licenses, have their business inspected, give bonds for due performance of their duties to consignors, &c.; State v. Wagener, 77 Minn. 483, 80 N. W. 633, 778, 1184, 46 L. R. A. 442; contra, People v. Coolidge, 124 Mich. 664, 83 N. W. 594, 50 L. R. A. 493. State may regulate the practice of dentistry. State v. Vandersluis, 42 Minn. 129, 43 N. W. 789, 6 L. R. A. 119. But regulations of the practice of the professions cannot make arbitrary discriminations. State v. Pennoyer, 65 N. H. 113, 18 Atl. 878, 5 L. R. A. 709.

General buyers of wheat at elevators situated on or alongside any railway may be required to take out licenses. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423, aff. 77 Minn. 223, 70 N. W. 932. Sale of railway tickets may be restricted to authorized agents of railway companies. Conn. v. Keary, 105 Pa. 569, 48 Atl. 472; Burdick v. People, 149 Ill. 693, 39 N. E. 948, 24 L. R. A. 152, and note; State v. Corbett, 67 Minn. 545, 59 N. W. 817, 24 L. R. A. 498.]

² See, in general, Nightingale's Case, 11 Pick. 168; Buffalo v. Webster, 10 Wend. 99; Bush v. Seabury, 8 Johns. 418; Ash v. People, 11 Mich. 347; State v. Leiber, 11 Iowa, 407; Le Claire v. Davenport, 13 Iowa, 249; White v. Kent, 11 Ohio St. 559; Bowling Green v. Carson, 10 Bush, 64; New Orleans v. Stafford, 27 La. Ann. 417. [An act requiring peddlers in a certain county to take out a license and exempting from its operation merchants persons selling to merchants, and persons selling property raised or manufactured by them, is held invalid in Com. v. Snyder, 182 Pa. St. 530, 38 Atl. 356; State v. Wagener, 69 Minn. 296, 72 N. W. 67, 38 L. R. A. 677. But see Rosenbloom v. State, — Neb. —, 89 N. W. 1053, 57 L. R. A. 922, and note, in which case it is held that a regulation requiring license from dealers in merchandise which exempted those selling their own productions is valid. A regulation limiting requirement for license to transients only is void; McGraw v. Marion, 98 Ky. 673, 34 S. W. 13, 47 L. R. A. 593. See also Kneely v. Cotterel, 108 Pa. 614, 46 Atl. 861, 60

(a) [Upon police powers over markets, see Jacksonville v. Ledwith, 28 Fla. 103, 7 So. 865, 9 L. R. A. 69; State v. Sarradat, 46 La. Ann. 709, 15 So. 87, 24 L. R. A. 584, and note; City of New Orleans v. Faber, 105 La. 298, 29 So. 507, 53 L. R. A. 165. Fresh meats may be required to be sold only in public markets. Newson v. Galveston, 70 Tex. 559, 13 S. W. 388, 7 L. R. A. 797.]

and measures are established, and parties must conform to the fixed standards under penalty.¹ It is also common to require draymen, hackmen, pawnbrokers, and auctioneers to take out licenses, and to conform to such rules and regulations as seem important to the public convenience and protection.² So for the protection of youth in institutions of learning, and for the good discipline of schools, the sale of liquors in their vicinity may be prohibited when allowed generally,³ and credit for livery to pupils, without the consent of the college authorities, may be subjected to penalty.⁴ So, for the protection of laborers against the oppression of employers, it is held competent to forbid their being paid in anything else than legal-tender funds.⁵ And under its general

L. R. A. 85, and note; Carrollton v. Bazette, 159 Ill. 284, 42 N. E. 837, 31 L. R. A. 532; State v. Harrington, 65 Va. 622, 35 Atl. 515, 34 L. R. A. 100; Brownback v. North Wales, 191 Pa. 60, 45 Atl. 661, 49 L. R. A. 416; State v. Foster, 22 R. I. 1-3, 43 Atl. 89, 50 L. R. A. 349.] The power is continuing, and markets once established may be changed at the option of the authorities, and they cannot even by contract deprive themselves of this power. Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344; Gall v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio St. 363; Congat v. New Orleans, 16 La. Ann. 21. Sales outside of public markets may be prohibited. Gassigi v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 522, 6 So. 564; Ex parte Byrd, 84 Ala. 17, 4 So. 3-7.

¹ Galliotte v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 472; Page v. Frazier, 56 Barb. 3-2; Raleigh v. Sorrell, 1 Jones (N. C.), 4-; Gaines v. Costa, 51 Miss. 335; Dillon Mun. Corp. §§ 323, 324, and cases cited. Sales of food may not be forbidden merely because prizes or gifts are part of the inducement. People v. Gilson, 199 N. Y. 389, 17 N. E. 343. As to market regulations in general, see Wartman v. Philadelphia, 53 Pa. St. 202; Spaulding v. Lowell, 23 Pick. 71; Gall v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio St. 363; Municipality v. Cutting, 4 La. Ann. 38d; State v. Fisher, 52 Mo. 174. [Upon powers of municipalities over markets, see State v. Sarrahat, 46 La. Ann. 709, 15 So. 87, 24 L. R. A. 584, and note; Jacksonville v. Ledwith, 25 Fla. 163, 7 So. 855, 9 L. R. 69. Ingredients of compound or adulterated lard may be required to be disclosed upon the wrapper of the package. State v. Snow, 81 Iowa, 342, 47 N. W. 777, 11

L. R. A. 355. Sale of certain classes of provisions may be restricted to public markets. New Orleans v. Faber, 165 La. 298, 29 So. 507, 53 L. R. A. 165.]

² Commonwealth v. Stodder, 2 Cush. 532; Morrell v. State, 38 Wis. 424; 20 Am. Rep. 12; Dillon Mun. Corp. §§ 241-245. One who lets his horse and wagon for the hirer to use himself is not a drayman. State v. Robinson, 42 Minn. 197, 43 N. W. 839, 6 L. R. A. 289. As to license fees, and when they are taxes, see note, pp. 288, 7-5; Mayor, &c. of Mobile v. Yulie, 3 Ala. 167.

³ State v. Ranscher, 1 Lea. 96; Boyd v. Bryant, 35 Ark. 62, 37 Am. Rep. 6. See Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 473.

⁴ Soper v. Harvard College, 1 Pick. 177, 11 Am. Dec. 159. In Commonwealth v. Bacon, 13 Bush, 210, 26 Am. Rep. 189, it was held not competent to forbid any one carrying on stabling within a specified distance of a named agricultural society during its fairs.

⁵ Shaffer v. Union Mining Co., 55 Md. 74. [And for the protection of the health of miners and the avoidance of unnecessary danger to their lives and limbs, the State may compel the ventilation of mines and the erection of structures to facilitate their escape in case of accident. The cost of the necessary inspections may be levied upon the owners of the mines. Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. v. People, 181 Ill. 270, 54 N. E. 951; 48 L. R. A. 554; Consolidated Coal Co. v. People, 186 Ill. 134, 57 N. E. 890. And the State may require railway companies to compensate all employees for injuries caused by negligence of any of their servants in charge of particular branches of their right to require merchandise to be submitted to public inspection and regulation, the State may prescribe the size of packages and place of inspection for the shipment of tobacco to foreign countries, and impose penalties for failure to conform to the regulations.¹

The general rule undoubtedly is, that any person is at liberty to pursue any lawful calling, and to do so in his own way, not encroaching upon the rights of others. This general right cannot be taken away. It is not competent, therefore, to forbid any person or class of persons, whether citizens or resident aliens, offering their services in lawful business, or to subject others to penalties for employing them.² But here, as elsewhere, it is proper to recognize distinctions that exist in the nature of things, and under some circumstances to inhibit employments to some one class while leaving them open to others. Some employments, for example, may be admissible for males and improper for females, and regulations recognizing the impropriety and forbidding women engaging in them would be open to no reasonable objection.³ The same is true of young children, whose employ-service. Such legislation being justified upon the ground that it is for the protection of persons engaged in an extra-hazardous occupation. Indianapolis U. Ry. Co. v. Houbinan, 157 Ind. 494, 60 N. E. 943, 54 L. R. A. 787. See construction of statute forbidding the assignment of wages not due and declaring invalid agreements relieving an employer from paying wages weekly in International T. B. Co. v. Weissinger, — Ind. —, 65 N. E. 521.]

¹ Turner v. State, 55 Md. 240, aff. 107 U. S. 38, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

² Baker v. Portland, 5 Sawyer, 568. [It is unlawful to require an applicant for a license to follow the occupation of a barber to be a citizen of the United States: Templar v. Examining Bd. of Barbers, — Mich. —, 60 N. W. 1058. See Tragesser v. Gray, 73 Md. 250, 20 Atl. 605, 9 L. R. A. 780, holding that liquor-selling may be restricted to citizens of the United States. Police regulations cannot be purely arbitrary nor purely for the promotion of private interests. It must appear that the general welfare is to be in some degree promoted. A statute requiring railroads and transportation companies to turn over to a storage company or public warehouseman all property which the consignee fails to call for or receive within twenty days after notice of its arrival, is unconstitutional. State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 98 Minn. 381, 71 N. W. 400, 33 L. R. A. 672. But in Pennsylvania it is held that the business of insurance may be confined to corporations. Com. v. Vrooman, 164 Pa. 506, 30 Atl. 217, 25 L. R. A. 250. A gift enterprise carried on by a merchant in connection with his business and involving no element of chance cannot be prohibited. Long v. State, 73 Md. 527, 21 Atl. 688, 12 L. R. A. 527, 74 Md. 565, 22 Atl. 4, 12 L. R. A. 425. And see State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 77, 46 Atl. 234, 84 Am. St. 818, 48 L. R. A. 775.]

³ It has been held that a constitutional provision forbidding the General Assembly granting "to any citizen, or class of citizens, privileges or immunities which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens," does not preclude restricting the licensing of the sale of intoxicating drinks to males. Bayer v. Kilpatrick, 40 Ind. 812. The people of California deemed it wise to provide by their constitution that "no person shall on account of sex be disqualified from entering upon or pursuing any lawful business, vocation, or profession," and it has been held that the legislature is now deprived of the power to prohibit the employment

ment in mines and manufactories is commonly, and ought always, to be regulated.¹ And some employments in which integrity is of vital importance it may be proper to treat as privileges merely, and to refuse the license to follow them to any who are not reputable.²

Whether the prohibited act or omission shall be made a criminal offence, punishable under the general laws, or subject to punishment under municipal by-laws, or, on the other hand, the party be deprived of all remedy for any right which, but for the regulation, he might have had against other persons, are questions which the legislature must decide. It is sufficient for us to have pointed out that, in addition to the power to punish misdemeanors and felonies, the State has also the authority to make extensive and varied regulations as to the time, mode, and circumstances in and under which parties shall assert, enjoy, or exercise their rights without coming in conflict with any of those constitutional principles which are established for the protection of private rights or private property.³

of females in drinking-cellars and other places where liquors are kept for sale. Matter of Maguire, 97 Cal. 604. [Sale of wines and liquors in dance-cellars and the like places frequented by women may be forbidden. Ex parte Hayes, 98 Cal. 555, 58 Pac. 337, 20 L. R. A. 701.] That such employment might otherwise be prohibited on good reasons, few persons will doubt. See Matter of Quong Woo, 13 Fed. Rep. 279. And in Ohio this may be forbidden under power to regulate saloons. Bergman v. Cleveland, 39 Ohio St. 351.

¹ See Commonwealth v. Hamilton Manufacturing Co., 120 Mass. 383. [Employment of girls less than fourteen years old in public theatrical exhibitions, &c., may be forbidden under penalty. People v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129, 36 N. E. 4, 25 L. R. A. 794, and note.]

² The legislature may prescribe the qualifications for the practice of dentistry: Wilkins v. State, 113 Ind. 614, 16 N. E. 192; State v. Vanderstins, 42 Minn. 129, 43 N. W. 759, 6 L. R. A. 119; Gosnell v. State, 52 Ark. 225, 12 S. W. 392; or medicine. State v. Dent, 25 W. Va. 1; aff. 129 U. S. 114, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Eastman v. State, 199 Ind. 278, 19 N. E. 97; People v. Pappin, 70 Mich. 6, 37 N. W. 885. [And after license granted the State may revoke it for a cause existing at time of grant and then known, and it may make new regulations and provide penalties for breach thereof, even though such regulations amount under the circumstances to a deprivation of the right to practise. Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 183, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573. Upon validity of regulations of practice of medicine, see note to 14 L. R. A. 579. State may restrict practice of law to males. Ex parte Lockwood, 154 U. S. 116, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1082. But it rests with the courts to determine what qualifications are necessary to admission to the bar. Re Day, 181 Ill. 73, 54 N. E. 646, 50 L. R. A. 619. State may compel all practising physicians to take out new licenses, and to pass examinations therefor. State v. Webster, 150 Ind. 607, 50 N. E. 760; 41 L. R. A. 212.] The right to practise cannot be refused without giving the applicant an opportunity to be heard. State v. State Med. Ex. Board, 32 Minn. 324, 20 N. W. 238; Gage v. Censors, 63 N. H. 92. [See Reetz v. Michigan, — U. S. —, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890.] Physicians may be required to report births and deaths. Robinson v. Hamilton, 60 Iowa, 134, 14 N. W. 202.

³ Upon the general right of the State to regulate trades and occupations, see further, Pierce v. Kimball, 9 Me. 34, 23

Am. Dec. 537; Shepherd v. Commissioners, 59 Ga. 356; State v. Collicut, 1 Lea, 716; Fry v. State, 43 Ind. 552. [Where the constitution directs that "the legislature shall pass laws to provide for the health and safety of employees in factories, smelters, and mines," the legislature is competent to enact that "except in cases of emergency where life or property is in imminent danger" "the period of employment of workmen in all underground mines or workings" and "in smelters and all other institutions for the reduction or refining of ores or metals shall be eight hours per day," and that the violation of any such provision by "any person, body corporate, agent, manager or employer," shall be a misdemeanor. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 363, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, aff. 14 Utah, 71, 90, 45 Pac. 750, 1105, 37 L. R. A. 103, 108. The case in the United States Supreme Court cites many cases bearing upon the subject, and discusses very thoroughly the effect of the Fourteenth Amendment upon the police powers of the States. See also Short v. Bullion, B. & C. Mining Co., 20 Utah, 20, 57 Pac. 720, 45 L. R. A. 603, where effect of this act upon contracts for pay for overtime is considered. That such regulation cannot be made under the ordinary constitution, see Re Morgan, 28 Colo. 415, 58 Pac. 1071, 47 L. R. A. 52, 77 Am. St. 209. In Fiske v. People, 188 Ill. 206, 58 N. E. 985, 52 L. R. A. 291, it is held that an ordinance providing for provisions in city contracts limiting hours of labor upon city works to eight hours was unconstitutional as infringing freedom to contract. For other cases upon the right to limit or regulate hours of labor, see People v. Phyfe, 136 N. Y. 554, 22 N. E. 978, 19 L. R. A. 141; Re Dalton, 61 Kan. 257, 59 Pac. 336, 47 L. R. A. 380; Seattle v. Smyth, 22 Wash. 327, 60 Pac. 1120, 79 Am. St. 939; of females upheld in Wenham v. State, — Neb. —, 91 N. W. 421, 68 L. R. A. 825; Cleveland v. Clement Bros. Const. Co., — Ohio —, 65 N. E. 885, 50 L. R. A. 775; State v. Buchanan, — Wash. —, 70 Pac. 52, 59 L. R. A. 342 (forbidding employment of women more than ten hours a day). See further upon power of State to limit hours of labor, 53 Cent. L. Jour. 384. Upon protection of health of employees, see People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 527, 68 N. W. 382, 32 L. R. A. 853, and note; protection of health within State, State v. Schlemmer, 42 La. An. 1165, 8 So. 297; 10 L. R. A. 135, and note; relation of States to general government in regard to police power, contracts, &c., note to Baldwin's View, 9 L. ed. U. S. 873. In Indianapolis U. Ry. Co. v. Houlihan, 157 Ind. 494, 60 N. E. 943, 54 L. R. A. 787, a statute making railway companies liable to employees for injuries caused by negligence of other employees of specified grade, was upheld as valid exercise of police power.] Where a municipality is given power to license occupations which are proper in themselves and not subject to special evils—e.g. that of a laundry—the license cannot be made conditional on obtaining consent of residents of the neighborhood, as this in effect would be a delegation of its power to license. Matter of Quong Woo, 13 Fed. Rep. 229. The functions of a fertilizer inspector must, except by statutory permission, be exercised within the State. Hammond v. Wilcher, 79 Ga. 421, 5 S. E. 113.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE EXPRESSION OF THE POPULAR WILL.

ALTHOUGH by their constitutions the people have delegated the exercise of sovereign powers to the several departments, they have not thereby divested themselves of the sovereignty. They retain in their own hands, so far as they have thought it needful to do so, a power to control the governments they create, and the three departments are responsible to and subject to be ordered, directed, changed, or abolished by them. But this control and direction must be exercised in the legitimate mode previously agreed upon. The voice of the people, acting in their sovereign capacity, can be of legal force only when expressed at the times and under the conditions which they themselves have prescribed and pointed out by the constitution, or which, consistently with the constitution, have been prescribed and pointed out for them by statute; and if by any portion of the people, however large, an attempt should be made to interfere with the regular working of the agencies of government at any other time or in any other mode than as allowed by existing law, either constitutional or statutory, it would be revolutionary in character, and must be resisted and repressed by the officers who, for the time being, represent legitimate government.¹

¹ "The maxim which lies at the foundation of our government is that all political power originates with the people. But since the organization of government it cannot be claimed that either the legislative, executive, or judicial powers, either wholly or in part, can be exercised by them. By the institution of government the people surrender the exercise of all these sovereign functions of government to agents chosen by themselves, who at least theoretically represent the supreme will of their constituents. Thus all power possessed by the people themselves is given and centred in their chosen representatives." Duchs. Ch. J., in Gibson v. Mason, 5 Nev. 283, 291. See Luther v. Burden, 7 How. 1; Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa, 617, 14 N. W. 735; 15 N. W. 909; State v. Tufts, 19 Nev. 391, 12 Pac. 835.

There are a number of provisions in different State constitutions which require that certain specified propositions—such, for example, as the amendment of the constitution or the removal of a county seat—shall be carried only by a majority vote of the electors, or perhaps by a two-thirds majority. Whether by majority in these provisions is intended a majority of all who took part in the election, by voting on any proposition then submitted, or by voting for any officer then to be chosen, or only a majority of those who voted on the particular proposition, has sometimes been made to turn on the peculiar phraseology of the constitutional provision; but it must be confessed that it is impossible to harmonize the cases, and we give reference to them without attempting it. Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 197; Bayard v. Klinge,

The authority of the people is exercised through elections, (α) by means of which they choose legislative, executive, and judicial

15 Minn. 242; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544; State v. Winkelmeier, 35 Mo. 195; State v. Mayor &c., 37 Mo. 270; State v. Bimler, 38 Mo. 450; State v. Sutterfield, 54 Mo. 591; State v. Brassfield, 67 Mo. 331; State v. St. Louis, 73 Mo. 431; State v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44. 8 S. W. 1; People v. Brown, 11 Ill. 478; Dunnovan v. Green, 37 Ill. 63; Chestnutwood v. Hood, 68 Ill. 132; State v. Swift, 69 Ind. 535; State v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474; State v. Anderson, 26 Neb. 517, 42 N. W. 421; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 709; State v. Echols, 41 Kan. 115, 29 Pac. 523; Cass County v. Johnson, 95 U. S. 360; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 146, 11 Atl. 711; Braden v. Stump, 16 Lea, 581. — [Bryan v. Stephenson, 50 Neb. 520, 70 N. W. 252, 85 L. R. A. 752; Zeller v. Central R. Co., 84 Md. 304; 35 Atl. 932; 34 L. R. A. 469; Belknap v. Louisville, 39 Ky. 474, 36 S. W. 1118, 34 L. R. A. 256; State v. Langlie, 5 N. D. 594, 67 N. W. 958, 32 L. R. A. 733; People v. Berkeley, 102 Cal. 298, 36 Pac. 591, 23 L. R. A. 838.] In respect to municipal and other corporate bodies the general rule is that if a quorum is present when an election is to be made, or other corporate action taken, and the minority for any reason refuse to vote, they must be deemed to acquiesce in the action of those who do vote. Oldknow v. Wainwright, or Rex v. Foxcroft, Burr, 1017; First Parish v. Stearns, 21 Pick. 148; Booker v. Young, 12 Gratt. 303; State v. Green, 37 Ohio St. 227. [Citizens & Taxpayers of De Soto Parish v. Williams, 40 La. Ann. 422, 21 So. 347, 37 L. R. A. 761. But see People v. Berkeley, 102 Cal. 298, 36 Pac. 591, 23 L. R. A. 838.]

(α) [Several States have recently enacted laws for the prevention of bribery, intimidation, fraud, and other corrupt practices at elections. Such are generally called Corrupt Practices Acts. In Mason v. State, 58 Ohio St. 30, 50 N. E. 3, 41 L. R. A. 291, M. was ousted from the office of probate judge for having attempted to influence the votes of sundry persons by promising that in case of his election he would use his influence to secure them various appointments to office, and the right to jury trial was denied, since the action was merely one to try title to office. In State v. Bland, 144 Mo. 534, 45 S. W. 449, 41 L. R. A. 237, a somewhat similar statute, it was held, should be strictly construed; B. was charged with paying money and promising appointments to subordinate offices in order to secure the withdrawal of a rival candidate, to which charge he demurred, and the demurrer was sustained on the ground that the offence prohibited was the act of corruptly influencing the vote of any voter, and not that of securing the withdrawal of an opposing candidate. It must be confessed that in the present case where B. induces his opposing candidate N. to withdraw by promising that in case he is elected he will attempt to secure N.'s appointment to a lucrative position, the circumstances being such that his attempt is practically certain to succeed, the distinction between inducing N. to withdraw in favor of B. and attempting to induce N. to vote for B. seems more subtle than substantial. Where oath of office is prescribed with provision that no other oath or qualification shall ever be required, the candidate cannot be required to make oath as to expenditures. Bradley v. Clark, 133 Cal. 139, 35 Pac. 245. Where the Constitution prohibits more than one election a year, special elections cannot be held, but the special matters must be submitted at a general election. Belknap v. Louisville, 39 Ky. 474, 36 S. W. 1118, 34 L. R. A. 256. Where an appointment to fill a vacancy lasts until "the next election by the people," the appointee holds for the remainder of the regular term and not merely until the next general election. People v. Bodd, 114 Cal. 165, 45 Pac. 1009, 34 L. R. A. 43. The provision that all the qualified electors in a city "shall have the right to vote for mayor and the other elective officers" does not prevent a division of the city into wards so that each elector in a ward is restricted to voting for an alderman from his ward. State v. McAllister, 88 Tex. 284, 31 S. W. 187, 28 L. R. A. 563. But where the members of assembly are to be elected "by the legal voters of the county respectively," and each assemblyman must be an inhabitant of "the county for which he shall be chosen,"

officers, to whom are to be entrusted the exercise of powers of government.¹ In some cases also they pass upon other questions

¹ [The act of voting is an exercise of sovereignty and cannot be compelled. Kansas City v. Whipple, 136 Mo. 475, 38 S. W. 264, 35 L. R. A. 747; but why not? It certainly is not an act of the sovereign, for there are many voters but there can be only one sovereign in any state. That a citizen properly qualified and selected may be compelled to serve as an officer, see People v. Williams, 145 Ill. 573, 43 N. E. 849, 24 L. R. A. 492, and note.] Where neither by constitution nor by statute are the qualifications for office prescribed, any one is eligible who possesses the elective franchise. It may happen, therefore, that one may be an officer who is not a citizen of the United States; for in a number of the States aliens who have declared their intention to become citizens, and have the qualification of residence are given the franchise. McCarty v. Froelke 63 Ind. 507. Whether the converse is true, — that one not an elector cannot hold office, — in the absence of written law on the subject, is possibly open to question. In Barker v. People, 3 Cow. 583, 703, the Chancellor said: "Eligibility to office belongs not exclusively or specially to electors enjoying the right of suffrage. It belongs equally to all persons whomsoever not excluded by the Constitution." So, State v. George, 25 Fla. 555, 580, 81. [And see Stensoff v. State, 29 Tex. 428, 15 S. W. 1156, 12 L. R. A. 304.] But in Wisconsin it is held that only an elector can hold an office; State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 437; State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 90; and this is probably the general understanding. [So held in Oren v. Abbott, 121 Mich. 340, 80 N. W. 372, 47 L. R. A. 93, where the question arose whether a woman otherwise duly qualified and elected might hold the office of prosecuting attorney; also in State v. Van Beck, 87 Iowa, 599, 34 N. W. 525, 19 L. R. A. 622.] The question is not very important, as State constitutions or statutes generally lay down that rule, in some cases adding further requirements. [Where it is required that judges be "learned in the law," this requires that they shall have been admitted to practise law in the courts of the State. Jameson v. Wiggin, 12 S. D. 10, 80 N. W. 187, 46 L. R. A. 317.] One holding a consulate abroad does not cease to be a qualified elector. Wheat v. Smith, 5 Ark. 263, 7 S. W. 161. See Hannon v. Grizzardi, 89 N. C. 115. A provision that only a qualified elector shall hold office does not prevent making payment of taxes a qualification for election as alderman. Darrow v. People, 8 Col. 417, 8 Pac. 661. It is sufficient if a disability is removed before taking office, though existing at the time of election. Privett v. Bickford, 26 Kan. 52; [Demaree v. Scates, 60 Kan. 275, 32 Pac. 1123, 20 L. R. A. 97; State v. Van Beck, 87 Iowa, 599, 34 N. W. 525, 19 L. R. A. 592. But see State v. Sullivan, 45 Minn. 509, 47 N. W. 802, 11 L. R. A. 272, and note; this case holds that the intention to become naturalized must be declared before election. Upon general subject of "Eligibility to Office, as of What Time Determined," see 1 Mich. Law Rev. 17, a paper by Floyd R. Meechem.] Under constitutional provisions that no other oath or test shall be required as a qualification for holding office than the oath of allegiance to the constitution, political ties cannot be made a prerequisite. Atty-Gen. v. Detroit Com. Council, 58 Mich. 213, 24 N. W. 887; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 425, 21 N. E. 237, 4 L. R. A. 93; State v. Denny, 113 Ind. 449, 21 N. E. 274, 4 L. R. A. 65. Conte, as to election officers. People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 587, 5 N. E. 596, 8 N. E. 788. [See further Com. v. Plaisted, 143 Mass. 375, 19 N. E. 224, 12 Am. St. 596, 2 L. R. A. 142; Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173, 25 N. E. 274, 9 L. R. A. 379.] See In re Wortman, 2 N. Y. S. 324. There are some implied disqualifications. One of these is that a person shall not hold incompatible offices: if he accepts an office incompatible with one already held by him, the other is vacated; Milward v. Thatcher, 2 T. R. 51; The King v. Tizzard, 9 B. & C. 418; People v. Carrigue, 2 Hill, 93; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; People v. Ham- the county cannot be divided into two or more single membered districts. State v. Wrightson, 39 N. J. L. 129, 28 Atl. 56, 22 L. R. A. 545.]

specially submitted to them, and adopt or reject a measure according as a majority may vote for or against it. It is obviously

Jan, 96 Ill. 420; State v. Hunt, 2 Ark. 282; Stubbs v. Lea, 64 Me. 95; but see De Turk v. Com., 129 Pa. St. 151, 18 Atl. 757; and if he is elected to both at the same time, he declines one when he accepts the other. Cotton v. Phillips, 50 N. H. 212. [But were his first office is such that he cannot resign it at will (e.g., tax-collector), he is incapable of accepting an incompatible office until his resignation of the former has been accepted. Attorney-General v. Marston, 68 N. H. 485, 22 Atl. 590, 13 L. R. A. 670. Where an officer is prohibited from holding any other office during the term for which he is elected, his resignation does not remove the disability. State v. Sutton, 65 Minn. 147, 65 N. W. 262, 30 L. R. A. 660.] Incompatibility between two offices is an inconsistency in the functions of the two — as judge and clerk of the same court; officer who presents his personal account for audit, and officer who passes upon it, &c.; People v. Green, 68 N. Y. 405; sheriff and justice of the peace; State Bank v. Curran, 10 Ark. 142; Stubbs v. Lea, 64 Me. 195; Wilson v. King, 3 Lit. 457, 14 Am. Dec. 81; State v. Goff, 15 R. I. 565, 9 Atl. 220; governor and member of the legislature; justice of the peace and judge of the appellate court, &c. See Commonwealth v. Binnis, 17 S. & R. 221; State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 590; State v. Feillemann, 28 Ark. 424; Morgan v. Jackson, 52 Ind. 559; State v. Weston, 4 Neb. 234; Re District Attorney, &c., 11 Phila. 654; Sublett v. Bidwell, 47 Miss. 23, 12 Am. Rep. 338; Barnum v. Gilman, 27 Minn. 495, 8 N. W. 375, 35 Am. Rep. 304; McNair v. Somers, 96 N. C. 437, 2 S. E. 161. [Attorney-General v. Common Council of Detroit, 112 Mich. 145, 70 N. W. 459, 37 L. R. A. 211. See also Chambers v. State, 127 Ind. 365, 25 N. E. 805, 11 L. R. A. 258, and note.] In Indiana a judge is ineligible to a non-judicial office whose term begins before the judicial term expires. Vogel v. State, 106 Ind. 374, 8 N. E. 184. See Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294. It is also sometimes provided that no person shall hold offices in two departments of the government at the same time, or two lucrative offices, as to which see Dailey

v. State, 8 Blackf. 329; Creighton v. Piper, 14 Ind. 182; Kerr v. Jones, 19 Ind. 351; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; Crawford v. Dunbar, 32 Cal. 36; Howard v. Shoemaker, 35 Ind. 115; State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221, 4 N. E. 439, 5 N. E. 672; People v. Sanderson, 30 Cal. 160. Or hold both a federal and a State office. Rodman v. Harcourt, 4 B. Monr. 224, 490; Hoglan v. Carpenter, 4 Bush, 89; Re Corliss, 11 R. I. 538; State v. De Gress, 53 Tex. 387; Davenport v. Mayor, 67 N. Y. 454; People v. Brooklyn Common Council, 77 N. Y. 503, 33 Am. Rep. 659; State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 590; People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230, 14 Pac. 853; but a federal watchman may be an alderman. Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. C. 133. Or be eligible to re-election to an office after holding it for a specified period. See Gonell v. Bier, 15 W. Va. 311; Carson v. McPhetridge, 15 Ind. 327; Horton v. Watson, 23 Kan. 229. Or be eligible while a public defaulter. See Hoskins v. Brantley, 57 Miss. 814; Cowley v. People, 95 Ill. 249. Or that he shall be disqualified for using money corruptly to procure election. Commonwealth v. Walter, 86 Pa. St. 15. Or for bribery at a nominating convention. Leonard v. Com., 112 Pa. St. 607, 4 Atl. 220. See Re Nomination of Public Officers, 9 Col. 629, 21 Pac. 474; though a mere promise to serve for less than lawful fees is not a disqualification, where one has not been convicted for it as for an offence against the law. State v. Humphreys, 74 Tex. 406, 12 S. W. 99. See also Meredit v. Christy, 64 Cal. 95, 27 Pac. 863; People v. Goddard, 8 Cal. 432, 7 Pac. 301. Or by or for being a party to a duel. Cochran v. Jones, 14 Am. Law Reg. 222.

As to who are "officers" within the meaning of that term in provisions examined, see Butler v. Board of Regents, 32 Wis. 124; Brown v. Turner, 79 N. C. 93; Elason v. Coleman, 86 N. C. 255; State v. Wilson, 20 Ohio St. 347; Turnop v. Langdon, 40 Mich. 653; State v. Wilmington City Council, 3 Harr. 204; Dickson v. People, 17 Ill. 191; Sharbut v. Hooper, 40 Mich. 503.

It was held in Oliver v. Ingram, Strange, impossible that any considerable people should in general meeting consider, mature, and adopt their own laws; but when a law has been perfected, and it is deemed desirable to take the expression of public sentiment upon it, or upon any other single question, the ordinary machinery of elections is adequate to the end, and the expression is easily and without confusion obtained by submitting such law or such question for an affirmative or negative vote. In this manner constitutions and amendments thereof are adopted or rejected, and matters of local importance in many cases, such as the location of a county seat,¹ the contracting of a local debt, the erection of a public building, the acceptance of a municipal charter, and the like, are passed upon and determined by the people whom they concern, under constitutional or statutory provisions which require or permit it.²

It is supposed when laws are framed for the conduct of elections that their requirements will be observed; that the persons chosen to perform official duties will possess the legal qualifications, and that they will take any oath and give any bond that may be required of them by law, and be regularly inducted into office. But from accident, mistake of law, forgetfulness, or other inadvertence, and sometimes for less excusable reasons, it often happens that some one is found in possession and performing the duties of a public office who cannot defend his incumbency by the strict letter of the law. The fact renders necessary a classification of officers as de jure and de facto. (a)

1114. that a woman, being a voter, at parish elections, might be chosen sexton. Women may by law be school officers in Massachusetts. Opinion of Judges, 115 Mass. 512. And in Iowa. Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 599. Also in many other States. They are also appointed notaries public in several States, are State librarians in some, and members of State charitable boards. [But a woman cannot be notary public in Ohio. State v. Adams, 58 Ohio St. 612, 51 N. E. 135, 41 L. R. A. 727. Nor in Massachusetts. Opinion of Justices, 165 Mass. 596, 43 N. E. 927, 32 L. R. A. 359. She may be county clerk in Missouri. State v. Hostetter, 137 Mo. 630, 33 S. W. 279, 35 L. R. A. 268; see note to this case in L. R. A. upon right of woman to hold office.] In Illinois a woman may be master in chancery; Stuenkel v. People, 39 Ill. 501; and in Colorado a deputy clerk. It is not an "office" which only a qualified elector may hold. Jeffries v. Harrington, 11 Col. 191, 17 Pac. 595. Infants as well as women may be appointed deputies to such ministerial officers as are entitled to act by deputy. [See Jamesville & W. R. Co. v. Fisher, 109 N. C. 1, 13 S. E. 298, 23 L. R. A. 721, and note.]

¹ Where the constitution leaves the location of a county seat to a local vote, the legislature has no power to decide upon it. Stuart v. Blair, 8 Bax. 141; Verner v. Simmons, 33 Ark. 212.

² It is not competent for the legislature to confer the selection of a public officer upon a voluntary association of private individuals. Therefore a statute giving to the members of a voluntary detective association the powers of constables is void. Abels v. Supervisors of Ingham, 42 Mich. 526, 4 N. W. 299.

(b) [Upon officers de jure and de facto and their relations, see State v. Carr, 129 Ind. 44, 28 N. E. 88, 13 L. R. A. 177, and note. Where the governor de jure is present

An officer de jure is one who, possessing the legal qualifications, has been lawfully chosen to the office in question, and has fulfilled any conditions precedent to the performance of its duties. By being thus chosen and observing the precedent conditions, such a person becomes of right entitled to the possession and enjoyment of the office, and the public, in whose interest the office is created, is entitled of right to have him perform its duties. If he is excluded from it, the exclusion is both a public offence and a private injury.

An officer de jure may be excluded from his office by either an officer de facto or an intruder. An officer de facto is one who by some color of right is in possession of an office and for the time being performs its duties with public acquiescence, though having no right in fact.¹ His color of right may come from an election or appointment made by some officer or body having colorable but no actual right to make it;² or made in such disregard of legal requirements as to be ineffectual in law; or made to fill the place of an officer illegally removed;³ or made in favor of a party not having the legal qualifications; or it may come from public acquiescence in the officer holding without performing the precedent conditions, or holding over under claim of right after ¹ One who has the reputation of being the officer he assumes to be, and yet is not a good officer in point of law. Parker v. Hett, 14. Raym. 658; King v. Bedford, Level. 3 East, 556, 348. One who comes in by claim or color of right, or who exercises the office with such circumstances of acquiescence on the part of the public as at least afford a strong presumption of right, but by reason of some defect in his title, or of some informality, omission, or want of qualification, or by reason of the expiration of his term of service, is unable to maintain his possession when called upon by the government to show by what title he holds it. Blackwell on Tax Titles, 92, 93. One who exercises the duties of an office under color of election or appointment to that office. Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585, 588.

There can be no de facto incumbent of an office in the possession of an officer. Cohn v. Beal, 61 Mass. 398; State v. Blossom, 19 Nev. 312, 19 Pac. 430. One who is in hiding cannot be a de facto officer. Williams v. Clayton, 6 Utah, 86, 21 Pac. 398.

² As where the appointing body is acting under an unconstitutional law. Strang. Ex parte, 21 Ohio St. 619; Commonwealth v. McCombs, 56 Pa. St. 436; Cole v. Black River Falls, 57 Wis. 110, 14 N. W. 903; Yorby v. Paine, 62 Wis. 154, 22 N. W. 137. See Leach v. People, 122 Ill. 420, 12 N. E. 726. Cemacore Norton v. Shelby Co., 113 U. S. 425, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121.

³ Watkins v. Inge, 24 Kan. 312. See Meade v. County Treasurer, 38 Mich. 415.

at the seat of government and attempting to exercise the powers of his office, he is also governor de facto, and no other person can be governor de facto at the same time. Powers v. Com., 22 Ky. L. 1897, 61 S. W. 755. An officer whose prescribed term has a stated duration and further until his successor is elected and qualified is de jure until such qualification, and where the time for election of his successor as prescribed in the Constitution has elapsed, the officer's term lasts until the recurrence of the regular time for election of his successor. State v. Bulkeley, 61 Conn. 257, 23 Atl. 186, 14 L. R. A. 657.]

his legal right has been terminated;¹ or possibly from public acquiescence alone when accompanied by such circumstances of official reputation as are calculated to induce people, without inquiry, to submit to or invoke official action on the supposition that the person claiming the office is what he assumes to be.² An intruder is one who attempts to perform the duties of an office without authority of law, and without the support of public acquiescence.

No one is under obligation to recognize or respect the acts of an intruder, and for all legal purposes they are absolutely void.³ But for the sake of order and regularity, and to prevent confusion in the conduct of public business and insecurity of private rights, the acts of officers de facto are not suffered to be questioned because of the want of legal authority except by some direct proceeding instituted for the purpose by the State or by some one claiming the office de jure, or except when the person himself attempts to build up some right, or claim some privilege or emolument, by reason of being the officer which he claims to be.⁴ In all other cases the acts of an officer de facto are as valid and effectual, while he is suffered to retain the office, as though he were an officer by right, and the same legal consequences will flow from them for the protection of the public and of third parties.⁵ This is an important principle, which finds concise ¹ As when one continues to perform the duties of judge after having accepted a seat in the legislature. Woodside v. Wagg, 71 Me. 297. Or a constable continues to act after removal from his town. Case v. State, 20 Ind. 46; Wilson v. King, 3 Litt. 457; 14 Am. Dec. 84.

² State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449, 471, 9 Am. Rep. 407; Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 435; People v. Terry, 108 N. Y. 1, 14 N. E. 815.

³ Hymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 685; Peck v. Holcombe, 3 Port. 329; Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 435. There can be no officer de facto when there is no office. Carroll v. People, 10 Mich. 230; Jesse Hinkle, 31 Kan. 712, 3 Pac. 531. If there is by reason of the unconstitutionality of a law no office de jure to fill, there can be no officer de facto. Norton v. Shelby Co., 118 U. S. 425, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; [contra, Parker v. State, 133 Ind. 178, 33 N. E. 153, 33 N. E. 119, 18 L. R. A. 597.] Compare Leach v. People, 122 Ill. 420, 12 N. E. 723.

⁴ Thus a justice, sued for issuing process after his term has expired, must show his capacity de jure. Grace v. Teague, 81 Me. 559.

⁵ Tucker v. Aiken, 7 N. H. 113; Taylor v. Skrine, 3 Brev. 518; Fowler v. Beebe, 9 Mass. 231, 6 Am. Dec. 62; Hildreth v. McIntyre, 1 J. J. Marsh. 206, 19 Am. Dec. 61; Wilcox v. Smith, 5 Wend. 231, 21 Am. Dec. 213; People v. Kane, 23 Wend. 414; In re Kendall, 85 N. Y. 302; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; State v. Bloom, 17 Wis. 521; People v. Bangs, 24 Ill. 184; Sharp v. Thompson, 100 Ill. 447; Clark v. Commonwealth, 29 Pa. St. 129; Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151; Burke v. Elliott, 4 Ired. 355; Gibb v. Washington, 1 McAll. 430; Bailey v. Fisher, 38 Iowa. 229; Ex parte Norris, 8 S. C. 408; Threadgill v. Railroad Co., 73 N. C. 178; McLean v. State, 8 Heisk. 22; Kreidler v. State, 24 Ohio St. 22; Cooke v. Halsey, 16 Pet. 71. A de facto constable stands upon the same ground as one de jure as regards his liability for killing a person resisting arrest. State v. Dierberger, 90 expression in the legal maxim that the acts of officers de facto cannot be questioned collaterally.

The Right to Participate in Elections. (a)

In another place we have said that, though the sovereignty is in the people, as a practical fact it resides in those persons who

Mo. 253, 2 S. W. 286. [When the Constitution prohibits lengthening the term of a public officer, a statute deferring the time of election of his successor is not thereby made void, even though the Constitutional provision that officers shall hold office until their successors are elected and qualified operates to lengthen the time during which the incumbent occupies the office. State v. Menaugh, 151 Ind. 260, 278, 51 N. E. 117, 357, 43 L. R. A. 408, 418.]

(a) [The importance of regulating primary elections and nominations to office has of recent years become somewhat widely recognized. The right of a party to hold a nominating convention cannot be denied it on account of its smallness, nor can it be compelled to admit every voter who desires to attend its primaries without regard to his political beliefs. Britton v. Election Comm'rs, 123 Cal. 337, 61 Pac. 1115, 51 L. R. A. 115. Nominations by petition are now generally provided for. In State v. Poston, 59 Ohio St. 122, 52 N. E. 105, 43 L. R. A. 60, the requirement that such petition "shall contain a provision to the effect that each signer thereto pledges himself to support and vote for the candidate or candidates whose nominations are therein requested," was held valid as not interposing any unreasonable impediment to the exercise of the elective franchise. In Stephenson v. Bd. of Election Comm'rs, 118 Mich. 395, 76 N. W. 914, 42 L. R. A. 214, it was held that a political convention might organize itself and determine the rights of contesting delegations to seats, and that in case of nominations by rival factions, both sets of nominees must be listed on the official ballot under the party name and emblem. See also Marcum v. Ballot Comm'rs, 42 W. Va. 263, 26 S. E. 281, 36 L. R. A. 296; State v. Arms, 24 Mont. 447, 63 Pac. 401. In Phillips v. Gallagher, 73 Minn. 525, 76 N. W. 255, 42 L. R. A. 222, the power of a convention to control its own procedure was recognized, and the convention was permitted to reject a vote alleged to be erroneous, although the error was not sufficient to overcome the majority of a candidate, and thereafter to vote again upon the nomination for the particular office, which latter vote taken on a later day resulted in the nomination of a person not named in the first vote. Fraud or oppression was declared unnecessary to cause the court to intervene. Witte v. Sanderson, 74 Minn. 118, 76 N. W. 1021, 42 L. R. A. 231, recognizes the right of a convention to delegate to a committee power to name candidates and certify them to the proper public officer in order that their names may be printed upon the official ballot. Hutchinson v. Brown, 122 Cal. 189, 54 Pac. 738, 42 L. R. A. 232, recognizes the converse right to delegate to a committee power to withdraw candidates for the purpose of effecting a fusion. In Kearns v. Howley, 188 Pa. 110, 41 Atl. 273, 42 L. R. A. 245, an injunction against adding to or striking from a political party committee was refused on the ground that no property interests were involved, and that any irregularities could be corrected by the party itself. In State v. Poston, 58 Ohio St. 620, 51 N. E. 150, 42 L. R. A. 237, the statutory requirement that nominees of parties polling in the last preceding election less than one per cent of the total vote could be nominated only by petition was sustained. See also De Walt v. Bartley, 140 Pa. 529, 24 Atl. 185, 15 L. R. A. 771, sustaining requirement of three per cent; State v. Black, 54 N. J. L. 445, 24 Atl. 489, 1021, 15 L. R. A. 769, five per cent. Statute prohibiting name of candidate nominated by two or more parties for same office from being entered more than once on the official ballot is valid. State v. Anderson, 100 Wis. 529, 76 N. W. 482, 42 L. R. A. 239. Where the Secretary of State is required to arrange the party lists of candidates in the order of the average numbers of votes received by the candidates of the various parties in the preceding election, and in by the constitution of the State are permitted to exercise the elec-

that election two parties "fused" upon the entire list, the Secretary will be allowed to exercise his best judgment in determining the order of the party lists, and in the absence of fraud, prejudice, and partiality, the courts will not interfere with his discretion. Higgen v. Berg, 74 Minn. 11, 76 N. W. 788, 42 L. R. A. 245. Where primary elections are regulated by law and conducted at public expense they are public elections, and the qualifications of any voter thereat must be those prescribed in the Constitution. Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 370, 52 Pac. 659, 41 L. R. A. 136. In requiring an official ballot, the voter cannot be restricted to the candidates whose names are thereon printed. He must be allowed to vote for whom he pleases. State v. Dillon, 32 Fla. 545, 14 So. 383, 22 L. R. A. 124. Contra, State v. McElroy, 44 La. Ann. 796, 11 So. 133, 15 L. R. A. 278. An unauthorized vignette appearing upon all the ballots and printed thereon in the operation of printing the ballots is not a distinguishing mark. Lindstrom v. Bd. of Canvassers, 94 Mich. 467, 54 N. W. 280, 19 L. R. A. 171. The State may make reasonable regulations concerning what names of candidates shall be printed upon the official ballot, e.g., that each candidate whose name is to be printed shall be nominated by a certain number of petitioners, or by a party having at the last preceding election a specified strength. State v. Black, 54 N. J. L. 440, 24 Atl. 489, 1021, 16 L. R. A. 760; Murphy v. Curry, 137 Cal. 479, 70 Pac. 461; Todd v. Comm'rs, 104 Mich. 474, 62 N. W. 564, 64 N. W. 495, 29 L. R. A. 330; State v. Bode, 55 Ohio, 224, 45 N. E. 195, 60 Am. St. 696, 34 L. R. A. 498; State v. Anderson, 100 Wis. 523, 76 N. W. 482, 42 L. R. A. 239; State v. Moore, — Minn. —, 92 N. W. 4. Courts will not go back of returns of authorities of the party as to who are its nominees. Moody v. Trimble, 22 Ky. L. 492, 55 S. W. 504; see also Davis v. Hambrick, 22 Ky. L. 815, 58 S. W. 779; also State v. Moran, 24 Mont. 433, 63 Pac. 890; Adder v. Davenport, — Idaho, —, 62 Pac. 681; State v. Hogan, 24 Mont. 397, 52 Pac. 653. For other cases arising under Australian Ballot Laws, see Sims v. Daniels, 57 Kan. 552, 40 Pac. 952, 35 L. R. A. 148, partially overruled in Milder v. Clark, 62 Kan. 278, 62 Pac. 684; McDonald v. Hinton, 114 Cal. 484, 45 Pac. 870, 35 L. R. A. 152; Breidenthal v. Edwards, 57 Kan. 332, 46 Pac. 469, 34 L. R. A. 149; State v. Johnson, 18 Mont. 548, 46 Pac. 583, 34 L. R. A. 313; State v. Tooker, 15 Mont. 510, 46 Pac. 530, 34 L. R. A. 815; State v. Burdick, 6 Wyo. 448, 46 Pac. 854, 34 L. R. A. 845; Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724, 67 N. W. 755, 33 L. R. A. 53; Cole v. Tucker, 164 Mass. 465, 41 N. E. 681, 29 L. R. A. 608; Moyer v. Van De Vanter, 12 Wash. 377, 41 Pac. 60, 29 L. R. A. 670; Manston v. McIntosh, 58 Minn. 525, 60 N. W. 672, 28 L. R. A. 605; Stackpole v. Hallahan, 15 Mont. 40, 40 Pac. 80, 28 L. R. A. 582; Taylor v. Bleakley, 55 Kan. 1, 39 Pac. 1045, 28 L. R. A. 683; Re Contested Election, 165 Pa. 233, 30 Atl. 955, 27 L. R. A. 234; Boyd v. Mills, 53 Kan. 564, 37 Pac. 15, 25 L. R. A. 486; Ellis v. May, 99 Mich. 538, 58 N. W. 483, 25 L. R. A. 325; State v. Dillon, 32 Fla. 545, 14 So. 383, 22 L. R. A. 124; Sego v. Stoddard, 155 Ind. 237, 36 N. E. 264, 22 L. R. A. 468; Eaton v. Brown, 96 Cal. 371, 31 Pac. 250, 17 L. R. A. 297; Bowers v. Smith, 111 Mo. 45, 20 S. W. 101, 15 L. R. A. 754, and note; People v. Shaw, 133 N. Y. 493, 31 N. E. 512, 16 L. R. A. 606; De Walt v. Bartley, 140 Pa. 525, 529, 25 Atl. 448, 24 Atl. 185, 15 L. R. A. 771; Allen v. Glynn, 17 Col. 538, 29 Pac. 670, 15 L. R. A. 743; State v. Russell, 34 Neb. 116, 51 N. W. 465, 15 L. R. A. 749; Parvin v. Winberg, 139 Ind. 531, 30 N. E. 790, 15 L. R. A. 775; People v. Bd. of Co. Canvassers, 129 N. Y. 395, 29 N. E. 327, 14 L. R. A. 624; Cook v. State, 99 Tenn. 467, 19 S. W. 471, 13 L. R. A. 183; Shields v. Jacob, 88 Mich. 164, 50 N. W. 195, 13 L. R. A. 799; Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 27 Pac. 779, 13 L. R. A. 761, and note; Fisher v. Dudley, 74 Md. 242, 22 Atl. 2, 12 L. R. A. 589; Felds v. Osborne, 69 Conn. 544, 21 Atl. 1070, 12 L. R. A. 551; Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532, 48 N. W. 951, 10 L. R. A. 171, note to 10 L. R. A. 150; Price v. Lusk, 10 Mont. 61, 24 Pac. 749, 9 L. R. A. 457; Re Ballot Act, 10 R. I. 796, 19 Atl. 656, 5 L. R. A. 778; Morris v. Bd. of Canvassers, 49 W. Va. 251, 38 S. E. 590; Nicholls v. Barriek, 27 Cal. 432, 62 Pac. 202; Beckwith v. Winters, 28 Col. 96, 62 Cal. 835; Beckwith v. Rucker, 25 Col. 31, 62 Pac. 836; and several cases following in same report; State v. Fahey, 8 N. D. 90, 76 N. W. 990.]

tive franchise.¹ The whole subject of the regulation of elections, including the prescribing of qualifications for suffrage, is left by the national Constitution to the several States, except as it is provided by that instrument that the electors for representatives in Congress shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature,² and as the fifteenth amendment forbids denying to citizens the right to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.³ Participation in the elective franchise is a privilege rather than a right, and it is granted or denied on grounds of general policy; the prevailing view being that it should be as general as possible consistent with the public safety. Aliens are generally excluded,⁴ though in some States they are allowed to vote after residence for a specified period, provided they have declared their intention to become citizens in the manner prescribed by law. The fifteenth amendment, it will be seen, does not forbid denying the franchise to citizens except upon certain specified grounds, and it is matter of public history that its purpose was to prevent discriminations in this regard as against persons of African descent. Minors, who equally with adult persons are citizens, are still excluded, as are also women,⁵ and sometimes persons who have been convicted of infamous crimes.⁶ In some States laws will be found in existence

¹ Ante, p. 57. See article by Dr. Spear, in 16 Albany Law Journal, 272, in which, among other things, the force and scope of the new amendments to the federal Constitution in their relation to suffrage are considered. Until recently the regulation and control of all elections, including elections for members of Congress, and the punishment of offences against election laws, has been left to the States exclusively. Congress, however, has undoubted authority to make such regulations as shall seem needful to ensure a full and fair expression of opinion in the election of members of Congress, and also to guard and protect all rights conferred by the recent amendments to the federal Constitution. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371; Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399; In re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1283; United States v. Goldman, 8 Woods, 187. [The power of Congress over State elections is in Lacey v. United States, 167 Fed. 114, 46 C. C. A. 189, 53 L. R. A. 660, held to be dependent upon the fifteenth amendment alone.]

² Art. 1, § 2.

³ This amendment had the effect to abrogate all provisions in State laws and constitutions restricting the suffrage to white persons. Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370.

⁴ An unnaturalized Indian, who has surrendered his tribal relations is not a citizen nor entitled to vote, though born in the United States and a resident of a State. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41.

⁵ See Opinions of Justices, 62 Mo. 596; Rohrbacher v. Mayor of Jackson, 51 Miss. 735; Spencer v. Board of Registration, 1 MacArthur, 189; Van Valkenburg v. Brown, 43 Cal. 43; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162; Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash. Ty. 599, 19 Pac. 135; [Gougar v. Timberlake, 148 Ind. 38, 46 N. E. 339, 37 L. R. A. 644; Coffin v. Thompson, 97 Mich. 188, 56 N. W. 567, 21 L. R. A. 692, and note.] But in some States they may vote upon school matters only. Brown v. Phillips, 71 Wis. 239, 36 N. W. 242; State v. Cones, 16 Neb. 444, 19 N. W. 682; Belles v. Burr, 76 Mich. 1, 43 N. W. 24.

⁶ Story on Const. (4th ed.) § 1972.

which, either generally or in particular cases, deny the right to vote to those persons who lack a specified property qualification, or who do not pay taxes. (a) In some States idiots and lunatics are also expressly excluded; and it has been supposed that these unfortunate classes, by the common political law of England and of this country, were excluded with women, minors, and aliens from exercising the right of suffrage, even though not prohibited therefrom by any express constitutional or statutory provision.¹ Wherever the constitution has prescribed the qualifications of electors, they cannot be changed or added to by the legislature,² or otherwise than by an amendment of the constitution.

One of the most common requirements is, that the party offering to vote shall reside within the district which is to be affected

¹ See Cushing's Legislative Assemblies, § 24; also § 27, and notes referring to legislative cases; McCrary, Law of Elections, §§ 59, 73; Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 488. Drunkenness is regarded as temporary insanity. Ibid. Idiots and insane persons are excluded in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Delaware, Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland (provided they are under guardianship as such), Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. Convicted felons are excluded in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. Persons under guardianship are excluded in Florida, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin. Paupers are excluded in Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts (see Justices' Opinions, 124 Mass. 696), New Jersey, Rhode Island, and West Virginia. Persons kept in any poorhouse or other asylum at public expense are excluded in California, Colorado, Missouri, and South Carolina. Persons confined in public prisons are excluded in California, Colorado, Missouri and South Carolina. Persons under interdiction are excluded in Louisiana; and persons excused from paying taxes at their own request, in New Hampshire. Capacity to read is required in Connecticut; and capacity to read and write, in Massachusetts.

² See Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 418; Brown v. Grover, 6 Bush, 1; Quinn v. State, 35 Ind. 485; Huber v. Reiley, 53 Pa. St. 112, ante, p. 98, note; People v. Canaday, 73 N. C. 198; State v. Tuttle, 63 Wis. 45, 8 N. W. 791. Compare State v. Neal, 42 Mo. 119. Where a disqualification to vote is made to depend upon the commission of crime, the election officers cannot be made the triers of the offence. Huber v. Reiley, 53 Pa. St. 112; State v. Symonds, 59 Me. 151; Burkett v. McCarty, 10 Bush, 758. It is not competent for the legislature to discriminate between voters and require that one class of them shall be taxpayers, while not making the same requirement as to the others. Lyman v. Martin, 2 Utah, 136. But voters at municipal elections may be required to pay taxes before voting. Buckner v. Gordon, 81 Ky. 635. [State v. Dillon, 32 Fla. 545, 14 So. 388, 22 L. R. A. 124.] In Nevada every male citizen, except convicts and paupers, having the franchise, Mormons cannot be excluded by registration laws. State v. Findley, 20 Nev. 198, 19 Pac. 241. It is otherwise in the Territories. Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 43, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Innis v. Bolton, 2 Idaho, 407, 17 Pac. 264.

(a) [See Friesleben v. Shallicross, 9 Houst. (Del.) 1, 19 Atl. 573, 8 L. R. A. 337, and note.]

by the exercise of the right. If a State officer is to be chosen, the voter should be a resident of the State: and if a county, city, or township officer, he should reside within such county, city, or township. This is the general rule; and for the more convenient determination of the right to vote, and to prevent fraud, it is now generally required that the elector shall only exercise within the municipality where he has his residence his right to participate in either local or general elections. (a) Requiring him to vote among his neighbors, by whom he will be likely to be generally known, the opportunities for illegal or fraudulent voting will be less than if the voting were allowed to take place at a distance and among strangers. And wherever this is the requirement of the constitution, any statute permitting voters to deposit their ballots elsewhere must necessarily be void.¹

A person's residence is the place of his domicile, or the place where his habitation is fixed without any present intention of removing therefrom.² The words "inhabitant," "citizen," and

¹ Opinions of Judges, 30 Conn. 591; Hulseman v. Rema, 41 Pa. St. 396; Chase v. Miller, 41 Pa. St. 403; Opinions of Judges, 44 N. H. 633; Bourland v. Hildreth, 28 Cal. 161; People v. Blodgett, 13 Mich. 127; Opinions of Judges, 37 Vt. 655; Day v. Jones, 31 Cal. 261. The case of Morrison v. Springer, 15 Iowa, 304, is not in harmony with those above cited. So far as the election of representatives in Congress and electors of president and vice-president is concerned, the State constitutions cannot preclude the legislature from prescribing the "times, places, and manner of holding" the same, as allowed by the national Constitution, — art. 1, § 4, and art. 2, § 1, — and a statute permitting such election to be held out of the State would consequently not be invalid. Opinions of Justices, 45 N. H. 595; Opinions of Judges, 37 Vt. 655. There are now constitutional provisions in New York, Michigan, Missouri, Connecticut, Maryland, Kansas, Mississippi, Nevada, Rhode Island, and Pennsylvania, which permit soldiers in actual service to cast their votes where they may happen to be stationed at the time of voting. It may also be allowed in Ohio. Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio, n. s. 573.

² Putnam v. Johnson, 10 Mass. 488; Rue High's Case, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 515; Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. St. 302, 10 Am. Rep. 698; Church v. Rowell, 49 Me. 367; Littlefield v. Brooks, 50 Me. 475; Parsons v. Bangor, 61 Me. 457; Arnold v. Davis, 8 R. I. 341; Hannon v. Grizzard, 89 N. C. 115; Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170; Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 498; Sturgeon v. Korte, 34 Ohio St. 525; Story, Conf. Laws, § 43. As to what residence is sufficient, see Kellogg v. Hickman, 12 Col. 256, 21 Pac. 325; Kreitz v. Behrens-meyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 232; [Langhammer v. Munter, 50 Md. 518, 31 Atl. 300, 27 L. R. A. 330]. That one should vote where he eats, not where he lodges, if at different places, see Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398, 40 N. W. 553.

(a) [The mere fact that one lives upon a steamer does not give him a voting residence at her home port, even though he has no voting residence elsewhere, and is unmarried. Howard v. Skinner, 87 Md. 556, 40 Atl. 373, 40 L. R. A. 753; Jones v. Skinner, 87 Md. 560, 40 Atl. 381, 40 L. R. A. 752. Residence is not changed by presence in and support at and by a state "soldiers' home." Welcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 361, 56 N. W. 837, 23 L. R. A. 216, and note on residence and attendance or presence at public institutions; see also to same effect Powell v. Spackman, — Idaho, —, 65 Pac. 503.]

"resident," as employed in different constitutions to define the qualifications of electors, mean substantially the same thing; and one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home.¹ Every person at all times must be considered as having a domicile somewhere, and that which he has acquired at one place is considered as continuing until another is acquired at a different place.² It has been held that a student in an institution of learning, who has residence there for purposes of instruction, may vote at such place, provided he is emancipated from his father's family, and for the time has no home elsewhere.³

¹ Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies, § 33; State v. Aldrich, 14 R. I. 171. [Where territory in which a voter has continuously resided up to the time of annexation to a municipality is annexed to or incorporated with it, his period of such residence is to be counted in determining his residential qualification for eligibility to office. Gibson v. Wood, 105 Ky. 740, 49 S. W. 798, 43 L. R. A. 639.]

² That it is not a necessary consequence of this doctrine that one must always be entitled to vote somewhere, see Kreitz v. Behrenmeyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 232.

³ Putnam v. Johnson, 10 Mass. 488; Lincoln v. Haygood, 11 Mass. 360; William v. Ludlow, 90 Mass. 587; Perry v. Reynolds, 53 Conn. 527, 8 Atl. 555. Compare Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 179. A different conclusion is arrived at in Pennsylvania v. Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. St. 392, 10 Am. Rep. 695. And in Iowa, Vanderpool v. O'Hanlon, 63 Iowa, 246, 5 N. W. 119; 36 Am. Rep. 219. "The questions of residence, inhabitancy, or domicile, — for although not in all respects precisely the same, they are nearly so, and depend much upon the same evidence, — are attended with more difficulty than almost any other which are presented for adjudication. No exact definition can be given of domicile; it depends upon no one fact or combination of circumstances; but, from the whole taken together, it must be determined in each particular case. It is a maxim that every man must have a domicile somewhere, and also that he can have but one. Of course it follows that his existing domicile continues until he acquires another; and vice versa, by acquiring a new domicile he relinquishes his former one. From this view it is manifest that very slight circumstances must often decide the question. It depends upon the preponderance of the evidence in favor of two or more places; and it may often occur that the evidence of facts tending to establish the domicile in one place would be entirely conclusive, were it not for the existence of facts and circumstances of a still more conclusive and decisive character, which fix it beyond question in another. So, on the contrary, very slight circumstances may fix one's domicile, if not contradicted by more conclusive facts fixing it in another place. If a seaman, without family or property, sails from the place of his nativity, which may be considered his domicile of origin, although he may return only at long intervals, or even be absent many years, yet if he does not by some actual residence or other means acquire a domicile elsewhere, he retains his domicile of origin." Shaw, Ch. J., Thorndike v. City of Boston, 1 Met. 242, 245. And see Alston v. Newcomer, 42 Miss. 186; Johnson v. People, 94 Ill. 505. In Inhabitants of Abington v. Inhabitants of North Bridgewater, 23 Pick. 170, it appeared that a town line ran through the house occupied by a party, leaving a portion on one side sufficient to form a habitation, and a portion on the other not sufficient for that purpose. Held, that the domicile must be deemed to be on the side first mentioned. It was intimated also that where a house was thus divided, and the party slept habitually on one side, that circumstance should be regarded as a preponderating one to fix his residence there, in the absence of other proof. And see Rex v. St. Olave's, 1 Strange, 51.

By the constitutions of several of the Temporary absence from one's home, with continuous intention to return, will not deprive one of his residence, even though it extend through a series of years.¹

Conditions to the Exercise of the Elective Franchise.

While it is true that the legislature cannot add to the constitutional qualifications of electors, it must nevertheless devolve upon that body to establish such regulations as will enable all persons entitled to the privilege to exercise it freely and securely, and exclude all who are not entitled from improper participation therein. For this purpose the times of holding elections, the manner of conducting them and of ascertaining the result, are prescribed, and heavy penalties are imposed upon those who shall vote illegally, or instigate others to do so, or who shall attempt to preclude a fair election or to falsify the result. The propriety, and indeed the necessity, of such regulations are undisputed. In some of the States it has also been regarded as important that lists of voters should be prepared before the day of election, in which should be registered the name of every person qualified to vote. Under such a regulation, the officers whose duty it is to administer the election laws are enabled to proceed with more deliberation in the discharge of their duties, and to avoid the haste and confusion that must attend the determination upon

States, it is provided, in substance, that no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence, while employed in the service of the United States; nor while a student in any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse or asylum at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison. See Constitutions of New York, Illinois, Indiana, California, Michigan, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, Oregon, and Wisconsin. A pauper inmate of a soldiers' home comes within such provision. Silvey v. Lindsay, 107 N. Y. 55, 13 N. E. 444. In several of the other States there are provisions covering some of these cases, but not all. A provision that no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence in the service of the United States, does not preclude one from acquiring a residence in the place where, and in the time while, he is present in such service. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123; Moear v. Harvey, 128 Mass. 219. If a man takes up his permanent abode at the place of an institution of learning, the fact of his entering it as a student will not preclude his acquiring a legal residence there: Sanders v. Getchell, 73 Me. 158; Pedigo v. Grimes, 113 Ind. 148, 13 N. E. 709; but if he is domiciled at the place for the purposes of instruction only, it is deemed proper and right that he should neither lose his former residence nor gain a new one in consequence thereof. Vanderpool v. O'Hanlon, 53 Iowa, 246, 5 N. W. 119, 35 Am. Rep. 216.

That persons residing upon lands within a State, but set apart for some national purpose, and subjected to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, are not voters, see Opinions of Judges, 1 Met. 589; Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St. 590; McCrary, Law of Elections, § 25.

¹ Macnaught v. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241; Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. St. 502, 10 Am. Rep. 698; Dennis v. State, 17 Fla. 389; Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 206, 7 S. W. 151.

election day of the various and sometimes difficult questions concerning the right of individuals to exercise this important franchise. Electors, also, by means of this registry, are notified in advance what persons claim the right to vote, and are enabled to make the necessary examination to determine whether the claim is well founded, and to exercise the right of challenge if satisfied any person registered is unqualified. When the constitution has established no such rule, and is entirely silent on the subject, it has sometimes been claimed that the statute requiring voters to be registered before the day of election, and excluding from the right all whose names do not appear upon the list, was unconstitutional and void, as adding another test to the qualifications of electors which the constitution has prescribed, and as having the effect, where electors are not registered, to exclude from voting persons who have an absolute right to that franchise by the fundamental law.¹ This position, however, has not been generally accepted as sound by the courts. The provision for a registry deprives no one of his right, but is only a reasonable regulation under which the right may be exercised.² Such regulations must ¹ See Page v. Allen, 55 Pa. St. 338. And compare Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 498; Della v. Kennedy, 49 Wis. 555, 6 N. W. 246, 38 L. 35 Am. Rep. 786; White v. Multnomah Co., 13 Orig. 317, 10 Pac. 484. In State v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265, 34 N. W. 439, it is said the voter has the right to prove himself an elector, register, and vote at any time before the polls close. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania laid down a rule in conflict with these cases. In Patterson v. Barlow, 60 Pa. St. 54, which case is in harmony with those cited in the next note.

² Copen v. Foster, 12 Pick. 485, 23 Am. Dec. 636; People v. Koopelkom, 10 Mich. 342; State v. Bond, 38 Mo. 425; State v. Hilmantel, 21 Wis. 556; State v. Baker, 38 Wis. 71; Byler v. Ascher, 47 Ill. 19; Monroe v. Collins, 17 Ohio St. 635; Edwards v. Banbury, 28 Iowa, 267, 4 Am. Rep. 177; Ensworth v. Albin, 46 Mo. 459; Acid v. Walton, 12 La. Ann. 129; Free Polling Lists, 13 R. I. 729; State v. Butts, 31 Kan. 537, 2 Pac. 618. As to the conclusiveness of the registry, see Hyde v. Brush, 34 Conn. 454; Keenan v. Cook, 12 R. I. 52. A law closing registration three weeks before the election has been upheld. People v. Hoffmann, 119 Ill. 657, 5 N. E. 599, 8 N. E. 788. Otherwise as to one closing it five days before: Daggett v. Hudson, 43 Ohio St. 548, 3 N. E. 538; and ten days before: State v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265, 34 N. W. 439. Registration may be required at a city election when it is not by State law. McMahon v. Savannah, 66 Ga. 217. McMahon v. McClelland, 83 Ky. 653. [Voter may be required to exhibit his poll-tax receipt, or make affidavit that he has paid the tax and lost or misplaced the receipt. State v. Old, 95 Tenn. 723, 34 S. W. 630, 31 L. R. A. 837. But a law attempting to invalidate ballots upon which the inspectors have neglected to mark their initials is void where the constitution provides that all persons having certain qualifications "shall be entitled to vote at all elections." Moyer v. Van De Venter, 12 Wash. 377, 41 Pac. 69, 29 L. R. A. 670. Where statute provides that upon voter's taking a specified oath "his vote shall be received," such provision is mandatory. Walcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 561, 66 N. W. 837, 23 L. R. A. 213. An unregistered voter may be required to make affidavit as to his qualifications, stating them in full. Cusick's Appeal, 136 Pa. 459, 20 Atl. 574, 10 L. R. A. 228. Requirements in registration law must be reasonable. Owensboro v. Hickman, 90 Ky. 629, 14 S. W. 688, 10 L. R. A. 224, and note.

always have been within the power of the legislature, unless forbidden. Many resting upon the same principle are always prescribed, and have never been supposed to be open to objection. Although the constitution provides that all male citizens twenty-one years of age and upwards shall be entitled to vote, it would not be seriously contended that a statute which should require all such citizens to go to the established place for holding the polls, and there deposit their ballots, and not elsewhere, was a violation of the constitution, because prescribing an additional qualification, namely, the presence of the elector at the polls. All such reasonable regulations of the constitutional right which seem to the legislature important to the preservation of order in elections, to guard against fraud, undue influence, and oppression, and to preserve the purity of the ballot-box, are not only within the constitutional power of the legislature, but are commendable, and at least some of them absolutely essential. And where the law requires such a registry, and forbids the reception of votes from any persons not registered, an election in a township where no such registry has ever been made will be void, and cannot be sustained by making proof that none in fact but duly qualified electors have voted. It is no answer that such a rule may enable the registry officers, by neglecting their duty, to disfranchise the electors altogether; the remedy of the electors is by proceedings to compel the performance of the duty; and the statute, being imperative and mandatory, cannot be disregarded.¹ The danger, however, of any such misconduct on the part of officers is comparatively small, when the duty is entrusted to those who are chosen in the locality where the registry is to be made, and who are consequently immediately responsible to those who are interested in being registered.

All regulations of the elective franchise, however, must be reasonable, uniform, and impartial; they must not have for their

¹ People v. Kopplekom, 16 Mich. 342; Zeller v. Chapman, 54 Mo. 602; Nefzger v. Davenport, &c. R. R. Co., 56 Iowa, 642; Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill. 583. It has nevertheless been held that if the ballots of unregistered voters are received, they should not be rejected in a contest. Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170; Kuykendall v. Harker, 89 Ill. 123. The law does not become unconstitutional because of the fact that, by the neglect of the officers to attend to the registry, voters may be disfranchised. Ibid. Ensworth v. Albin, 46 Mo. 450. But informalities in a registry will not vitiate it, and canvassers cannot reject votes because of them. State v. Baker, 38 Wis. 71. Compare Barnes v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 305; Newson v. Earnheart, 86 N. C. 381; De Berry v. Nicholson, 102 N. C. 465, 9 S. E. 545. That a board of registration has judicial functions, see Fausler v. Parsons, 6 W. Va. 450, 20 Am. Rep. 431. Such board may be civilly liable for wrongful and malicious refusal to register a person. Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 15, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

purpose directly or indirectly to deny or abridge the constitutional right of citizens to vote, or unnecessarily to impede its exercise; if they do, they must be declared void.¹

In some other cases preliminary action by the public authorities may be requisite before any legal election can be held. If an election is one which a municipality may hold or not at its option, and the proper municipal authority decides against holding it, it is evident that individual citizens must acquiesce, and that any votes which may be cast by them on the assumption of right must be altogether nugatory.² The same would be true of an election to be held after proclamation for that purpose, and which must fail if no such proclamation has been made.³ Where, how-

¹ Capen v. Foster, 12 Pick. 465, 23 Am. Dec. 642; Monroe v. Collins, 17 Ohio St. 635. All male citizens resident in the State a year and the town six months being electors, an act is void which forbids to a naturalized person the right to be registered within thirty days of naturalization. Kinneen v. Wells, 144 Mass. 497, 11 N. E. 916. Under the Constitution of Ohio, the right of suffrage is guaranteed to "white male citizens," and by a long series of decisions it was settled that persons having a preponderance of white blood were "white" within its meaning. It was also settled that judges of election were liable to an action for refusing to receive the vote of a qualified elector. A legislature unfriendly to the construction of the constitution above stated passed an act which, while prescribing penalties against judges of election who should refuse to receive or sanction the rejection of a ballot from any person, knowing him to have the qualifications of an elector, concluded with a proviso that the act and the penalties thereto "shall not apply to clerks or judges of election for refusing to receive the votes of persons having a distinct and visible admixture of African blood, nor shall they be liable to damages by reason of such rejection." Other provisions of the act plainly discriminated against the class of voters mentioned, and it was held to be clearly unreasonable, partial, calculated to subvert or impede the exercise of the right of suffrage by this class, and therefore void. Monroe v. Collins, supra. [Where a minor becomes qualified between the completion of the preliminary registration and the final review, if he has offered his name at the preliminary for conditional registration, he can compel registration of his name at the review. Barret v. Taylor, 85 Md. 173, 36 Atl. 708, 36 L. R. A. 124; see also Drake v. Drewry, 112 Ga. 308, 37 S. E. 432. Requirement that every voter who has been six months absent from the State since last voting in it shall register with county clerk his claim to be a legal voter before he will be permitted to vote again is void for unreasonableness. Brewer v. McClelland, 144 Ind. 423, 32 N. E. 219, 17 L. R. A. 845; Morris v. Powell, 125 Ind. 281, 25 N. E. 221, 9 L. R. A. 326. A law requiring registration in person, allowing but five days for registration, and making no provision for sickness and unavoidable absence on those days is void for unreasonableness. Attorney-General v. Detroit, 78 Mich. 545, 44 N. W. 383, 7 L. R. A. 99, and note. Registration for last preceding general election may be made sufficient for a special election. Pickett v. Russell, 42 Fla. 116, 634, 28 So. 764.]

² Opinions of Judges, 7 Mass. 523; Opinions of Judges, 15 Mass. 557.

³ People v. Porter, 6 Cal. 26; McKune v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49; People v. Martin, 12 Cal. 409; Jones v. State, 1 Kan. 273; Barry v. Lauck, 6 Col. 558; Stephens v. People, 89 Ill. 837. So if notice is given but not as the law requires: State v. Echols, 41 Kan. 1, 20 Pac. 523; or if it fails to specify time and place. Morgan v. Gloucester, 44 N. J. L. 137. But such informalities will not vitiate, if as many vote as usual. Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 269, 7 S. W. 161. [But where no notice was given and only ninety-four out of one thousand two hundred voters vote

ever, both the time and the place of an election are prescribed by law, every voter has a right to take notice of the law, and to deposit his ballot at the time and place appointed, notwithstanding the officer, whose duty it is to give notice of the election, has failed in that duty. The notice to be thus given is only additional to that which the statute itself gives, and is prescribed for the purpose of greater publicity; but the right to hold the election comes from the statute, and not from the official notice. It has therefore been frequently held that when a vacancy exists in an office, which the law requires shall be filled at the next general election, the time and place of which are fixed, and that notice of the general election shall also specify the vacancy to be filled, an election at that time and place to fill the vacancy will be valid, notwithstanding the notice is not given; and such election cannot be defeated by showing that a small portion only of the electors were actually aware of the vacancy, or cast their votes to fill it.¹ But this would not be the case if either the time or the place were not fixed by law, so that notice became essential for that purpose.² for candidates for the particular office, and then by means of posters on the official ballots, the election is void. Wilson v. Brown, 22 Ky. L. 708, 58 S. W. 595.]

¹ People v. Cowles, 13 N. Y. 250; People v. Brenham, 3 Cal. 477; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; People v. Hartwell, 12 Mich. 508; Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; State v. Orvis, 29 Wis. 235; State v. Goetze, 22 Wis. 533; State v. Skirving, 19 Neb. 437, 27 N. W. 723; [Adair v. Sec. of State, 84 Mich. 420, 48 N. W. 31, 11 L. R. A. 554.] The case of Foster v. Scarif, 15 Ohio St. 532, would seem to be contra. A general election was to be held, at which by law an existing vacancy in the office of judge of probate was required to be filled. The sheriff, however, omitted all mention of this office in his notice of election, and the voters generally were not aware that a vacancy was to be filled. Nominations were made for the other offices, but none for this, but a candidate presented himself for whom less than a fourth of the voters taking part in the election cast ballots. It was held that the election to fill the vacancy was void. [When general election law requires all elections to be held at places specified or described therein, places need not be specified in a notice of election to pass upon question of issuing county bonds. Packwood v. Kittitas County, 15 Wash. 88, 45 Pac. 640, 33 L. R. A. 673.]

² State v. Young, 4 Iowa, 561. An act had been passed for the incorporation of the city of Washington, and by its terms it was to be submitted to the people on the 15th of the following February, for their acceptance or rejection, at an election to be called and holden in the same manner as township elections under the general law. The time of notice for the regular township elections was, by law, to be determined by the trustees, but for the first township meeting fifteen days' notice was made requisite. An election was holden, assumed to be under the act in question; but no notice was given of it, except by the circulation, on the morning of the election, of an extra newspaper containing a notice that an election would be held on that day at a specified place. It was held that the election was void. The act contemplated some notice before any legal vote could be taken, and that which was given could not be considered any notice at all. This case differs from all of those above cited, where vacancies were to be filled at a general election, and where the law itself would give to the electors all the information

The Manner of Exercising the Right.

The mode of voting in this country, at all general elections, is almost universally by ballot.¹ "A ballot may be defined to be a piece of paper or other suitable material, with the name written or printed upon it of the person to be voted for; and where the suffrages are given in this form, each of the electors in person deposits such a vote in the box, or other receptacle provided for the purpose, and kept by the proper officers."² The distinguishing feature of this mode of voting is, that every voter is thus enabled to secure and preserve the most complete and inviolable secrecy in regard to the persons for whom he votes, and thus escape the influences which, under the system of oral suffrages, may be brought to bear upon him with a view to overbear and intimidate, and thus prevent the real expression of public sentiment.³ which was requisite. In this case, although the time was fixed, the place was not; and, if a notice thus circulated on the morning of election could be held sufficient, it might well happen that the electors generally would fail to be informed, so that their right to vote might be exercised. See also Barry v. Lauck, 5 Cold. 588; Secord v. Foutch, 44 Mich. 89, 6 N. W. 110. That where the law provides for holding an election and one is duly called, equity has no authority to enjoin it, see Walton v. Develing, 61 Ill. 201.

¹ The ballot was also adopted in England in 1872.

In municipal elections voting by ballot is lawful, but not so, as to illiterates, a provision requiring the voter to indicate by a mark the candidates he wishes to vote for, as it is contrary to the guaranty that all elections shall be free and equal. Rogers v. Jacob, 88 Ky. 502, 11 S. W. 616. [Use of voting machine sufficiently satisfies requirement of ballot. Opinion of Justices, 19 R. I. 729, 86 Atl. 716, 86 L. R. A. 347; Re House Bill No. 1291, 178 Mass. 345, 60 N. E. 129, 54 L. R. A. 430, but see dissenting opinions in both cases for forcible objections.]

² Cush. Leg. Assemb. § 108.

³ "In this country, and indeed in every country where officers are elective, different modes have been adopted for the electors to signify their choice. The most common modes have been either by voting

viva voce, that is, by the elector openly naming the person he designates for the office, or by ballot, which is depositing in a box provided for the purpose a paper on which is the name of the person he intends for the office. The principal object of this last mode is to enable the elector to express his opinion secretly, without being subject to be overruled, or to any ill-will or persecution on account of his vote for either of the candidates who may be before the public. The method of voting by tablets in Rome was an example of this manner of voting. There certain officers appointed for that purpose, called Diribitores, delivered to each voter as many tablets as there were candidates, one of whose names was written upon every tablet. The voter put into a chest prepared for that purpose which of these tablets he pleased, and they were afterwards taken out and counted. Cicero defines tablets to be little slips, in which the people brought their suffrages. The clause in the constitution directing the election of the several State officers was undoubtedly intended to provide that the election should be made by this mode of voting to the exclusion of any other. In this mode the freemen can individually express their choice without being under the necessity of publicly declaring the object of their choice; their collective voice can be easily ascertained, and the evidence of it transmitted to the place

In order to secure as perfectly as possible the benefits anticipated from this system, statutes have been passed, in some of the States, which prohibit ballots being received or counted unless the same are written or printed upon white paper, without any marks or figures thereon intended to distinguish one ballot from another.¹ These statutes are simply declaratory of a constitutional where their votes are to be counted, and the result declared with as little inconvenience as possible." Temple v. Mead, 4 Vt. 535, 541. In this case it was held that a printed ballot was within the meaning of the constitution which required all ballots for certain State officers to be "fairly written." To the same effect is Henshaw v. Foster, 9 Pick. 312. [A court has no power to require ballots voted at an election to be later submitted to the inspection of the grand jury. Ex parte Arnold, 125 Mo. 259, 30 S. W. 795, 1036, 88 L. R. A. 385; but see note thereto in L. R. A. upon power of courts to compel submission of ballot boxes to examination for other purposes than election contests, citing cases contra under substantially similar constitutional provisions, notably People v. Londoner, 13 Cal. 303, 22 Pac. 784, 6 L. R. A. 444.]

¹ See People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 492. In this case it was held that the common lines on ruled paper did not render the ballots void. Otherwise as to dotted lines under the name of an office, for which no candidate is named. Steele v. Calhoun, 61 Miss. 559. See also Drulliner v. State, 20 Ind. 308, in which it was decided that a caption to the ticket folded inside was unobjectionable. To the same effect is Millholland v. Bryant, 39 Ind. 363. A method different from the usual one of printing the names of offices will not avoid the ballot. Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521. See also Owens v. State, 54 Tex. 500. As to what headlines are designed to mislead within a prohibition of such, see Shields v. McGregor, 91 Mo. 584, 4 S. W. 266; Williams v. State, 69 Tex. 368, 6 S. W. 845. A ballot ought not to be rejected because it differs from the regulations prescribed by the code as to size, paper, type, &c., or because the office of sheriff is designated "sheriff and collector;" the sheriff being an officio collector by law. State v. Watson, 9 Mo. App. 513; Kirk v. Rhoads, 42 Cal. 348. Making the ticket diamond shaped will not avoid it: State v. Phillips, 63 Tex. 390; nor will attaching slips to it. Quinn v. Markoe, 37 Minn. 433, 35 N. W. 233. [Contra, under the Australian Ballot Law, Fletcher v. Wall, 172 Id. 423, 50 N. E. 230, 40 L. R. A. 317.] The presiding officers of the election are the sole judges of what is a "distinguishing mark" on a ballot, where such a mark is forbidden; and ballots which they have received and counted cannot be rejected afterwards by the Governor and Council. Opinions of Judges, 45 Me. 692. In Colorado it is held that, if voted in good faith, a ticket with such mark must be counted. Kellogg v. Hickman, 12 Col. 253, 21 Pac. 325. A requirement that there shall be a space of one-fifth of an inch between names of candidates is mandatory, and avoids the whole ticket if disobeyed. Perkins v. Carraway, 50 Miss. 223. [That statutory requirements concerning ballots in elections held for purpose of passing upon proposed municipal bond issues must be strictly observed, see Murphy v. San Luis Obispo, 119 Cal. 624, 51 Pac. 1985, 89 L. R. A. 444. Omission on part of officer in charge of ballot-box to tear off the stripe bearing the numbers of the ballots before depositing them in the box does not invalidate them. Buckner v. Lynip, 22 Nev. 423, 41 Pac. 792, 30 L. R. A. 354. For a case involving a variety of marks upon ballots, some of which were held to invalidate the ballots and others not, see Parker v. Orr, 158 Ill. 600, 41 N. E. 1002, 30 L. R. A. 227; also Tebbe v. Smith, 198 Cal. 101, 41 Pac. 454, 29 L. R. A. 673; Dennis v. Caughlin, 22 Nev. 447, 41 Pac. 768, 29 L. R. A. 731; Sago v. Stoddard, 138 Ind. 267, 36 N. E. 204, 22 L. R. A. 428. Where through mistake of officers of election the colored sample ballots are used instead of the white ones prescribed by law, the error is harmless, as all voters used the colored ballots and secrecy is not violated. Boyd v. Mills, 53 Kan. 564, 37 Pac. 16, 25 L. R. A. 486.]

principle that inheres in the system of voting by ballot, and which ought to be inviolable whether declared or not. In the absence of such a statute, all devices by which party managers are enabled to distinguish ballots in the hand of the voter, and thus determine whether he is voting for or against them, are opposed to the spirit of the Constitution, inasmuch as they tend to defeat the design for which voting by ballot is established, and, though they may not render an election void, they are exceedingly reprehensible and ought to be discountenanced by all good citizens. The system of ballot-voting rests upon the idea that every elector is to be entirely at liberty to vote for whom he pleases and with what party he pleases, and that no one is to have the right, or be in position, to question his independent action, either then or at any subsequent time.¹ The courts have held that a voter, even in case of a contested election, cannot be compelled to disclose for whom he voted; and for the same reason we think others who may accidentally, or by trick or artifice, have acquired knowledge on the subject should not be allowed to testify to such knowledge, or to give any information in the courts upon the subject. Public policy requires that the veil of secrecy should be impenetrable, unless the voter himself voluntarily determines to lift it;² his ballot is absolutely privileged; and to allow evidence

¹ "The right to vote in this manner has usually been considered an important and valuable safeguard of the independence of the humble citizen against the influence which wealth and station might be supposed to exercise. This object would be accomplished but very imperfectly if the privacy supposed to be secured was limited to the moment of depositing the ballot. The spirit of the system requires that the elector should be secured then and at all times thereafter against reproach or animadversion, or any other prejudice, on account of having voted according to his own unbiassed judgment; and that security is made to consist in shutting up within the privacy of his own mind all knowledge of the manner in which he has bestowed his suffrage." Per Denio, Ch. J., in People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 81.

² "The ballot," says Cicero, "is dear to the people, for it uncovers men's faces, and conceals their thoughts. It gives them the opportunity of doing what they like, and of promising all that they are asked." Speech in defence of Plautius, Forsyth's Cicero, Vol. I. p. 323. In Wil- liams v. Stein, 38 Ind. 90, the Supreme Court of Indiana declared to be void the following enactment: "It shall be the duty of the inspector of any election held in this State, on receiving the ballot of any voter, to have the same numbered with figures, on the outside or back thereof, to correspond with the number placed opposite the name of such voter on the poll lists kept by the clerks of said election." Pettit, J., delivering the opinion of the court, after quoting several authorities, among others Commonwealth v. Woolper, 3 S. & R. 23; People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45; People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; Temple v. Mead, 4 Vt. 535; and the text above, says: "It is believed that these authorities establish, beyond doubt, that the ballot implies absolute and inviolable secrecy, and that the principle is founded in the highest considerations of public policy. When our present constitution was framed, voting by ballot was in vogue in nearly every State in the Union. That mode of voting had been known and understood for centuries. The term 'ballot,' as designating a mode of election, was then well ascertained and clearly defined.

of its contents when he has not waived the privilege is to encourage trickery and fraud, and would in effect establish this remarkable anomaly, that, while the law from motives of public policy establishes the secret ballot with a view to conceal the elector's action, it at the same time encourages a system of espionage, by means of which the veil of secrecy may be penetrated and the voter's action disclosed to the public.¹

The eminent framers of the constitution certainly employed this term with a full knowledge of its meaning. Many of the most distinguished members of the constitutional convention of 1850 were members of the legislature of 1852, the first that met under the present constitution. That they regarded the ballot system as securing inviolable secrecy is clearly shown by the following law, which they then helped to enact: "If any judge, inspector, clerk, or other officer of an election, shall open or mark, by folding or otherwise, any ticket presented by such elector at such election, or attempt to find out the names thereon, or suffer the same to be done by any other person, before such ticket is deposited in the ballot-box, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars." 2 G. & H. 473, sec. 60. If the constitution secures to the voter, in popular elections, the protection and immunity of secrecy, there can be no doubt that section 2 of the act of 1869, which authorized the inspector to number ballots, is clearly in conflict with it and is void. I am not unmindful of the rule that all doubts are to be solved in favor of the constitutionality of legislative enactments. This rule is well established, and is founded in the highest wisdom. But my convictions are clear that our constitution was intended to, and does, secure the absolute secrecy of a ballot, and that the act in question, which directs the numbering of tickets, to correspond with the numbers opposite the names of the electors on the poll lists, is in palpable conflict not only with the spirit, but with the substance, of the constitutional provision. This act was intended to, and does, clearly identify every man's ticket, and renders it easy to ascertain exactly how any particular person voted. That secrecy which is esteemed by all authority to be essential to the free exercise of suffrage is as much violated by this law as if it had declared that the election should be viva voce." A like ruling has been made in Minnesota. Brisbin v. Cleary, 23 Minn. 107, 1 N. W. 825. In several States, however, this numbering is required. See Hodge v. Linn, 100 Ill. 397. [And in Slaymaker v. Phillips, 5 Wyo. 453, 40 Pac. 671, 42 Pac. 1049, 47 L. R. A. 842, it was held that the requirement that every ballot be officially stamped upon the back thereof and signed manually by one of the judges of election is not an undue restriction upon the right of suffrage, even though the failure of the judges of election to perform their duty in this regard makes the ballots void. Upon marking official ballot, see a valuable note to 47 L. R. A. 806, in which many cases arising under the "Australian" ballot laws of the several States are collected. Where the voter votes for a person whose name is not printed on the ballot, the addition of the party designation to the written name, after the manner of the printed names and designations, will not be considered a distinguishing mark in the absence of proof. Jennings v. Brown, 114 Cal. 307, 46 Pa. 77, 34 L. R. A. 46.]

¹ See this subject fully considered in People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283. And see also State v. Hilmantel, 23 Wis. 422; Brewer v. Weakley, 2 Overt. 99, 5 Am. Dec. 656. A very loose system prevails in the contests over legislative elections, and it has been held that when a voter refuses to disclose for whom he voted, evidence is admissible of the general reputation of the political character of the voter, and as to the party to which he belonged at the time of the election. Cong. Globe, XVI. App. 456. This is assuming that the voter adheres strictly to party, and always votes the "straight ticket;" an assumption which may not be a very violent one in the majority of cases, but which is scarcely creditable to the manly independence and self-reliance of any free people; and however strongly

Every ballot should be complete in itself, and ought not to require extrinsic evidence to enable the election officer to determine the voter's intention. Perfect certainty, however, is not required in these cases. It is sufficient if an examination leaves no reasonable doubt upon the intention, and technical accuracy is never required in any case. The cardinal rule is to give effect to the intention of the voter, whenever it is not left in uncertainty;¹ but if an ambiguity appears upon its face, the elector cannot be received as a witness to make it good by testifying for whom or for what office he intended to vote.²

disposed legislative bodies may be to act upon it, we are not prepared to see any such rule of evidence adopted by the courts. If a voter chooses voluntarily to exhibit his ballot publicly, perhaps there is no reason why those to whom it was shown should not testify to its contents; but in other cases the knowledge of its contents is his own exclusive property, and he can neither be compelled to part with it, nor, as we think, is any one else who accidentally or surreptitiously becomes possessed of it, or to whom the ballot has been shown with a view to information, advice, or alteration, at liberty to make the disclosure. Such third person might be guilty of no legal offence if he should do so; but he is certainly invading the constitutional privileges of his neighbor, and we are aware of no sound principle of law which will justify a court in compelling or even permitting him to testify to what he has seen. And as the law does not compel a voter to testify, "surely it cannot be so inconsistent with itself as to authorize a judicial inquiry upon a particular subject, and at the same time industriously provide for the concealment of the only material facts upon which the results of such an inquiry must depend." Per Denio, Ch. J., in People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 51. It was held in People v. Cicott, 15 Mich. 253, that until it was distinctly shown that the elector waived his privilege of secrecy, any evidence as to the character or contents of his ballot was inadmissible. It was also held that where a voter's qualification was in question, but his want of right to vote was not conceded, the privilege was and must be the same; as otherwise any person's ballot might be inquired into by simply asserting his want of qualification. In State v. Olin, 23 Wis. 319, it was decided that where persons who had voted at an election had declined to testify concerning their qualifications, and how they had voted, it was competent to prove their declarations that they were unnaturalized foreigners, and had voted a particular way. Compare State v. Hilmantel, 23 Wis. 422. In People v. Thacher, 55 N. Y. 525, the evidence of voters as to how they voted was received, and as they did not object to giving it, it was held proper. See on this subject McCrary's Law of Elections, §§ 194, 195. [The public are interested in preserving the secrecy of the ballot in order to make bribery ineffective, and a statutory requirement that before the voter can take any person into the booth with him to aid him in making out his ballot, he shall swear that he is unable to read English, is mandatory. Ellis v. May, 99 Mich. 538, 58 N. W. 483, 25 L. R. A. 325.]

¹ People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 67; State v. Elwood, 12 Wis. 651; People v. Bates, 11 Mich. 302; Newton v. Newell, 23 Minn. 529, 6 N. W. 346.

² People v. Seaman, 5 Denio, 409. The mental purpose of an elector is not provable; it must be determined by his acts. People v. Saxton, 22 N. Y. 500; Beanstown v. Virginia, 70 Ill. 34. But see McKinnon v. People, 110 Ill. 306; Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 282, 24 L. R. A. 69. And where the intent is to be gathered from the ballot, it is a question of law, and cannot be submitted to the jury as one of fact. People v. McManus, 34 Barb. 620. "In canvassing votes of electors their intentions must be ascertained from their ballots, which must be counted to accord with such intentions. If the ballots express such intentions beyond reasonable doubt, it is sufficient, without regard to technical inaccuracies, or the form adopted by the voter to express his intentions. Of course the language of a ballot is to be construed in the light of all facts connected with the election; thus, the office to be filled, the names of the candidates voted for, or the subject contemplated in the proposition submitted to the electors, and the like, may be considered to aid in discovering the intentions of the voter." Beck, J., in Hawes v. Miller, 56 Iowa, 395, 397, 9 N. W. 337. See Railroad Co. v. Bearss, 38 Ind. 665. If a voter marks out the name of a candidate for a certain office and writes opposite it the name of another person, the vote must be counted for the latter for that office; though in fact he is a candidate, not for it, but for some other office. The intention of the voter must be ascertained from the face of the ballot. Fenton v. Scott, 17 Oreg. 189, 20 Pac. 95.

The ballot in no case should contain more names than are authorized to be voted for, for any particular office, at that election; and, if it should, it must be rejected for the obvious impossibility of the canvassing officers choosing from among the names on the ballot, and applying the ballot to some to the exclusion of others. The choice must be made by the elector himself, and be expressed by the ballot. Accordingly, where only one supervisor was to be chosen, and a ballot was deposited having upon it the names of two persons for that office, it was held that it must be rejected for ambiguity.¹ It has been decided, however, that if a voter shall write a name upon a printed ballot, in connection with the title to an office, this is such a designation of the name written for that office as sufficiently to demonstrate his intention, even though he omit to strike off the printed name of the opposing candidate. The writing in such a case, it is held, ought to prevail as the highest evidence of the voter's intention, and the failure to strike off the printed name will be regarded as an accidental oversight.²

¹ People v. Seaman, 5 Denio, 409. See also Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; People v. Loomis, 8 Wend. 326; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, and 8 N. Y. 67; State v. Grifley, 5 Neb. 181. Such a vote, however, could not be rejected as to candidates for other offices regularly named upon the ballot; it would be void only as to the particular office for which the duplicate ballot was cast. Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; Perkins v. Carraway, 59 Miss. 222. If the name of a candidate for an office is given more than once, it is proper to count it as one ballot, instead of rejecting it as illegally thrown. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123; State v. Pierce, 35 Wis. 83.

² People v. Saxton, 22 N. Y. 809; Brown v. McCollum, 75 Iowa, 479, 41 N. W. 197. This ruling suggests this query: Suppose at an election where printed slips containing the names of candidates, with a designation of the office, are supplied to voters, to be pasted over the names of opposing candidates — as is very common, — a ballot should be found in the box containing the names of a candidate for one office, — say the county clerk, — with a designation of the office pasted over the name of a candidate for some other office, — say coroner; so that the ballot would contain the names of two persons for county clerk, and of none for coroner. In such a case, is the slip the highest evidence of the intention of the voter as to who should receive his suffrage for county clerk, and must it be counted for that office? And if so, then does not the ballot also show the intention of the elector to cast his vote for the person for coroner whose name is thus accidentally pasted over, and

The name on the ballot should be clearly expressed, and ought to be given fully. Errors in spelling, however, will not defeat the ballot, if the sound is the same;¹ nor abbreviations,² if such as are in common use and generally understood, so that there can be no reasonable doubt of the intent. And it would seem that where a ballot is cast which contains only the initials of the Christian name of the candidate, it ought to be sufficient, as it designates the person voted for with the same certainty which is commonly met with in contracts and other private writings, and the intention of the voter cannot reasonably be open to any doubt.³

should it not be counted for that person? The case of People v. Saxton would seem to be opposed to People v. Seaman, 5 Denio, 409, where the court refused to allow evidence to be given to explain the ambiguity occasioned by the one name being placed upon the ticket, without the other being erased. "The intention of the elector cannot be thus inquired into, when it is opposed or hostile to the paper ballot which he has deposited in the ballot-box. We might with the same propriety permit it to be proved that he intended to vote for one man, when his ballot was cast for another; a species of proof not to be tolerated." Per Wattles, J. See also Newton v. Newell, 26 Minn. 529, 6 N. W. 346. The case of People v. Cleant, 16 Mich. 283, is also opposed to People v. Saxton. In the Michigan case, a slip for the office of sheriff was pasted over the name of the candidate for another county office, so that the ballot contained the names of two candidates for sheriff. It was argued that the slip should be counted as the best evidence of the voter's intention; but the court held that the ballot could be counted for neither candidate, because of its ambiguity. And a like rule is laid down as to a provision in the Illinois Constitution which requires that, if more persons are designated for any office than there are candidates to be elected, such part of the ticket shall not be counted for either. This provision is obligatory where only one name is printed on the ticket, and it remains un erased and another is written in. Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 232, 24 L. R. A. 59.

¹ People v. Mayworm, 5 Mich. 146; Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; Gunnin v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311, 11 S. W.

61; Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 232, 24 L. R. A. 59.

² People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. 102. See also, upon this subject, People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, and 8 N. Y. 67; and People v. Tisdale, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 59.

³ In People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. 102, it was held that, on the trial of a contested election case before a jury, ballots cast for H. F. Yates should be counted for Henry F. Yates, if, under the circumstances, the jury were of the opinion they were intended for him; and to arrive at that intention, it was competent to prove that he generally signed his name H. F. Yates; that he had before held the same office for which these votes were cast, and was then a candidate again; that the people generally would apply the abbreviation to him, and that no other person was known in the county to whom it would apply. This ruling was followed in People v. Seaman, 5 Denio, 409, and in People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, and 8 N. Y. 67. The courts also held, in these cases, that the elector voting the defective ballot might give evidence to enable the jury to apply it, and might testify that he intended it for the candidate the initials of whose name he had given. In Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420, 429, a rule somewhat different was laid down. In that case, Matthew H. Carpenter was candidate for the office of prosecuting attorney; and besides the perfect ballots there were others cast for "D. M. Carpenter," "M. D. Carpenter," "M. T. Carpenter," and "Carpenter." The jury found that there was no lawyer in the county by the name of D. M. Carpenter, M. D. Carpenter, M. T. Carpenter, or whose surname was Carpenter, except the relator, Matthew H. Carpenter; that the relator was

As the law knows only one Christian name, the giving of an initial to a middle name when the party has none, or the giving of a

a practising attorney of the county, and eligible to the office, and that the votes above mentioned were all given and intended by the electors for the relator. The court say: "How was the intention of the voter to be ascertained? By reading the name on the ballot, and ascertaining who was meant and intended by that name? Is no evidence admissible to show who was intended to be voted for under the various appellations, except such evidence as is contained in the ballot itself? Or may you gather the intention of the voter from the ballot, explained by the surrounding circumstances, from facts of a general public nature connected with the election and the different candidates, which may aid you in coming to the right conclusion? These facts and circumstances might, perhaps, be adduced so clear and strong as to lead irresistibly to the inference that a vote given for Carpenter was intended to be cast for Matthew H. Carpenter. A contract may be read by the light of the surrounding circumstances, not to contradict it, but in order more perfectly to understand the intent and meaning of the parties who made it. By analogous principles, we think that these facts and others of like nature connected with the election, could be given in evidence, for the purpose of aiding the jury in determining who was intended to be voted for. In New York, courts have gone even farther than this, and held, that not only facts of public notoriety might be given in evidence to show the intention of the elector, but that the elector who cast the abbreviated ballot may be sworn as to who was intended by it. People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. 102. But this is pushing the doctrine to a great extent; further, we think, than consideration of public policy and the well-being of society will warrant; and to restrict the rule, and say that the jury must determine from an inspection of the ballot itself, from the letters upon it, aside from all extraneous facts, who was intended to be designated by the ballot, is establishing a principle unnecessarily cautious and limited. In the present case, the jury, from the evidence before them, found that the votes [above described] were, when given and cast, intended, by the electors who gave and cast the same respectively, to be given and cast for Matthew H. Carpenter, the relator. Such being the case, it clearly follows that they should be counted for him." See also State v. Elwood, 12 Wis. 551; People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 84, per Denio, Ch. J.; Talking v. Turner, 71 Ill. 234; Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 498; Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 232, 24 L. R. A. 59; State v. Williams, 95 Mo. 159, 8 S. W. 415; State v. Gates, 43 Conn. 533. In Wummer v. Eaton, 72 Iowa, 874, 84 N. W. 170; ballots for E. W. were counted for E. W., who was a regular candidate, there being no one eligible or running named E. W.

In Opinions of Judges, 38 Me. 559, it was held that votes could not be counted by the canvassers for a person of a different name from that expressed by the ballot, even though the only difference consisted in the initial to the middle name. See also Opinions of Justices, 64 Me. 588. And in People v. Tisdale, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 59, followed in People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233, it was held that no extrinsic evidence was admissible on a trial in court in explanation or support of the ballot; and that, unless it showed upon its face for whom it was designed, it must be rejected. And it was also held, that a ballot for "J. A. Dyer" did not show, upon its face, that it was intended for the candidate James A. Dyer, and therefore could not be counted with the ballots cast for him by his full name. This rule is convenient of application, but it probably defeats the intention of the electors in every case to which it is applied, where the rejected votes could influence the result, — an intention, too, which we think is so apparent on the ballot itself, that no person would be in real doubt concerning it. In People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 64, in which Moses M. Smith was a candidate for country treasurer, Selden, J., says: "According to well-settled rules, the board of canvassers erred in refusing to allow to the relator the nineteen votes given for Moses Smith and M. M. Smith;" and although we think this doctrine correct, the cases he cites in support wrong initial, will not render the ballot nugatory;¹ nor will a failure to give the addition to a name—such as “Junior”—render it void, as that is a mere matter of description, not constituting a part of the name, and if given erroneously may be treated as surplusage.² But where the name upon the ballot is of it (8 Cow. 102, and 5 Denio, 409) would only warrant a jury, not the canvassers, in allowing them; or, at least, those cast for M. M. Smith. The case of People v. Tisdale was again followed in People v. Cicott, 15 Mich. 283; the majority of the court, however, expressing the opinion that it was erroneous in principle, but that it had been too long, (twenty-five years), the settled law of the State to be disturbed, unless by the legislature. In Massachusetts, it is held that votes cast for “L. Clark” cannot be counted by the canvassers for Leonard Clark, though it is intimated that on a trial in court it might be shown that he was entitled to them. Clark v. County Examiners, 126 Mass. 282.

¹ People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259. 8 N. Y. 67; State v. Gates, 48 Conn. 383. But see Opinions of Judges, 38 Me. 337.

² People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259 and 8 N. Y. 67. In this case, the jury found, as matter of fact, that ballots given for Benjamin Welch were intended for Benjamin Welch, Jr.; and the court held that, as a matter of law, they should have been counted for him. It was not decided, however, that the canvassers were at liberty to allow the votes to Benjamin Welch, Jr.; and the judge delivering the prevailing opinion in the Court of Appeals says (p. 81), that the State canvassers cannot be charged with error in refusing to add to the votes for Benjamin Welch, Jr., those which were given for Benjamin Welch, without the junior. “They had not the means which the court possessed, on the trial of this issue, of obtaining, by evidence abunde, the several county returns, the intention of the voters, and the identity of the candidate with the name on the defective ballots. Their judicial power extends no further than to take notice of such facts of public notoriety as that certain well-known abbreviations are generally used to designate particular names, and the like.” So far as this case holds that the canvassers are not chargeable with error in not counting the ballots with the name Benjamin Welch for Benjamin Welch, Jr., it is, doubtless, correct. But suppose the canvassers had seen fit to do so, could the court hold they were guilty of usurpation in thus counting and allowing them? Could not the canvassers take notice of such facts of general public notoriety as everybody else would take notice of? Or must they shut their eyes to facts which all other persons must see? The facts are these: Benjamin Welch, Jr., and James M. Cook are the candidates, and the only candidates, for State Treasurer. These facts are notorious, and the two political parties make determined efforts to elect one or the other. Certain votes are cast for Benjamin Welch, with the descriptive word “junior” omitted. The name is correct, but, as thus given, it may apply to some one else; but it would be to a person notoriously not a candidate. Under these circumstances, when the facts of which it would be necessary to take notice have occurred under their own supervision, and are universally known, so that the result of a contest in the courts could not be doubtful, is there any reason why the canvassers should not take notice of these facts, count the votes which a jury would subsequently be compelled to count, and thus save the delay, expense, vexation, and confusion of a contest? If their judicial power extends to a determination of what are common and well-known abbreviations, and what names spelled differently are idem sonans, why may it not also extend to the facts, of which there will commonly be quite as little doubt, as to who are the candidates at the election over which they preside? It seems to us that in every case where the name given on the ballot, though in some particulars imperfect, is not different from that of the candidate, and facts of general notoriety leave no doubt in the minds of canvassers that it was intended for him, the canvassers should be at liberty to do what a jury would afterwards altogether different from that of a candidate, not the same in sound and not a mere abbreviation, the evidence of the voter cannot be received to show for whom it was intended.¹

Upon the question how far extrinsic evidence is admissible by way of helping out any imperfections in the ballot, no rule can be laid down which can be said to have a preponderating weight of authority in its support. We think evidence of such facts as may be called the circumstances surrounding the election—such as who were the candidates brought forward by the nominating conventions; whether other persons of the same names resided in the district from which the officer was to be chosen, and if so whether they were eligible or had been named for the office; if a ballot was printed imperfectly, how it came to be so printed, and the like—is admissible for the purpose of showing that an imperfect ballot was intended for a particular candidate, unless the name is so different that to thus apply it would be to contradict the ballot itself; or unless the ballot is so defective that it fails to show any intention whatever: in which cases it is not admissible.² And we also think that in any case to allow a voter to testify by way of explanation of a ballot otherwise fatally defective, that he voted the particular ballot, and intended it for a particular candidate, is exceedingly dangerous, invites corruption and fraud, and ought not to be suffered. Nothing is more easy than for reckless parties thus to testify to their intentions, without the possibility of their testimony being disproved if untrue; and if one falsely swears to having deposited a particular ballot, unless the party really depositing it sees fit to disclose his knowledge, the evidence must pass unchallenged, and the temptation to subornation of perjury, when public offices are at stake, and when it may be committed with impunity, is too great to allow such evidence to be sanctioned. While the law should seek to be compelled to do,—count it for such candidate. See People v. Kennedy, 37 Mich. 67. Compare Clarke v. County Examiners, 128 Mass. 282.

¹ A vote for "Pence" cannot be shown to have been intended for "Spence." Hart v. Evans, 8 Pa. St. 13. Where, however, wrong initials were given to the Christian name, the ballots were allowed to the candidate; the facts of public notoriety being such as to show that they were intended for him. Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420. This case goes farther, in permitting mistakes in ballots to be corrected on parol evidence, than any other in the books. Mr.

McCrary, in his Law of Elections, devotes his seventh chapter to a careful discussion of the general subject of imperfect ballots.

² The text is quoted with approval in Kreitz v. Behrensmeier, 125 Ill. 141, 17 N. E. 282, 24 L. R. A. 59, but in that case after a recount had been made and his ballot identified by its number, a voter was allowed to testify that a certain slip upon it was not there when it left his hands; and that in writing in a candidate's name, the name of the office was partly obliterated by accident, though, if the latter was wholly obliterated, the vote could not be counted.

give effect to the intention of the voter, whenever it can be fairly ascertained, yet this intention must be that which is expressed in due form of law, not that which remains hidden in the elector's breast; and where the ballot, in connection with such facts surrounding the election as would be provable if it were a case of contract, does not enable the proper officers to apply it to one of the candidates, policy, coinciding in this particular with the general rule of law as applicable to other transactions, requires that the ballot shall not be counted for such candidate.¹

The ballot should also sufficiently show on its face for what office the person named upon it is designated: but here again technical accuracy is not essential, and the office is sufficiently named if it be so designated that no reasonable doubt can exist as to what is meant. A great constitutional privilege—the highest under the government—is not to be taken away on a mere technicality, but the most liberal intendment should be made in support of the elector's action wherever the application of the common-sense rules which are applied in other cases will enable us to understand and render it effectual.²

¹ This is substantially the New York rule as settled by the later decisions, if we may accept the opinion of Leahy, Ch. J., in People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 84, as taking the correct view of those decisions. See People v. Cicott, 10 Mich. 283, for a discussion of this point. Also State v. Griffey, 5 Neb. 161; Clark v. County Examiners, 126 Mass. 282.

² In People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167, it was held that where "police magistrates" were to be chosen, votes cast for "police justices" should be counted, as they sufficiently showed upon their face the intention of the voters. So where the question was submitted to the people, whether a part of one county should be annexed to another, and the act of submission provided that the electors might express their choice by voting "for detaching R—," or "against detaching R—," it was held that votes cast for "R— attached," and for "R— detached," and "for division," and "against division," were properly counted by the canvassers, as the intention of the voters was clearly ascertainable from the ballots themselves with the aid of the extrinsic facts of a public nature connected with the election. State v. Elwood, 12 Wis.

551. So where trustees of common schools were to be voted for, it was held that votes for trustees of public schools should be counted; there being no trustees to be voted for at that election except trustees of common schools. People v. McManus, 34 Barb. 629. In Phelps v. Goldthwaite, 18 Wis. 145, where a city and also a county superintendent of schools were to be chosen at the same election, and ballots were cast for "superintendent of schools," without further designation, parol evidence of surrounding circumstances was admitted to enable the proper application to be made of the ballots to the respective candidates. In Peck v. Weddell, 17 Ohio St. 271, an act providing for an election on the question of the removal of a county seat to the "town" of Bowling Green, was held not invalid by reason of Bowling Green being in law not a "town," but an incorporated village. In voting for a county seat it was held proper to count votes cast for a town by its popular, which differed from its legal, name. State v. Cavers, 22 Iowa, 843. Ballots in all such cases should receive such a construction as will make them valid if they are capable of it. Cattell v. Lowry, 45 Iowa, 478; State

Where more than one office is to be filled at an election, the law may either require all the persons voted for, for the several offices, to be so voted for by each elector on the same ballot, or it may provide a different receptacle for the ballots for some one office or set of offices from that which is to receive the others. In such a case each elector will place upon the ballot to be deposited in each box the names of such persons as he desires to vote for, for the different offices to be filled at the election for which that box is provided. If, for instance, State and township officers are to be chosen at the same election, and the ballots are to be kept separate, the elector must have different ballots for each; and if he should designate persons for a township office on the State ballot, such ballot would, to that extent, be void, though the improper addition would not defeat the ballot altogether, but would be treated as surplusage, and the ballot be held good as a vote for the State officers designated upon it.¹ But an accidental error in depositing the ballot should not defeat it. If an elector should deliver the State and township ballots to the inspector of election, who by mistake should deposit them in the wrong boxes respectively, this mistake is capable of being corrected without confusion when the boxes are opened, and should not prevent the ballots being counted as intended. And it would seem that, in any case, the honest mistake, either of the officer or the elector, should not defeat the intention of the latter, where it was not left in doubt by his action.²

The elector is not under obligation to vote for every office to be filled at that election; nor where several persons are to be chosen to the same office is he required to vote for as many as are to be elected. He may vote for one or any greater number, not to exceed the whole number to be chosen. In most of the States a plurality of the votes cast determines the election; in others, as to some elections, a majority; but in determining upon a majority

v. Metzger, 23 Kan. 305. And the election should not be set aside when the will of the people is fairly ascertainable from it. Holland v. Davis, 36 Ark. 443, 450. An obvious misprint of "2" for "1" before "district" will not avail counting the votes cast in the first district. Inglis v. Shepherd, 67 Cal. 469, 8 Pac. 5. Where two or more offices are to be filled, the ballots must show for which offices the candidates named on the ballot are intended. Page v. Kuykendall, 161 Ill. 319, 48 N. E. 1114, 32 L. R. A. 656.]

¹ See People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259 and 8 N. Y. 57.

² People v. Bates, 11 Mich. 332. See Lanier v. Galatas, 13 La. Ann. 175, McKinney v. O'Connor, 25 Tex. 5. But inspectors of election have no authority, on the assertion of a voter that he has voted by mistake in the wrong precinct, to withdraw from the ballot-box and destroy a ballot which he professes to identify as the one cast by him. Harbaugh v. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

or plurality, the blank votes, if any, are not to be counted; and a candidate may therefore be chosen without receiving a plurality or majority of voices of those who actually participated in the election. Where, however, two offices of the same name were to be filled at the same election, but the notice of election specified one only, and the political parties each nominated one candidate, and, assuming that but one was to be chosen, no elector voted for more than one, it was held that the one having a majority was alone chosen; that the opposing candidate could not claim to be also elected, as having received the second highest number of votes, but as to the other office there had been a failure to hold an election.¹

The Freedom of Elections.

To keep every election free of all the influences and surroundings which might bear improperly upon it, or might impel the electors to cast their suffrages otherwise than as their judgments would dictate, has always been a prominent object in American legislation.² We have referred to fundamental principles which protect the secrecy of the ballot, but in addition to these there are express constitutional and statutory provisions looking to the accomplishment of the same general purpose. It is provided by the constitutions of several of the States that bribery of an elector shall constitute a disqualification of the right to vote or to hold

¹ People v. Kent County Canvassers, 11 Mich. 111. Where officers, e. g. aldermen, one for a long term and one for a short term, are to be chosen, if there is no designation of the terms upon the ballot, it must be rejected. Milligan's App., 93 Pa. St. 222. [A statute providing for "cumulative" voting, giving the right to an elector of a district in which more than one representative to the State legislature is to be elected, to cast one vote for each, or to cast as many votes as there are representatives to be elected from the district, and distribute them as he chooses, was held void in Maynard v. Board of Canvassers, 84 Mich. 228, 47 N. W. 756 1; L. R. A. 832. The opinion in this case proceeds upon the theory that without express constitutional authority the legislature cannot authorize an elector to cast more than one ballot for the same person for a single office; that the history and traditions of the elective franchise as interpreted by the courts is opposed office;¹ the treating of an elector, with a view to influence his vote, is in some States made an indictable offence;² courts are not allowed to be held, for the two reasons, that the electors ought to be left free to devote their attention to the exercise of this high trust, and that suits, if allowed on that day, might be used as a means of intimidation;³ legal process in some States, and for the same reasons, is not permitted to be served on that day; intimidation of voters by threats or otherwise is made punishable;⁴ and generally all such precautions as the people in framing their organic law, or the legislature afterwards, have thought might be made available for the purpose, have been provided with a view to secure the most completely free and unbiassed expression of opinion that shall be possible.

to such method of voting, and the constitution must clearly disclose such authority before such innovation in the exercise of the elective franchise is justified.]

² For decisions bearing upon the freedom of elections and disorder or intimidation to control it, see Commonwealth v. Hoxey, 16 Mass. 884; Commonwealth v. McHale, 97 Pa. St. 397; Republica v. Gibbs, 3 Yeates, 420, 4 Dall. 253; State v. Franks, 38 Tex. 640; State v. Mason, 14 La. Ann. 505; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542; Roberts v. Calvert, 98 N. C. 580, 4 S. E. 127; Patton v. Coates, 41 Ark. 111; Tarbox v. Sagbrue, 33 Kan. 225, 12 Pac. 935; Brassard v. Langevin, 1 Can. Sup. Ct. 145. [In Indiana the very remarkable device of giving the bribed elector the right to sue the briber for a penalty of three hundred dollars and attorney's fees was recently adopted, and was sustained in State v. Schoonover, 135 Ind. 626, 85 N. E. 119, 21 L. R. A. 767.]

¹ See the Constitutions of Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, West Virginia, Oregon, California, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, Rhode Island, Alabama, Florida, New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Nevada, Tennessee, Connecticut, Louisiana, Mississippi, Ohio, Wisconsin. And it has been held on general principles that if an elector is induced to vote in a particular way by the payment or promise of any money or other valuable consideration for such vote, his vote should be rejected as illegal. State v. Olin, 24 Wis. 309. The power to reject for such a reason, however, is not in the inspectors, but in the court in which the right to try the title to the office is vested. State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 213, 17 Am. Rep. 485. In this case it was held to be a sufficient reason for the court to reject votes, that they were obtained by means of the candidate's promise to perform the duties of the office for less than the official salary. [It is frequently provided, in order to make bribery ineffective, that ballots bearing distinguishing marks are void. That imprints appearing upon all ballots and imprinted thereon at time of printing, even though unlawful, are not distinguishing marks, see State v. Saxon, 50 Fla. 608, 12 So. 218, 18 L. R. A. 721; see other cases in note on Australian Ballot Laws, ante, p. 899, n. a. Inscription "O. K." on back of a ballot is a distinguishing mark. State v. Ellis, 111 N. C. 124, 15 S. E. 938, 17 L. R. A. 382. For cases discussing a variety of distinguishing marks, see State v. Walsh, 62 Conn. 290,

25 Atl. 1, 17 L. R. A. 384; Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 523, 27 Pac. 779, 18 L. R. A. 781, and note; State v. Barden, 77 Wis. 601, 46 N. W. 899, 10 L. R. A. 165; Talcott v. Philbrick, 59 Conn. 472, 20 Atl. 438, 10 L. R. A. 150.]

² State v. Rutledge, 8 Humph. 32. And see the provision in the Constitution of Vermont on this subject. A resort to this species of influence would generally, at the present time, prejudice the candidate's interests instead of advancing them, but such has not always been the case. Mr. Madison, after performing valuable service for the State in its legislature, was defeated when offering himself for re-election, in the very crisis of the Revolution, by the treating of his opponent. See his Life by Rives, Vol. I. p. 179. The Constitution of Louisiana [1879] requires the General Assembly to forbid by law the giving away or selling of intoxicating drinks on the day of election within one mile of any election precinct. Art. 190.

³ But it was held in New York that the statute of that State forbidding the holding of courts on election days did not apply to the local elections. Matter of Election Law, 7 Hill. 164; Redfield v. Florence, 2 E. D. Smith, 249.

⁴ As to what shall constitute intimidation, see Republica v. Gibbs, 8 Yeates, 429, 4 Dall. 254, and cases, p. 922, note 2. [And a statute prohibiting electioneering within one hundred feet of any polling place on election day is valid. State v. Black, 54 N. J. L. 416, 24 Atl. 489, 1020, 16 L. R. A. 769.]

Betting upon elections is illegal at the common law, on grounds of public policy;¹ and all contracts entered into with a view improperly to influence an election would be void for the same reason.² And with a just sense of the danger of military inter-

¹ Bunn v. Riker, 4 Johns. 426; Lansing v. Lansing, 8 Johns. 454; Ball v. Gilbert, 12 Met. 307; Laval v. Myers, 1 Bailey, 486; Smyth v. McMasters, 2 Browne, 182; McAllister v. Hoffman, 16 S. & R. 147; Stoddard v. Martin, 1 R. I. 1; Wroth v. Johnson, 4 H. & M. 284; Tarleton v. Baker, 18 Yt. 9; Davis v. Holbrook, 1 La. Ann. 176; Foreman v. Hardwick, 10 Ala. 316; Wheeler v. Spencer, 15 Conn. 28; Russell v. Pyland, 2 Humph. 131; Porter v. Sawyer, 1 Harr. 517; Hickerson v. Benson, 8 Mo. 8; Macclair v. Moore, 2 Gratt. 257; Rust v. Gott, 9 Cow. 169, 18 Am. Dec. 497; Brush v. Keeler, 5 Wend. 250; Fisher v. Hildreth, 117 Mass. 558; McCrary, Law of Elections, § 140. A statute punishing betting on elections does not cover nominating conventions. Com. v. Wells, 110 Pa. St. 463, 1 Atl. 310.

² In Jackson v. Walker, 5 Hill, 27, it was held that an agreement by the defendant to pay the plaintiff $1,000, in consideration that the latter, who had built a log-cabin, would keep it open for political meetings to further the success of certain persons nominated for members of Congress, &c., by one of the political parties, was illegal within the statute of New York, which prohibited contributions of money "for any other purpose intended to promote the election of any particular person or ticket, except for defraying the expenses of printing and the circulation of votes, hand-bills, and other papers." This case is criticised in Hurley v. Van Wagner, 28 Barb. 109, and it is possible that it went further than either the statute or public policy would require. In Nichols v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546, the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff, who was a candidate for town representative, the parties agreed that the former should use his influence for the plaintiff's election, and do what he could for that purpose, and that if the plaintiff was elected, that should be a satisfaction of his claim. Nothing was specifically said about the defendant's voting for the plaintiff, but he did vote for him, and would not have done so, nor favored his election, but for this agreement. The plaintiff was elected. Held, that the agreement was void, and constituted no bar to a recovery upon the demand. Where two are candidates, and one withdraws in consideration of an agreement that the other, if chosen, will divide the fees, the agreement is void. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 440. An agreement that one for a fixed sum may perform all the duties of an office and receive all the emoluments is illegal. Hall v. Gavitt, 18 Ind. 370. So is an agreement between two candidates to divide emoluments and that the defeated one shall be deputy. Glover v. Taylor, 38 La. Ann. 634. A note executed in consideration of the payee's agreement to resign public office in favor of the maker, and use influence in favor of the latter's appointment as his successor, is void. Meacham v. Dow, 32 Vt. 721. See also Duke v. Ashbee, 11 Ired. 112; Hunter v. Noy, 71 Pa. St. 182; Ham v. Smith, 87 Pa. St. 63; Robinson v. Kalodesh, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 212; McCrary, Law of Elections, § 192. A contract to assist by money and influence to secure the election of a candidate to a public office in consideration of a share of its emoluments, in the event of election, is void as opposed to public policy, and if voluntarily rescinded by the parties a recovery cannot be had of the moneys advanced under it. Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 165. It has even been held that a public offer to the electors by a candidate for a public office, whereby he pledged himself, if elected, to perform the duties of the office for less than the legal salary or fees, would invalidate his election. State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 213, 17 Am. Rep. 455; Harvey v. Tama County, 33 Iowa, 228, 5 N. W. 150; Caruthers v. Russell, 53 Iowa, 346, 5 N. W. 499, 36 Am. Rep. 222; State v. Collier, 72 Mo. 13, 37 Am. Rep. 417. See Cardigan v. Page, 6 N. H. 182; Alvin v. Collin, 20 Pick. 418; State v. Church, 5 Oreg. 375, 20 Am. Rep. 746. A contract to resign an office that another may be appointed is void. Meguire v. Corwine, ference, where a trust is to be exercised, the highest as well as the most delicate in the whole machinery of government, it has not been thought unwise to prohibit the militia being called out on election days, even though for no other purpose than for enrolling and organizing them.¹ The ordinary police is the peace force of the State, and its presence suggests order, individual safety, and public security; but when the military appear upon the stage, even though composed of citizen militia, the circumstances must be assumed to be extraordinary, and there is always an appearance of threatening and dangerous compulsion which might easily interfere seriously with that calm and unimpassioned discharge of the elector's duty which the law so justly favors. The soldier in organized ranks can know no law but such as is given him by his commanding officer; and when he appears at the polls, there is necessarily a suggestion of the presence of an enemy against whom he may be compelled to exercise the most extreme and destructive force; and that enemy must generally be the party out of power, while the authority that commands the force directed against them will be the executive authority of the State for the time being wielded by their opponents. It is consequently of the highest importance that the presence of a military force at the polls be not suffered except in serious emergencies, when disorders exist or are threatened for the suppression or prevention of which the ordinary peace force is insufficient; and any statute which should provide for or permit such presence as a usual occurrence or except in the last resort, though it might not be void, would nevertheless be a serious invasion of constitutional right, and should not be submitted to in a free government without vigorous remonstrance.²

3 MacArthur, 81. If one advances money to be used to further the election of a particular candidate irrespective of qualifications, and it is not so used, he cannot maintain a suit to recover it back. Liness v. Hesing, 44 Ill. 113. In Pratt v. People, 29 Ill. 54, it was held that an agreement between two electors that they should "pair off," and both abstain from voting, was illegal, and the inspectors could not refuse to receive a vote of one of the two, on the ground of his agreement. An election upon the question of the removal of a county seat is not invalidated by inducements held out by the several localities; such as the offer to erect the county buildings, &c. Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; Hawes v. Miller, 53 Iowa, 335, 9 N. W. 397; State

v. Supervisors of Portage, 24 Wis. 49; Wells v. Taylor, 5 Mont. 292, 3 Pac. 255; Neal v. Sinton, 49 Ark. 227, 4 S. W. 771; State v. Eiting, 29 Kan. 357; Hall v. Marshall, 50 Ky. 552; [State v. Orange, 54 N. J. L. 111, 22 Atl. 1904, 14 L. R. A. 62, and note; contra, Ayres v. Moon, 34 Neb. 219, 51 N. W. 830, 15 L. R. A. 361. A promise by a citizen to pay part of the expense of opening a street will not invalidate an ordinance providing for such opening. State v. Orange, 54 N. J. L. 111, 22 Atl. 1904, 14 L. R. A. 62, and note on bribery by gift to public.] See State v. Purdy, 56 Wis. 213.

¹ See Hyde v. Melsin, 11 Johns. 521.

² The danger, and, we may say also, the folly, of military interference with the deliberations or action of electors, except

The Elector not to be deprived of his Vote.

That one entitled to vote shall not be deprived of the privilege by the action of the authorities is a fundamental principle. (a)

It has been held, on constitutional grounds, that a law creating a new county, but so framed as to leave a portion of its territory unorganized, so that the voters within such portion could not participate in the election of county officers, was inoperative and void.¹ So a law submitting to the voters of a county the question of removing the county seat is void if there is no mode under the law by which a city within the county can participate in the election.² And although the failure of one election precinct to hold an election, or to make a return of the votes cast, might not render the whole election a nullity, where the electors of that precinct were at liberty to vote had they so chosen, or where, having voted but failed to make return, it is not made to appear that the votes not returned would have changed the result,³ yet if any action was required of the public authorities preliminary to the election, and that which was taken was not such as to give all the electors the opportunity to participate, and in the last necessity, was fearfully illustrated in the case of the "Manchester Massacre," which occurred in 1819. An immense meeting of radical parliamentary reformers, whose objects and purposes appeared threatening to the government, was charged upon by the military, with some loss of life, and with injury to the persons of several hundred people. As usual in such cases, the extremists of one party applauded the act and complimented the military, while the other party was exasperated in the last degree, by what seemed to them an unnecessary, arbitrary, and unconstitutional exercise of force. The most bitter and dangerous feeling was excited throughout the country by this occurrence, and it is not too much to say that if disorders were threatening before the government had done nothing in this way to strengthen its authority, or to insure quiet or dispassionate action.

No one had been conciliated; no one had been reduced to more calm and deliberate courses; but, on the other hand, even moderate men had been exasperated and inclined to opposition by this violent, reckless, and destructive display of coercive power. See Hansard's Debates, Vol. XLI. pp. 4, 51, 230.

¹ People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 433. For similar reasons the act for the organization of Schuyler County was held invalid in Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 447.

² Attorney-General v. Supervisors of St. Clair, 11 Mich. 63. For a similar principle, see Foster v. Scarff, 15 Ohio St. 532.

³ See Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill. 42; Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. v. County Court of Davidson, 1 Sneed, 637; Marshall v. Kerns, 2 Swan, 68; Beards-town v. Virginia, 78 Ill. 34.

(a) [But it is held that he may be restricted to candidates whose names are printed on the official ballot. State v. McElroy, 44 La. Ann. 790, 11 So. 133, 16 L. R. A. 278, and note. Voter may lawfully vote for the same man as candidate for two or more incompatible offices. Misch v. Russell, 136 Ill. 22, 23 N. E. 528, 12 L. R. A. 125, and note. A statute prohibiting the putting of the name of a candidate on a ballot as the candidate of more than party, was held void, in Murphy v. Curry, 137 Cal. 479, 70 Pac. 461, 59 L. R. A. 97.]

no mode was open to the electors by which the officers might be compelled to act, it would seem that such neglect, constituting as it would the disfranchisement of the excluded electors pro hac vice, must on general principles render the whole election nugatory; for that cannot be called an election or the expression of the popular sentiment where a part only of the electors have been allowed to be heard, and the others, without being guilty of fraud or negligence, have been excluded.¹

If the inspectors of elections refuse to receive the vote of an elector duly qualified, they may be liable both civilly and criminally for so doing: criminally, if they were actuated by improper and corrupt motives;² and civilly, it is held in some of the States, even though there may have been no malicious design in so doing;³ but other cases hold that, where the inspectors are vested by the law with the power to pass upon the qualifications of electors, they exercise judicial functions in so doing, and are entitled to the same protection as other judicial officers in the discharge of their duty, and cannot be made liable except upon proof of express malice.⁴ Where, however, by the law under which the election is held, the inspectors are to receive the voter's ballot, if he takes the oath

¹ See Fort Dodge v. District Township, 17 Iowa, 85; Barry v. Lauck, 5 Cold. 588. In People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 415, it was held that where an act of the legislature, before it shall become operative, is required to be submitted to the vote of the legal electors of the district to be affected thereby, if the election which is attempted to be held is illegal within certain precincts containing a majority of the voters of the district, then the act will not be deemed to have been submitted to the required vote, and the result will not be declared upon the votes legally cast, adverse to what it would have been had no illegality intervened.

² As to common-law offences against election laws, see Commonwealth v. McHale, 97 Pa. St. 397. For an instance under a statute, see People v. Burns, 75 Cal. 627, 17 Pac. 646.

³ Killham v. Ward, 2 Mass. 238; Gardner v. Ward, 2 Mass. 244, note; Lincoln v. Hapgood, 11 Mass. 350; Capen v. Foster, 12 Pick. 485, 23 Am. Dec. 632; Gates v. Neal, 23 Pick. 308; Blanchard v. Stearns, 5 Met. 298; Larned v. Wheeler, 140 Mass. 390, 5 N. E. 290; Jeffries v. Ankeny, 11 Ohio, 372; Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Duv. 63; Monroe v. Collins, 17

Ohio St. 665; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544; Long v. Long, 57 Iowa, 497, 10 N. W. 875.

⁴ Jenkins v. Waldron, 11 Johns. 114; Wecherley v. Guyer, 11 S. & R. 35; Gordon v. Farrar, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 411; Peavey v. Robbins, 3 Jones (N. C.), 389; Caulfield v. Bullock, 18 B. Mon. 424; Miller v. Rucker, 1 Bush. 135; Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Duv. 63; Wheeler v. Patterson, 1 N. H. 88; Turnpike v. Champney, 2 N. H. 199; Rail v. Potts, 8 Humph. 225; Bevard v. Hoffman, 18 Md. 479; Elbin v. Wilson, 33 Md. 135; Friend v. Hamill, 34 Md. 208; Pike v. Magoun, 44 Mo. 492; Perry v. Reynolds, 53 Conn. 527, 3 Atl. 555; see State v. Daniels, 44 N. H. 383, and Goetcheus v. Matthews, 61 N. Y. 420. In the last case the whole subject is fully and carefully examined, and the authorities analyzed. Compare Byler v. Asher, 47 Ill. 101; Elbin v. Wilson, 33 Md. 135; Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 15, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. Under a statute rendering liable for unreasonable refusal, the refusal must be such as to seem unreasonable to reasonable, unprejudiced men. Sanders v. Gotcheil, 75 Me. 158; Pierce v. Getchell, Id. 216.

that he possesses the constitutional qualifications, the oath is the conclusive evidence on which the inspectors are to act, and they are not at liberty to refuse to administer the oath, or to refuse the vote after the oath has been taken. They are only ministerial officers in such a case, and have no discretion but to obey the law and receive the vote.¹

The Conduct of the Election.

The statutes of the different States point out specifically the mode in which elections shall be conducted; but, although there are great diversities of detail, the same general principles govern them all. As the execution of these statutes must very often fall to the hands of men unacquainted with the law and unschooled in business, it is inevitable that mistakes shall sometimes occur, and that very often the law will fail of strict compliance. Where an election is thus rendered irregular, whether the irregularity shall avoid it or not must depend generally upon the effect the failure to comply strictly with the law may have had in obstructing the complete expression of the popular will, or the production of satisfactory evidence thereof. Election statutes are to be tested like other statutes, but with a leaning to liberality in view of the great public purposes which they accomplish; and except where they specifically provide that a thing shall be done in the manner indicated and not otherwise, their provisions designed merely for the information and guidance of the officers must be regarded as directory only, and the election will not be defeated by a failure to comply with them, providing the irregularity has not hindered any who were entitled from exercising the right of suffrage, or rendered doubtful the evidences from which the result was to be declared. In a leading case the following irregularities were held not to vitiate the election: the accidental substitution of another book for the Holy Evangelists in the administration of an oath, both parties being ignorant of the error at the time; the holding of the election by persons who were not officers de jure, but who had colorable authority, and acted de facto in good faith;² the failure of the board of inspectors to appoint clerks of the election; the closing of the outer door of the room where the election was held at sundown, and then permitting the persons within the room to vote, — it not appearing that legal voters were excluded by closing the door, or illegal allowed to vote; and the failure of the inspectors or clerks to take the prescribed oath of office. And it was said, in the same case, that any irregularity in conducting an election which does not deprive a legal elector of his vote, or admit a disqualified person to vote, or cast uncertainty on the result, and has not been occasioned by the agency of a party seeking to derive a benefit from it, should be overlooked in a proceeding to try the right to an office depending on such election.¹ The rule is an eminently proper one, and it furnishes

¹ Spraguis v. Houghton, 3 Ill. 377; State v. Robb, 17 Ind. 536; People v. Pease, 39 Barb. 585. And see People v. Gordon, 5 Cal. 235; Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Dav. 63; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544; Goetschius v. Mathewson, 61 N. Y. 439; [Walcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 361, 56 N. W. 837, 23 L. R. A. 215.]

² As to what constitutes an officer de facto, the reader is referred to the careful opinion in State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449,

9 Am. Rep. 409. Also to Fowler v. Beebe, 9 Mass. 231; Tucker v. Aiken, 7 N. H. 113; Commonwealth v. McCombs, 56 Pa. St. 436; Fenelon v. Butts, 49 Wis. 342; Ex parte Strang, 21 Ohio St. 810; Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151, and authorities referred to in these cases severally; and to cases, supra, pp. 866, 868, notes. Also Cooley on Taxation, 184-186; McCrary's Law of Elections, §§ 75-79.

¹ People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, and 8 N. Y. 87. To the same effect, see Clifton v. Cook, 7 Ala. 114; Truehart v. Addicks, 2 Tex. 217; Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233; Gorham v. Campbell, 2 Cal. 135; People v. Bates, 11 Mich. 392; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 112; People v. McManus, 34 Barb. 620; Whipley v. McCune, 12 Cal. 352; Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 151; Day v. Kent, 1 Oreg. 123; Platt v. People, 29 Ill. 54; Du Page Co. v. People, 65 Ill. 360; Hodge v. Linn, 100 Ill. 897; Ewing v. Filley, 43 Pa. St. 384; Howard v. Shields, 16 Ohio St. 184; Fry v. Booth, 19 Ohio St. 25; State v. Stumpf, 21 Wis. 570; McKinney v. O'Connor, 26 Tex. 5; Sprague v. Norway, 81 Cal. 173; Sheppard's Election Case, 77 Pa. St. 226; Wheelock's Election Case, 82 Pa. St. 297; Barnes v. Pike Co., 51 Miss. 305; State v. O'Day, 69 Iowa, 338, 28 N. W. 542. In Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill, 42, it was held that where the statute required the inspectors to certify the result of the election on the next day thereafter, or sooner, the certificate made the second day thereafter was sufficient, the statute as to time being directory merely. In People v. McManus, 34 Barb. 620, it was held that an election was not made void by the fact that one of the three inspectors was by the statute disqualified from acting, by being a candidate at the election, the other two being qualified. In Sprague v. Norway, 81 Cal. 173, it was decided that where the judges of an election could not read, and for that reason a person who was not a member of the board took the ballots from the box, and read them to the tellers, at the request of the judges, the election was not affected by the irregularity. In several cases, and among others the following, the general principle is asserted that any irregularities or misconduct, not amounting to fraud, is not to be suffered to defeat an election unless it is made to appear that the result was thereby changed. Loomis v. Jackson, 6 W. Va. 513, 682; Morris v. Varlaningham, 11 Kan. 269; Supervisors of Du Page v. People, 65 Ill. 360; Chicago v. People, 80 Ill. 496; People v. Wilson, 62 N. Y. 186; State v. Burbridge, 24 Fla. 112, 3 So. 869. [Bailes v. Farmers' Irr. District, 90 Neb. 510, 83 N. W. 83. But where the election officers took the ballot-box with them when they left the polling-place and went to dinner, this of itself invalidates the vote in that precinct. Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 29 L. R. A. 673, 41 Pac. 454.] If the election is fair and the count honest, it is not fatal that the election officers were not properly qualified: Quinn v. Markoe, 37 Minn. 436, 35 N. W. 263; Swepton v. Barton, 39 Ark. 549; Wells v. Taylor, 5 Mont. 202, 3 Pac. 255; contra, Walker v. Sanford, 78 Ga. 155, 1 S. E. 424; nor that unauthorized persons helped in the counting. Roberts v. Calvert, 98 N. C. 580, 4 S. E. 127. The failure to hold the poll open as long as the law requires may not be fatal if no one lost his vote in consequence. Cleland v. Porter, 74 Ill. 76; Swepton v. Barton, 39 Ark. 549. See Kuykendall v. Harker, 89 Ill. 126. And a candidate who participates in the a very satisfactory test as to what is essential and what not in election laws.¹ And where a party contests an election on the ground of these or any similar irregularities, he ought to aver and be able to show that the result was affected by them.² Time and place, however, are of the substance of every election,³ and a failure to comply with the law in these particulars is not generally to be treated as a mere irregularity.⁴ election actually held will not be allowed to question its validity on that ground. People v. Waite, 37 Ill. 25. But where the law gave three hours for an election and the polls were closed in forty minutes, the proceedings were held invalid. State v. Wolgem, 37 Iowa, 131. All votes received after the polls should be closed are illegal. Varney v. Justice, 86 Ky. 590, 9 S. W. 457. And where the law required three judges and two clerks of an election, and only one of each was provided, it was held that this was not a mere irregularity and the election was void. Chicago, &c. R. R. Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill. 383.

¹ This rule has certainly been applied with great liberality, in some cases. In People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233, it was held that the statute requiring ballots to be sealed up in a package, and then locked up in the ballot-box, with the office at the top sealed, was directory merely; and that ballots which had been kept in a locked box, but without the office closed or the ballots sealed up, were admissible in evidence in a contest for an office depending upon this election. This case was followed in People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283, and it was held that whether the ballots were more satisfactory evidence than the inspector's certificates, where a discrepancy appeared between them, was a question for the jury. See also Fowler v. State, 68 Tex. 30, 3 S. W. 255. In Morris v. Haines, 2 N. H. 246, the statute required State officers to be chosen by a check-list, and by delivery of the ballots to the moderator in person; and it was held that the requirement of a check-list was mandatory, and the election in the town was void if none was kept. The decision was put upon the ground that the check-list was provided as an important guard against indiscriminate and illegal voting, and the votes given by ballot without this protection were therefore as much void as if given à la voce.

² Lanier v. Gallatas, 13 La. Ann. 175; People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Dobyns v. Weadon, 50 Ind. 298.

³ Dickey v. Hurlburt, 5 Cal. 243; Knowles v. Yeates, 31 Cal. 82; Walker v. Sanford, 78 Ga. 195, 1 S. E. 424; Williams v. Potter, 114 Ill. 628, 2 N. E. 729. An election adjourned without warrant to another place, as well as an election held without the officers required by law, is void. Commonwealth v. County Commissioners, 5 Rawle, 75. An unauthorized adjournment of the election for dinner—it appearing to have been in good faith, and no one having been deprived of his vote thereby—will not defeat the election. Fry v. Booth, 19 Ohio St. 25. Adjourning an election in good faith to another polling place will not necessarily avoid it. Farrington v. Turner, 53 Mich. 27, 18 N. W. 544. Where voting had been done at a church, and the building was moved three-quarters of a mile, an election held at the new place is valid, no one being prevented from voting by the change. Steele v. Calhoun, 61 Miss. 556. So of a change of two hundred feet. Simons v. People, 119 Ill. 617, 9 N. E. 220. See also Stemper v. Higgins, 38 Minn. 222, 37 N. W. 95, where a separate voting place from the township poll was, without authority of law but in good faith, kept in a village, and the vote was held legal. [Delay of an hour in opening polls, when not brought about through fraud, and in the absence of a showing that the number (one) of voters thereby prevented from voting could have changed the result, will not invalidate the election. Pickett v. Russell, 42 Fla. 116, 634, 28 So. 764.]

⁴ The statute of Michigan requires the clerks of election to keep lists of the persons voting, and that at the close of the polls the first duty of the inspectors shall be to compare the lists with the number

What is a Sufficient Election.

Unless the law under which the election is held expressly requires more, a plurality of the votes cast will be sufficient to elect, notwithstanding these may constitute but a small portion of those who are entitled to vote,¹ and notwithstanding the voters generally may have failed to take notice of the law requiring the election to be held.²

If several persons are to be chosen to the same office, the requisite number who shall stand highest on the list will be elected. But without such a plurality no one can be chosen to a public office; and it is held in many cases that if the person receiving the highest number of votes was ineligible, the votes cast for him will still be effectual so far as to prevent the opposing candidate of votes in the box, and if the count of the latter exceeds the former, then to draw out unopened and destroy a sufficient number to make them correspond. In People v. Clcott, 16 Mich. 283, it appeared that the inspectors in two wards of Detroit, where a surplus of votes had been found, had neglected this duty, and had counted all the votes without drawing out and destroying any. The surplus in the two wards was sixteen. The actual majority of one of the candidates over the other on the count as it stood (if certain other disputed votes were rejected) would be four. It was held that this neglect of the inspectors did not invalidate the election; that had the votes been drawn out, the probability was that each candidate would lose a number proportioned to the whole number which he had in the box; and this being a probability which the statute providing for the drawing process led upon, the court should apply it afterwards, apportioning the excess of votes between the candidates in that proportion. [The requirements of law must be substantially complied with. An election held by a mere usurper is void, even though fairly and honestly conducted. State v. Taylor, 108 N. C. 100, 12 S. E. 1005, 12 L. R. A. 202.]

¹ Augustin v. Ezzeleston, 12 La. Ann. 390; Gilesple v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544. See also State v. Mayor, &c. of St. Joseph, 37 Mo. 270; State v. Binder, 38 Mo. 459; In re Plurality Elections, 15 R. I. 617, 8 Atl. 881.

² People v. Hartwell, 12 Mich. 508. In a case a little different, where the people were in doubt if there were any vacancy to be filled, and only twenty-nine persons out of a poll of eight hundred cast their votes to fill the vacancy, it was held that these twenty-nine votes did not make an election. State v. Good, 41 N. J. 249. Even if the majority expressly dissent, yet if they do not vote, the election by the minority will be valid. Oldknow v. Wainwright, 1 W. B. 229; Rex v. Foxcroft, 2 Burr. 1017; Rex v. Withers, referred to in same case. Minority representation in certain cases has been introduced in New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois, and the principle is likely to find favor elsewhere. But such representation has been held inconsistent with a constitutional provision that each elector shall be entitled to vote at all elections. State v. Constantine, 42 Ohio St. 437. [Contra, Commonwealth v. Reeder, 171 Pa. 505, 33 Atl. 67, 33 L. R. A. 141. Requirement that "members of assembly shall be appointed among the several counties of the State by the legislature as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants" is mandatory, and any substantial non-compliance will be set aside. People v. Broom, 138 N. Y. 95, 33 N. E. 827, 20 L. R. A. 81. For other cases in which gerrymanders have been set aside for gross unfairness and inequity see Parker v. State, 133 Ind. 178, 32 N. E. 835, 33 N. E. 119, 18 L. R. A. 557; State v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 50, 53 N. W. 35, 17 L. R. A. 145; Giddings v. Blacker, 93 Mich. 1, 52 N. W. 944, 16 L. R. A. 442; Houghton Co. Supervisors v. Blacker, 92 being chosen, and the election must be considered as having failed.¹

The admission of illegal votes at an election will not necessarily defeat it; but, to warrant its being set aside on that ground, it should appear that the result would have been different had they been excluded.² And the fact that unqualified persons are allowed to enter the room, and participate in an election, does not

Mich. 638, 52 N. W. 951, 16 L. R. A. 432; State v. Cunningham, 81 Wis. 449, 51 N. W. 724, 15 L. R. A. 561, and note. See also, in this connection, People v. Rice, 135 N. Y. 473, 31 N. E. 921, 16 L. R. A. 833. Law providing that presidential electors shall be elected, one from each congressional district and remainder at large, or from larger districts, is valid. McPherson v. Blacker, 92 Mich. 377, 52 N. W. 469, 16 L. R. A. 475, aff. in 146 U. S. 1, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3. Cumulative voting held unconstitutional in Maynard v. Bd. of Canvassers, 84 Mich. 228, 47 N. W. 756, 11 L. R. A. 332.]

¹ State v. Giles, 1 Chand. 112; Opinions of Judges, 38 Me. 598; State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497; Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145; Fish v. Colliens, 21 La. Ann. 289; Sublett v. Bedwell, 47 Miss. 266, 12 Am. Rep. 338; State v. Swearingen, 12 Ga. 24; Commonwealth v. Cluley, 56 Pa. St. 270; Matter of Corlies, 11 R. I. 638, 23 Am. Rep. 635; State v. Vail, 53 Mo. 97; Barnum v. Gilman, 27 Minn. 469, 8 N. W. 375, 38 Am. Rep. 304; Dryden v. Swinburne, 20 W. Va. 89; Sweptson v. Barton, 39 Ark. 549. In People v. Molliter, 23 Mich. 341, a minority candidate claimed the election on the ground that the votes cast for his opponent, though a majority, were ineffectual because the name was abbreviated. Held, that they were at least effectual to preclude the election of a candidate who received a less number. And see Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36; [State v. McGarry, 69 Vt. 461, 38 Atl. 165, 44 L. R. A. 440.] But it has been held that, if ineligibility is notorious, so that the electors must be deemed to have voted with full knowledge of it, the votes for an ineligible candidate must be declared void, and the next highest candidate is chosen. This is the English doctrine: King v. Hawkins, 10 East. 211; 2 Dow. P. C. 124; King v. Parry, 14 East. 549; Goaling v.

Veley, 7 Q. B. 406; Rex v. Monday, 2 Cowp. 530; Rex v. Foxcroft, Burr. 1017, s. c. 1 Wm. Bl. 229; Rex v. Coaks, 3 E. & B. 249; French v. Nolan, 2 Monk. 711. And see the following American cases: Price v. Baker, 41 Ind. 572; Hatcheson v. Tilder, 4 H. & McH. 279; Commonwealth v. Green, 4 Whart. 521; Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; Carson v. McPhetridge, 15 Ind. 327; People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451, 10 Am. Rep. 508; State v. Johnson, 100 Ind. 489. Compare Barnum v. Gilman, 27 Minn. 469, 8 N. W. 375, 38 Am. Rep. 304; [Gardner v. Burke, 61 Neb. 534, 85 N. W. 541, is contra.] It would seem that, if the law which creates the disqualification expressly declares all votes cast for the disqualified person void, they must be treated as mere blank votes, and cannot be counted for any purpose. Where, under the law creating it, the disability concerns the holding of the office merely, and it is not a disability to be elected, it is sufficient if the disability is removed before the term begins. State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 96; State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103, 5 N. W. 876, 6 N. W. 512; Privett v. Bickford, 26 Kan. 52. Compare Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117; State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 566. [See discussion by Floyd R. Mechem of the question of "Eligibility to Office—As of What Time Determined," in 1 Mich. Law Rev. 17.]

² Ex parte Murphy, 7 Cow. 153; First Parish in Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. 148; Blandford School District v. Gibbs, 2 Cush. 39; People v. Cicott, 15 Mich. 283; Judkins v. Hill, 50 N. H. 140; DeLoach v. Rogers, 86 N. C. 357; Tarbox v. Sughrue, 33 Kan. 225, 12 Pac. 935; Sweptson v. Barton, 39 Ark. 549. See Shields v. McGregor, 91 Mo. 534, 4 S. W. 266. Votes received illegally will, be rejected by the court in an action to try title to an office. State v. Hilmantel, 21 Wis. 566; Harbaugh v. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241; Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 438.

justify legal voters in refusing to vote, and treating the election as void, but it will be held valid if the persons declared chosen had a plurality of the legal votes actually cast.¹ So it is held that an exclusion of legal votes — not fraudulently, but through error in judgment — will not defeat an election; notwithstanding the error in such a case is one which there was no mode of correcting, even by the aid of the courts, since it cannot be known with certainty afterwards how the excluded electors would have voted, and it would obviously be dangerous to receive and rely upon their subsequent statements as to their intentions, after it is ascertained precisely what effect their votes would have upon the result.² If, however, the inspectors of election shall exclude legal voters, not because of honest error in judgment, but wilfully and corruptly, and to an extent that affects the result, or if by riots or otherwise legal voters are intimidated and prevented from voting, or for any other reasons the electors have not had opportunity for the expression of their sentiments through the ballot-box, the election should be set aside altogether, as having failed in the purpose for which it was called.³ Errors of judgment are inevitable, but fraud, intimidation, and violence the law can and should protect against. A mere casual affray, however, or accidental disturbance, without any intention of overawing or intimidating the electors, cannot be considered as affecting the freedom of the election;⁴ nor in any case would electors be justified in abandoning the ground for any light causes, or for improper interference by others, where the officers continue in the discharge of their functions, and there is opportunity for the electors to vote.⁵ And, as we have already seen, a failure of an election in one precinct, or disorder or violence which prevent a return from that precinct, will not defeat the whole election, unless it appears that the votes which could not be returned in consequence of the violence would have changed the result.⁶ It is a little difficult at times to adopt

¹ First Parish in Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. 148.

² Newcum v. Kirtley, 13 B. Monr. 515. See Burke v. Supervisors of Monroe, 4 W. Va. 371; [Pickett v. Russell, 42 Fla. 118, 28 So. 764.]

³ Where one receives a majority of all the votes cast, the opposing candidate cannot be declared elected on evidence that legal voters sufficient to change the result offered to vote for him, but were erroneously denied the right; but the election may be declared to have failed, and a new election be ordered. Renner v. Bennett, 21 Ohio St. 431. See also

Matter of Long Island R. R. Co., 19 Wend. 37; People v. Phillips, 1 Denio, 388; State v. McDaniel, 22 Ohio St. 354.

⁴ Cush. Leg. Assemb. § 184; Roberts v. Calvert, 98 N. C. 580, 4 S. E. 127.

⁵ See First Parish in Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. 148. Enough voters to change the result must have been prevented from voting in order to vitiate the election. Tarbox v. Sughrue, 90 Kan. 225, 12 Pac. 935. And see cases, p. 922, note 2, ante.

⁶ Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill, 42. See ante, p. 927, and note.

the true mean between those things which should and those which should not defeat an election; for while on the one hand the law should seek to secure the due expression of his will by every legal voter, and guard against any irregularities or misconduct that may tend to prevent it, so, on the other hand, it is to be borne in mind that charges of irregularity and misconduct are easily made, and that the dangers from throwing elections open to be set aside or controlled by oral evidence, are perhaps as great as any in our system. An election honestly conducted under the forms of law ought generally to stand, notwithstanding individual electors may have been deprived of their votes, or unqualified voters been allowed to participate. Individuals may suffer wrong in such cases, and a candidate who was the real choice of the people may sometimes be deprived of his election; but as it is generally impossible to arrive at any greater certainty of result by resort to oral evidence, public policy is best subserved by allowing the election to stand, and trusting to a strict enforcement of the criminal laws for greater security against the like irregularities and wrongs in the future.

The Canvass and the Return.

If the election is purely a local one, the inspectors who have had charge of it will be expected to proceed immediately on the closing of the poll to canvass the votes and declare the result. It is commonly made their duty also, or the duty of their clerk, to issue to the person or persons appearing to be chosen a certificate or notification of his or their election, which will be presumptive evidence of the fact. It is not in the power of the inspectors by neglecting or refusing to give the proper certificate to defeat the will of the people, for the ballots determine the election and not the certificate, and the person chosen, from whom the certificate is withheld, may nevertheless proceed to qualify and take possession of the office unless opposed by a de facto incumbent.¹ If the election district comprises several precincts, the inspectors of the polls in each will make return in writing of the canvass made by them to the proper board of canvassers for the whole district, and if the election is for State officers, this district board will transmit the result of the district canvass to the proper State board, who will declare the general result.² In all this, the several boards

¹ Ex parte Smith, 8 S. C. 495; Govan v. Jackson, 32 Ark. 553.

² Errors in certifying boxes, &c., and making the returns will not, in the absence of fraud or changes in the ballots, warrant throwing out the vote. Kenlogg

v. Hickman, 12 Col. 256, 21 Pac. 325; Fowler v. State, 68 Tex. 20, 8 S. W. 255.

See People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233; State v. Berg, 76 Mo. 186; Dixon v. Orr, 49 Ark. 238, 4 S. W. 774.

act for the most part in a ministerial capacity, and are not vested with judicial powers to correct the errors and mistakes that may have occurred with any officer who preceded them in the performance of any duty connected with the election, or to pass upon any disputed fact which may affect the result.¹ Each board is to receive the returns transmitted to it, if in due form, as correct, and is to ascertain and declare the result as it appears by such returns;² and if other matters are introduced into the return than those which the law provides, they are to that extent unofficial and unauthorized, and must be disregarded.³ If a district or ¹ State v. Charleston, 1 S. C. n. s. 30. And see cases cited in the next note. While canvassers act in a ministerial capacity only, and must declare the result on the face of the returns, it does not follow that they are to insist upon technical accuracy in the returns, and reject those which do not comply with the very letter of the law, and that they are compelled to act upon returns which by mistake have been made inaccurate, without affording an opportunity for correction. If, for example, in a return transmitted to them, the name of one of the persons voted for is erroneously given, and the election judges are ready to correct it, a great wrong is done if this is not permitted. The purpose of the canvass is to determine, record, and declare the actual will of the electors; not to defeat it; and when technicalities and mistakes are seized upon and taken advantage of for party or personal ends, and without other object or necessity, the public injury is very manifest. It is of the utmost importance that the public shall have confidence in the administration of the election laws; and whatever undermines that confidence invites fraud and violence. It is true that errors which creep into the returns may be obviated on a judicial trial; but that is a slow and expensive process, and ought not to be forced upon the parties except in cases where the result upon the balloting is really in doubt. Errors which are immaterial should be overlooked, and those which are material ought to be corrected by the proper officers whenever it is practicable.

² Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill, 42; Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423; People v. Hilliard, 20 Ill. 413; People v. Jones, 19 Ind. 357; Mayo v. Freeland, 10 Mo. 629; Thompson v. Circuit Judge, 9 Ala. 338;

People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 492; O'Ferrell v. Colby, 2 Minn. 180; People v. Van Cleave, 1 Mich. 362; People v. Van Slyck, 4 Cow. 297; Morgan v. Quackenbush, 22 Barb. 72; Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 269, and 8 N. Y. 67; Hartt v. Harvey, 32 Barb. 55; Attorney-General v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567; Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; State v. Governor, 25 N. J. 831; State v. Clerk of Passaic, 25 N. J. 854; Marshall v. Kerns, 2 Swan, 68; People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45; Phelps v. Schroder, 26 Ohio St. 649; State v. State Canvassers, 36 Wis. 498; Opinion of Justices, 53 N. H. 640; State v. Cavers, 22 Iowa, 343; State v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 640; State v. Rodman, 43 Mo. 236; State v. Steers, 44 Mo. 223; Bacon v. York Co., 26 Me. 491; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Opinion of Justices, 64 Me. 588; Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 881, 86 Am. Rep. 325; Peebles v. County Com'rs, 82 N. C. 365; Clark v. County Examiners, 126 Mass. 282; State v. County Canvassers, 17 Fla. 29; Hagge v. State, 10 Neb. 61, 4 N. W. 875; State v. Wilson, 24 Neb. 139, 38 N. W. 81; Moore v. Kessler, 59 Ind. 152; State v. Hayne, 8 S. C. 67. They may not refuse to canvass because a poll book is not returned as it should be. Patten v. Florence, 38 Kan. 501, 17 Pac. 174. They may and should correct an arithmetical blunder. State v. Hill, 20 Neb. 119, 29 N. W. 258. Legal returns received after the proper time should be counted. Cresap v. Gray, 10 Oreg. 345. [After the board has acted upon returns that are fair on their face, and has rendered its return, it is functus officio and cannot revise its work. Rosenthal v. State Bd. of Canvassers, 50 Kan. 129, 32 Pac. 129, 19 L. R. A. 167.]

³ Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill, 42. Papers

State board of canvassers assumes to reject returns transmitted to it, on other grounds than those appearing upon its face, or to declare persons elected who are not shown by the returns to have received the requisite plurality, it is usurping functions, and its conduct will be reprehensible, if not even criminal.¹ The action of such boards is to be carefully confined to an examination of the papers before them, and a determination of the result therefrom, in the light of such facts of public notoriety connected with the election as every one takes notice of, and which may enable them to apply such ballots as are in any respect imperfect to the proper candidates or offices for which they are intended, provided the intent is sufficiently indicated by the ballot in connection with such facts, so that extraneous evidence is not necessary for this purpose.² If canvassers refuse or neglect to perform their duty, they may be compelled by mandamus;³ though as these boards are created for a single purpose only, and are dissolved by an adjournment without day, it has been held that, after such adjournment mandamus would be inapplicable, inasmuch as there is no longer any board which can act.⁴ But we should think the better doctrine to be, that if the board adjourn before a legal and complete performance of their duty, mandamus would lie to compel them to meet and perform it.⁵ But when the board them-in the poll book but not a part of the return cannot be considered. Simon v. Durham, 10 Oreg. 52. Returns void on their face may be rejected. State v. State Canvassers, 35 Wis. 498. A certificate to be made by a justice and inspectors is void on its face if signed by the justice alone. Perry v. Whitaker, 71 N. C. 475.

¹ Prince v. Skilkin, 71 Me. 361, 38 Am. Rep. 325. But if not void on their face, the election board to which they are returned have no jurisdiction to go behind them and inquire into questions of fraud in the election. Phelps v. Schröder, 28 Ohio St. 549; Leigh v. State, 69 Ala. 281; Brown v. Comrs. Rush Co., 38 Kan. 433, 17 Pac. 304; Opinion of Justices, 58 N. H. 331. So of judges of the Supreme Court sitting as canvassers. Osgood v. Jones, 50 N. H. 273, 252.

² State v. Foster, 38 Ohio St. 599.

³ Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush, 523; Burke v. Supervisors of Monroe, 4 W. Va. 371; State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa, 186; Magee v. Supervisors, 10 Cal. 376; Kiefer v. Cameron, 39 Ind. 488; Commonwealth v. Emminger, 74 Pa. St. 479.

⁴ Clark v. Buchanan, 2 Minn. 346;

People v. Supervisors, 12 Barb. 217; State v. Rodman, 48 Mo. 256.

⁵ To this effect is State v. Gibbs, 13 Fla. 55; People v. Schiellain, 95 N. Y. 124. In the last case it is held that the board continues as such, in spite of adjournment, till its whole duty is performed. And see People v. Board of Registration, 17 Mich. 427; People v. Board, &c. of Nankin, 16 Mich. 156; Lewis v. Commissioners, 16 Kan. 102; Pacheco v. Beck, 52 Cal. 3; State v. Hill, 20 Neb. 119, 29 N. W. 258. And they may be compelled to make a legal and proper canvass after they have made one which was illegal and unwarranted. State v. County Comrs., 23 Kan. 264; State v. Hill, 19 Neb. 58, 4 N. W. 514; Stewart v. Peyton, 77 Ga. 668; Simon v. Durham, 10 Oreg. 52. And if they have finished their work before the time allowed has elapsed, and while they still have the returns, they may be compelled to reconsider their action. State v. Berg, 76 Mo. 136. [Upon canvassing boards, their powers and duties, see People v. Rice, 129 N. Y. 449, 29 N. E. 355, 14 L. R. A. 643.]

selves have once performed and fully completed their duty, they have no power afterwards to reconsider their determination and come to a different conclusion.¹

Contesting Elections.

As the election officers perform for the most part ministerial functions only, their returns, and the certificates of election which are issued upon them, are not conclusive in favor of the officers who would thereby appear to be chosen, but the final decision must rest with the courts.² This is the general rule, and the exceptions are of those cases where the law under which the canvass is made declares the decision conclusive, or where a special statutory board is established with powers of final decision.³ What-

¹ Hadley v. Mayor, &c., 33 N. Y. 603; State v. Warren, 1 Houston, 39; State v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 540; Swain v. McRae, 80 N. C. 111; State v. Lamberton, 37 Minn. 362, 34 N. W. 336; Myers v. Chalmers, 60 Miss. 772; People v. Reardon, 3 N. Y. Supp. 560; People v. Board Canvassers, 46 Hun, 380. Compare Alderson v. Com'rs, 32 W. Va. 454, 9 S. E. 883. If they recount and give the certificate to another, such action is a mere nullity. Bowen v. Hixon, 45 Mo. 840; People v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116; Opinions of Justices, 117 Mass. 599; State v. Donewirth, 21 Ohio St. 216.

² State v. Justices of Middlesex, 1 N. J. 214; Hill v. Hill, 4 McCord, 277; Wammack v. Holloway, 2 Ala. 81; State v. Clerk of Passaic, 25 N. J. 354; Marshall v. Kerns, 2 Swan, 88; Attorney-General v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567; Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; People v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362; People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233; Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; State v. Johnson, 17 Ark. 407; State v. Fetter, 12 Wis. 566; State v. Avery, 14 Wis. 122; People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50; Newcom v. Kirtley, 13 B. Monr. 515; Commonwealth v. Jones, 10 Bush, 725; People v. Seaman, 5 Denio, 409; People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 67; People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325; Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 361. 36 Am. Rep. 825; Echols v. State, 53 Ala. 131; Reynolds v. State, 61 Ind. 392; Winter v. Thistlewood, 101 Ill. 450; Roberts v. Calvert, 98 N. C. 580, 4 S. E. 127. But see State v. Dortch, 41 La. 846, 6 So.

777. In Georgia the governor's decision upon the election of officers commissioned by him is conclusive. Corbett v. McDaniel, 77 Ga. 544. A chief justice cannot be empowered to decide, pending a legal determination of a contest, which claimant shall hold the office ad interim. If the power is executive it cannot be conferred on a judicial officer; if judicial, it belongs to a court. In re Cleveland, 51 N. J. L. 319, 18 Atl. 67. An illegal election may be contested and set aside, even though but one person was voted for. Ex parte Ellyson, 20 Gratt. 10. The customary remedy is by writ of quo warranto, issued either on the relation of some citizen who shows an interest of his own in the question involved, or on relation of the Attorney-General in the interest of the State. State v. Tuttle, 53 Wis. 45, 9 N. W. 791. Statutory provision for contesting elections does not abrogate the remedy by quo warranto. People v. Londoner, 13 Col. 893, 22 Pac. 764, differing from State v. Francis, 88 Mo. 557. [Upon election contests in Indiana, see English v. Dickery, 128 Ind. 174, 27 N. E. 495, 13 L. R. A. 40, and note. As to notice to contest, see Bowler v. Eisenhood, 1 S. D. 577, 48 N. W. 136, 12 L. R. A. 705, and note.]

³ See Grier v. Shackleford, Const. Rep. 642; Batman v. Megowan, 1 Mot. (Ky.) 523; State v. Mariow, 15 Ohio St. 114; People v. Goodwin, 22 Mich. 436; Baxter v. Brooks, 29 Ark. 173, 11 Am. Law Rev. 634; Hipp v. Charlevoix Co. Supervisors, 62 Mich. 456, 29 N. W. 767. For the proceedings in the State of New York in the ever may be the office, an election to it is only made by the candidate receiving the requisite majority or plurality of the legal votes cast;¹ and whoever, without such election, intrudes into an office, whether with or without the formal evidences of title, may be ousted on the proper judicial inquiry.² The general doctrine is here stated; but in one important case it was denied that it could apply to the office of chief executive of the State. The case was one in which the incumbent was a candidate for re-election, and a majority of votes was cast for his opponent. Certain spurious returns were, however, transmitted to the State canvassers, which, together with the legal returns, showed a plurality for the incumbent, and he was accordingly declared chosen. Proceedings being taken against him by quo warranto in the Supreme Court, he objected to the jurisdiction, on the ground that the three departments of the State government, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial, were equal, co-ordinate, and independent of each other, and that each department must be and is the ultimate judge of the election and qualification of its own member or members, subject only to impeachment and ap-canvass of votes for Governor in 1792, where the election of John Jay to that office was defeated by the rejection of votes cast for him for certain irregularities, which, under the more recent judicial decisions, ought to have been overlooked, see Hammond's Political History of New York, ch. 8. The law then in force made the decision of the State canvassers final and conclusive. The Louisiana Returning Board cases will readily occur to the mind; but those must be regarded as standing by themselves, because the legislative provisions under which they were had were unlike any others known to our history, and assumed to confer extraordinary and irresponsible powers. [For the procedure in Nebraska where the legislature in joint session determines contests over election of officers of the executive department: see State v. Eider, 31 Neb. 189, 47 N. W. 719, 10 L. R. A. 796, and re-election of executive officers, Re Re-Election of Executive Officers, 31 Neb. 262, 47 N. W. 628, 10 L. R. A. 803.]

¹ In some cases it is provided by law, that, if there is a tie vote, the two persons receiving an equal and the highest number shall cast lots, and the election shall be thereby determined. The drawing of lots, however, would not preclude an inquiry, at the suit of the State, into previous irregularities. People v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 118. [And where the Constitution provides a mode of procedure to be followed in case of tie votes for certain officers, but makes none for justices of the peace, and does not authorize the legislature to provide for such case, there is no election in case of tie vote for justice of the peace, and the old incumbent holds over. State v. Kramer, 150 Mo. 89, 51 S. W. 716, 47 L. R. A. 551.]

² Whether jury trial in the case of contested elections is matter of right, seems to be made a question. That it is, see State v. Burnett, 2 Ala. 140; People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; Idem, People v. Albany, &c. R. R. Co., 57 N. Y. 161. That it is not, is held in Ewing v. Filley, 43 Pa. St. 324; Commonwealth v. Leech, 44 Pa. St. 332; State v. Johnson, 25 Ark. 281; Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 266, 7 S. W. 161; Williamson v. Lane, 52 Tex. 335; State v. Lewis, 51 Conn. 113. [State v. Doherty, 18 Wash. 882, 47 Pac. 958, 58 Am. St. 39.] It is, however, conceded in Pennsylvania that, in a proceeding to forfeit an office, jury trial is of right. See also cases, p. 590, note 2, ante.

peal to the people; that the question, who is rightfully entitled to the office of governor, could in no case become a judicial question; and that as the Constitution provides no means for ousting a successful usurper of either of the three departments of the government, that power rests exclusively with the people, to be exercised by them whenever they think the exigency requires it.¹ There is a basis of truth in this argument; the executive of the State cannot be subordinated to the judiciary, and may, in general, refuse obedience to writs by which this may be attempted.² But when the question is, who is the executive of the State, the judges have functions to perform, which are at least as important as those of any other citizens, and the fact that they are judges can never be a reason why they should submit to a usurpation. A successful usurpation of the executive office can only be accomplished with the acquiescence of the other departments; and the judges, for the determination of their own course, must, in some form, inquire into or take notice of the facts. In a controversy of such momentous import, the most formal and deliberate inquiry that the circumstances will admit of is alone excusable; and, when made and declared, the circumstances must be extraordinary in which it will not be effectual. In the case referred to, the usurper, though the candidate of a party embracing half the voters of the State, found himself utterly stripped of power by the decision of the court against him; public support fell away from him, and success in his usurpation became an impossibility. The decision guided and determined the popular sentiment, and perhaps saved the State from disorder, violence, and anarchy.³

Where, however, the question arises collaterally, and not in a direct proceeding to try the title to the office, the correctness of the decision of the canvassers cannot be called in question, but must be conclusively presumed to be correct;⁴ and where the

¹ Attorney-General v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567.

² See ante, p. 162.

³ Some attention to conflicts between the several departments of government was given by the author in an essay on Checks and Balances in Government, published in the "International Review" for 1879. A question like that above mentioned could not arise in respect to the presidency, as Congress must canvass and declare the result. In some recent cases, in which the office of governor was in question, though the decision was placed by the constitution in the hands of the legislature, the final result was only determined by popular acquiescence. The difficulty was that the legislative authority was as much in dispute as the executive. The cases of South Carolina and Louisiana are here specially referred to.

⁴ Morgan v. Quackenbush, 22 Barb. 72; Hadley v. Mayor, &c., 33 N. Y. 603; Howard v. McDiarmid, 28 Ark. 100. And see Hulseman v. Rena, 41 Pa. St. 326, where it was held that the court could not interfere summarily to set aside a certificate of election, where it did not appear that the officers had acted corruptly, notwithstanding it was shown to be based in part upon forged returns.

election was to a legislative office, the final decision, as well by parliamentary law as by constitutional provisions, rests with the legislative body itself, and the courts, as we have heretofore seen,¹ cannot interfere.²

The most important question which remains to be mentioned relates to the evidence which the courts are at liberty to receive, and the facts which it is proper to spread before the jury for their consideration when an issue is made upon an election for trial at law.

The questions involved in every case are, first, has there been an election? and second, was the party who has taken possession of the office the successful candidate at such election, by having received a majority of the legal votes cast?³ These are questions which involve mixed considerations of law and fact, and the proper proceeding in which to try them in the courts is by quo warranto, when no special statutory tribunal is created for the purpose.⁴

Upon the first question, we shall not add to what we have already said. When the second is to be considered, it is to be constantly borne in mind that the point of inquiry is the will of the electors as manifested by their ballots; and to this should all the evidence be directed, and none that does not bear upon it should be admissible.

We have already seen that the certificates or determinations of the various canvassing boards, though conclusive in collateral inquiries, do not preclude an investigation by the courts into the facts which they certify. They are prima facie evidence, however, even in the courts;⁵ and this is so, notwithstanding altera-

¹ See ante, p. 189, note 1. See also Commonwealth v. Meeser, 44 Pa. St. 341.

² In Maine, where there were two conflicting bodies, each claiming the right to exercise the legislative power, the judiciary asserted and enforced the right to decide between them. Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 391, 35 Am. Rep. 325. It is to be observed, however, that the governor had already recognized the same body in whose favor the court decided, and had approved the act whose validity came in question in the court.

³ See cases cited, p. 935, note. Also State v. The Judge, 13 Ala. 895; People v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 115; Commonwealth v. Emminger, 74 Pa. St. 479; Dobyns v. Weadan, 50 Ind. 298. The right to the office comes from the ballots, and not from the commission. State v.

Draper, 50 Mo. 353. Where the officers acted fraudulently in the conduct of an election, their returns may be rejected, and the result be arrived at from other proofs exclusively. Supervisors v. Davis, 63 Ill. 405. Where returns are lost or defective, parol evidence of what the vote was is admissible: Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 266, 7 S. W. 121; Dixon v. Orr, 49 Ark. 238, 4 S. W. 774, if ballots cannot, from possible tampering, be admitted. Stemper v. Higgins, 38 Miss. 222, 37 N. W. 96.

⁴ People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; People v. Cover, 50 Ill. 100. If the proceeding is commenced before the term which is in contest has expired, it may be continued to a conclusion afterwards. State v. Pierce, 35 Wis. 13.

⁵ Marshall v. Kerns, 2 Swan, 68; Mor-

tions appear; the question of their fairness in such a case being for the jury.¹ But back of this prima facie case the courts may go, and the determinations of the State board may be corrected by those of the district boards, and the latter by the ballots themselves when the ballots are still in existence, and have been kept as required by law.² If, however, the ballots have not been kept as required by law, and surrounded by such securities as the law has prescribed with a view to their safe preservation as the best evidence of the election, it would seem that they should not be received in evidence at all,³ or, if received, that it should be left to the jury to determine, upon all the circumstances of the case, whether they constitute more reliable evidence than the inspectors' certificate,⁴ which is usually prepared immediately on the close of the election, and upon actual count of the ballots as then made by the officers whose duty it is to do so.

Something has already been said regarding the evidence which can be received where the elector's ballot is less complete and perfect in its expression of intention than it should have been. There can be no doubt under the authorities that, whenever a question may arise as to the proper application of a ballot, any evidence is admissible with a view to explain and apply it which would be admissible under the general rules of evidence for the purpose of explaining and applying other written instruments. But the rule, as it appears to us, ought not to go further. The evidence ought to be confined to proof of the concomitant circumstances; such circumstances as may be proved in support or explanation of a contract, where the parties themselves would not be allowed to give testimony as to their actual intention, when unfortunately the intention was ineffectually expressed.⁵ gan v. Quackenbush, 22 Barb. 72; Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

¹ State v. Adams, 2 Stew. 231. See State v. Helmstedt, 25 Wis. 422.

² People v. Van Cleave, 1 Mich. 302; People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233; State v. Clerk of Passaic, 25 N. J. 354; State v. Judge, &c., 13 Ala. 895; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, 8 N. Y. 67; People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420; Owens v. State, 64 Tex. 500. Ballots which should have been destroyed under the law cannot be used on a recount. State v. Bate, 70 Wis. 400, 36 N. W. 17. The ballot is always the best evidence of the voter's action. Wheat v. Ragsdale, 27 Ind. 191; People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123; Seale v. Clark, 34 Kan. 40, 7 Pac. 630.

³ People v. Sackett, 14 Mich. 320. But see People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233. Burden of showing that ballots offered are genuine is on the party offering them. Powell v. Holman, 50 Ark. 85, 3 S. W. 595; Fenton v. Scott, 17 Oreg. 189, 20 Pac. 95; Coglan v. Beard, 67 Cal. 203, 7 Pac. 738, which see as to what is sufficient proof that they have not been tampered with.

⁴ People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; Du-son v. Thompson, 32 La. Ann. 861; People v. Livingston, 79 N. Y. 279; People v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 110.

⁵ People v. Pease, 27 N. Y. 45, 84, per Denio, Ch. J., commenting upon previous New York cases. See also Attorney-General v. Ely, 4 Wis. 420.

And we have seen that no evidence is admissible as to how parties intended to vote who were wrongfully prevented or excluded from so doing. Such a case is one of wrong without remedy, so far as candidates are concerned.¹ There is more difficulty, however, when the question arises whether votes which have been cast by incompetent persons, and which have been allowed in the canvass, can afterwards be inquired into and rejected because of the want of qualification.

If votes were taken viva voce, so that it could always be determined with absolute certainty how every person had voted, the objections to this species of scrutiny after an election had been held would not be very formidable. But when secret balloting is the policy of the law, and no one is at liberty to inquire how any elector has voted, except as he may voluntarily have waived his privilege, and when consequently the avenues to correct information concerning the votes cast are carefully guarded against judicial exploration, it seems exceedingly dangerous to permit any question to be raised upon this subject. For the evidence voluntarily given upon any such question will usually come from those least worthy of credit, who, if they have voted without legal right in order to elect particular candidates, will be equally ready to testify falsely, if their testimony can be made to help the same candidates; especially when, if they give evidence that they voted the opposing ticket, there can usually be no means, as they will well know, of showing the evidence to be untrue.² Moreover, to allow such scrutiny is to hold out strong temptation to usurpation of office, without pretence or color of right; since the nature of the case, and the forms and proceedings necessary to a trial, are such that, if an issue may be made on the right of every individual voter, it will be easy, in the case of important elections, to prolong a contest for the major part if not the whole of an official term, and to keep perpetually before the courts the same excitements, strifes, and animosities which characterize the hustings, and which ought, for the peace of the community, and the safety and stability of our institutions, to terminate with the close of the polls.³

¹ See ante, p. 933.

² It has been decided in Wisconsin that where an unqualified person is called to prove that he voted at an election, and declines to testify, the fact of his having voted may be proved, and then his declarations may be put in evidence to show how he voted. State v. Olin, 23 Wis. 309. This may give the incompetent voter a double vote. First, he votes for the ticket of his choice, and then, on a contest, he declares he voted the other way, and a deduction is made from the opposite vote accordingly. See Beardstown v. Virginia, 76 Ill. 34.

³ This is one reason, perhaps, why in the case of State officers a statutory tribunal is sometimes provided with powers of summary and final decision.

Upon this subject there is very little judicial authority, though legislative bodies, deriving their precedents from England, where the system of open voting prevailed, have always been accustomed to receive such evidence, and have indeed allowed a latitude of inquiry which makes more to depend upon the conscience of the witnesses, and of legislative committees, in some cases, than upon the legitimate action of the voters. The question of the right to inquire into the qualifications of those who had voted at an election, on a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto, was directly presented in one case to the Supreme Court of New York, and the court was equally divided upon it.¹ On error to the Court of Appeals, a decision in favor of the right was rendered with the concurrence of five judges, against three dissentients.² The same question afterwards came before the Supreme Court of Michigan, and was decided the same way, though it appears from the opinions that the court were equally divided in their views.³ To these cases we must refer for the full discussion of the reasons influencing the several judges; but future decisions alone can give the question authoritative settlement.⁴

¹ People v. Pease, 30 Barb. 588.

² People v. Pease, 29 N. Y. 45.

³ People v. Cleott, 18 Mich. 283. See further the case of State v. Hulmantel, 23 Wis. 422, where it was decided that those who had voted illegally might be compelled to testify for whom they voted. The question was discussed but briefly, and as one of privilege merely.

⁴ Considerable stress was laid by the majority of the New York Court of Appeals on the legislative practice, which, as it seems to us, is quite too loose in these cases to constitute a safe guide. Some other rulings in that case also seem more latitudinarian than is warranted by sound principle and a due regard to the secret ballot system which we justly esteem so important. Thus, Selden, J., says: "When a voter refuses to disclose or fails to remember for whom he voted, I think it is competent to resort to circumstantial evidence to raise a presumption in regard to that fact. Such is the established rule in election cases before legislative committees, which assume to be governed by legal rules of evidence (Cush. Leg. Assem. §§ 193 and 200); and within that rule it was proper, in connection with the other circumstances stated by the witness Loftis, to ask him for whom he intended to vote; not, however, on the ground that his intention, as an independent fact, could be material, but on the ground that it was a circumstance tending to raise a presumption for whom he did vote." Now as, in the absence of fraud or mistake, you have arrived at a knowledge of how the man voted, when you have ascertained how, at the time, he intended to vote, it is difficult to discover much value in the elector's privilege of secrecy under this ruling. And if "circumstances" may be shown to determine how he probably voted, in cases where he insists upon his constitutional right to secrecy, then, as it appears to us, it would be better to abolish altogether the secret ballot than to continue longer a system which falsely promises secrecy, at the same time that it gives to party spies and informers full license to invade the voter's privilege in secret and surreptitious ways, and which leaves jurors, in the absence of any definite information, to act upon their guesses, surmises, and vague conjectures as to the contents of a ballot.

Upon the right to inquire into the qualifications of those who have voted, in a proceeding by quo warranto to test the right to a public office, reference is made to the very full discussions by Justices Christiancy and Campbell, taking different views, in People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283, 294, 311. [The question of the effect of votes cast by unqualified voters arose in Rasmussen v. Baker, 7 Wyo. 117, 50 Pac. 819, 35 L. R. A. 773. The Constitution of Wyoming provides that "no person shall have the right to vote who shall not be able to read the Constitution of this State." At an election held Nov. 8, 1896, to elect a county treasurer, fifty-four votes in one precinct and fifty in another were cast for the defendant B, by naturalized citizens of Finnish birth. These voters were incapable of reading the Constitution in English, but could read a Finnish translation of it. Held, that they were unqualified, and that their votes were void.]

INDEX.

THE FIGURES REFER TO THE TOP PAGING.

A.

ABBREVIATIONS,

when ballots rendered ineffectual by, 916-919.

AB INCONVENIENTI, doctrine of, in construction, 93, n. 2, 102-106.

ACCUSATIONS OF CRIME,

are actionable per se, 805.

self, not to be compelled, 442-449.

how made with a view to investigation and trial, 436.

See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

varying form of, cannot subject party to second trial, 470.

ACCUSED PARTIES,

testimony of, in their own behalf, 447-449.

confessions of, 443-449.

See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

ACQUIESCENCE,

in irregular organization of corporations, 363, 364.

ACTION, against States, 23.

against election officers for refusing to receive votes, 927.

for negligent or improper construction of public works, 353-362, 325, 326.

for property taken under right of eminent domain, 812-828.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

for exercise of legislative power by municipal bodies, 293-306.

for slander and libel, rules for, 605-612.

modification of, by statute, 615.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

rights in, cannot be created by mere legislative enactment, 526, 527.

nor taken away by legislature, 517, 518.

nor appropriated under right of eminent domain, 759.

nor forfeited, except by judicial proceedings, 517, 518.

statutory penalties may be taken away before recovery of judgment, 518, n.

ACTION — continued.

limitation to suits, 520-524.

statutes for, are unobjectionable in principle, 520, 521.

subsequent repeal of statute cannot revive rights, 416, 521.

principle on which statutes are based, 522.

cannot apply against a party not in default, 523.

must give parties an opportunity for trial, 523, 524.

for causing death by negligence, &c., 844.

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT,

how far in force in America, 51-53.

ACTS OF THE LEGISLATURE. See STATUTES.*ADJOURNMENT OF SUIT, from regard to religious scruples of party, 676, n.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE LEGISLATURE, on its own motion, 188.

by the governor, 188.

ADMINISTRATION,

conclusiveness of, though supposed intestate living, 80, n. 1.

ADMINISTRATIVE POWERS,

distinguished from judicial, 143, n. 1.

ADMINISTRATORS. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.*ADMIRALTY JURISDICTION, exercise of, by the Revolutionary Congress, 8.

conferred upon courts of United States, 23.

ADMISSIONS, of accused parties as evidence, 443-449.

See CONFESSIONS.

ADVERTISEMENT,

notice to foreign parties by, 582-585.

not effectual to warrant a personal judgment, 583-585.

AGENCIES OF GOVERNMENT, not to be taxed, 45, 682-686.

strict construction of powers of, 270-274.

States not liable for acts of, 23, n. 2.

AGREEMENTS. See CONTRACTS.*ALABAMA,

divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.

exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n. 2.

revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.

privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.

bills, how to be signed, 195, n. 2.

legislative journals to be signed by presiding officer, 195, n. 2.

no law to embrace more than one object, to be expressed in title, 202, n. 3.

right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.

protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n.

liberty of speech and the press in, 596, n. 1.

privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.

religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.

persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 676, n. 2.

private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

ALIENS,

exclusion of, from suffrage, 58, 901.

ALIMONY,

payment of, cannot be ordered by legislature, 157.
decree for, not valid unless process served, 584, 585.

AMBASSADORS, PUBLIC MINISTERS, ETC.,

President to appoint, 21, 22.
jurisdiction of United States courts in respect to, 23.

AMENDMENT,

of State constitutions, 49, 96, 97.
of money bills, may be made by Senate, 188, n. 1.
of indictments, 382.
statutes allowing may apply to pending suits, 543-544.
of statutes, 214-217.
republication of statute amended, 215-217.
by implication, 213.
at the same session of their passage, 217.
of defective proceedings by legislation, 416, 529-546.

AMENDMENTS TO THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION,

first, 593, 668, n.

AMERICAN COLONIES. See COLONIES.APPEAL, giving right of, retrospectively, 133, n. 1.

right of, may be taken away, 547, 548.
effect of change in the law pending an appeal, 544.

APPOINTMENT TO OFFICE. See OFFICE.APPORTIONMENT, of powers between the States and the nation, 4. between the departments of the State government, 62-65, 126-134.

of taxes, 706, 709, 712, 713.
of debts and property on division of municipal corporations, 268, n. 2.
See TAXATION.

APPRAISAL,

of private property taken by the public, 812-826.

APPRAISEMENT LAWS,

how far invalid, 412.

APPRENTICE,

control of master over, 493.

APPROPRIATION,

of private property to public use, 752 et seq.
See EMINENT DOMAIN.

APPROVAL OF LAWS. See GOVERNOR.ARBITRARY ARRESTS,

illegality of, 425.
See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

ARBITRARY EXACTIONS, distinguished from taxation, 697.

ARBITRARY POWER,

unknown among common-law principles, 50.
cannot be exercised under pretence of taxation, 697, 726.

ARBITRARY RULES,

- of construction, danger of, 93, 94, 123, n. 1.
- of presumption, 465, n. 1.

ARBITRATION,

- submission of controversies to, 576.

ARGUMENTUM AB INCONVENIENTI,

- in constitutional construction, 93, n. 1, 102-106.

ARKANSAS,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
- exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n. 2.
- revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- limited time for introduction of new bills, 199, n. 2.
- no law to embrace more than one object, to be expressed in title, 202, n. 3.
- protection of person and property by the law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 593, n. 1.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of competency of witness, 676, n. 2.

ARMS,

- right to bear, 498, 499.
- exemption from bearing, of persons conscientiously opposed, 676.

ARMY,

- and navy, Congress may raise, and maintain, 13.
- and make rules for government of, 13.
- quartering in private houses, 435.
- jealousy of standing army, 498, 499.

ARREST,

- privilege of legislators from, 192.
- on criminal process. See CRIMES.
- of judgment, new trial after, 649 and n. 6.

ART, WORKS OF,

- criticism of, how far privileged, 645.

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION,

- adoption of, 9.
- why superseded, 9.

ASSESSMENTS,

- for local improvements, generally made in reference to benefits, 713, 716.
- special taxing districts for, 714, 733, 734.
- not necessarily made on property according to value, 713-717.
- are made under the power of taxation, 713-716.
- not covered by the general constitutional provisions respecting taxation, 716, 717.
- not unconstitutional to make benefits the basis for, 715, 716, 729-735.
- apportionment necessary in cases of, 718.
- may be made in reference to frontage, 729-731.
- but each lot cannot be compelled to make the improvement in front of it, 732.
- for drains, levees, &c., 734-736.
- in labor for repair of roads, 737.

ATTAINDER.

- meaning of the term, 368.
- bills of, not to be passed by State legislatures, 36, 62, 368.
- cases of such bills, 368-370.
- bills of pains and penalties included in, 370.

ATTORNEYS,

- exclusion of, from practice, regarded as a punishment, 371, 372.
- right to notice of proceedings therefor, 583, n. 1.
- laws requiring service from, without compensation, 477, 563.
- punishment of, for misconduct, 481, 482.

See COUNSEL.

AUSTRALIAN BALLOT,

- use of, 899, n. (a), 911, n., 913, n.

AUTHORS,

- not to be assailed through their works, 645.
- criticism of works of, how far privileged, 645.

B.BAIL,

- accused parties entitled to, 437-439.
- unreasonable, not to be demanded, 439.
- on habeas corpus, 493.
- control of bail over principal, 486, 487.

BAILMENT. See COMMON CARRIERS.BALLOT,

- correction of abuses by, 269 and n. 1.
- system of voting by, generally prevails, 910.
- Australian, 899, n. (a), 911, n., 913, n.
- right of the elector to secrecy, 910-913 and notes.
- regulations as to form of, 899, n. (a).
- must be complete in itself, 914, 915.
- abbreviated names, 916, 917.
- how far open to explanation, 920, 941, 942.
- voting machines satisfy requirement of, 910, n. 1.

See ELECTIONS.

BANKRUPTCY,

- power of Congress over, 12.
- legislation by the States, 45, 419, 417.

BEARING ARMS,

- persons conscientiously opposed to, are excused, 676.
- constitutional right of, 498, 499.

BEASTS,

- police regulations regarding, 886, n. 2.
- regulations making railway companies liable for killing, 841, 842.

BENEFITS,

- may be taken into account in assessments for local improvements, 714, 715, 727, 734.
- what may be deducted when private property is taken by the public, 823-825.

BETTERMENT LAWS,

principle of, 550-553.

are constitutional, 553.

owner cannot be compelled to improve his lands, 550.

BETTING ON ELECTIONS,

illegality of, 924.

BEVERAGES,

police regulations to prevent the sale of intoxicating, 845-851.

BIBLE,

in the schools, 635, n. 2.

BILL OF RIGHTS (English),

a declaratory statute, 51, 366.

BILL OF RIGHTS (National),

not originally inserted in Constitution, 365.

reasons for omission, 365, 366.

objections to Constitution on that ground, 367.

afterwards added by amendments, 367, 368.

BILL OF RIGHTS (State), generally found in constitution, 65.

classes of provisions in, 65, 66.

what prohibitions not necessary, 245.

BILLS, LEGISLATIVE, constitutional provisions for three readings, 113-119, 199, 200.

title of, to express object, 117, 202-217.

when they become laws, 186, n. 1.

including in, matter by reference, 200.

See LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE.

BILLS OF ATTAINDER, not to be passed by State legislature, 36, 62, 368.

meaning of attainder, 368.

cases of such bills, 370-372 and notes.

BILLS OF CREDIT,

States not to emit, 35.

BILLS OF PAINS AND PENALTIES, included in bills of attainder, 370.

BLASPHEMY, punishment of, does not violate religious liberty, 671-673.

nor the liberty of speech, 634.

published in account of judicial proceedings is not privileged, 638.

BOATS,

ferry, licensing of, 867.

speed of, on navigable waters, may be regulated by States, 867, 868.

BONA FIDE PURCHASERS, not to be affected by retrospective legislation, 539, 540.

BONDS, issue of, by municipalities in aid of internal improvements, 167, 198, 312-325.

BOOKS,

criticism of, how far privileged, 644, 645.

indecent, sale of, may be prohibited, 684.

BOUNTIES,

- when earned, become vested rights, 547, n. 6.
- payment of, to soldiers by municipal corporations, 326-332, 341, 342.

BOUNTY SUBSCRIPTIONS,

- by municipal corporations, how far valid, 326-332, 341, 342, 699-701.

BRIDGES,

- erection of, by State authority over navigable waters, 865, 866.
- See NAVIGABLE WATERS.

BUILDINGS,

- condemnation and forfeiture of, as nuisances, 849, 850.
- destruction of, to prevent spread of fires, 756, 757, 878.
- appropriation of, under right of eminent domain, 752.

BURIAL,

- right of, subject to control, 284, n. 4.

BURLESQUES,

- libels by means of, 808.

BUSINESS CHARGES,

- regulation of, 870-877.

BY-LAWS,

- of municipal corporations, 270, 278-292.
 - must be reasonable, 280-292.
 - illustrative cases on question of reasonableness of, 281, n. 1, 282, n. 2, 284, n. 4.
 - must be certain, 284.
 - must not conflict with constitution of State or nation, 278.
 - nor with statutes of State, 278, 279.
 - nor with general principles of the common law, 284.
 - imposing license fees, 283.
- of school corporations, 281, n. 1.

C.CALIFORNIA,

- Mexican law retained in the system of, 54, n. 2.
- divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
- local option statutes, validity of, 173.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- no law to embrace more than one object, to be expressed in title, 202, n. 3.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 509, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 598, n.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n.

CANADA,

- apportionment of governmental powers in, 6, n.

CANALS,

- appropriation of private property for, 767.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE,

- criticism of, how far privileged, 616-628, 644.
- ineligibility of, how to affect election, 931.

CANVASSERS,

act ministerially in counting and returning votes, 934-936.
whether they may be compelled by mandamus to perform duty, 936.
certificate of, conclusive character of, 937.

See ELECTIONS.

CARRIERS,

regulation of charges of, 870-876.
police regulations making them liable for beasts killed, 841, 842.
change of common-law liability of, by police regulations, 836-844, 870-877.
may be made responsible for death caused by negligence, &c., 843, 844.
but not for injuries for which they are not responsible, 841, n.

CATTLE,

police regulations making railway companies liable for killing, 841, 842.
other police regulations, 886, n. 2.

CEMETERIES,

further use of, may be prohibited when they become nuisances, 880, 881.

CENSORSHIP OF THE PRESS,

in England and America, 599, 600.

CENTRALIZATION,

American system the opposite of, 261.

CHALLENGES,

prisoner's right to, 459.

CHARACTER, bad, of attorney, sufficient reason to exclude him from practice, 481, 482.

slander of, 605.
good, of defendant in libel suit, no defence to false publication, 653, n.
benefit of, in criminal cases, 465, n. 1.

CHARTERS,

of liberty, 51.
colonial, swept away by Revolution, 58.
exceptions of Connecticut and Rhode Island, 58.
forfeiture of, is a judicial question, 149, n. 1.
municipal, do not constitute contracts, 268.
control of legislature over, 268-270.
construction of, 271, 309-342.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

of private corporations are contracts, 175, 391, 401.
police regulations affecting, 835-844.
strict construction of, 565-567.
amendment of, 391-394, 837-840.

CHASTITY,

accusation of want of, not actionable per se, 606, 607.
statutory provisions on the subject, 607.

CHECKS AND BALANCES,

in constitutions, 64, 65.

CHILDREN,

imprisonment of, for lack of parental control, 423, n. 4.
control of parent, &c., over, 485.
obtaining possession of, by habeas corpus, 496, 497.
decree for custody of, in divorce suits, 584.

CHRISTIANITY,

its influence in the overthrow of slavery, 421 and n. 1, 422.
in what sense part of the law of the land, 660-673 and n. 1.

See RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

CHURCH ENDOWMENTS,

not to be taken away by legislature, n. 2, 385.

CHURCH ESTABLISHMENTS, forbidden by State constitutions, 659-668.

CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS,

powers and control of, 659, n. 1.
discipline of members, 619, n. 3.

CITIES AND VILLAGES. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.CITIZENS, who are, 14 and n. (c).

of the several States, privileges and immunities of, 14, 15, 86, 37, 556-575, 569.
discriminations in taxation of, 573, 574, 692, 693.
jurisdiction of United States courts in respect to, 23, 418.

CIVIL RIGHTS,

protection of, by amendments to constitution, 417, 418, 569.
discriminations not to be made in, on account of religious beliefs, 659-668.

See CITIZENS; CLASS LEGISLATION.

CLASS LEGISLATION,

private legislation which grants privileges, 554.
party petitioning for, estopped from disputing validity, 554.
public laws may be local in application, 554.
special rules for particular occupations, 555.
prescription for opinion's sake unconstitutional, 558.
suspensions of laws must be general, 558.
each individual entitled to be governed by general rules, 559-561.
discriminations should be based upon reason, 561.
equality of rights, &c., the aim of the law, 562.
strict construction of special burdens and privileges, 563, 564.
discriminations not to be made on account of religious beliefs, 659-668.

See CIVIL RIGHTS.

CLERICAL ERRORS,

in statutes, disregarding, 218, n. 1.

COINING MONEY, power over, 12.

COLLUSION, conviction by, no bar to new prosecution, 467, n. 1.

COLONIES,

union of, before Revolution, 7.
authority of the Crown and Parliament in, 7, 8.
Revolutionary Congress and its powers, 8, 9.
controversy with the mother country, 51, 53.
legislatures of, 53.
of what laws of, consisted at time of declaration of independence, 53-55.
substitution of constitutions for charters of, 56.
censorship of the press in, 600-603.

COLOR,

not to be a disqualification for suffrage, 17, 18, 901.

COLORADO,

special statutes authorizing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
 divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
 revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
 privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
 title of acts to embrace the object, 202, n. 3.
 municipalities of, restrained from aiding in public improvements, 318, n. 1.
 protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 1.
 liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n. 1.
 privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
 religious liberty in, 662, n. 3.
 private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

COLORED PERSONS,

protection to rights of, 17, 18.
 rights in schools, 536, n. 1.

COMITY, enforcement of contracts by, 178-181.

COMMERCE,

power of Congress to regulate, 12, 687, 688, 851-859.
 State regulations valid when they do not interfere with those of Congress, 851-863.

See POLICE POWER.

State taxation of subjects of, 686-691, 851-859.

See TAXATION.

in intoxicating drinks, how far State regulations may affect, 845-851.

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATURE, collection of information by, 193.

 contempts of witnesses, how punished, 193.
 employment of counsel before, 196 and n. 2.

COMMON CARRIERS,

police regulations regarding, 838-844, 869-879.

See RAILWAY COMPANIES.

COMMON LAW,

Federal courts acquire no jurisdiction from, 47, 613.
 existing before the Constitution, 49.
 what it consists in, 49.
 its general features, 50.
 modification of, by statutes, 50, 51.
 colonists in America claimed benefits of, 51, 52.
 how far in force, 51, n. 8, 52.
 of different States, presumption as to similarity of, 52, n.
 evidences of, 53.
 decisions under, as precedents, 83-88.
 gradual modification of, 88, 89.
 to be kept in view in construing constitutions, 94, 95.
 statutes in derogation of, 95, n.
 not to control constitutions, 95, 96.
 municipal by-laws must harmonize with, 278, 279.
 rules of liability for injurious publications, 605-609.
 modification of, by statute, 607.

COMMON LAW — continued.

modification by police regulations of common-law liability of carriers, 838-844, 869-879.

COMMON RIGHT,

statutes against, said to be void, 233-237.

COMPACTS BETWEEN STATES, must have consent of Congress, 36.

are inviolable under United States Constitution, 386.

COMPENSATION,

for private property appropriated by the public, 812-828.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

for injuries by rioters, 345, n. 1.

what the taxpayer receives as an equivalent for taxes, 707, 708.

COMPLAINTS,

for purposes of search-warrant, 429.

of crime, how made, 436.

COMPULSORY TAXATION,

by municipal bodies, 331-342.

CONCLUSIVENESS OF JUDGMENTS, full faith and credit to be given in each State to those of other States, 37-40.

parties and privies estopped by, 79-81, 587.

but not in controversy with new subject-matter, 82.

strangers to suit not bound by, 82.

irregularities do not defeat, 587, 588.

See JURISDICTION.

CONDITIONAL LEGISLATION,

power of the States to adopt, 164-170.

not valid when framed for State at large, 168.

CONDITIONS,

what may be imposed on right of suffrage, 899-906.

See ELECTIONS.

precedent to exercise of right of eminent domain, 759-763.

CONFEDERACY OF 1843.

brought about by tendency of colonies to union, 7.

CONFEDERATE DEBT,

not to be assumed or paid, 17.

CONFEDERATION, ARTICLES OF,

adoption of, 9.

authority to supersede, 9, n.

CONFESSIONS,

dangerous character of, as evidence, 442, 443.

must appear to have been made voluntarily, 444.

excluded if solicitations or threats have been used, 444.

will not prove the corpus delicti, 444.

CONFIDENCE,

communications in, when privileged, 609-612.

between attorney and client, is client's privilege, 477, 478.

CONFIRMING INVALID PROCEEDINGS, of a judicial nature, 150, 151.

admissible when defects are mere irregularities, 528 et seq.

See RETROSPECTIVE LAWS.

CONFISCATIONS,

- require judicial proceedings, 518.
- during the Revolutionary War, 370.

CONFLICT OF LAWS,

- in divorce cases, 577-582.

See UNCONSTITUTIONAL LAWS.

CONFRONTING WITH WITNESSES,

- in criminal cases, 450-452.

CONGRESS OF 1690,

- brought together by tendency of colonies to union, 7.

CONGRESS OF THE REVOLUTION, 1775-1776,

- powers assumed and exercised by, 7, 9.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,

- general powers of, 11-18.
- enabling acts by, for formation of State constitutions, 58, 59.
- cannot divest vested rights, 518.
- exercise of power of eminent domain by, 755, 756.
- regulations of commerce by, are supreme, 687, 688, 851-859, 863.

See POLICE POWER.

CONNECTICUT,

- charter government of, 55.
- municipalities of, restrained from aiding public improvements, 313, n. 1.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n. 1.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious liberty in, 662, n. 3.

CONSCIENCE, FREEDOM OF (see RELIGIOUS LIBERTY), 659-677.CONSENT,

- conviction by collusion no bar to new prosecution, 467, n. 1.
- cannot confer jurisdiction of subject-matter upon courts, 575, 576.
- cannot authorize jury trial by less than twelve jurors, 458.
- is a waiver of irregularities in legal proceedings, 587, 588.
- waiver of constitutional privileges by, 250, 251, 458, n. 1, 554.

CONSEQUENTIAL INJURIES,

- caused by exercise of legal right give no ground of complaint, 548, 549.
- do not constitute a taking of property, 781-783.
- otherwise under some constitutions, 810-812.
- are covered by assessment of damages when property taken by the State, 825, 826.
- but not such as result from negligence or improper construction, 825, 826.

CONSTITUTION,

- definition of, 4, 5, 63, n. 1, 69.
- object of, in the American system, 63, 69.
- does not measure rights of governed, 68.

CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND,

- theory of, 3.
- power of Parliament under, 6.
- developed by precedents, 84, n. 1.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES,

- origin of, 7-9.
- ratification of, 9.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES — continued.

government of enumerated powers, formed by, 11, 242.
 all power of federal government must be found in, 11.
 general purpose and powers of the government under, 11-23.
 judicial powers under, 22, 23, 47.

See COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

prohibition by, of powers to the States, 35, 36, 416-417, 899, 901.
 guaranty of republican government to the States, 42-45.
 implied prohibitions on the States, 45.

and on municipal corporations, 277, 278.
 reservation of powers to States and people, 46.
 difference between, and State constitutions, 11, 241, 242.
 construction of, 9, 10, n., 46, 47.
 amendment of State constitutions, how limited by, 62.
 new amendments to, 14.
 protection of person and property by, as against State action, 365-418.
 bill of rights not at first inserted in, and why, 395.
 adoption of, afterwards, 395-399.
 of attainder prohibited by, 398-372.

See BILLS OF ATTAINDER.

ex post facto laws also forbidden, 372-383.

See EX POST FACTO LAWS.

laws impairing obligation of contracts forbidden, 383-418.

what is a contract, 384-393.
 what charters of incorporation are, 391-394.
 whether release of taxation is contract, 395, 396.
 whether States can relinquish right of eminent domain, 397-399, 755.
 or the police power, 399-402, 849, n. 2.
 general laws of the States not contracts, 402.
 what the obligation of the contract consists in, 403-406.
 power of the States to control remedies, 409-416.
 to pass insolvent laws, 416, 417.

See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

regulations by the State, when in conflict with, 832-851, 869.

See POLICE POWER.

regulation of the subjects of commerce by the States, 687, 686, 851-893.

CONSTITUTIONS OF THE STATES, compared with that of the United States, 11, 241, 242.

 formation and amendment of, 49-59.
 conditions on, imposed by Congress, 59.
 construction of, 79-123.
 not the source of individual rights, 68.

See STATE CONSTITUTIONS; CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS, of 1787, circumstances giving occasion for, 9.

 Madison's views on inter-state relations under, 9, n. 3.
 for formation and amendment of State constitutions, 53-63.
 proceedings of, as bearing on construction of constitution, 101, 102.
 of 1787 sat with closed doors, 601.

CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENTS,

meaning of the term, 4.

CONSTITUTIONAL PRIVILEGES, may be waived generally, 250-252.

See WAIVER.

CONSTRUCTION, meaning of and necessity for, 70.

of United States Constitution and laws by United States courts, 22-31, 46.

of State constitution and laws by State courts, 31-35, 418.

of special privileges, 583.

CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS, meaning of the term "construction," 70.

necessity for, 70.

questions of, arise whenever powers to be exercised, 71.

who first to decide upon, 72-75.

in certain States judges may be called upon for opinions in advance, 72, n.

in what cases construction by legislature or executive to be final, 73-75.

in what cases not, 75-77.

when questions of, are addressed to two or more departments, 75, 76.

final decision upon, rests generally with judiciary, 76-78, 87, 88.

reasons for this, 77, n.

this does not imply pre-eminence of authority in the judiciary, 78, n. 1.

the doctrine of res adjudicata, 78-88.

decisions once made binding upon parties and privies, 79-81.

force of judgment does not depend on reasons given, 81.

strangers to suit not bound by, 82.

nor the parties in a controversy about a new subject-matter, 82.

the doctrine of stare decisis, 79-88.

only applicable within jurisdiction of court making the decision, 85.

importance of precedents, 84, n. 1.

when precedents to be disregarded, 86.

when other departments to follow decisions of the courts, and when not, 87, 88.

uniformity of construction, importance of, 88.

not to be affected by changes in public sentiment, 88, 89.

words of the instrument to control, 89-91, 100, 123, n. 1, 186.

intent of people in adopting it to govern, 89-91.

intent to be found in words employed, 89 and n. 3, 91.

whole instrument to be examined, 91-93 and n. 1.

words not to be supposed employed without occasion, 91.

effect to be given to whole instrument, 91, 92.

irreconcilable provisions, 92, n. 3.

general intent as opposed to particular intent, 92, n. 3.

words to be understood in their ordinary sense, 92, 123, n. 1.

words of art to be understood in technical sense, 93, 94.

importance of the history of the law to, 94.

common law to be kept in view, 94-97.

but not to control constitution, 95.

whether provisions in derogation of, should be strictly construed, 95, n. 3.

arbitrary rules of, dangerous, 95, 123.

and especially inapplicable to constitutions, 92.

same word presumed employed in same sense throughout, 95.

this not a conclusive rule, 96.

operation to be prospective, 97.

CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS—continued.

- implied powers to carry into effect express powers, 98, 99.
- power granted in general terms is coextensive with the terms, 98.
- when constitution prescribes conditions to a right, legislature cannot add others, 99.
- mischief to be remedied, consideration of, 100.
- prior state of the law to be examined, 100, 101.
- proceedings of constitutional convention may be consulted, 101.
- reasons why unsatisfactory, 101, 102.
- weight of contemporary and practical construction, 102.
- the argument ab inconvenienti, 102-107.
- deference to construction by executive officers, 103, 104.
- plain intent not to be defeated by, 105-107.
- injustice of provisions will not render them void, 108, 109.
- nor authorize courts to construe them away, 108.
- doubtful cases of, duty of officers acting in, 109.
- directory and mandatory statutes, doctrine of, 109-119.
- not applicable to constitutions, 114-119.
- has been sometimes applied, 115-119.
- authorities generally the other way, 118, 119.
- self-executing provisions, 119-123.

CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES,

- by judiciary, conclusiveness of, 136.
- to be such as to give them effect, if possible, 255.
- conflict with constitution not to be presumed, 255, 256.
- directory and mandatory, 109-119.
- contemporary and practical, weight to be given to, 102-106.
- to be prospective, 255, 529.
- granting special privileges, 270-273, 565.

CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE, 582.

CONTEMPORANEOUS CONSTRUCTION,

- force and effect of, 102-106.

CONTEMPTS,

- of the legislature, punishment of, 191, 192.
- of legislative committees, 193.
- no jury trial in cases of, 453, n. 2.

CONTESTED ELECTIONS,

- right of the courts to determine upon, 937.

See ELECTIONS.

CONTESTED FACTS,

- cannot be settled by statute, 139, 147-150.

CONTESTED SEATS,

- legislative bodies to decide upon, 190.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS,

- powers assumed and exercised by, 7, 8.

CONTINGENT LEGISLATION,

- authority of the States to adopt, 163-174.

CONTINUANCES,

- of suits, not to be ordered by legislature, 138, n. 2.

CONTRACTS,

- for lobby services, illegal, 196.
- to influence elections, are void, 924.

CONTRACTS — continued.

- cannot be made for individuals by legislative act, 527 and n. 1.
- charters of municipal corporations do not constitute, 268, 269.
- of private corporations are, 391-394.
- of municipal corporation ultra vires void, 270-273.
- invalid, may be validated by legislature, 530-546.
- obligation of, not to be violated, 175, 176, 383-417.

See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

COPYRIGHT.

- Congress may secure to authors, 12.

CORPORATE CHARTERS. See CHARTERS.

CORPORATE FRANCHISES,

- may be appropriated under right of eminent domain, 756-759.

CORPORATE POWERS,

- adjudging forfeiture of, 149, n. 1.

CORPORATE PROPERTY,

- legislative control of, 342-347.

CORPORATIONS,

- protected by fourteenth amendment, 19, n.
- organization of, not a judicial function, 143, n. 1.
- foreign, powers of, 178-181, and n. (a) 179.
- educational, 261, n. 1.
- private, may be authorized to take lands for public use, 776.
- irregular organization of, may be validated, 535, n. 1.

See CHARTERS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

CORPUS DELICTI,

- not to be proved by confessions, 444.

CORRESPONDENCE,

- private, inviolability of, 432 and n. 2.

CORRUPTION,

- provisions against influencing legislation by, 196.

COUNSEL.

- constitutional right to, 377, 474-482.
- oath of, 474.
- duty of, 475-482.
- dental of, in England, 475-477.
- court to assign, for poor persons, 477.
- whether those assigned may refuse to act, 477.
- privilege of, is the privilege of the client, 477, 478.
- independence of, 479-481.
- not at liberty to withdraw from cause, except by consent, 478.
- how far he may go in pressing for acquittal, 479.
- duty of, as between the court and the prisoner, 480.
- whether to address the jury on the law, 480, 481.
- summary punishment of, for misconduct, 481, 482, 509, n. 3, 583, n. 1.
- limitation of client's control over, 482.

See ATTORNEYS.

- may be employed before legislative committees, 196.

- but not as lobbyists, 196 and n. 2.

- not liable to action for what he may say in judicial proceedings, 631-633.

- unless irrelevant to the case, 633.

- not privileged in afterwards publishing his argument, if it contains injurious reflections, 636.

COUNSEL — continued.

newspaper publisher not justified in publishing speech of a criminal reflecting on, 644.

COUNTERFEITING.

Congress may provide for punishment of, 12.

States also may punish, 46.

COUNTIES AND TOWNS.

difference from chartered incorporations, 347-349.

are quasi corporations, 347-349.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

COUNTY SEAT,

change of, 548.

COURTS.

duty of, to refuse to execute unconstitutional laws, 107, n., 118, 119, 227, et seq.

contested elections to be determined by, 937.

not to be directed by legislature in decisions, 134-139.

action of, not to be set aside by legislature, 137, 138.

may not control the executive, 162.

must act by majorities, 139 and n. 1.

not to be open on election days, 923.

power to declare laws unconstitutional a delicate one, 227-229.

will not be exercised by bare quorum, 230.

nor unless necessary, 231.

nor on complaint of one not interested, 232.

nor of one who has assented, 232.

will not declare laws void because solely of unjust provisions, 232-237.

nor because in violation of fundamental principles, 237-239.

nor because conflicting with the spirit of the constitution, 239-241.

nor unless a clear repugnancy between the laws and the constitution, 241.

special, for trial of rights of particular individuals, 560.

of star chamber, 483.

of high commission, 488.

martial, 454, n. 1.

of the United States, to be created by Congress, 13.

general powers of, 22, 23.

removal of causes to, from State courts, 25-31.

to follow State courts as to State law, 31, 33.

to decide finally upon United States laws, &c., 25, 26.

cannot enforce penal laws of the States, 43, n.

require statutes to apportion jurisdiction, 47.

have no common-law jurisdiction, 47.

in what cases may issue writs of habeas corpus, 491-493.

Congress may make their constitutional jurisdiction exclusive, 45.

See JURISDICTION.

CREDIT,

bills of, 35.

CREDITOR,

control of debtor by, 487.

CRIMES.

act beyond boundary, effect within, 177 and n. 3.

committed abroad, punishment of, 176, 177.

CRIMES — continued.

- legislative convictions of, prohibited, 36, 62, 368-371.
- ex post facto* laws prohibited, 36, 62, 372-383.
- punishment of, by servitude, 423.
- search-warrants for evidence of. See SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.
- accusations of, how made, 436.
- presumption of innocence, 437-439.
- right of accused party to bail, 437-439.
- prisoner refusing to plead, 439, n. 2.
- trial to be speedy, 440, 441.
 - and public, 441.
 - what is, 441 and n. 2.
 - and not inquisitorial, 442 and n. 1, also 424, n. (a).
 - prisoner's right to make statement, 443-449.
 - confessions as evidence, 443-449.
 - prisoner to be confronted with the witnesses, 450.
 - exceptional cases, 451, 452.
 - to be by jury, 453, 454.
- necessity for presence of the accused at his trial, 452.
- jury must consist of twelve, 454-459 and notes.
 - State constitution may provide a jury of less than twelve, 454, n. (a).
 - 455, n. (a).
- right to jury cannot be waived, 455.
- prisoner's right to challenges, 459.
- jury must be from vicinage, 459.
 - must unanimously concur in verdict, 460.
 - must be left free to act, 460.
 - judge not to express opinion upon the facts, 460.
 - nor to refuse to receive the verdict, 461.
 - but is to give instruction in the law, 461.
- how far jury may judge of the law, 461-465.
- acquittal by jury is final, 462.
- accused not to be twice put in jeopardy, 466.
 - what is legal jeopardy, 467, 468.
 - when nolle prosequi equivalent to acquittal, 468.
 - when jury may be discharged without verdict, 468-470.
 - second trial after verdict set aside, 470.
- cruel and unusual punishments prohibited, 471-474.
 - what are, 472, 473.
- counsel to be allowed, 477, 474-482.
 - oath of, 474.
 - duty of, 475-482.
 - denial of, in England, 475-477.
 - court to designate, for poor persons, 477.
 - whether one may refuse to act, 477.
 - privilege of, is the privilege of the client, 477, 478.
 - not at liberty to withdraw from case, except by consent, 478.
 - how far he may go in pressing for acquittal, 479.
 - duty of, as between the court and the prisoner, 480.
 - whether to address the jury on the law, 480, 481.
 - summary punishment of, for misconduct, 481, 482, 509 and n. 3, and n. 1, 583.
 - not to be made the instrument of injustice, 482.

CRIMES — continued.

intoxication no excuse for, 673, n. 4.

habeas corpus for imprisoned parties, 483-487.

accusations of, are libellous per se, 605, 607.

See HABEAS CORPUS.

but privileged if made in course of judicial proceedings, 629-631.

violations of police regulations of States, 890.

CRITICISM, of works of art and literary productions is privileged, 644, 645.

but not of the personal character of the author, 645.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

CROWN OF GREAT BRITAIN, succession to, may be changed by Parliament, 125.

union of the colonies under, 7.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENTS,

constitutional prohibition of, 471.

what are, 471-474.

CUMULATIVE PUNISHMENTS,

for counterfeiting money, 46.

under State and municipal laws, 279.

CUMULATIVE VOTING, 922, n. 1.CURATIVE LAWS, 529-546.*CURTESY, ESTATE BY THE, power of legislature to modify or abolish, 513.

CUSTODY,

of wards, apprentices, servants, and scholars, 485, 486.

of wife by husband, 481, 485.

of children by parents, 485.

of principal by his bail, 486, 487.

CUSTOMS. See COMMON LAW; DUTIES AND IMPOSTS.D.*DAM, to obtain water power, condemnation of land for, 771-775.

effect of repeal of act permitting, 548 and n. 3.

erection of, across navigable waters by State authority, 567.

destruction of, when it becomes a nuisance, 889.

DAMAGES.

in libel cases, increased by attempt at justification, 623, 624.

when exemplary, not to be awarded, 647-659.

for property taken by the public, must be paid, 812-823.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

DAMAGING, property in course of public improvements, 810-812.

DAMNUM ABSQUE INJURIA,

what consequential injuries are, 548, 549, 781-787, 810-812.

DEATH,

action for, in State other than that in which caused, 181.

common carriers may be made liable for causing, 843, 844.

DEBATES,

- in Parliament formerly not suffered to be published, 600.
- in American legislative bodies, publication of, 600, 601, 650-652.
- privileges of members in, 634-636.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

DEBT,

- general government may incur, 12.
- public, declared inviolable, 17.
- Confederate, not to be assumed or paid, 17.
- imprisonment for, may be abolished as to pre-existing obligations, 407.
- imprisonment for, now generally abolished, 487.

DEBTOR,

- control of creditor over, 487.

DEBTS BY THE STATE,

- prohibition of, whether it precludes indebtedness by municipalities, 321-325.

DECENTRALIZATION,

- the peculiar feature in American government, 261.

DECISIONS,

- judicial, binding force of, 79-88.

See JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE,

- effect of, 8.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS,

- was a declaratory statute, 51, 65, 365, 366.

See BILL OF RIGHTS.

DECLARATORY STATUTES,

- in English constitutional law, 49-53.
- are not encroachments upon judicial power, 134-137.
- judgments not to be reversed by means of, 137-139.
- purposes and proper force of, 134-137.

DEDICATION,

- of lands to public use, 820.

DEEDS,

- invalid, may be confirmed by legislature, 537-540.
- but not to prejudice of bona fide purchasers, 540.

DEFENCES,

- not based upon equity, may be taken away by legislature, 537, 540, 553.
- under statute of limitations are vested rights, 521.

DEFINITIONS,

- of a State, 3.
- of a nation, 3.
- of a people, sovereignty, and sovereign State, 3.
- of a constitution, 4.
- of an unconstitutional law, 5.
- of construction and interpretation, 70, 71.
- of self-executing provisions, 121.
- of legislative power, 131, 132.
- of judicial power, 132-134.
- of declaratory statutes, 134, 135.
- of due process of law, 502.
- of law of the land, 502, 503.
- of personal liberty, 433.

DEFINITIONS — continued

- of civil liberty, 561, n. 1.
- of natural liberty, 561, n. 1.
- of liberty of the press, 602-605.
- of liberty of speech, 602-605.
- of religious liberty, 659-668.
- of taxation, 678.
- of the eminent domain, 752-754.
- of police power, 829.
- of domicile, 903, 904.
- of incompatibility in offices, 894, n.
- of officer de jure, 897.
- of officer de facto, 897.
- of ballot, 910.

DELAWARE,

- local option laws, validity of, 178.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- exclusion of religious teachers from office, 662, n. 2.
- religious tests forbidden, 662, n. 3.

DELEGATION OF POWER,

- of judicial power, not admissible, 139, n. 1, 589.
- by the legislature not admissible, 163-174.
 - except as to powers of local government, 166-168, 234.
- such delegated power may be recalled, 168, n. 1.
- by municipal corporations invalid, 293, 294.
- by officers in inflicting punishment, 473, n. 1.

DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT,

- division of powers between, 64-69, 126-134.
- equality of, 78, n. 1, 79, n.

DESCENT, LAW OF, 511, 513.

DESECRATION OF THE SABBATH,

- constitutional right to punish, 674, 675, 859, 885, n. 1.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY,

- to prevent calamities, 319, n. 2, 757, n. 1, 878-883.

DIRECTORY STATUTES,

- what are, and what are mandatory, 109-119.
- doctrine of, not admissible as to constitutional provisions, 114-119.

DISABILITIES,

- personal, do not follow into another jurisdiction, 43, n.

DISCRETIONARY POWERS,

- what are, 71-73.
- department to which they are confided decides finally upon, 73, 157-162.

DISCRIMINATIONS,

- cannot be made in taxation between citizens of different States, 573, 574, 694.
- in legislation between different classes, 554-575.
- in the privileges and immunities of citizens, 14, 15, 36, 37, 556-575, 869.
- not to be made on account of religious belief, 666-677.

DISCUSSION,

right of, 497, 498.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

DISFRANCHISEMENT, of voters, may render a statute void, 926.

what classes excluded from suffrage, 57, 58, 108, 900, 902.

DISTRICTS,

for schools, powers of, 261, 293, 348, 349.

exercise by, of power of eminent domain, 775, 776.

for taxation, necessity for, 711, 718, 719, 722.

not to tax property outside, 720, 726.

taxation to be uniform within, 715-732.

DIVISION OF POWERS, between sovereign States, 3, 4.

between the States and the Union, 4.

among departments of State government, 126-134.

DIVISION OF TOWNSHIPS, &c., question of, may be submitted to people, 167.

disposition of property and debts on, 298, n. 2, 344.

DIVORCE.

decrees for, within "full faith and credit" clause, 44, n.

question of, is properly judicial, 138, n., 153.

power of the legislature over, 152-157.

general doctrine of the courts on the subject, 154-157.

conflicting decisions, 154-157.

legislative divorce cannot go beyond dissolution of the status, 157.

constitutional provisions requiring judicial action, 153, n. 2.

laws for, do not violate contracts, 403.

and may be applied to pre-existing causes, 376, n. 1.

what gives jurisdiction in cases of, 577, 578.

actual residence of one party in the State sufficient, 578.

conflict of decisions on this subject, 578, and n. 1.

not sufficient if residence merely colorable, 578, n. 1.

necessity for service of process, 574-585.

cannot be served out of State, 582, 584.

substituted service by publication, 582.

restricted effect of such notice, 583.

order as to custody of children, 584.

alimony not to be awarded if defendant not served, 584, 585.

DOGS,

police regulation of, 581.

DOMAIN,

ordinary, of the State, distinguished from eminent domain, 753.

DOMICILE,

gives jurisdiction in divorce cases, 578.

but must be bona fide, 578, n. 1.

of wife may be different from that of husband, 578, n. 1.

of one party, may give jurisdiction in divorce cases, 578.

of voters, meaning of, 903, 904.

DOUBLE PUNISHMENT, for same act under State and municipal law, 279, and n. 4.

for counterfeiting money, 46.

- DOUBLE TAXATION,
sometimes unavoidable, 758.
- DOUBTFUL QUESTIONS, of constitutional law, duty in case of, 169, 252-257.
- DOWER, legislative control of estates in, 513-515
- DRAINS,
appropriating property for purposes of, 767, 769, 770.
special assessments for, 712, 714, 734, 735.
ordered under police power, 866.
- DRUNKENNESS,
does not excuse crime, 673, n. 4.
is a temporary insanity, 902, n.
- DUE PROCESS OF LAW, required for the taking of life, liberty or property, 15.
meaning of the term, 502 et seq.
See LAW OF THE LAND.
- DUPLICATE PUNISHMENTS,
by States and United States, 45, 46.
by States and municipal corporations, 279, and n. 4.
- DUTIES AND IMPOSTS,
Congress may levy and collect, 679.
to be uniform throughout the United States, 12, 679, 680.
what the States may lay, 36.
- DWELLING-HOUSE, is the owner's castle, 50, 425, 426.
homicide in defence of, 434.
quartering soldiers in, prohibited, 435.
- DYING DECLARATIONS, admissible in evidence on trials for homicide, 452.
inconclusive character of the evidence, 452.

E.

- EASEMENTS,
acquisition by the public under right of eminent domain, 753.
for private use, cannot be acquired under this right, 763-766.
See EMINENT DOMAIN.
- ECCLESIASTICAL CORPORATIONS, powers and control of, 659-662.
- ELECTIONS,
provisions in Federal Constitution respecting, 16.
on adoption of State constitutions, 57, 58.
people exercise the sovereignty by means of, 862-895.
who to participate in, 899-905.
constitutional qualifications cannot be added to by legislature 90, n.
exclusion of married women, aliens, minors, idiots, &c., 901, 902.
conditions necessary to participation, 902, 903, 905-909.
residence of voter at place of domicile, 903, 904.

ELECTIONS — continued.

- what constitutes residence, 904, 905.
- registration may be made a condition, 905, 907.
- preliminary action by the authorities, notice, &c., 908, 909.
- mode of exercising the right, 910.
- the elector's privilege of secrecy, 910-918.
- a printed ballot is "written," 910, n. 3.
- ballot must be complete in itself, 914.
- technical accuracy not essential, 915-920.
- explanations by voter inadmissible, 914.
- must not contain too many names, 915.
- name should be given in full, 916.
 - sufficient if idem sonans, 916.
- what abbreviations sufficient, 916-919.
- erroneous additions not to affect, 917, 918 and notes.
- extrinsic evidence to explain imperfections, 919-920.
- ballot must contain name of office, 920.
 - but need not be strictly accurate, 920.
- different boxes for different ballots, 921.
- elector need not vote for every office, 921, 922.
- plurality of votes cast to elect, 921, 922, 931.
- effect if highest candidate is ineligible, 931.
- freedom of elections, 922-925.
 - bribery or treating of voters, 922, 923.
 - militia not to be called out on election day, 924, 925.
 - courts not to be open on election day, 923.
- bets upon election are illegal, 924.
- contracts to influence election are void, 924.
- elector not to be deprived of his vote, 926-928.
 - statutes which would disfranchise voters, 926.
 - failure to hold election in one precinct, 926.
 - liability of inspectors for refusing to receive vote, 927, 928.
 - elector's oath, when conclusive on inspector, 927, 928.
- conduct of the election, 928.
- effect of irregularities upon, 928-930.
- what constitutes a sufficient election, 931-934.
 - not necessary that a majority participate, 931.
 - minority representation, 931, n. 2.
 - admission of illegal votes not to defeat, 932.
 - unless done fraudulently, 933.
 - effect of casual affray, 933.
- canvass and return, 934-937.
 - canvassers are ministerial officers, 934, 935.
 - canvassers not to question returns made to them, 935, 936.
 - whether they can be compelled by mandamus to perform duty, 936.
- contesting elections in the courts, 937-944.
 - canvasser's certificate as evidence, 937, 938, 940.
 - courts may go behind certificate, 940-944.
 - what surrounding circumstances may be given in evidence, 941, 944.
 - whether qualification of voters may be inquired into, 943.
 - to legislative body, house to decide upon, 189-190.
- ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.
 - protected by fourteenth amendment, 16, 17.

EMANCIPATION,

- of slaves in Great Britain and America, 14, 419, 424.
- of children by parents, 485.

EMERGENCY,

- declaration of, 223.

EMINENT DOMAIN,

- distinguished from ordinary domain of States, 752, 753.
- definition of 753, 754.
- right of, rests upon necessity, 753.
- cannot be bargained away, 755, 754, 755.
- general right is in the States, 755.
- for what purposes nation may exercise right, 755, 756.
- all property subject to right, 756-759.
 - exception of money and rights in action, 759.
- legislative authority requisite to, 759-763.
- legislature may determine upon the necessity, 760.
- conditions precedent must be complied with, 760, 761.
- statutes for exercise of, not to be extended by intendment, 761-763.
- the purpose must be public, 763, 764.
- legislative judgment not conclusive as to what is public use, 774-775.
- private roads cannot be laid out under, 764-766.
- what constitutes public purpose, 766-775.
 - whether erection of mills and factories is, 771-773.
- property need not be taken to the State, 775.
- individuals or corporations may be public agents for the purpose, 776.
- the taking to be limited to the necessity, 777-781.
- statute for taking more than is needed is ineffectual, unless owner assents, 779, 780.
- what constitutes a taking of property, 781-803.
 - incidental injuries do not, 781-787.
 - any deprivation of use of property does, 787, 788.
 - water front and right to wharfage is property, 787, 788.
 - right to pasturage in streets is property, 788.
- taking of common highway for higher grade of way, 788-806.
 - if taken for turnpike, &c., owner not entitled to compensation, 789, 790.
 - difference when taken for a railway, 790-803.
 - for an elevated street railway, 799, n. 2.
 - owner entitled to compensation in such case, 790-803.
 - whether he is entitled in case of street railway, 790-803.
 - decisions where the fee of the streets is in the public, 796-803.
 - distinction between a street railway and a thoroughfare, 802, 803.
- right to compensation when course of a stream is diverted, 807, 808.
- whether the fee in the land can be taken, 808, 809.
- damage to property not taken to be compensated for in some States, 810-812.
- compensation must be made for property, 812-828.
 - must be pecuniary, 812, 813.
 - preliminary surveys may be made without, 813.
 - need not be first made when property taken by State, &c., 813-815.
 - sufficient if party is given a remedy by means of which he may obtain it, 813-816.
 - time for resorting to remedy may be limited, 815-816.

EMINENT DOMAIN — continued.

waiver of right to compensation, 815-816.

when property taken by individual or private corporation, compensation must be first made, 816, 817.

tribunal for assessment of, 817.

time when right to payment is complete, 818-819.

principle on which compensation to be assessed, 819-828.

allowance of incidental injuries and benefits, 820-828.

not those suffered or received in common with public at large, 823-828.

if benefits equal damages, owner entitled to nothing, 825.

assessment of damages covers all consequential injuries, 825-826.

for injuries arising from negligence, &c., party may have action, 826.

EMPLOYMENTS,

control of the State in respect to, 884-890.

ENABLING ACT,

to entitle Territory to form State constitution, 56, 58, 59.

ENGLAND. See GREAT BRITAIN.*ENROLLED ACT

effect of, as evidence of its own validity, 194, 195.

ENUMERATED POWERS,

United States, a government of, 11.

EQUALITY,

of protection guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment, 15, 36-41.

of the several departments of the government, 78, n. 2, 227, 228.

of rights and privileges, the aim of the law, 562, 563.

distinctions must not be arbitrary, 561 and n. (a).

grants of special privileges construed strictly, 562-564.

religious, 600.

See RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

EQUITABLE TITLES,

may be changed by legislature into legal, 537-539.

ERRONEOUS JUDGMENTS,

may be overruled, 86.

when they should not be, 86, 87.

ERRORS,

waiver of, in legal proceedings, 587, 588.

judgments, &c., not void by reason of, 587.

curing by retrospective legislation, 529-548.

in conduct of elections, effect of, 928-930.

ESSENTIAL POWERS OF GOVERNMENT, taxation, eminent domain, &c., cannot be bartered away, 395-401.

ESTABLISHMENTS,

religious, are forbidden by State constitutions, 663.

ESTATES OF DECEASED PERSONS, special legislative authority to sell lands for payment of debts is constitutional, 140-147.

such acts forbidden by some constitutions, 141, n. 1.

legislature cannot adjudicate upon debts, 147-150.

ESTATES IN LAND, subject to change by the legislature before they become vested, 511-515.

but not afterwards, 136, n. 2.

ESTOPPEL,

- by judgment only applies to parties and privies, 79-82.
- does not depend on reasons given by the court, 82.
- does not apply in controversy about new subject-matter, 82.
- of the State by its legislation, 107, n., 384.
- of individuals by legislation, 139.

EVASION,

- of constitutional provisions, 199, n. 3.

EVIDENCE,

- by recitals in statutes, 139.
- collecting by legislature, 193.
- complete control of legislature over rules of, 409, 410.
- conclusive rules of, not generally admissible, 526, 527.
- confessions of accused parties as, 443-449.
- dying declarations, when are, 452.
- search-warrants to obtain, not constitutional, 431, n. 2. 432.
- compulsory inspection of person or property to obtain, 424 n. (a) and 425 n. (a).
- correspondence not to be violated to obtain, 432, n. 2.
- accused party not compelled to give, against himself, 442.
- by accused parties in their own favor, 447-449.
- against accused parties, to be given publicly, and in their presence, 450-452.
- communications by client to counsel not to be disclosed, 477, 478.
- in State courts, State laws control, 684, n. 2.
- to explain imperfections in ballots, 915-920, 942.

EVIL TO BE REMEDIED,

- weight of, in construing constitutions, 100, 123, n. 1.
- what in view in requiring title of act to state the object, 203-205.

EXAMINATIONS,

- of accused parties, when to be evidence against them, 442-444.

EXCESSIVE PUNISHMENTS,

- constitutional prohibition of, 471-474.

EXCESSIVE TAXATION,

- renders tax proceeding and sales void, 747, 748.

EXCISE TAXES,

- Congress may lay, 12.

EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGES,

- grant of, 395, 402.
- not to be taken by implication, 565.
- strict construction of, 395, 402.
- are subject to right of eminent domain, 393.

EXECUTION,

- exemptions from, may be increased without violating pre-existing contracts, 407-409.
- and may be recalled, 540.
- imprisonment upon, may be abolished, 407.

EXECUTIVE,

- construction of constitution by, 72-75.
- weight of practical construction by, 102-103.
- power of, to pardon and reprieve, 160, 161.
- approval or veto of laws by, 218-221.

EXECUTIVE POWER,

- what is, 131.
- not to be exercised by legislature, 123, 127, 157-162.
- may legislature prescribe rules for exercise of, 160-162.
- exercise of, not to be controlled by the judiciary, 162.
- of the United States, 19-22.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS,

- special statute authorizing sales by, 140-147.
- propriety of judicial action in these cases, 140, 141.
- legislature cannot adjudicate upon debts, 147, 148.

EXEMPLARY DAMAGES,

- against publisher of newspaper, 647-650.

EXEMPTIONS,

- provisions for, when self executing, 122.
- waiver of right to, 251, 252.
- from taxation, when not repealable, 176, 395, 396, 547.
 - power of the legislature to make, 739-744.
 - do not apply to local assessments unless so expressed, 740, n.
- from public duties, &c., may be recalled, 329, 546.
- of property from right of eminent domain, 397-399.
- of property from police power of the State, 399.
- from execution may be increased without violating contracts, 407-409.
- of debtor from imprisonment, 407.
- privilege of, may be made to depend upon residence, 574.
- laws for, not to be suspended for individual cases, 558, 559.

EX PARTE PROCEEDINGS,

- how far binding on parties interested, 587, n. 1.
- publication of, not privileged, 637-640.

EXPECTANCY,

- interests in, are not vested rights, 509-515.

EXPEDIENCY,

- questions of, are legislative, 237-241.

EXPOSITORY ACTS. See DECLARATORY STATUTES.EX POST FACTO LAWS,

- States not to pass, 36, 372.
- meaning of the term, 373, 378.
- only applies to criminal laws, 373.
- distinction between and retrospective laws, 374.
- laws in mitigation of punishment are not, 378.
 - what is in mitigation, and what not, 376-383.
- modes of procedure in criminal cases may be changed, 381, 382.
- punishment of second offences, 382, 383.

EXPRESSION OF POPULAR WILL,

- must be under forms of law, 892.

See ELECTIONS.

EXPULSION,

- of legislative members for misconduct, 190.

EXTRADITION,

- of criminals as between the States, 37, 38, n. 1.
- of persons accused of libel, 459, n. 2.
- between sovereignties, 41, n.
- treaties for, may be retroactive, 383, n. 1.

F.

FACT AND LAW,

province of judge and jury respectively, 460-465.
in libel cases, 652-655.

FAITH AND CREDIT, in each State to public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other, 35-40, n. 1.

FAST DAYS,

appointment of, does not violate religious liberty, 669.

FEDERAL COURTS. See COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

FEDERAL QUESTION,

Supreme Court may review judgments of State courts upon, 25-31, 36, n. (b).

FEDERALIST,

on the power to supersede the Articles of Confederation, 9, 10, n.
reasons of, for dispensing with national bill of rights, 365.
reference in, to laws violating obligation of contracts, 384.

FEE,

whether the public may appropriate, in taking lands, 808.

FELONIES,

Congress may define and punish, 13.

FEMALES, accusation of want of chastity not actionable per se, 606, 607.

statutes on the subject, 607.
excluded from suffrage, 901, 902.

See MARRIED WOMEN.

FERRY FRANCHISES,

granted to municipal corporations, may be resumed, 390, and n. 1.
strict construction of, 564-567.
grants of, by the State across navigable waters, 867.
police regulations respecting, 867, 868.

FEUDAL KINGDOM,

definition of, 50, n. 1.

FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT,

provisions of, 17, 18, 901, 902.
to what extent self-executing, 120.

FINE,

remission of, 160, n. 2.

FIRE,

destruction of buildings to prevent spread of, 756, 873.
precautions against, by establishing fire limits, 284, n. 4, 873.

FIRST AMENDMENT, 596.

FISHERY,

public rights of, in navigable waters, 752.
restrictions upon, 291.

FLORIDA,

judges of, to give opinions to the governor, 72, n. 1.
divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153 and n. 2.
exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160 and n. 2, 161, 162.

FLORIDA — continued.

- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 598, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious liberty in, 602, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be a test of competency of witness, 677, n.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 818, n. 3.

FOREIGN CONTRACTS,

- enforcement of, 178-181.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS,

- rights of, 179, n. (a).
- as to real estate in the foreign State, 180, 181.
- powers of, 178-181, 763, n. (a).
- jurisdiction over, 582, n.

FOREIGNERS. See ALIENS.

FORFEITURES,

- under municipal by-laws, 292, n. 1.
- must be judicially declared, 149, 370-372, 513, 519.

FORMS,

- prescribed by constitution are essential, 114-119, 245, 246.

FORTS,

- magazines, arsenals, etc., lands purchased for, under exclusive control of Congress, 13.

FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT,

- protections of, 14, 17, 418, 502, 567, 869.

FOURTH OF JULY,

- celebration of, at public expense, 310.

FOX'S LIBEL ACT,

- provisions of, 634.

FRANCHISES,

- of incorporation, when they constitute contracts, 390.
- granted to municipal bodies may be resumed, 266-268, 347.
- repeal of, where right to repeal is reserved, 347, 839.
- strict construction of, 271, 272, 564, 567.
- police regulations respecting, 833-844.
- may be appropriated under right of eminent domain, 757.

FRAUD,

- as affecting decrees of divorce, 573.
- in securing passage of statute cannot be shown to defeat it, 258, 259.

FREEDMEN,

- made citizens, 14, 418, 869.

FREEDOM,

- maxims of, in the common law, 49, 50.
- gradually acquired by servile classes in Great Britain, 419-424.

See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

FREEDOM OF ELECTIONS,

- provisions to secure, 922.
- bribery and treating of electors, 922, 923.
- militia not to be called out on election day, 925.
- courts not to be open on election day, 923.
- betting on elections illegal, 924.
- contracts to influence elections void, 924.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS,

Hamilton's reasons why protection of, by bill of rights, not important, 365.

opposing reasons by Jefferson, 367, n. 1.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH,

definition of, 602-604.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

FRONTAGE,

apportionment of assessment for local improvement according to, 729 and n. 1.

FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE, to be delivered up by the States, 37, 38, n. 1.

surrender of, under treaties, 38, n. 1.

FUNDAMENTAL LAW,

constitutions are, 4.

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS,

bills of, in State constitutions, 65, 66.

in the national Constitution, 365-372.

in England, 49, 50, 366.

are before constitutions, 68, 69.

statutes in violation of, 233-242.

under fourteenth amendment, 14-17, 417, 418, 567, 568, 869.

G.

GAMING IMPLEMENTS,

keeping of, for unlawful games may be prohibited, 884.

GENERAL INTENT,

when to control particular intent, 91, 92, n. 3.

GENERAL LAWS,

exceptions from, in some cases, 139-151.

required instead of special, by some constitutions, 181-185.

in cases of divorce, 152-157.

control municipal regulations, 278, 279.

due process of law does not always require, 140, 504-505, 554-556.

submission of, to vote of people invalid, 163-174.

suspension of, 558, 559.

changes in, give citizens no claim to remuneration, 402, 509-511.

respecting remedies, power to change, 381, 382, 406-417, 515-528.

GENERAL WARRANTS,

illegality of, 419-430.

GENERAL WELFARE,

legislation to be determined by, 184.

GEORGIA,

divorce cases to be adjudged by the courts, 153, n. 2.

revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.

right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 433, n. 1.

protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.

liberty of speech and of the press in, 598, n.

privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.

GEORGIA—continued.

religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.

private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

GOOD MOTIVES AND JUSTIFIABLE ENDS, defence of, in libel cases, 656-658.

burden of proof on defendant to show, 657.

GOVERNMENT,

constitutional, what is, 4, 5.

republican, to be guaranteed to the States, 42-45.

of the United States, origin of, 7-9.

one of enumerated powers, 11.

not liable for acts of agents, 23, n. 2.

American, a decentralized system, 261-270.

GOVERNOR,

mandamus to, 162, n. 3.

approval or veto of laws by, 218-221.

messages to legislature, 222.

power to prorogue or adjourn legislature, 188.

power to convene legislature, 222.

legislative encroachment on powers of, 157-162.

power to pardon, 158, n. 1, 160, n. 2.

to appoint officers and remove them, 158, n. 1.

to relieve, 160, n. 2.

GRADE OF RAILROADS, legislature may establish, for crossings, 842.

GRADE OF STREETS,

change of, gives parties no right to compensation, 296.

special assessments for grading, 713, 727-732.

GRAND JURY,

criminal accusations by, 436.

presentments by, are privileged, 629, 630.

GRANTS, are contracts, and inviolable, 384, 385.

by States, cannot be resumed, 385-387.

of franchises, strict construction of, 270-273, 564-567.

when they constitute contracts, 387-401.

to municipal bodies, may be recalled, 388-390.

GREAT BRITAIN,

how it became a constitutional government, 4, n., 84, n. 1.

power of Parliament to change constitution, 6.

meaning of unconstitutional law in, 5.

control over American colonies, 7, 51-54.

statutes of, how far in force in America, 52.

bill of rights of, 51, 366.

habeas corpus act of, 51, 489-491.

local self-government in, 263.

declaration of rights of, 367 et seq.

bills of attainder in, 368-372.

money bills to originate in the Commons, 188.

emancipation of slaves in, 419-424.

prosecutions for libel in, 612, 613, 650, 651, n. 1.

See PARLIAMENT.

GUARANTIES. See FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS; JURY TRIAL; LAW OF THE LAND; LIBERTY.

GUARDIANS,

- special statute authorizing sales by, 140-147.
- propriety of judicial action in such cases, 140, 141.
- control of ward by, 485, 486.
- appointment of, in divorce suits, 584.
- authority of, is local, 489.

GUNPOWDER,

- police regulations concerning, 881.

H.

HABEAS CORPUS,

- writ of, a principal protection to personal liberty, 483, 489, 490.
- personal liberty, meaning of, 483, 484.
- restraints upon, to prevent or punish crime, &c., 484.
- growing out of relation of husband and wife, 484, 485.
 - of parent and child, 485.
 - of guardian and ward, 485, 486.
 - of master and apprentice, 486.
 - of master and servant, 486.
 - of teacher and scholar, 486.
 - of principal and bail, 486, 487.
 - of creditor and debtor, 487.
- insecurity of, formerly, in England, 487-489.
- habeas corpus* act, and its purpose, 51, 489-491.
 - general provisions of, 490.
 - adoption of, in America, 491.
- writ of, when to be issued by national courts, 491-493.
 - generally to issue from State courts, 493, 494.
 - return to, where prisoner held under national authority, 493-494.
 - cases for, determined by common law, 494.
 - not to be made a writ of error, 495.
 - what to be inquired into under, 495, 496.
 - right to jury trial in habeas corpus cases, 497.
 - to obtain custody of children, 496, 497.

HACKMEN,

- regulation of charges of, 870-876.

HARBOR REGULATIONS,

- establishment of, by the States, 855-859.
- wharf lines may be prescribed, 878.

HARDSHIP,

- of particular cases not to control the law, 107, n. 1.
- unjust provisions not necessarily unconstitutional, 108, 109, 737, 738.

HEALTH,

- police regulations for protection of, 851-854 and notes, 860.
- draining swamps, &c., in reference to, 734, 862.

HEARING,

- right to, in judicial proceedings, 523, 570-588.
- in cases of appropriation of lands, 817, 818.
- in tax proceedings, 711, n. 3.

HEIRSHIP, right to modify, 511.

HIGH SEAS,

not subject to exclusive appropriation, 4.

States no authority upon, 176, 177.

Congress may punish offences committed upon, 13.

HIGHWAYS,

establishment of, under right of eminent domain, 753.

compensation in such case, 812-828.

appropriation of, to purposes of turnpike, railroad, &c., whether it entitles owner to compensation, 788-888.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

regulations of, by States under police power, 860, 861, 867.

HOMESTEADS,

provisions for, when self-executing, 122.

exemption of, from execution, 408.

HUSBAND AND WIFE,

power of legislature to divorce, 152, 153.

jurisdiction in divorce cases, 577-585.

See DIVORCE.

control of husband over wife, 484, 485.

obligation of husband to support wife, 484 and n. 2.

right, as between, to custody of children, 496, 497.

property rights, how far subject to legislative control, 515-518.

validating invalid marriage by legislation, 533, 534.

L.IDEM SONANS,

ballot sufficient in cases of, 916.

IDIOTS,

exclusion of, from suffrage, 57, 902.

special legislative authority for sale of lands of, 140-147, 554.

ILLEGAL CONTRACTS,

have no obligation, 404, 405.

legalization of, 415, 416, 535-540.

for lobby legislative services, 196 and n. 2.

designed to affect elections, 924.

ILLINOIS,

special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.

divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.

title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.

special legislative sessions, 220, n. 4.

time when acts take effect, 223.

provision in relation to special laws, 258, n. 1.

municipalities restrained from aiding public improvements, 313, n. 1.

restriction upon power to contract debts, 325.

protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.

liberty of speech and of the press in, 596 n.

privilege of legislators in debate, 634 n.

religious liberty in, 602, n. 3.

ILLINOIS — continued.

- damaging property in the course of public improvements, 810, n. 2.
- taking land for railroad tracks, 809 n.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

IMMUNITIES.

- of citizens of the several States, 36, 37, 567.
- citizens not to be deprived of, 14, 15.
- of municipal corporations, 800.

IMPAIRING CONTRACTS. See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.IMPEACHMENT,

- of judges for declaring law unconstitutional, 229, n. 1.

IMPLICATION,

- amendments by, not favored, 216, 217.
- repeals by, 216, 217.
- grant of powers by, in State constitutions, 98, 99.
- corporations established by, 277, 278.

IMPLIED POWERS,

- of municipal corporations, what are, 270-276.
- granted by State constitutions, 98, 99.

IMPLIED PROHIBITIONS,

- to the States by the national Constitution, 45.
- upon legislative power, 233-245.

IMPORTS,

- State taxation of, 688, 857-859.

IMPOSTS,

- to be uniform throughout the Union, 12.
- what the States may lay, 36.
- taxation by, 708, 709.

IMPRESSMENT OF SEAMEN,

- not admissible in America, 424.

IMPRISONMENT,

- for legislative contempt must terminate with the session, 191.
- for debt may be abolished as to existing contracts, 407.
- of child for lack of parental control, 423, n. 4.
- unlimited, cannot be inflicted for common-law offence, 472.
- relief from. See HABEAS CORPUS.

IMPROVEMENTS.

- owner of land cannot be compelled to make, 552, n. 2, 768.
- betterment laws, 552, 553.
- local assessments for the making of, 713-738.

See ASSESSMENTS.

INCHOATE RIGHTS,

- power of the legislature in regard to, 511-515.

INCIDENTAL INJURIES,

- by change in the law, give no claim to compensation, 548-550.
- See EMINENT DOMAIN.

INCOMPETENT PERSONS,

- legislative authority for sale of lands of, 140-147, 532, 554.
- exclusion of, from suffrage, 961, 932.

INCONTINENCE,

- accusation of, against female, not actionable per se, 606, 607.
- statutory provisions respecting, 607.

INCORPORATIONS,

- notice of acts for, 118, n., 123, n. 1.
- waiver of defects in, by State, 118, n.
- charters of private, are contracts, 391-394.
- charters of municipal, are not, 236-270, 390.
- control of, by police regulations, 835-844.

See CHARTERS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

INDEBTEDNESS BY STATE,

- prohibition of, whether it precludes debts by towns, counties, &c., 322-325.

INDECENT PUBLICATIONS,

- sale of, may be prohibited, 884.
- parties not free to make, 606, 607, 638.

INDEMNIFICATION,

- of officers of municipal corporation where liability is incurred in supposed discharge of duty, 306-309.
- power of legislature to compel, 308, 309.
- not to be made in case of refusal to perform duty, n. 1, 309.

INDEMNITY,

- for property taken for public use. See EMINENT DOMAIN.
- for consequential injuries occasioned by exercise of legal rights, 548.

INDEPENDENCE,

- declaration of, by Continental Congress, 8, 9.
- new national government established by, 8.
- celebration of, at public expense, 310.
- of the traverse jury, 460, 451.
- of the bar, 479-482.

INDIAN,

- an unnaturalized, is not a citizen nor entitled to vote, 901, n. 4.

INDIANA,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
- exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n.
- local option laws, validity of, 173.
- prohibition of special laws when general can be made applicable, n. 4, 181.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, n. 1, 188.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, n. 1, 192.
- title of acts to embrace the subject, n. 3, 202.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, n. 1, 215.
- approval of laws by governor of, n. 2, 219, and n. 4, 220.
- time when acts take effect, 224.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 602, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 377, n.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 376, n.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

INDICTMENT,

- criminal accusations to be by, 436.
 - trial on defective, 382, n. 2, 468-470.
 - must apprise accused of the charge against him, 382, n. 3, 436 and n. 3.
- See CRIMES.

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS.

- provisions for protection of, in State constitutions, 65, 66.
- in national Constitution, 365-367.
- do not owe their origin to constitutions, 68.
- English statutes declaratory of, 51, 366.

See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

INELIGIBILITY,

- of highest candidate, how to affect election, 981.

INFANTS.

- excluded from suffrage, 57, 901.
- special statutes authorizing sale of lands of, 140, 532, 554.
- custody of, by parents, 485, 496, 497.
- emancipation of, 485.
- control of, by masters, guardians, and teachers, 485, 486.

INFERIOR COURTS,

- duty of, to pass upon constitutional questions, n. 1, 230.
- distinguished from courts of general jurisdiction, 585, 586.
- disproving jurisdiction of, 586.

INFORMALITIES.

- right to take advantage of, may be taken away by legislation, 528, 546.
- do not defeat jurisdiction of court, 587, 588.
- waiver of, in legal proceedings, 588.

INHABITANT,

- meaning of, in election laws, 903, 904.

INHERITANCE TAXES,

- validity of, n. (a), 708.

INITIALS,

- to Christian name of candidate, whether sufficient in ballot, 916-919.

INJUSTICE,

- of constitutional provisions cannot be remedied by the courts, 108, 109.
- of statutes does not render them unconstitutional, 232-237.
- in taxation, sometimes inevitable, 737, 738.

INNOCENCE,

- of accused parties, presumption of, 437-439.
- only to be overcome by confession in open court, or verdict, 439.

INQUISITORIAL TRIALS,

- not permitted where the common law prevails, 442.
- accused parties not compellable to give evidence against themselves, 443-449.

INSANE PERSONS,

- validating deeds of, n. 1, 438.

INSANITY,

- defence of, in criminal cases, n. 1, 538.

INSOLVENT LAWS,

- right of the States to pass, 416, 417.
- congressional regulations supersede, 416.
- what contracts cannot be reached by, 417.
- creditor making himself a party to proceedings is bound, 417.

INSPECTION LAWS,

- of the States, imposts or duties under, 86.
- constitutionality of, 886, 884-889, 888, 889.

INSPECTORS OF ELECTIONS, judicial appointment of, n. 3, 129.

powers and duties of. See ELECTIONS.

INSURRECTIONS, employment of militia for suppression of, 13.

INTENT,

to govern in construction of constitutions, 89-91.
whole instrument to be examined in seeking, 91-92.
in ineffectual contracts, may be given effect to by retrospective legislation, 530-540.
question of, in libel cases, 651-655.
in imperfect ballot, voter cannot testify to, 914.
what evidence admissible on question of, 919, 920.

INTEREST,

in party, essential to entitle him to question the validity of a law, 232.
in judge, precludes his acting, 243, 592-595.
of money, illegal reservation of, may be legalized, 536.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS, giving municipal corporations power to subscribe to, is not delegating legislative power, 167.

constitutionality of municipal subscriptions to, 312-325.
special legislative authority requisite, 318-320.
negotiable securities issued without authority are void, 318-320, and
n. 2.
prohibition to the State engaging in, whether it applies to municipalities, 321-325.
retrospective legalization of securities, 535-543.

INTERNATIONAL LAW,

equality of States under, 3.
Congress may punish offences against, 13.

INTERNATIONAL QUESTIONS,

States no jurisdiction over, 176, 177.

INTERPRETATION,

meaning of, 70, 71, n. 1.
See CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS.

INTER-STATE COMMERCE,

regulation of, 687-691, 845, 848, 872-875.
what is, 687, n. (a), 688, n. 3.
State cannot require license of persons engaged in, 693, n. 4, 857-859.
taxation of, by the State, 686-691.

INTIMIDATION,

of voters, secrecy as a protection against, 910, 922.
securities against, 922-925.

INTOXICATING DRINKS, submitting question of sale of, to people, 173, 174.

power of States to require licenses for sale of, 845-851.
power of States to prohibit sales of, 19, n. 1, 845-851, 884, 885.
furnishing to voters, 923, n.
annulling licenses for, 399, 400.

INTOXICATION,

not an excuse for crime, 673, n. 4.
is temporary insanity, 902, n. 1.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS,

for revenue purposes, 188, 189.
generally, 187-189.

INVASIONS,

employment of militia to repel, 13.

INVENTIONS,

securing right in, to inventors, 12.

INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE, gradual abolition of, in England, 419-423.

as a punishment for crime, 423.

See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

IOWA,

divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n. 2.
title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
power of legislature when convened by governor, 222.
time when acts are to take effect, 225.
restriction upon power to contract debts, 325.
protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
liberty of speech and of the press in, 593, n.
privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n.
private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

IRREGULARITIES,

in judicial proceedings, not inquirable into on habeas corpus, 495.
do not render judicial proceedings void, 587, 588.
waiver of, 587, 588.
may be cured by retrospective legislation, 528-546 effect of, upon elections, 928-934.
what, render sales for taxes void, 747, 748.

IRREPEALABLE LAWS, legislature cannot pass, 174-176, 402.

Parliament cannot bind its successors, 175.
laws which constitute contracts are inviolable, 175, 176.
whether essential powers of government can be bartered away, 392-402, 754, 755.
municipal corporations cannot adopt, 295.

IRRIGATION, assessments for, 715 n. (a).

J.

JEOPARDY, party not to be twice put in, for same cause, 466-470.

what constitutes, 467, 468.
when jury may be discharged without verdict, 468-470.
when nolle prosequi is an acquittal, 468.
second trial after verdict set aside, 470.
acquittal on some counts is a bar pro tanto to new trial, 470.
varying form of the charge, 470.

JEOPARDY — continued.

duplicate punishments under federal and State law, 45, 46.
under State and municipal laws, 279.

JOURNAL OF THE LEGISLATURE,

office of, 201.

is a public record, 193.

is evidence whether a law is properly adopted, 193-195.

silence of, not evidence that authority has been exceeded, unless, &c., 195.

presumption of correct action where it is silent, 195.

JUDGE,

disqualification of, by reason of interest, 243, 592-594.

not to urge opinion upon the jury, 480.

to instruct the jury on the law, 461.

JUDGE-MADE LAW,

objectionable nature of, 99, n.

JUDGMENTS,

conclusiveness of those of other States, 38-41.

general rules as to force and effect, 79-88.

for torts are not contracts, 411.

must apply the law in force when rendered, 543.

are void if jurisdiction is wanting, 548, 575-578, 585.

irregularities do not defeat, 587, 588.

See JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS; JURISDICTION.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS.

conclusiveness of, 79-88.

of federal courts conclusive on questions of federal jurisdiction, 25-29.

of State courts followed in other cases, 31, 32.

general rules as to force and effect of, 79-88.

JUDICIAL POWER, of the United States, extent of, 22-35.

See COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

not to be exercised by State legislatures, 126-129, 184, 558, 559.

what is, 131-134, 137, 495.

distribution of, 129, n. 3.

declaratory statutes not an exercise of, 134-140.

such statutes not to be applied to judgments, 136-139.

instances of exercise of, 138, n.

is apportioned by legislature, 129, n. 3.

legislature may exercise, in deciding contested seats, 190.

cannot be delegated, 589.

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS,

of several States, full faith and credit to be given to, 38-40.

confirmation of invalid, by legislature, 150, 530.

are void if court has no jurisdiction of the case, 575.

jurisdiction of subject-matter, what is, 575.

consent will not confer, 575-577.

if wanting, objection may be taken at any time, 576.

law encourages voluntary settlements and arrangements, 576.

arbitrations distinguished from, 576.

transitory and local actions, 577.

jurisdiction in divorce cases, 577, 578.

necessity for service of process, or substitute therefor, 579-585.

proceedings in rem and in personam, 580, 581.

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS — continued.

- bringing in parties by publication, 581-585.
 - no personal judgment in such case, 583, 584.
 - decree for custody of children, effect of, 584.
- contesting jurisdiction, 585.
- courts of general and special jurisdiction, 585.
- record of, how far conclusive, 585, 586.
- irregularities do not defeat, 495, 496, 587, 588.
 - waiver of, 587, 588.
- judicial power cannot be delegated, 589.
- right to jury trial in civil cases, 589-592.
- judge not to sit when interested, 592-595.
- statements in course of, how far privileged, 629-631.
- publication of accounts of trials privileged, 636-640.
 - but must be fair and full, 637.
 - and not ex parte, 637-639.
 - and not contain indecent or blasphemous matter, 638.

JUDICIARY,

- to advise legislature in some States, 72, n. 1.
- construction of constitution by, 73-78.
- equality of, with legislative department, 78, n. 1.
- independence of, 78, n. 2.
- when its decisions to be final, 79-83.
- appointments by, 181, n. 1.

See COURTS; JUDICIAL POWER; JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS; JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION,

- of courts, disproving, 37-41 and notes.
- want of, cannot be cured by legislation, 151, n. 1 and 2.
- of subject-matter, what it consists in, 575.
- not to be conferred by consent, 575-577.
- if wanting, objection may be taken at any time, 576.
- in divorce cases, what gives, 577, 578.
- necessity for service of process, 579-585.
- irregularities do not affect, 495, 496, 587, 588.
- interest in judge, effect of, 592-595.
- general and special, distinguished, 585, 586.
- where it exists, proceedings not to be attacked collaterally, 588.
- in tax proceedings, 718-720.
- of federal courts, 22, 23, 618.
- in cases of habeas corpus, 491-494.
- of federal supreme court appellate over State courts, 25-31.

JURY,

- independence of, 460-465.

JURY TRIAL,

- how far required by United States constitution, 46.
- the mode for the trial of criminal accusations, 453, 454.
- what cases do not require, 453, n. 2.
- must be speedy, 440, 441.
 - and public, 441.
 - and not inquisitorial, 442 and n. 1, 424, n. (a).
- prisoner to be confronted with witnesses, 440.
- statement by prisoner, 443-449.

See CONFESSIONS.

JURY TRIAL — continued.

- prisoner to be present during trial, 452.
- jury to consist of twelve, 454-459 and notes.
 - challenges of, 459.
 - must be from vicinage, 53, 459.
 - must be left free to act, 460.
 - how far to judge of the law, 461-465, 596-599.
 - in libel cases, 652-655.
 - acquittal by, is final, 462.
- judge to instruct jury on the law, 461.
 - but not to express opinion on facts, 460, 465, n. 1.
 - nor to refuse to receive verdict, 461.
- accused not to be twice put in jeopardy, 466-470.
 - what is legal jeopardy, 467, 468.
 - when jury may be discharged without verdict, 468-470.
 - when noße prosequi equivalent to verdict, 468.
 - second trial after verdict set aside, 470.
- right to counsel, 377, 474.
- constitutional right to jury trial in civil cases, 46, 589, 778, n., 938, n. 2.
- in cases of contempt, 453, n. 2.
- in case of municipal corporations, 340, n. 1.
- in habeas corpus cases, 497.

JUST COMPENSATION.

- what constitutes, when property taken by the public, 812-828.
- See EMINENT DOMAIN.

JUSTIFICATION,

- in libel cases by showing truth of charge, 656.
- showing of good motives and justifiable occasion, 656, 657.
- unsuccessful attempt at, to increase damages, 623, 624.

K.

KANSAS,

- power to grant divorces vested in the courts, 153, n. 2.
- exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n. 2.
- requirement of general laws when they can be made applicable, 181, n. 4.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- restriction upon power to contract debts, 325.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 682, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 676, n.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 2.

KENTUCKY,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- restriction upon power to contract debts, 324.

KENTUCKY — continued.

- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 483, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by the law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- compact with Virginia, 386, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- exclusion of religious teachers from office, 682, n. 2.
- religious liberty in, 682, n. 3.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, excused, 676, n.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

L.LARCENY,

- abroad, punishment of, here, 177, n. 3.

LAW,

- common, how far in force, 51-53.

See COMMON LAW.

- and fact, respective province of court and jury as to, 460-485, 652-655.
- the jury as judges of, 460-465, 652-655.

LAW-MAKING POWER. See LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES.LAW OF THE LAND,

- protection of, insured by Magna Charta, 500.
- American constitutional provisions, 24, 25, 49, and 429, n. 2.
- meaning of the term, 502-506, 526.
- vested rights protected by, 507, 508.
 - meaning of vested rights, 503, 526, 537-549.
 - subjection of, to general laws, 508-510.
 - interests in expectancy are not, 509-515.
 - rights acquired through the marriage relation, 513-515.
 - legal remedies not the subject of vested rights, and may be changed, 515-520.
 - statutory privileges and exemptions are not, 546.
 - rights in action are, 517.
 - forfeitures must be judicially declared, 518-520.
 - limitation laws may be passed, 520-524.
- See LIMITATION LAWS.
- rules of evidence may be changed, 524-528.
- retrospective laws, when admissible, 528-546.
 - forbidden by some State constitutions 529, 530, n. 1.
 - cannot create rights in action, 528-546.
 - nor revive debts barred by statute of limitations, 528.
 - may cure informalities, 529-546.
 - may perfect imperfect contracts, 415, 416, 535-546.
 - may waive a statutory forfeiture, 461, n.
 - may validate imperfect deeds, 537-539.
 - but not as against bona fide purchasers, 539, 540.
 - cannot validate proceedings the legislature could not have authorized, 541-546.
 - cannot cure defects of jurisdiction in courts, 545, 546, n. 2.
- consequential injuries give no right to complain, 548, 549.

LAW OF THE LAND — continued.

sumptuary laws inadmissible, 549, 550.

betterment laws, 550-553.

unequal and partial laws, 554-575.

invalid judicial proceedings, 575-595.

what necessary to give courts jurisdiction, 575-585.

consent cannot confer, 575-577.

in divorce cases, 577, 578.

process must be served or substitute had, 579-585.

proceedings in rem and in personam, 580-585.

bringing in parties by publication, 582.

no personal judgment in such case, 583-584.

process cannot be served in another State, 582.

jurisdiction over guardianship of children in divorce cases, 584.

courts of general and special jurisdiction, and the rules as to questioning their jurisdiction, 585, 586.

irregular proceedings do not defeat jurisdiction, 587, 588.

waiver of irregularities, 588.

judicial power cannot be delegated, 589.

judge cannot sit in his own cause, 592-594.

objection to his interest cannot be waived, 595.

right to jury trial in civil cases, 46, 589-592, 778, n., 938, n. 2.

See TAXATION; EMINENT DOMAIN; POLICE POWER; JURY TRIAL.

LAWS, enactment of. See STATUTES.

Congress may make, to carry into effect powers granted, 13, 14.

LAWS IMPAIRING OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

LAWS, EX POST FACTO. See EX POST FACTO LAWS; RETROSPECTIVE LAWS.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS,

publication of accounts of, how far privileged, 636-640.

statements in course of, when privileged, 629-633.

See JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

LEGAL TENDER,

United States Treasury notes may be made, 14, n. 1.

only gold and silver to be made, by the States, 86.

LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY, rules for measuring extent of, 126, 127.

territorial limitations upon, 176-181.

general limitations upon, 181-185 and notes.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT, division of, 187, 188.

not to exercise executive or judicial powers, 124-162.

equality of, with other departments, 78, n.

discretion of, not to be controlled by the courts, 75, n., 157-162.

See LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES.

LEGISLATIVE DISCRETION, courts not to control, 75, n. and 237-239.

LEGISLATIVE DIVORCES,

whether they are an exercise of judicial power, 152.

impropriety of, 153-157.

LEGISLATIVE MOTIVES, not to be inquired into by courts, 257-260, 300.

presumption of correctness of, 257-260, 300.

LEGISLATIVE POWERS,

what are, 131, 137.
limitations of, 163, n. 1.
enactments in excess of, are void, 5, 243.
distinguished from judicial, 131-134.
cannot be delegated, 163, 293, 294.
exercise of, will not give right of action, 300-303.
cannot extend beyond territorial limits, 176, 177.
grant of, will not warrant exercise of executive or judicial powers, 126-162.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS, privilege of publication of, 650-652.

members not to be questioned for words in course of, 634-636.

LEGISLATORS,

contested elections of, to be decided by house, 190.
duty of, not to violate constitution, 253, 254.
presumed correctness of motives, 257-259, 300.
privilege of, in debate, 634-636.
from arrest, 162.
right of, to publish speeches, 650-652.

LEGISLATURES, COLONIAL,

statutes adopted by, in force at Revolution, 51, 52.

LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES, time for meeting of, 133.

adjournment of, 138.
power to originate amendments to State constitution, 59.
construction of constitution by, 70-78.
deference due to judicial construction by, 85 n.
powers of, compared with those of Parliament, 124-126, 241-242.
not to exercise executive or judicial powers, 126-127, 147-150, 244, 245.
complete legislative power vested in, 126, 236, 240, 242.
specification of powers in constitution unnecessary, 127, 128.
declaratory statutes not the exercise of judicial power, 135-139.
cannot set aside judgments, grant new trials, &c., 137, 138, 560.
how far may bind parties by recital of facts in statutes, 139.
power of, to grant divorces, 152-157.
delegation of legislative power inadmissible, 163-174.
but conditional legislation is not, 164-174.
not making charters subject to acceptance, 166.
not conferring powers of local government, 165-167, 263-266.
irrepealable legislation cannot be passed, 174-176, 402, n.
but exemptions from taxation may be made, 176, 395, 396, 739-744.
power of, limited to territory of the State, 176-181.
discretionary powers of, how restricted, 181-185.
courts no control over, 184.
control public moneys, 184.
enactment of laws by, 186-226.
must be under the constitutional forms, 186.
parliamentary common law of, 187, 189-193.
division of, into two houses, 187, 188.
when to meet, 185.

LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES — continued.

- prerogation by executive, 188.
- rules of order of, 189, 190.
- election and qualification of members, determination of, 190.
- contempts of, may be punished by, 190, 191.
 - but not by committees, 193.
- members of, may be expelled, 190.
 - their privilege from arrest, &c., 192.
- committees of, for collection of information, &c., 193.
 - power of, to terminate with session, 193.
- journals of, to be evidence, 193, 194.
- action of, to be presumed legal and correct, 195.
- motives of members not to be questioned, 257-259, 300.
- "lobby" services illegal, 196.
- bills, introduction and passage of, 197-201.
 - three several readings of, 116-119, 199, 200.
 - yeas and nays to be entered on journal, 201.
 - vote on passage of, what sufficient, 201.
 - title of, formerly no part of it, 202.
 - constitutional provisions respecting, 117, 202.
 - purpose of these, 202-205.
 - evils to be remedied by, 203-205.
 - they are mandatory, 213, 214.
 - particularity required in stating object, 205, 206.
 - what is embraced by title, 203, 209.
 - effect if more than one object embraced, 210, 211.
 - effect if act is broader than title, 211-214.
- amended statutes, publication of, at length, 215-217.
- repeal of statutes at session when passed, 217.
- signing of bills by officers of the houses, 218.
- approval and veto of bills by governor, 218-221.
- governor's messages to, 222.
- special sessions of, 222.
- when acts to take effect, 222-226.
- limitations upon power to enact law, 181-185, 241.
- power of the courts to declare statutes unconstitutional, 227-260.
- full control of, over municipal corporations, 266-270, 333-340.
- legalization by, of irregular municipal action, 306-309, 330, 331.
 - of invalid contracts, 415, 416, 528-546.
 - of irregular sales, taxation, &c., 530-543.
- not to pass bills of attainder, 36, 62, 383-371.
 - nor ex post facto laws, 36, 62, 376.
 - nor laws violating obligation of contracts, 36, 62, 175, 176, 383-417.
- See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.
- insolvent laws, what may be passed, 416, 417.
- right to petition, 497, 498.
- vested rights protected against, 500-575.
 - See LAW OF THE LAND.
- control by, of remedies in criminal cases, 374-383.
 - in civil cases, 406-416, 515-528.
- control of rules of evidence, 409, 524-528.
- may change estates in land, 510-513.
 - and rights to property under the marriage relation, 513.

LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES — continued.

limitation laws may be passed by, 520.

retrospective legislation by, 528-546.

See RETROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION.

privileges granted by, may be recalled, 548-548.

consequential injuries from action of, 548, 549.

sumptuary laws, 549, 550.

betterment laws, 550-553.

unequal and partial legislation, 554.

general laws not always essential, 554-556.

special rules for particular occupations, 555, 556.

proscriptions for opinion's sake, 556.

suspension of laws in special cases, 558, 559.

special remedial legislation, 560.

special franchises, 563-575.

restrictions upon suffrage, 564, 901, 902.

power of, to determine for what purposes taxes may be levied, 698-708.

cannot authorize property to be taxed out of its district, 720-723.

must select the subjects of taxation, 739.

may determine necessity of appropriating private property to public use, 759, 760, 777, 778.

but the necessity for taking particular property is sometimes a judicial question, by constitutional requirement, 777, n. 2.

authority of, requisite to the appropriation, 759, 760.

cannot appropriate property to private use, 763-769.

LETTERS.

legal inviolability of, 426, n. 1, 432, n. 2.

of marque and reprisal, Congress may grant, 13.

States not to grant, 35.

LEVEES.

establishment of, under police power, 734-736, 868.

special assessments for, 735, 736.

LIBEL. See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.LIBERTY.

personal. See PERSONAL LIBERTY.

of the press. See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

religious. See RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

of discussion, 497, 498.

of bearing arms, 498, 499.

of petition, 497, 498.

charters of, 51.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

Hamilton's reasons why protection of, by bill of rights, was not important, 365.

opposing reasons by Jefferson, 367, n. 1.

Congress to pass no law abridging, 596.

State constitutional provisions respecting, 596, n. 1.

these create no new rights, but protect those already existing, 597-599.

liberty of the press neither well defined nor protected at the common law, 597.

censorship of publications, 599, 600.

debates in Parliament not suffered to be published, 600.

censorship in the Colonies, 600, 601.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS — continued.

secret session of Constitutional Convention, 601, 602.

and of United States Senate, 602.

what liberty of speech and of the press consists in, 602, 603.

general purpose of the constitutional provisions, 603-605.

rules of common-law liability for injurious publications, 605-609.

modification of, by statute, 607.

privileged cases, 609, 611.

libels upon the government indictable at the common law, 612.

prosecutions for, have ceased in England, 612.

sedition law for punishment of, 613.

whether now punishable in America, 613-615.

criticism upon officers and candidates for office, 616-628.

statements in the course of judicial proceedings, 629-631.

privilege of counsel, 631-633.

of legislators, 634-636.

publication of privileged communications through the press, 636-640.

publication of speeches of council, &c., not privileged, 636.

fair and impartial account of judicial trial is, 637.

whole case must be published, 637.

must be confined to what took place in court, 637.

must not include indecent or blasphemous matter, 638.

but not of ex parte proceedings, 638-640.

privilege of publishers of news, 640-650.

publishers generally held to same responsibility as other persons, 644.

not excused by giving source of information, 644.

nor because the publication was without their personal knowledge, 644.

nor by its being a criticism on a candidate for office, 624, n. 1, 626, n. 1, 628, n. 2, 644.

nor by its constituting a fair account of a public meeting, 664.

may discuss public conduct of officials, 628, 644, 645.

criticisms by, on works of art and literary productions, 644, 645.

exemplary damages against publishers, 647-650.

publication of legislative proceedings how far privileged, 650-652.

rule in England, 650.

the case of Stockdale v. Hansard, 651, n. 1.

publication of speeches by members, 651, 652.

the jury as judges of the law in libel cases, 652-655.

Woodfall's and Miller's cases, 652, 653.

Mr. Fox's Libel Act, 653, 654.

the early rulings on the subject in America, 654.

provisions on the subject in State constitutions, 596, n. 1, 655, n. 2.

the truth as a defence when good motives and justifiable ends in the publication can be shown, 656-658.

burden of proof on the defendant to show them, 657.

that publication was copied from another source is not sufficient, 658.

motives or character of defendant no protection, if publication is false, 658.

LICENSE.

granting of, 283, and notes 1 and 2.

annulling, 336, 400 and n. 1.

of occupations in general, 884-890.

State cannot require, of those engaged in inter-state commerce, 693, n. 4.

LICENSE — continued.

for ferry across navigable waters, 897.

revoking, where a fee was received therefor, 399, 400 and n. 1.

LICENSE FEES,

when are taxes, 283 and n. 1, 709, n. 1, 713.

limited generally to necessary expenses, &c., 283.

LICENSER, of intended publications, 599-604.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

LICENTIOUSNESS, distinguished from liberty, 625, 636, n. 3.

LIEN.

statutory, may be taken away, 407, n. 1.

LIFE,

liberty and property, protected under constitution, 15.

action for taking, through negligence, &c., 843, 844.

not to be taken but by due process of law, 15, 38, 500.

LIMITATION, of time to apply for compensation for property taken by public, 815, 816.

territorial, to legislative authority, 176, 177.

upon legislative authority generally, 181, n. 4.

LIMITATION LAWS,

may cut off vested rights, 520-524.

opportunity to assert rights must first be given, 523, 524.

cannot operate upon party in possession, 523.

legislature to determine what is reasonable time, 523, 524.

suspension of, 521, n. 5, 558.

legislature cannot revive demands barred by, 521.

legislature may describe form for new promise, 415.

do not apply to State or nation, 524, n. 1.

LIMITATIONS, of federal constitution, upon federal government, unless States expressly named, 46.

LIMITATIONS TO LEGISLATIVE POWER, are only such as the people have imposed by their constitutions, 126, 127.

See LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES.

LITERARY PRODUCTIONS,

copyright to, Congress may provide for, 12.

privilege of criticism of, 644, 645.

LOBBY SERVICES,

contract for, unlawful, 196 and n. 2.

LOCAL ASSESSMENTS. See ASSESSMENTS.*LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS. See LOCAL ASSESSMENTS.*LOCAL OPTION LAWS, constitutionality of, 173, 174.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT,

State constitutions framed in reference to, 65, 243.

the peculiar feature of the American system, 261-270.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

LOCAL TAXATION. See TAXATION.*LOCALITY OF PROPERTY, may give jurisdiction to courts, 580.

taxation dependent upon, 719-721, 743.

LOG-ROLLING LEGISLATION, constitutional provisions to prevent, 202-217.

LORD'S DAY,

laws for observance of, how justified, 675, 676, 859.

LOTTERIES, prohibition of, 120, n. 5.

LOUISIANA,

code of, based upon the civil law, 54, n. 2.

divorces not to be granted by special laws, 153, n. 2.

revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.

title of acts to embrace the object, 202, n. 3.

no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.

time when acts are to take effect, 225.

liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.

privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.

privileges not to be granted on religious grounds, 663, n.

"damaging" property in the course of public improvements, 810, n. 2.

exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

LUNATICS,

excluded from suffrage, 57, 902.

special statutes for sale of lands of, 140-147.

M.MAGNA CHARTA,

grant of, did not create constitutional government, 5, n.

a declaratory statute, 51, 366.

its maxims the interpreters of constitutional grants of power, 244 provision in, for trial by peers, &c., 500.

MAILS,

inviolability of, 432, n. 2.

MAINE,

judges to give opinions to governor and legislature, 72, n. 1.

revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.

right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.

protection to person and property by the law of the land, 500, n. 2.

liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.

privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.

religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.

persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, excused, 676, n. 2.

periodical valuations for taxation, 711, 712.

exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MAJORITY,

what constitutes two thirds, 201.

what sufficient in elections, 892, n., 894, n., 921, 922.

MALICE,

presumption of, from falsity of injurious publications, 609, 652.

in refusing to receive legal votes, 927.

presumption in cases of homicide, 465, n. 1.

MANDAMUS,

- to the executive, 102, n. 3.
- to compel registration of voters, 907.
- to compel canvassers to perform duty, 936.

MANDATORY STATUTES,

- doctrine of, 109-119.
- constitutional provisions always mandatory, 114-119, 201, 213, 214.
- but courts cannot always enforce, 184, 185.

MANUFACTURING PURPOSES,

- whether dams for, can be established under right of eminent domain, 771-773.
- taxation in aid of, 700, n. 1, 701, n. 2.

MARKETS,

- State power to regulate, 887-889.

MARRIAGE,

- validating invalid, by retrospective legislation, 533, 534.
- legislative control of rights springing from, 513-515.
- between whites and blacks, 556, n. 1.
- power of the legislature to annul, 152-157.

See DIVORCE ; MARRIED WOMEN.

MARRIED WOMEN,

- exclusion of, from suffrage, 57, 58, 902.
- statutes enlarging rights of, 95, n. 3.
- waiver of rights by, 252, n. 1.
- testimony of, in favor of husband, 447, n. 4.
- invalid deeds of, may be validated by legislature, 537, 538.
- control of, by husband, 484, 485.

See DIVORCE ; DOWER.

MARSHES,

- draining of, and assessments therefor, 734, 769, 770.

MARTIAL LAW,

- when may be declared, 436, n. 1.
- citizen not to be tried by, 454, n. 1.
- legality of action under, 518, n. 3.
- danger from, 924, 925.

MARYLAND,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- limited time for introduction of new bills, 199.
- title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- right of jury to determine the law in all criminal cases, 433, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- exclusion of religious teachers from office, 662, n. 1.
- religious tests for office in, 662, n. 3.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MASSACHUSETTS,

- judges of, to give opinions to governor and legislature, 72, n. 1.
- constitutional provision respecting divorces, 153, n. 2.

MASSACHUSETTS — continued.

- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- periodical valuations for taxation, 711, 712.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MASTER,

- of apprentice, servant, and scholar, power of, 486.

MAXIMS,

- of government, laws in violation of, 238, 239.
- of the common law, what they consist in, 49, 50.
- gradual growth and expansion of, 85.
- for construction of statutes,
 - a statute is to be construed as prospective, and not retrospective in its operation, 97.
 - such an interpretation shall be put upon a law as to uphold it, and give effect to the intention of the law-makers, 91, 92.
 - words in a statute are presumed to be employed in their natural and ordinary sense, 92, 93, 123, n. 1.
 - contemporary construction is best and strongest in the law, 102-103.
 - a statute is to be construed in the light of the mischief it was designed to remedy, 100.
 - he who considers the letter merely, goes but skin deep into the meaning, 123, n. 1.
 - statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly, 95.
 - an argument drawn from inconvenience is forcible in the law, 102-103.
 - taxation and representation go together, 238.
 - local concerns shall be managed in local districts, 238.
- general principles,
 - no man can be judge in his own cause, 592-595.
 - consent excuses error, 232, 250-252, 588.
 - the law does not concern itself about trifles, 748.
 - that to which a party assents is not in law an injury, 250-252.
 - no man shall be twice vexed for one and the same cause, 80.
 - every man's house is his castle, 50, 425, 426.
 - that which was originally void cannot by mere lapse of time become valid, 522, 523.
 - necessity knows no law, 878.
 - so enjoy your own as not to injure that of another, 831.

MEANING OF WORDS. See DEFINITIONS.

MEASURES AND WEIGHTS,

- regulation of, 887-889.

MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE,

- contested seats of, decided by the house, 190.
- punishment of, for contempts, &c., 190, 191.
- power of the houses to expel, 193.
- exemption of, from arrest, 192.
- publication of speeches by, 650-652.
- privilege of, in debate, &c., 634-636.

MICHIGAN,

- right of, to admission to the Union under ordinance of 1787, 58, n. 1.
- repeal of acts of Parliament in, 54, n. 2.
- repeal of laws derived from France, 54, n. 2.
- right of married women to property in, 95, n. 3.
- specific statutes authorizing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- limited time for introduction of new bills, 198, 199.
- title of acts to embrace the object, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- special legislative sessions, 222, n. 2.
- time when acts are to take effect, 223.
- restriction upon power to contract debts, 325 and n. 5.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 506, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office in, 692, n. 3.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 676, n. 2.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
- periodical valuations for taxation, 711, 712.

MILITARY BOUNTIES,

- by municipal corporations, when legal, 326-333.

MILITARY COMMISSIONS,

- when not admissible, 454, n. 1.

See MARTIAL LAW.

MILITIA,

- control of, 45, 46.
- not to be called out on election days, 924, 925.

MILL-DAMS,

- construction of, across navigable waters, 867.
- abatement of, as nuisances, 880.

MILL-DAM ACTS,

- do not confer vested rights, 548.
- constitutionality of, 771-773.

MILLERS,

- regulation of charges of, 870-873.
- taxation in aid of, 790, n. 1.

MINNESOTA,

- divorces not to be granted by the legislature, 153, n. 2.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- approval of laws by the governor of, 219, 220.
- protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 506, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 692, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MINORS. See INFANTS.

MISCHIEF TO BE REMEDIED,

may throw light on constitutional clause, 100.

MISSISSIPPI,

constitutional provision respecting divorces, 153, n. 2.
 exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 158, n. 2, 160, n. 2.
 revenue bills must originate in lower house, 158, n. 1.
 privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 2.
 time when acts are to take effect, 223.
 municipalities of, restrained from aiding public improvements, 318, n. 1.
 protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
 liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
 religious tests for office in, 662, n. 3.
 religious liberty in, 662, n. 3.
 private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
 exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MISSOURI,

special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
 divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
 restrictions upon legislative power in constitution of, 181, n. 4.
 privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
 title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
 no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
 special legislative sessions, 222, n. 2.
 municipalities restrained from aiding public improvements, 318, n. 1.
 right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
 protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
 liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
 privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
 religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
 religious liberty in, 662, n. 3.
 persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 676, n. 2.
 religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
 "damaging" property in the course of public improvements, 810, n. 3.
 private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
 exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

MONEY,

coinage and regulation of, 12, 35, 36.
 States forbidden to coin, 35.
 legal tender, 14, n. 1.
 punishment of counterfeiting, 12, 46.
 bills for raising, to originate in lower house in some States, 188.
 cannot be appropriated under right of eminent domain, 759.

MONOPOLIES,

odious nature of, 562, n. 1.
 grant of, not presumed, 562, n. 1.
 in navigable waters, 844-866.

MORAL OBLIGATIONS, recognition of, by municipal bodies, 306-309.

MORTGAGES,

right to possession under, cannot be taken away by legislature, 412.

MOTIVES,

- of legislative body not to be inquired into by courts, 257-259.
- nor those of municipal legislative body, 305, 309.
- good, when a defence in libel cases, 656-658.

MUNICIPAL BODIES,

- do not decide upon disputed elections, 189, n. 1.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS,

- question of formation or division of, may be submitted to people interested, 166, 167.
- question of engaging in internal improvements may also be submitted, 166, 167.
- powers of local government may be conferred upon, 166, 261.
- general view of the system, 261-334.
- legislature prescribes extent of powers, 265, 266.
- charter of, the measure of their authority, 265, 266, 270, 271.
- complete control of, by legislature, 239, n. 2, 263-269, 333-340.
- limitations upon, 333-340 and notes.
- whether it may compel them to assume obligations aside from their ordinary functions, 335-342.
- charter of, not a contract, 268, 390.
- powers of, 270-273.
 - in general, 270-273.
 - express, what are, 270.
 - implied, what are, 270.
- effect of changes in, 266-269.
- charter to be strictly construed, 271.
- contracts ultra vires, void, 272-275.
 - negotiable paper issued by, when valid, 312-325.
- may exist by prescription, 276-278.
 - powers thereof, 277.
- by implication, existence of, 277.
- authority of, how exercised, 274.
- what by-laws they may make, 270, 278-292.
 - must not be opposed to constitution of State or nation, 278.
 - nor to charter, 278, 279.
 - nor to general laws of the State, 278, 279, 291.
 - nor to general principles of the common law, 284.
 - nor be unreasonable, 280-292.
 - illustrative cases on question of reasonableness of, 281, n. 1, 282, n. 2, 284, n. 4.
 - nor uncertain, 284.
- cannot delegate their powers, 293-299.
- cannot adopt irrevocable legislation, 295.
 - nor preclude themselves from exercise of police power, 295-299.
 - nor grant away use of streets, 295-299.
 - but may change grade of, 294.
- incidental injuries in exercise of powers give no right of action, 295-303.
 - nor injuries from failure to exercise powers, 303-303.
- liability of, for negligence of officers, 304, 305 and notes, 355-384.
 - for false imprisonment, 309, n. (a).
- may indemnify officers, 306-309.
 - but not for refusal to perform duty, 309, n. 1, 311.
- may contract to pay for liquors destroyed, 303, n. 2.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — continued.

- may hold property in trust for schools, 261, n. 1.
- or for other charities, 266, n. 2.
- construction of powers of, 309-342.
 - to be with reference to the purposes of their creation, 309-311.
 - will not include furnishing entertainments, 310.
 - or loaning credit, 311.
 - or offering rewards, or paying for lobby services, 310, n. 1.
 - or expenditures for private purposes, 311.
 - must be confined to territorial limits, 312 and notes.
 - constitutional prohibitions of private aid taxes, 167, n. 5, 318, n. 1.
- power of, to raise bounty moneys, &c., 326-333, 341, 342.
 - to aid internal improvements, 312-323 and notes.
 - in respect to nuisances, 332-336 and notes.
- legislative control of corporate property, 342-347, 390-392, 411.
- may be made liable for destruction of property in riots, 345, n. 1.
- towns, counties, &c., how differing from chartered corporations, 347-356.
- judgments against, may be collected of corporators, 349-354.
 - but only in New England, 354.
 - not liable for failure of officers to perform duty, 354, 355.
- chartered corporations undertake for performance of corporate duty, 355-357.
 - liability to persons injured by failure, 355-362.
- corporate organization how questioned, 363, 364.
- imperfect acts of, may be validated, 534, 535, 541, 542.
- must tax all property within their limits alike, 718-726.
- cannot tax property not lying within their limits, 718, 719.
- bounds of, cannot be arbitrarily enlarged in order to bring in property for taxation, 720, 721.
- obtaining water for, under right of eminent domain, 769.
- taking of lands for parks for, 770, n.

MUTE.

- wifely standing, when arraigned, 439, n. 2.

N.NATION,

- definition of, 3.
- distinguished from State, 3.

See UNITED STATES.

NATURALIZATION,

- power of Congress over, 12.

NAVIGABLE WATERS,

- made free by ordinance of 1787, 54, n. 2.
- right of States to improve and charge toll, 54, n. 2, 866, n.
- what are, and what not, 861, 862.
- are for use of all equally, 861.
- general control of, is in the States, 863.
- congressional regulations, when made, control, 863, 864.
- States cannot grant monopolies of, 864.
- States may authorize bridges over, 865.
- when bridges become nuisances, 866.

NAVIGABLE WATERS — continued.

- States may establish ferries across, 867.
- States may authorize dams of, 867.
- regulation of speed of vessels upon, 867.
- rights of fishery in, 752 n.
- frontage upon, is property, 787, 788.

See WATERCOURSES.

NAVIGATION,

- right of, pertains to the eminent domain, 753.

See NAVIGABLE WATERS.

NEBRASKA,

- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- title of acts to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
- "damaging" property in the course of public improvements, 810, n. 3.
- disqualifications for suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

NECESSITY,

- Constitution of United States compelled by, 9, n.
- is the basis of the right of eminent domain, 753.
- extent of property to be taken is limited by, 777-781.
- destruction of buildings to prevent spread of fire, 878.

NEGLIGENCE,

- liability of municipal corporations for, 304, 305 and notes, 355-362.
- liability of quasi municipal corporations for, 354.
- as a foundation for rights under betterment laws, 552.
- carriers of persons may be made responsible for deaths by, 843, 844.
- in the construction of public works, may give right of action, 826.

NEGOTIABLE PAPER,

- when municipal corporations liable upon, 312-325.

NEVADA,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- special legislative sessions, 222, n. 2.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 590, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 810, n. 3.
- disqualifications for suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

NEW ENGLAND CONFEDERACY,

- of 1644, why formed, 7.

NEW HAMPSHIRE,

- judges of, to give opinions to the governor and to the legislature, 72, n. 1.
- causes of divorce to be heard by the courts, 153, n. 2.

NEW HAMPSHIRE — continued.

- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- approval of laws, 219, n. 1.
- municipalities restrained from aiding public improvements, 318, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- constitutional provision respecting retrospective laws, 530, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious liberty in, 664, n. 1.
- disqualifications from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

NEW JERSEY,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- title of act to embrace the object, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- disqualifications from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

NEW STATES,

- admission of, 58-69.

NEW TRIALS.

- not to be granted by the legislature, 137, 560.
- not granted on application of State in criminal cases, 463.
- may be had after verdict set aside on application of defendant, 469, 470.
- but not on counts on which he was acquitted, 470.

See JEOPARDY.

NEW YORK,

- amendment of constitution of, 60, n. 1.
- divorces to be granted only in judicial proceedings, 153, n. 2.
- title of act to express the subject, 202, n. 3.
- approval of laws by governor of, 220.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious liberty in, 664, n. 1.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 676, n.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.

NEWSPAPERS,

- publication of privileged communications in, 636.
- whether they have any privilege in publishing news, 640, 641.
- privilege not admitted by the courts, 641-643.
- when publisher not liable to vindictive damages, 647-650.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

NOBILITY,

- titles of, forbidden to be granted, 44, 45.

NOLLE PROSEQUI,

- when equivalent to acquittal, 468.

NON COMPOTES MENTIS,

- legislative authority for sale of lands of, 140-147.
- excluded from suffrage, 902.

NON-RESIDENT PARTIES,

- subjecting to jurisdiction of court by publication, 582-585.
- restricted effect of the notice, 583, 584.
- discrimination in taxation of, 693.

NORTH CAROLINA,

- ratification of constitution by, 9.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- religious tests for office in, 662, n. 3.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 876, n.
- disqualifications from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

NOTICE,

- to render municipalities liable for defects, 337, 338.
- necessity for in legal proceedings, 579-585.
- right to, in tax cases, 711, n. 3.
- bringing in non-resident parties by publication of, 581-585.
- of elections, when essential to their validity, 908, 909.

NUISANCE,

- liability of municipal corporations for, 295, 299-306, 362, 363.
- when bridges over navigable waters are, 865, 866.
- municipal control of, 292, n. 1.
- abatement at expense of land-owner, 882, n. 2.
- power of municipal corporations over, 882, n. 2.
- when dams are, and may be abated, 880.
- obstructions in navigable streams are, 865-867.
- forbidding use of cemeteries which have become, 880, 881.
- general power in the States to abate, 882.
- created by public, not to be abated at expense of individual, 883, n. 1.

O.OATH,

- of attorneys, 474, n. 3.
- test, may be punishment, 372, n.
- of voter, when conclusive of his right, 927, 928.
- blasphemy and profanity punishable by law, 670-673.

OBJECT OF STATUTE,

- in some States required to be stated in title, 202-214.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS,

- States not to pass laws violating, 36, 175, 176, 333, 384.
- what is a contract, 383-401.
 - agreements by States are, 384-386.
 - executed contracts, 384.
 - appointments to office are not, 388.
 - municipal charters are not, 255, 388.
 - franchises granted to municipal corporations are not, 390.
 - but grants of property in trust are, 390, 391.
 - and grants of property for municipal use, 342-347.
 - private charters of incorporation are, 391, 392.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS — continued.

- whether an exemption from taxation is, 176, 395, 396.
 - it is if granted for a consideration, 395.
- whether right of eminent domain can be relinquished, 397-399.
 - or the right to exercise the police power, 399.
- change in general laws of the State does not violate, 402, 403.
 - nor divorce laws, 403.
 - such laws not to devest rights in property, 403.
- what obligation consists in, 405.
- remedies for enforcement of contracts may be changed, 405-417.
 - imprisonment for debt may be abolished, 407.
 - exemptions from execution may be increased, 407-409.
 - rules of evidence may be changed, 409, 410.
 - but all remedy cannot be taken away, 410, 411.
 - a judgment for a tort is not a contract, 411.
 - repeal of statute giving remedy cannot destroy contracts, 411.
- appraisement laws cannot be made applicable to existing debts, 412.
- right to possession under mortgages cannot be taken away, 412.
 - nor time to redeem lands shortened or extended, 412, 413.
- laws staying execution, how far invalid, 413, 414.
- when power of municipal taxation may not be taken away, 414, 415.
- stockholders liable for corporate debts may not be released by law, 415.
- whether a party may release, by contract, a privilege granted for reasons of State policy, 251, 252, 415.
- when a contract requires new action to its enforcement, changes may be made as to such action, 415.
 - new promise to revive a debt may be required to be in writing, 415, 416.
- laws validating invalid contracts do not violate Constitution, 416.
 - nor laws extending corporate franchises, 416.
- State insolvent laws, how far valid, 416, 417.
- effect of police laws, 832-833.

OBSCENITY,

- in legal proceedings, not to be published, 638.
- sale of obscene books and papers may be prohibited, 884, 885.

OBSCURITIES.

- aids in interpretation of, 100-107.

See CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS.

OBSTRUCTIONS TO NAVIGATION.

- when bridges and dams to be considered such, 865-867.
- when channels cut by private parties are private property, 862.

OCEAN. See HIGH SEAS.OFFENCE,

- same act may be, against both State and municipality, 279 and n. 4.

OFFICE,

- certain persons disqualified for federal, 17.
- constitutional provisions not changeable by law, 95, n. 2.
- temporary appointments to, 99, n. 2.
- adjudging the forfeiture of, 133, n. 1.
- appointments to, do not constitute contracts, 338.
 - whether they pertain to the executive, 158, n. 1.
- right to not to be contested on habeas corpus, 495, n. 3.
- eligibility to, 804, n.

OFFICER.

- President has general authority to appoint, 21, 22.
- duties of, when cannot be taken away, 99, n. 3, 388, n. 2.
- protection of dwelling-house against, 50, 425.
- general warrants to, are illegal, 426-429.
- may break open house to serve criminal warrant, 429.
- service of search-warrant by. See SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.
- privilege of criticism of, 616, 646, n.
- removal of, 158, n. 2, 388, n. 2.
- constitutional qualifications cannot be added to, by the legislature, 99.
- duty of, when doubtful of constitutional construction, 109.
- of the legislature, election of, 189.
- de jure*, who is, 897.
- de facto*, who is, 897, 898.
- municipal, may be indemnified by corporation, 306-309.
- but not for refusal to perform duty, 309, n. 1, 311.
- election of. See ELECTIONS.
- appointments to, not necessarily an executive function, 158, n. 2.

OHIO.

- general laws to be uniform, 97, n. 3.
- legislature not to grant divorces nor exercise judicial power, 153, n. 2.
- legislature forbidden to exercise the appointing power, 158, n. 2.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- constitutional provision respecting retrospective laws, 580, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596 n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634 n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n. 1.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.

OMNIPOTENCE OF PARLIAMENT.

- meaning of the term, 6, 124, 125, 244, 245.

OPINION.

- of courts, in some States, executive or legislature may require, 72.
- proscription for, is unconstitutional, 556.
- on religious subjects to be free, 659-661.
- religious tests forbidden in some States, 662 and notes.
- of witnesses on religious subjects not to constitute disqualification in some States, 677, n. 1.
- judicial force of, as precedents, 79-88.

ORDINANCE OF 1787,

- how far still in force, 54, n. 2.
- admission of States to the Union under, 56 and n. 1.

ORDINANCES, MUNICIPAL. See BY-LAWS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

OREGON,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160, n. 2.
- revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.

OREGON — continued.

- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 544, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, excused, 677, n. 1.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 516, n. 3.
- disqualifications from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

ORIGINAL PACKAGES.

- State cannot prohibit sales in, when, 545-551.

OVERRULING DECISIONS.

- when should take place, 86.

P.

PAPERS,

- private, exempt from seizure, 425-434.
- protected the same as property, 509, n. 2.

PARDON,

- power of, to be exercised by governor, 159, n., 160, n. 3.
- constitutional provisions as to rules for, 160, n., 161.
- power to, does not include reprieves, 160, n. 2.

PARENT,

- right of, to custody of child, 485.
- respective rights of father and mother, 496, 497.

PARLIAMENT,

- power of, to change the constitution, 6, 124, 125, 244.
- acts of, adopted in America, 51, 52.
- repeal of acts of, 54, n.
- comparison of powers with those of State legislatures, 124-126, 244, 245.
- may exercise judicial authority, 125.
- bills of attainder by, 368.
- publication of proceedings of, not formerly allowed, 600.
- publication of speeches by members, 650-652.
- publication of reports and papers of, 650-652.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW,

- influence of, in construction of constitutions, 187.
- legislative power in regard to, 189, 190.
- power to preserve order, &c., under, 190.
- privilege by, of members from arrest, 192.

PARTIAL LEGISLATION,

- legislature to govern by equal laws, 554-575.
- special laws for particular individuals not permissible, 556, 567.
- suspensions of laws not allowed in special cases, 558.
- regulations for special localities or classes, 560-562.
- equality of rights, &c., the aim of the law, 562.
- strict construction of special privileges and grants, 564-567.
 - and of discriminations against individuals and classes, 563-565.
 - and of statutes in derogation of the common law, 95 and notes.
- citizens of other States not to be discriminated against, 567-575.

PARTICULAR INTENT,

- control of, by general intent, 592, n.

PARTIES,

- defendants in criminal suits, evidence of, 447-449.
- not compellable to testify against themselves, 442-449.
- how subjected to jurisdiction of courts, 579-585.
- estopped by judgment, 81.

PASSENGERS,

- power of States to require report of, from carriers, and to levy tax upon, 858.
- making carriers responsible for safety of, 843, 844.
- requirement of equal privileges to, 840, n. 4.

PASTURAGE,

- right of, in public highway, is property, 788.

PATENTS,

- power of granting, is in the United States, 12.
- States may regulate use of patented articles, 12, n.

PAUPERS,

- exclusion of, from suffrage, 902.

PAVING STREETS,

- assessments for, not within constitutional provisions respecting taxation, 713-715.
- special taxing districts for, 722-732.
- assessments may be made in proportion to benefits, 728.
- or in proportion to street front, 729.
- but each separate lot cannot be made a separate district, 732

PEACE AND WAR,

- power over, of the revolutionary Congress, 8.
- of Congress under the Constitution, 13.

PENALTIES,

- for the same act under Federal and State laws, 45, 46.
- under State and municipal laws, 279 and n. 4.
- given by statute may be taken away, 517, n. 3, 547.
- for violation of police regulations, 890.

PENNSYLVANIA,

- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- local option statutes, validity of, 173.
- revenue bills must originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- time when acts take effect, 225.
- right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, 463, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n. .
- religious tests for office in, 682, n. 3.
- injuring of property in course of public improvements, 810-812.
- private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
- experiment of, with single legislative body, 187, n. 1.

PEOPLE,

- reservation of powers to, by national Constitution, 46.
- sovereignty vested in, 56-58, 892.
- formation and change of constitutions by, 58-63.
- who are the, 57, 58, 899-902.
- exercise of sovereign powers by, 899-909.

PERSON,

right of inspection of the, 424, n. (a).

PERSONAL LIBERTY,

gradually acquired by servile classes in Great Britain, 419-423.

constitutional prohibition of slavery in America, 423, 424.

of bills of attainder, 36, 67, 368.

See BILLS OF ATTAINDER.

of ex post facto laws, 36, 67, 374.

See EX POST FACTO LAWS.

of unreasonable searches and seizures, 424-434.

See SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

of quartering soldiers in private houses, 435, 436.

protection of, in one's dwelling-house, 50, 425, 426, 435.

criminal accusations, how made, 436.

bail for accused parties, 437, 438.

unreasonable, not to be demanded, 439.

trial for crimes, 440-482.

See CRIMES.

meaning of the term, 483, 489, 490, 560, 561.

legal restraints upon, 484-487.

right to, in England, did not depend on any statute, 487.

reason why it was not well protected, 487-489.

evasions of the writ of habeas corpus, 487-489.

the habeas corpus act, 51, 489-491.

did not extend to American Colonies, 491.

general adoption of, 491.

writ of habeas corpus, 491.

when national courts may issue, 491-493.

State courts to issue generally, 493, 494.

return to, when prisoner held under national authority, 493.

not to be employed as a writ of error, 495.

application for, need not be made in person, 494, n. 2.

what the officer to inquire into, 495, 496.

to enforce rights of relatives, 496, 497.

PETIT JURY,

trial by. See JURY TRIAL.

PETITION,

right of, 497, 498, 618.

PETITION OF RIGHT,

was a declaratory statute, 50, 51, 366.

quartering soldiers upon subjects forbidden by, 435.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, revenue clauses of the Constitution do not apply to, 12, n. (a).

PICTURES,

libels by, injury presumed from, 807, 808.

indecent sale of, may be prohibited, 884.

PILOTAGE,

State regulations of, 687, 688, 553, 859.

PIRACY,

Congress may define and punish, 13.

PLURALITY,

sufficient in elections, 892, 894, 931.

POISONS,

regulation of sales of, 881, 882.

POLICE POWER, of States not taken away by Federal Constitution nor amendments thereto, 11, n.

exercise of, by municipal corporations, 283-292.

pervading nature of, 832-851.

definition of, 829-831.

the maxim on which it rests, 831.

States no power to relinquish it, 399, 400, 840.

power of States to make regulations which affect contracts, 833-851.

how charters of private incorporation may be affected by, 835-851.

charters cannot be amended on pretence of, 837, 838.

nor rights granted by charters taken away, 839.

railroad corporations may be required to fence track, 840, 841.

and made liable for beasts killed on track, 840, 841.

grade of railways and crossings may be prescribed, 842.

requirement that bell shall be rung or whistle sounded at crossings, &c., 843.

whether carriers of persons may not be made insurers, 843.

action may be given for death caused by negligence, 843, 844.

authority of railway commissioners, 843, 844, n.

sale of intoxicating drinks may be regulated by States, 845-851 and notes.

regulation of, to what extent interferes with power of Congress over commerce, 846-848.

sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage may be prohibited by States, 846-848.

payment of United States license fee does not give rights as against State law, 851.

quarantine and health regulations by States, 851-854.

harbor regulations by the States, 855.

line of distinction between police regulations and interference with commerce, 856.

police regulations may be established by Congress, 856, 857.

State requirement of license fee from importers illegal, 687, 688, 857.

State regulations to prevent immigrants becoming a public charge, 858.

State regulations of pilots and pilotage, 858.

Sunday laws as regulations of police, 859.

regulation by States of use of highways, 860, 861.

owners of urban property may be required to build sidewalks, 860, 861.

construction of levees on river fronts, 868.

what are navigable waters, 861.

control of navigable waters by States, 861.

restrictions on this control, 863-868.

monopolies not to be granted, 862, 863.

States may improve and charge tolls, 865.

may authorize bridges, 865, 866.

when these bridges to be abated, 866.

may establish ferries, 867.

may authorize dams, 867.

when the dams may be abated, 867, 868.

may regulate speed of vessels, 867, 868.

regulations of civil rights and privileges, 869.

POLICE POWER — continued.

- regulations of business charges, 870-876 and notes.
- other cases of police regulations, 877-891.
- destruction of property to prevent spread of fire, 877.
 - for other reasons, notes to, 878, 879, 881.
- establishment of fire limits, wharf lines, &c., 878, 879.
- regulations respecting gunpowder, poisons, dogs, unwholesome provisions, &c., 880-883.
- regulations for protection of public morals, 884-886.
- market regulations, 886-888.
- regulation of employments, 889, 884-890.
- limiting hours of labor, 891.
- prohibited act or omission may be made criminal, 890.

POLICE REGULATIONS,

- power to establish, may be conferred on municipal corporations, 172, n.
- See POLICE POWER.

POLICE REPORTS,

- publication of, 636-638.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT,

- construction of constitution by, 72-76, 104, n. 3.

POLITICAL OPINIONS,

- citizens not to be proscribed for, 556.

POLITICAL POWER,

- distinguished from judicial, 143, n. 1.

POLITICAL RIGHTS,

- equality of, 556-557, 556-558.

POPULAR RIGHTS,

- not measured by constitutions, 69, n. 1.

POPULAR VOTE,

- submission of laws to, not generally allowable, 163-165.
- See ELECTIONS.

POPULAR WILL,

- expression of, as to amendment of constitutions, 59, 60.
- must be obtained under forms of law, 893, 894.
- See ELECTIONS.

PORTO RICO,

- revenue clauses of the Constitution do not apply to, 12, n. (a).

POSSESSION,

- importance of, in limitation laws, 522, 523.

POST-OFFICES,

- and post-roads, Congress may establish, 12.
- inviolability of correspondence through, 432, n. 1.

POWDER,

- police regulations concerning storage of, 881.

POWERS,

- of government, apportionment of, by State constitutions, 64, 65.
- division of, in American constitutional law, 4.
- of Congress, 11-18.
- of State legislatures, 124-132.

See JUDICIAL POWER; LEGISLATIVE POWERS.

PRACTICAL CONSTRUCTION,

- weight to be given to, 103-106.
- not to override the Constitution, 106.

PRECEDENTS.

- importance of, 83-85.
- judicial, how far binding, 84-88.
- law made by, 80, n.
- only authoritative within country where decided, 85.
- when to be overruled, 87.
- of executive department, force of, 102.

PRECIOUS METALS,

- in the soil belong to sovereign authority, 753.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS,

- of persons accused of crimes, 443, 444.
- publication of proceedings on, not privileged, 638.

PREROGATIVE REMEDIAL LEGISLATION,

- what is, 140-147.

PRESCRIPTIVE CORPORATIONS,

- powers of, 276, 277.

PRESENCE,

- of prisoner at his trial, 450-452.

PRESIDENT,

- powers and duties of, 19-22.

PRESS. LIBERTY OF. See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

PRESUMPTION,

- of constitutionality of statutes, 195, 236, 237, 255.
- of existence of corporation, 276, 277.
- of innocence of accused party, 437.
- of correctness of legislative motives, 260, 300, 305, 306

PRICES,

- regulation of, 870.

PRINCIPAL AND BAIL,

- custody of principal by bail, 486.

PRINTED BALLOTS,

- answer the requirement of written, 910, n. 3.

PRIVACY,

- right of, 424, n. (a), 509, n. 3.

PRIVATE BUSINESS,

- taxation to aid, 312-325.

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS,

- distinguished from public, 387-394.
- charters of, are contracts, 391-394.

PRIVATE PAPERS. See PAPERS.

PRIVATE PROPERTY,

- right to, is before constitutions, 68, 69, 244, 507.
- of municipal corporations, how far under legislative control, 342-347.
- when affected with a public interest, 870-877.
- owners cannot be compelled to improve, 550, 768, 769
- appropriating, under right of eminent domain, 753, 754.
- trial of right to, 526-528.
- protection of, against municipal action, 291, 292.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; VESTED RIGHTS.

PRIVATE RIGHTS,

- not to be construed away by the legislature, 73, n. 1.
- under what circumstances may be disturbed, 507, 508.

PRIVATE ROADS, cannot be laid out under right of eminent domain, 764, 765.

PRIVATE STATUTES,

not evidence against third parties, 139.

to authorize sales by guardians, &c., when constitutional, 140-147, 554.

PRIVIES,

estoppel of, by judgment, 81, 82.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS,

meaning of the term, 609.

when made in answer to inquiries, 610, 611.

between principal and agent, 611.

where parties sustain confidential relations, 611.

discussing measures or principles of government, 612-615.

criticising officers or candidates, 616-628.

made in the course of judicial proceedings, 629-631.

made by counsel, 631-633.

by legislator to constituents, 634-636.

by client to counsel, 477, 478.

PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES,

of citizens of the several States, 36-41, 693.

what are, 37, n. 1, 569-575 and notes.

citizens not to be deprived of, 14, 15, 33, 417, 418.

protection of, rests with the States, 418, n. 3, 869.

of legislators, 192.

special, strict construction of, 562-575.

regulation of, 869.

PROCEEDINGS, of constitutional convention may be looked to on questions of construction, 101, 102.

in rem and in personam, 580-585.

of legislative bodies, publication of, 600-602, 636-640, 650-652.

PROFANITY,

in judicial proceedings, publication of, 638.

punishment of, 671-674.

PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATIONS, not to be disclosed, 477, 478.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES,

to influence legislation cannot be contracted for, 193.

law requiring, without compensation, to be strictly construed, 563.

See COUNSEL.

PROHIBITIONS ON THE STATES, in the federal Constitution, 35-41.

in forming or amending constitutions, 62.

PROHIBITORY LIQUOR LAWS, constitutionality of, 845-851.

PROPERTY,

qualification for suffrage, 901, 902.

protection of, by fourteenth amendment, 15.

by constitutional provisions may be waived, 250, 251.

of municipal corporations, control of, 342-347.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; PRIVATE PROPERTY; VESTED RIGHTS.

PROROGATION, of the legislature by governor, 188.

- PROSCRIPTION, of persons for their opinions, 556, 659-668.
- PROSECUTING OFFICERS, duty of, to treat accused parties with judicial fairness, 440, n. 2, 480-482.
- PROTECTION, the equivalent for taxation, 812.
of municipal corporations from liability for injuries incident to exercise of powers, 300.
- PROVISIONS, regulations to prevent sale of unwholesome, 881, 882, 886, 887.
- PUBLIC ACTS, records and judicial proceedings, full faith and credit to be given to, 38, 39.
- PUBLIC CORPORATIONS. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
- PUBLIC DEBT,
inviolability of, 17.
- PUBLIC GOOD,
laws should have reference to, 184.
- PUBLIC GRANTS,
strict construction of, 565.
See CHARTER; FRANCHISE.
- PUBLIC GROUNDS, lands dedicated for, not to be put to other uses, 344, 345, 806, n.
- PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS, power of municipalities to aid construction of, outside territorial limits, 312-325.
- PUBLIC INTEREST, when properly affected with, 670-677.
- PUBLIC MORALS,
regulations for protection of, 884, 885.
See RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.
- PUBLIC OFFICERS. See OFFICER.
- PUBLIC OPINION, not to affect construction of constitution, 88, 89.
expression of, by elections, 893-895.
- PUBLIC PURPOSES,
what are, 696, n. (a).
taxation must be for, 184, 243, 678, 696-705.
appropriation of property for, 752, 753.
See EMINENT DOMAIN.
- PUBLIC STATUTES,
what are, 554-556.
- PUBLIC TRIAL,
accused parties entitled to, 441.
not essential that everybody be allowed to attend, 441.
- PUBLIC USE,
of property, what constitutes, 766, 768.
See EMINENT DOMAIN.
- PUBLICATION,
of statutes, 223-226.
of debates in Parliament formerly not suffered, 600.
of books, &c., censorship of, 601.
of debates in American legislative bodies, 601, 602.

PUBLICATION — continued.

of legislative speeches, 650-652.

of judicial proceedings, 636-640.

of notice to non-resident parties, 581-585.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWS, not privileged in law, 640-650.

PUNISHMENTS,

for same act under Federal and State laws, 45, 46.

under State and municipal laws, 279 and n. 4.

what changes in, the legislature may make applicable to previous offences, 372-383.

of crimes by servitude, 423.

cruel and unusual, prohibited, 471-474.

must not exceed measure the law has prescribed, 473, 474.

See BILLS OF ATTAINDER; CRIMES; EX POST FACTO LAWS.

Q.

QUALIFICATIONS, of officer or voter under constitution cannot be added to by legislature, 99.

of members of legislature to be determined by the two houses, 189, 190.

of voter, inquiring into, on contested election, 942-944.

QUARANTINE, regulations by the States, 851-853.

QUARTERING SOLDIERS,

in private houses in time of peace forbidden, 435, 436.

QUASI CORPORATIONS, 347-355.

individual liability of members of in New England, 349, 354.

not liable to private action for negligence of officers, 354.

QUORUM,

majority of, generally sufficient for passage of laws, 201.

of courts, must act by majorities, 139.

full court generally required on constitutional questions, 230.

R.

RACE,

color or previous condition of servitude, discrimination on account of, forbidden, 30.

not to be a disqualification for suffrage, 17, 18, 901.

marriages between persons of different, 559, n. 1.

RAILROADS, authorizing towns, &c., to subscribe to, is not delegating legislative power, 167, 168.

whether such subscriptions may be made, 312-325.

appropriations of lands for, 768 et seq.

and of materials for constructing, 756.

and of lands for depot buildings, &c., 780.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

appropriation of highways for, 783-803.

RAILROADS — continued.

- must be by legislative permission, 789.
- whether adjoining owner entitled to compensation, 789-803.
- whether one may condemn property of another, 757, n. 3, 804-806 and note.
- police regulations in respect to, 832-844.
 - requiring corporations to fence track and pay for beasts killed, 840-841.
 - regulation of grade and crossings, 842.
 - provisions regarding alarms, 843.
 - regulation of charges, 871-876 and notes.
 - responsibility for persons injured or killed, 843,
- bridges for, over navigable waters, 865.
- commissioners of, authority of, 843, 844, n.

READING OF BILLS,

- constitutional provisions for, 116, 117, 200 and n.

REAL ESTATE,

- rights of foreign corporations as to, 180, 181.
- not to be taxed out of taxing district, 719.
- within taxing district to be taxed uniformly, 718-731
- taking for public use. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

REASONABLENESS,

- of municipal by-laws, 280-292 and notes.
- of limitation laws, 522, 524.
- of police regulations. See POLICE POWER.

REBELLION,

- employment of militia to suppress, 12.

RECITALS,

- in statutes, not binding upon third parties, 139.
- when they may be evidence, 139.

RECONSTRUCTION OF STATES,

- control over, 63, n.

RECORDS,

- public, of the States, full faith and credit to be given to, 38-41.
- judicial, not generally to be contradicted, 40, n., 585.

See JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

REDEMPTION,

- right of, cannot be shortened or extended by legislature, 412, 413.

REFUSAL TO PLEAD,

- in criminal cases, consequence of, 439, n. 2.

REGISTRATION,

- of voters, may be required, 905-907.

REGULATION,

- of commerce by Congress, 12, 685-691, 845-859, 873, n. 1.
- by legislature, of exercise of executive power, 160, 161, n. 2.
- of navigable waters by Congress, 894.
- police, by the States. See POLICE POWER.
- of the right of suffrage, 899-905.
- right of, does it imply a right to prohibit, 284-292 and notes.

REHEARING. See NEW TRIALS.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY,

- care taken, by State constitutions to protect, 659-668.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY — continued.

- no law for the establishment of religion can be passed, 663, 664.
- compulsory taxation for support of religion forbidden, 664, 665 and n. 2.
- compulsory attendance on religious worship forbidden, 664.
- freedom of worship protected, 665.
- freedom of expression of religious belief guaranteed, 665.
- distinguished from religious toleration, 659, 662 and n. 1.
- does not preclude recognition of superintending Providence by public authorities, 668, 669.
- nor appointment of chaplains, thanksgiving and fast days, 669.
- nor recognition that the prevailing religion of the State is Christian, 669, 670.
- the maxim that Christianity is part of the law of the land, 670-673.
- punishment of blasphemy does not invade, 671-673.
- or of other forms of profanity, 674.
- Sunday laws, how justified, 674, 675, 859.
- respect for religious scruples, 676.
- religious belief, as affecting the competency or credibility of witnesses, 676, 677 and notes.

REMEDIAL STATUTES,

- liberal construction of, 95, n.
- parties obtaining, are bound by, 139.
- may disturb private rights, 508.

REMEDY.

- power of legislature over, in criminal cases, 374-383.
- in civil cases, 137-139, 405-417, 515-520.
- legislature cannot take away all remedy, 410, 411.
- a judgment for a tort is not a contract within this rule, 411
- may give new remedies, and defences, 406-408.
- may limit resort to remedies, 515-520.
- for collection of taxes, 748-751.
- for compensation for property taken by public, 812-828.

REMOVAL.

- of causes from State to national courts, 25-31.
- of officers, 158, n. 2.

REPEAL.

- of old English statutes, 54, n.
- all laws subject to, 174-176.
- of statutes at same session of passage, 217.
- by implication, not favored, 216, 217.
- of corporate charters, 368, 394.
- of a law, terminates right to give judgment under it, 544.
- of laws conflicting with unconstitutional law, 256, 257.
- question of, not to be referred to the people, 171.

REPORTS.

- of public meetings, 621.
- of legislative proceedings, publication of, 600-602, 650-652.
- of judicial proceedings, publication of, 636-640.

See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.

REPRESENTATION,

- constructive, 94, n.

See LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT; LEGISLATORS.

REPRIEVE, power of, not included in power to pardon, 160, n. 2.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT, guarantee of, by United States to the States, 43, 44, 62.

maxims of, do not constitute limitations on legislative power, 237-239.

REPUBLICATION, of amended statutes under certain State constitutions, 214-217.

RES ADJUDICATA,

definition, 78, 80.

parties and privies estopped by judgments, 81.

force of judgment does not depend on reasons assigned, 82.

strangers not bound by, 81, 82.

parties and privies not bound in new controversy, 82.

RESERVED POWERS,

under the United States Constitution in the States and people, 11, 46.

RESIDENCE,

gives jurisdiction in divorce suits, 578.

but not unless bona fide, 578.

as affecting right to impose personal taxes, 719.

of voters, what constitutes, 903, 904.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE,

by-laws of municipal corporations when void because in, 284-287.

RESTRICTIONS,

on trade by municipal by-laws, 281-292.

in United States Constitution on powers of the States, 35-41.

on power of people to amend constitutions, 62.

on powers of legislature. See LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES.

RESUMPTION OF GRANTS,

by the States is forbidden, 385.

RETROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION,

when admissible generally, 134-139, 528-546.

sometimes construed as having prospective operation only, 255.

cannot revive demands which are barred, 528.

nor create a demand where none ever equitably existed, 528-546.

may take away defences based on informalities, 528, 529.

may cure irregularities in legal proceedings, 529-546.

or in corporate action, &c., 531, 534, 535.

what defects can and what cannot be cured by, 531, 539-546.

may validate imperfect marriages, 533-535.

or other imperfect contracts, 535-546.

or invalid deeds, 537-540.

may take away defence of usury, 536, 537.

bona fide purchasers not to be affected by, 540.

legalizing municipal action, 330, 331, 542.

pendency of suit does not affect power to pass, 543, 544.

cannot make good what the legislature could not originally have permitted, 544, 545.

cannot cure defects of jurisdiction, 546.

forbidden in some States, 529, 530.

statutes generally construed to operate prospectively, 97, 529.

prospective construction of constitution, 97.

REVENUE, in some States, bills for, to originate with lower house, 188, 189.

cannot be raised under right of eminent domain, 758, 759.

See TAXATION.

REVISION,

of State constitutions, 62.
of statutes. See STATUTES.

REVOLUTION, AMERICAN, powers of the Crown and Parliament over Colonies before, 7, 8.

Congress of the, its powers, 7-9. division of powers of government at time of, 8, n.

REWARDS,

by towns for apprehension of offenders, 310, n. 1.

RHODE ISLAND,

ratification of Constitution by, 9.
charter government of, 55.
judges of, to give opinions to governor and legislature, 72, n. 1.
privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 2.
impeachment of judges, 228, n. 1.
protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
liberty of speech and of the press in, 626, n.
privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
religious tests for office forbidden in, 682, n. 3.
periodical valuations for taxation, 712.
exclusions from suffrage in, 802, n. 1.

RIGHTS,

of citizen not to be denied or abridged on account of race, color, or previous servitude, 17, 18.
distinguished from the remedy, 402-417.
express constitutional prohibitions not necessary where they are declared in Constitution, 245.
vested. See VESTED RIGHTS.
in action. See ACTION.

RIOTS,

liability of municipality for property destroyed in, 300, n. 1, 345, n. 1.

ROAD DISTRICTS, 348.ROADS,

appropriation of private property for, 756, 767.
appropriation of materials for constructing, 756.
appropriation of, for railroads, &c., 788-798.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

regulation of use of, by States, 860.
action for exclusion from, 787, n. 2.

RULES AND REGULATIONS. See BY-LAWS.RULES OF CONSTRUCTION. See CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS.RULES OF EVIDENCE, power of the legislature to change, 405, 406, 524-528.

See EVIDENCE.

RULES OF LEGISLATIVE ORDER, are under the control of the legislature, 187-193.

See LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES.

S.

SABBATH,

laws for observance of, 674, 675, 859.

SALE OF LANDS.

of incompetent persons, &c., special legislative authority for, 140-147.

propriety of judicial action in such cases, 140.

SCHOOL AUTHORITIES,

control by, of school children, 261, n. 1.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS, 318, 349.

judgments against, in New England collectible against private owners, 349-354.

SCHOOL-HOUSES,

exercise of right of eminent domain for sites for, 760.

SCHOOLS,

general power of States to provide, 261-263 and notes.

control of, 261, n. 1.

impartial rights in, 261, n. 1, 556, n.

Bible in, 655, n. 2.

SCIENCE,

Congress may promote, 12.

SCOTLAND,

servitude in, 422, 423.

SEAMEN,

impressment of, 424.

SEARCH-WARRANTS. See SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES,

the maxim that every man's house is his castle, 50, 425, 426.

unreasonable searches and seizures prohibited, 425, 426.

origin of the prohibition, 425, 426 and n. 1.

history of general warrants in England, 426, n. 1.

general warrants in America, 427, 428.

search-warrants, their arbitrary character, 429.

only granted after a showing of cause on oath, 429.

must specify place to be searched and the object, 429, 430.

particularity of description required, 430.

should be served in daytime, 430.

must be directed to proper officer, 430.

must command accused party and property, &c., to be brought before officer, 430, 431.

cannot give discretionary power to ministerial officer, 431.

not allowed to obtain evidence of intended crime, 431.

compulsory inspection of person or property, 424, n. (a).

cases in which they are permissible, 431, 432.

not to seize correspondence, 432, n. 2.

for libels, illegal at common law, 433, n. 1.

officer following command of, is protected, 434.

and may break open doors, 434.

SEAS. See HIGH SEAS.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT,

Congress has exclusive control over, 13.

- SECESSION,
not admitted by the Constitution, 11.
- SECRECY,
inviolability of, in correspondence, 432-434.
elector's privilege of, 910-913.
privilege of, as between counsel and client, 477, 478.
- SEDITION LAW,
passage of, and prosecutions under, 613.
- SELF-ACCUSATION,
not to be compelled, 442.
- SELF-DEFENCE, right to, 434, n. 4.
- SELF-EXECUTING PROVISIONS,
what are and are not, 119-123.
- SELF-GOVERNMENT. See ELECTIONS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
- SENTENCE,
indefinite suspension of, 160, n. 2.
indeterminate, 158, n.
- SERMONS, privilege of criticism of, 625, 627, n.
- SERVANT, control of, by master, 486.
- SERVICES,
laws requiring, without compensation, strictly construed, 563.
to influence legislation cannot be contracted for, 196.
of child, right of father to, 485.
- SERVITUDE. See SLAVERY.
- SEVENTH AMENDMENT, limitations of, apply to federal government only, 46.
- SHEEP, regulations for protection of, 527, n. 2, 881, n. 3.
- SIDEWALKS, owners of lots may be compelled to build under police power, 860.
See ASSESSMENTS.
- SIGNING OF BILLS,
by officers of legislature, 218.
by the governor, 218-221.
- SIXTH AMENDMENT,
limitations of, apply to federal government only, 46.
- SLANDER,
general rules of liability for, 605, 606.
See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.
- SLAVE CONTRACTS, enforcement of, 405, n. 1.
- SLAVERY,
former state of, in England, 419.
causes of its disappearance, 420-422.
in Scotland, 422, 423.
in America, 423, 424.
now prohibited, 14.
servitude in punishment of crime, 14, 423.

SLAVES,

United States and States forbidden to pay claims for loss or emancipation of, 17.

SOLDIERS,

quartering of, in private houses prohibited, 435.
municipal bounties to, 326-333.
military suffrage laws, 903, n.
jealousy of standing armies, 498, 499.

SOUTH CAROLINA,

revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
title of act to embrace the object, 169 and n. 3.
right of jury to determine the law in cases of libel, n. 1, 463.
protection of person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
religious tests for office in, 662, n. 3.
persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms excused, 678, n. 1.
private property not to be taken without compensation, 816, n. 3.
exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

SOVEREIGN POWERS,

separation of, 62-66, 126-139. cannot be granted away, 174-176, 293, 395-402.

SOVEREIGN STATE,

what it is, 3.
American States not strictly such, 8, 24-31.

SOVEREIGNTY,

definition of, 3.
territorial and other limits of, 4.
in America, rests in people, 56, 126, 892.
limitation of the doctrine, 57.
division of powers of, in American system, 4, 71.
legislature not to bargain away, 174-176, 293, 395-402.
exercise of, by the people, 892.

See ELECTIONS.

SPECIAL JURISDICTION, courts of, 555, 556.

SPECIAL LAWS, forbidden in certain States where general can be made applicable, 153 and n. 2, 151 and n. 4.

due process of law does not always forbid, 554-557.
for sale of lands, &c., 140.

SPECIAL PRIVILEGES,

strict construction of, 561-567.
restrictions in, based on sex, 889, n. 2.

SPECIAL SESSIONS OF LEGISLATURE, calling of, by the governor, 188, 222.

SPEECH, FREEDOM OF. See LIBERTY OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS.SPEECHES, of legislators, publication of, 650-652.

of counsel, 636.

SPEED,

upon public highways, regulation of, 860, 861.
on navigable waters, 867.

SPEEDY TRIAL,

right of accused parties to, 440.

SPIRIT OF THE CONSTITUTION, must be found in the words employed, 108, 239-241.

laws in supposed violation of, 239-241.

STALLIONS,

prohibiting standing of, in public places, 886, n. 2.

STAMP, defence to contract based on the want of, may be taken away, 539, n. 2.

cannot be required on process of State courts, 684.

upon contracts, 684, n. 2.

STAMP ACT CONGRESS,

what led to, 7.

STANDING ARMIES,

jealousy of, 495, 499.

STANDING MUTE,

of accused party, proceeding in case of, 439.

STAR CHAMBER,

court of, 488.

STARE DECISIS,

what is, and effect of the doctrine, 79-88.

STATE,

definition of, 3.

sovereign, what is, 3.

distinguished from nation, 3.

limits to jurisdiction of, 4.

not suable without its own consent, 23 and n. 2.

actions nominally against officers, really against State, will not lie, 23, n. 2.

not liable for acts of agents, 23, n. 2.

STATE BUILDINGS,

local taxation for, 313, n. 1, 337, n. 1.

STATE CONSTITUTIONS,

in existence when United States Constitution was formed, 49.

pre-existing laws, common and statutory, 49-54, 55, n.

ordinance of 1787, 54, n. 2.

colonial charters, 55.

how modified when not containing provisions therefor, 56.

theory that the people are sovereign, 56, 58.

general rules for modification of, 58-63.

right of people of Territories to form, 58, 59.

right to amend, rests in people as an organized body politic, 59.

will of the people must be expressed under forms of law, 59, 60.

conventions to amend or revise, 61.

limitations by Constitution of the United States on power to amend, 62.

protection of personal rights by, 62, 64, 65.

unjust provisions, &c., must be enforced, 62, 63.

what is generally to be expected in, 64-68.

are not the origin of individual rights, 68, 69.

are presumed to have been drafted with care, 91, 92.

are successors of English charters of liberty, 93, 94.

construction of, 70-123.

See CONSTRUCTION OF STATE CONSTITUTIONS.

STATE COURTS,

- removal of causes from, to United States courts, 25-31.
- to decide finally questions of State law, 31, 33.
- protection to personal liberty by, 417, 418, 491.

See COURTS.

STATE INDEBTEDNESS,

- prohibition of, will not prevent indebtedness by municipal corporations, 321-325.

STATE INSTITUTIONS,

- local taxation for, 313, n. 1, 337, n. 1.

STATEMENT,

- of defendant in criminal case, right to make, and effect of, 443-449.

STATE'S ATTORNEY,

- fairness required of, 482, n. 1.

STATES OF THE UNION,

- in what sense sovereign, 8.
- always subject to a common government, 10.
- restrictions upon, in the Constitution, 35-41.
- suits between, in Federal courts, 23.
- division of powers between, and the nation, 4.
- not suable without their consent by individuals, 23 and n. 2.
- actions, nominally against officers, really against State, will not lie, 23, n. 2.
- powers prohibited to, 35, 36, 44, 45.
- may legislate, in absence of congressional action, 45.
- faith to be given to public records of, 38-40.
- privileges and immunities of citizens of, 35, 692.
- cannot tax agencies of general government, 45.
- admission of new, 56.
- agreements of, are inviolable, 384-386.
- compacts between, are inviolable, 383, n. 1.

STATUS,

- of marriage, control of, by legislature, 152-157.

See DIVORCE.

STATUTES,

- adopted from other States, construction of, 85 and note.
- directory and mandatory, 109-114.
- enactment of, 189-226.
 - constitutional requirements must be observed, 189.
 - common parliamentary law as affecting, 187.
 - the two houses must act separately, 187.
 - are of equal importance, dignity, and power, 187.
 - to proceed in their own way in collecting information, 192.
 - journals of houses as evidence, 193, 194.
 - introduction of bills, 197-199.
 - in some States bills involving raising of money must originate in lower house, 188.
 - three several readings of bills, 116-118, 199, 200.
 - yeas and nays, entry of, 115, 201.
 - what sufficient vote on passage, 201.
 - title of bill, formerly no part of it, 202.

STATUTES — continued.

- constitutional provisions requiring object to be expressed, 117, 202.
- these provisions mandatory, 213, 214.
- evil to be remedied whereby, 203-205.
- particularity required in stating object, 205-207.
- "other purposes," ineffectual words in, 207.
- examples as to what can be held embraced in, 208, 209.
- repealing section, valid though not in title, 208.
- effect if more than one object embraced in title, 210, 211.
- effect where act broader than title, 211-214.
- amendatory, 214-217.
 - requirement that act amended be set forth at length, 214-217.
 - this not applicable to amendments by implication, 216.
- repeal of, at session of their passage, 217.
 - by unconstitutional act, 256, 257.
- signing of, by presiding officers of two houses, 218.
- approval of, by the governor, 218-221.
- passage of, at special sessions, 222.
- when to take effect, 222-226.
- whether taking effect of, may be conditional, 164-170.
- publication of, 223-226.
- presumed validity of, 235-243, 252-254.
- power of courts to declare their unconstitutionality, 227-250.
 - inferior courts may pass upon, 230, n. 1.
 - not to be exercised by bare quorum, 230.
 - a rule of propriety only, 230.
 - nor unless decision on the very point necessary, 231.
 - nor on complaint of party not interested, 232.
 - nor solely because of unjust provisions, 233-237.
 - nor because violating fundamental principles, 237-239.
 - nor because opposed to spirit of constitution, 239-241.
 - nor in any doubtful case, 252-257.
- may be void though no express constitutional provision violated, 242, 244.
- may be unconstitutional in part, 246-250.
 - instances of, 249, 250.
 - when valid portion may be enforced, 246-250.
 - may be valid as to some cases and void as to others, 250.
- constitutional objection to, may be waived, 250.
 - not in criminal cases, 252.
- motives in passage of, not to be inquired into, 257-259.
- consequence when invalid, 259-260.
- whether jury may pass upon, 480, n. 4.
- retrospective, 528-546.
- construction of, to be such as to give effect, 255.
 - presumption against conflict with constitution, 255-257.
 - to be prospective, 529.
 - contemporary and practical, 102-107.
- ex post facto*, 372-383.

See EX POST FACTO LAWS.

- violating obligation of contracts, 383-417.
- validating legal proceedings, 150, 151.

See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

- unequal and partial, 554-575.

STATUTES — continued.

- of limitation, 520, 524.

- of Parliament, how far in force in America, 51-53.

STATUTORY LIENS,

- whether they may be taken away, 407, n. 1.

STATUTORY PRIVILEGES,

- are not vested rights, 548.

- strict construction of, 563-575.

STAY LAWS,

- law taking from mortgagees right to possession invalid as to existing mortgages, 412.

- law extending time of redemption of lands previously sold is void, 412, 413.

- law shortening redemption void, 412, 413.

- stay of execution on existing demands for unreasonable or indefinite time is void, 413, 414.

STOCK IN CORPORATIONS,

- municipal subscriptions to, 187, 168, 312-325.

- when liable for debts, cannot be released by legislative act, 415.

STREETS,

- power of cities, &c., to change grade of, 295-303.

- power to control, 295-303, and n. (a), 297.

- liability for injuries in, &c., 300-306, and n. 1, 300.

- special assessments for grading and paving, 713-717.

- assessment of labor upon, 737.

- exercise of right of eminent domain for, 756, 759 et seq.

- and for materials for constructing, 756.

- when owner of land to receive compensation, 812-828.

- appropriation of, for railways, 789-803.

- police regulations for use of, 860, 861.

STRICT CONSTRUCTION,

- of laws in derogation of common law, 95.

- of charters, 271, 272, 564-567.

- of statutes granting special privileges, 563-567.

- of statutes requiring gratuitous services, 563.

- of statutes taking property for public use, 760-762.

STUDENTS,

- law for protection of, 888.

SUBJECT OF STATUTE,

- required in some States to be stated in title, 202.

SUBMITTING LAWS TO POPULAR VOTE,

- whether it is a delegation of legislative power, 164-168.

- authorities generally do not allow, 168, 169.

- corporate charters, &c., may be submitted, 167, 264, 265.

- and questions of division of towns, &c., 167.

- and questions of local subscriptions to improvements, 167, n. 5, 169, 170.

SUBSCRIPTIONS,

- to internal improvements by municipal corporations, 167, n. 5, 312-325 and notes.

- submitting questions of, to corporation is not delegating legislative power, 167, n. 5, 169, 170.

- power of taxation to provide for, cannot be taken away, 414, 415.

SUCCESSION TO THE CROWN, power of Parliament to change, 125

SUCCESSION TAXES,

character and validity of, 708, n. (a).

SUFFRAGE,

right of, in forming new constitutions, 57.

restrictions upon, to be construed strictly, 564.

constitutional qualifications for, not to be added to by legislature, 99 and n. 3.

who to exercise generally, 899-905.

regulation of right of, 905-908.

right of, not conferred on women by the new amendments, 18, n.

See ELECTIONS.

SUIT,

notification of, by publication, 582-585.

See ACTION.

SUMPTUARY LAWS,

odious character of, 549, 550.

SUNDAY,

laws to prevent desecration of, how defended, 675.

police regulations regarding, 859.

SUPPORT, of children, liability of father for, 485.

lateral, of lands, right to, 785, n. 3.

SUPREMACY OF PARLIAMENT, extent of, 6, 124-127, 244, 366.

SUPREME COURT,

Federal, appellate jurisdiction of, from State courts, 25-31.

SUPREME LAW,

Constitution, laws, and treaties of United States to be, 24.

of a State, constitution to be, 4.

SURRENDER, of fugitives from justice, 37, 38, n. 1.

SUSPENSION OF LAWS,

when authorized must be general, 558.

for limitation of actions, 523 and n. 2.

SWAMPS,

drains for, 799, 770.

special assessments for draining, 734.

T.

TAKING OF PROPERTY, of individuals for public use, 732, n. 3, 752 et seq.

whether necessity for, is a judicial question, 777, 778 and notes.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; TAXATION.

TAX,

what is, 673.

direct, what is, 680.

TAX DEED,

may be made prima facie evidence of good title, 525, 526.

but not conclusive evidence, 527.

TAX LAWS,

directory and mandatory provisions in, 109-119.

See TAXATION.

TAX SALES,

curing defective proceedings in, by retrospective legislation, 544-546.

what defects should avoid, 747, 748.

deeds given upon, may be made evidence of title, 525-528.

conditions to redemption from, 527, n. 1.

See TAXATION.

TAXATION,

general government may exercise power of, 12.

and representation to go together, 52, 53, 84, n. 1, 163, n. 1, 238.

construction of grant of, 318, 319.

right of, compared with eminent domain, 812.

exemptions from, by the States, when not repealable, 176, 395, 396.

can only be for public purposes, 184, 243, 678, 696-705.

whether purpose is public is judicial question, 185, n. 1.

must be by consent of the people, 163, n. 1.

license fees distinguished from, 283 and notes, 709, n. 1.

by municipalities, power of legislature over, 165-167, 309, 334-336, 390 and n. 1.

for internal improvements, 312-325.

re-assessment of irregular, may be authorized, 306-308.

irregular, may be confirmed by legislature, 544-546.

necessary to the existence of government, 678.

unlimited nature of power of, 678-686.

for the support of religion forbidden, 664, 695, n. 2.

of agencies of national government by the States impliedly forbidden, 45, 680-683.

of agencies of the States by the national government also forbidden, 683, 684.

of the subjects of commerce by the States, 686-691, 856-859.

of corporations, 710, n. (a), 739, n. (a).

discriminations in, as between citizens of different States, 692, 693.

legislature the proper authority to determine upon, 698-708.

apportionment essential to, 705.

taxing districts, necessity of, 711, 718, 719, 722.

apportionment not always by values, 708, 709, 712, 713.

periodical valuations for, 711, 712.

inheritance taxes, 708, n. (a).

license fees and other special taxes, 713.

assessments for local improvements, 713-717.

benefits from the improvement may be taken into the account, 714, 715, 727, 734.

general provisions requiring taxation by value do not apply to these assessments, 713-715.

taxation of persons or property out of the district is void, 720-726.

must be uniform throughout the district, 692-694, 718-732.

local assessments may be made in proportion to frontage, 729-731.

necessity for apportionment in such case, 729, 730.

special taxing districts for drains, levees, &c., 734-736.

taxation in labor for repair of roads, &c., 737.

difficulty in making taxation always equal, 737, 738.

TAXATION — continued.

- hardships of individual cases do not make it void, 733.
- legislature must select the objects of taxation, 739.
- exemptions of property from, 739-744.
- constitutional provisions which preclude exemptions, 743, 744.
- special exemptions void, 741, n. 1.
- legislative authority must be shown for each particular tax, 744-747.
- excessive taxation, 747, 748.
- the maxim de minimis lex non curat not applicable in tax proceedings, 748.
- what defects and irregularities render tax sales void, 747, 748.
- legislature controls methods of collecting taxes, 745, 749.

TEACHER AND SCHOLAR,

- control of former over latter, 261, n. 1, 486.

TECHNICAL RULES OF CONSTRUCTION,

- danger of resorting to, 95 and n. 3, and 123, n. 1.

TELEGRAPHIC CORRESPONDENCE,

- right to secrecy in, 432, n. 2.

TEMPERANCE LAWS,

- right of the States to pass, 845-851.

TENNESSEE,

- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- title of act to express the object, 202, n. 3.
- constitutional provision relating to amendment of acts, 215, n. 1.
- when acts to take effect, 224, n. 4.
- right of jury to determine the law in libel cases, 463, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- constitutional provision respecting retrospective laws, 530, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 599, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office in, 692, n. 3.
- persons may be excused from bearing arms by money payment, 676, n. 1.
- exclusion of religious teachers from office, 692, n. 2.

TENTH AMENDMENT,

- provisions of, 46.

TERRITORIAL LIMITATION,

- to the powers of sovereignty, 4.
- to the exercise of power by the States, 176-181.
- to municipal authority, 312.
- to power of taxation, 718-721, 743.

TERRITORIES,

- power of eminent domain in, 755, 756.
- legislation for, 54, n. 1.
- formation of constitutions by people of, 57.

TESTS,

- test oaths, when may constitute a punishment, 371, 372 and notes.
- religious tests forbidden in some States, 622, notes, 677, n.
- political tests for office, 894, n.

TEXAS,

- admission to Union, 10.
- Mexican law retained in the system of, 54, n. 2.
- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- legislative rules regulating pardons, 160, n. 2.

TEXAS — continued.

- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- title of acts to express the object, 202, n. 3.
- right of jury to determine the law in libel cases, 403, n. 1.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- constitutional provision respecting retrospective laws, 530, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 500, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 602, n. 3.
- damaging of property in course of public improvements, 810, n. 2.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 802, n. 1.

THIRTEENTH AMENDMENT,

- provisions of, 14, 417, 423.

TIME,

- when statute shall take effect may be determined by popular vote, 171, 172.
- loss of remedy by lapse of, 520-524.
- and place are of the essence of election laws, 908, 909.

TITLE TO LEGISLATIVE ACT,

- requirement that it shall state subject, &c., is mandatory, 117-119, 202-214.
- to be liberally construed, 209.
- what, sufficient, 209
- generality of, not necessarily objectionable, 206.
- effect, if embraces more than one object, 210, 211.
- effect, where act broader than, 211, 214.
- amendment of statute by reference to, 214-218.

TITLES OF NOBILITY,

- States not to grant, 44, 45.

TOLERATION,

- as distinguished from religious liberty, 639-662.

TORT,

- judgment for, is not a contract, 411.

TOWN EXPENSES,

- cannot embrace pay for lobby services, 196 and n. 2.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

TOWNSHIPS,

- importance of, in the American system, 293-295 and notes.
- origin of, 243, 244.
- distinguished from chartered corporations, 347-349.
- are quasi corporations, 347, 349.
- collection from corporators of judgments against, 346-355.
- not liable for neglect of duty by officers, 354.
- apportionment of debts, &c., on division, 341, 411.
- indemnification of officers of, 306-309.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

TRADE,

- by-laws in general restraint of, 284-291.

TRAVEL,

- obstructions to, on navigable waters, 862-867.
- regulating speed of, 860, 861, 867.

TRAVERSE JURY,

- trial of accused parties by, 453-470.

See JURY TRIAL.

TREASON,

- evidence required to convict of, 443, n. 4.

TREATIES.

- President to make with concurrence of senate, 20, 21.
- of the United States, to be the supreme law, 24.
- States forbidden to enter into, 35.

TREATING VOTERS,

- laws against, 923.

TRIAL,

- of right to property, 526-528.
 - new, not to be granted by legislature, 137, 560.
 - of accused parties to be by jury, 453, 454.
 - must be speedy, 440, 441.
 - must be public, 441.
 - must not be inquisitorial, 442 and n. 1, 424, n. (a).
- See CRIMES; HEARING; JURY TRIAL.

TROOPS,

- and ships of war, restrictions upon States as to, 36.

TRUST,

- the legislative, not to be delegated, 163, 263.
- grants of property in, inviolable, 390, 391.

TRUSTEES,

- special statutes authorizing sales by, constitutional, 140.
- rights of certain que trust not to be determined by legislature, 147-151.
- municipal corporations as, 261, n. 1, and 266, n. 2.

TRUTH,

- as a defence in libel cases, 607, 608, 623, 624, 656.
- necessity of showing good motives for publication of, 656.

TURNPIKES,

- exercise of eminent domain for, 769.
- appropriation of highways for, 788, 789.
- change of, to common highways, 790, n. 1.

TWICE IN JEOPARDY,

- punishment of same act under State and national law, 45, 46.
 - under State law and municipal by-law, 279 and n. 4.
- See JEOPARDY.

TWO THIRDS OF HOUSE,

- what constitutes, 201.

U.

ULTRA VIRES,

- contracts of municipal corporations which are, 272, 273, 309-311.

UNANIMITY,

- required in jury trials, 400 and notes.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL LAW,

- definition of the term, 5, 6.
 - first declaration of, 55, n. 1, 229, n. 1.
 - impeachment of judges for refusal to enforce, 229, n. 1.
 - power of the courts to annul, 227-229.
 - consent to taking of property under, defeats objection to, 232.
 - strangers cannot urge the objection, 232.
 - effect of, 259, 260.
 - whether jury may pass upon, 480, n. 4.
- See COURTS; STATUTES.

UNEQUAL AND PARTIAL LEGISLATION,

- special laws of a remedial nature, 551.
- local laws, or laws applying to particular classes, 554-556.
- proscription of parties for opinions, 553.
- suspensions of the laws must be general, 558, 559.
- distinctions must be based upon reason, 561.
- equality the aim of the law, 562.
- strict construction of special burdens and privileges, 563-567.
- discrimination against citizens of other States, 36, 567-575.

UNIFORMITY,

- in construction of constitutions, 88, 89.
- in taxation, 705, 718-732.

See TAXATION.

UNION,

- of the colonies before the Revolution, 7.

UNITED STATES,

- division of powers between the States and Union, 4.
- origin of its government, 7.
- Revolutionary Congress and its powers, 8, 9.
- Articles of Confederation and their failure, 9.
- formation of Constitution of, 9.
- government of, one of enumerated powers, 10, 242.
- general powers of, 11-18.
 - to levy taxes, 679, 680.
- its laws and treaties the supreme law, 24.
- judicial powers of, 22, 23, 47.
- removal of causes from State courts to courts of, 25-31.
- prohibition upon exercise of powers by the States, 35-46.
- guaranty of republican government to the States, 42-44.
- implied prohibition of powers to the States, 45, 46.
- reservation of powers to States and people, 46.
- consent of, to formation of State constitutions, 56, 57.

See CONGRESS; CONSTITUTION OF UNITED STATES; COURTS OF UNITED STATES; PRESIDENT.

UNJUST DEFENCES,

- no vested right in, 529 et seq.

UNJUST PROVISIONS,

- in constitutions, must be enforced, 108, 109.
- in statutes, do not necessarily avoid them, 232-237.

See PARTIAL LEGISLATION.

UNLAWFUL CONTRACTS. See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS.UNLIMITED POWER,

- unknown in America, 125, n. 1.

UNMUZZLED DOGS,

- restraining from running at large, 881

UNREASONABLE BAIL,

- not to be required, 439.

UNREASONABLE BY-LAWS,

- are void, 280-292 and notes.

UNREASONABLE SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. See SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

UNWHOLESOME PROVISIONS, prohibiting sale of, 881, 882.

USAGE AND CUSTOM. See COMMON LAW.*USURPATION, by legislature should not be upheld, 105-110.

of office, 898.

USURY,

right to defence of, may be taken away by legislature retrospectively, 538.

V.VACANCIES,

in office, filling, 99, n. 3.

VACCINATION,

compulsory, 889, n. (b).

VAGRANCY,

commitment of children for, 423, n. 4.
charges of, not triable by jury, 453, n. 1.
but must be tried judicially, 538, n. 1.

VALIDATING IMPERFECT CONTRACTS,

by retrospective legislation, 415, 531-546.

See RETROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION.

VALUATION,

of property for taxation, 711, 712.
requirements for, do not apply to local assessments, 713-715.

See TAXATION.

of land taken for public use. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

VENUE,

in criminal cases, 459.
change of, 459, n. 2.

VERDICT,

jury not to be controlled by judge in giving, 460.
judge cannot refuse to receive, 461.
jury may return special, 461.
but cannot be compelled to do so, 461.
general, covers both the law and the facts, 461, 463.
in favor of defendant in criminal case cannot be set aside, 462, 463.
against accused, may be set aside, 464.
in civil cases, to cover law and fact, 462, 462.
to be a bar to new prosecution, 466.
when defendant not to be deprived of, by nolle prosequi, 468.
not a bar if court had no jurisdiction, 467, 468.
or if indictment fatally defective, 467, 468.
when jury may be discharged without, 468-470.
set aside on defendant's motion, may be new trial, 470.
on some of the counts, is bar to new trial thereon, 470.
cannot be received from less than twelve jurors, 454-459 and notes.

VERMONT,

revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
betterment, law of, 551, 552.

VERMONT — continued.

- liberty of speech and of press, 506, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 534, n.

VESTED RIGHTS.

- not conferred by charters of municipal incorporation, 266-268.
- grants of property to corporations not revocable, 342-347, 390-394.
- under the marriage relation, cannot be taken away, 403.
- not to be disturbed except by due process of law, 14, 15, 245, 417, 508
- meaning of the term, 500-549.
- subjection of, to general laws, 508-510.
- interests in expectancy are not, 509-515.
- rights under the marriage relation, when are, 513-515.
- in particular legal remedies, parties do not have, 515-520.
- but do have to some legal remedy, 410, 411, 517, 518.
- statutory privileges are not, 546.
- in rights of action, 517, 518.
- forfeitures of, must be judicially declared, 518-520.
- time for enforcing, may be limited, 520-524.
- do not exist in rules of evidence, 524-528.
- rights to take advantage of informalities are not, 528, 529.
- or of defence of usury, 536, 537.

VILLAGES AND CITIES. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.*VILLEINAGE.

- in England, 419-422.

VINDICTIVE DAMAGES.

- when publisher of newspaper not liable to, 647, 648.

VIOLATING OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. See OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.*VIRGINIA.

- repeal of acts of Parliament in, 54, n. 2.
- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 158, n. 2.
- exercise of the pardoning power restrained, 160 and n. 2.
- revenue bills to originate in lower house, 188, n. 1.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to title, 215, n. 1.
- compact with Kentucky, 350, n. 1.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 506, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 534, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 602, n. 1.

VOID CONTRACTS. See CONTRACTS.*VOID JUDGMENTS. See JURISDICTION.*VOID STATUTES. See STATUTES.*VOLUNTEERS.

- in military service, municipal bounties to, 326-333.

VOTERS.

- franchise of, cannot be made to depend on impossible condition, 518, n. 3.

VOTERS — continued.

- constitutional qualifications of, cannot be added to by legislature, 99 and n. 2.
- who are, 568, n. 1, 889-902.
- privilege of secrecy of, 910-913.
- whether qualifications of, can be inquired into in contesting election, 941-944.

See ELECTIONS.

VOTING MACHINES

- use of, 910, n. 1.

W.

WAGERS,

- upon elections, are illegal, 924.

WAIVER,

- of constitutional objection, 250-252, 415.
- of defects in incorporation, n. 1, 118.
- of irregularities in judicial proceedings, 588.
- of objection to interested judge, 594, 595.
- of right to full panel of jurors, 456-458.
- of right to compensation for property taken by public, 815, 816.
- in capital cases, 452 and n. 2.
- of elector's right to secrecy, 910-913.

WAR AND PEACE,

- power of Revolutionary Congress over, 8.
- control of questions concerning, by Congress, 13.
- States not to engage in war except, &c., 36.

WARD,

- control of guardian over, 485, 486.
- special statutes for sale of lands of, 140-147.

WAREHOUSEMEN,

- regulation of charges of, 870-877.

WARRANTS,

- general, their illegality, 425-429.
- service of, in criminal cases, 429.
- search-warrants, 429-434.

See UNREASONABLE SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

WATERCOURSES,

- navigable, and rights therein, 861-868.
- dams across, for manufacturing purposes, 771-773, 867.
- bridges over, under State authority, 865.
- licensing ferries across, 867.
- construction of levees upon, 769, 868.
- flooding premises by, the liability for, 787, n. 2.
- incidental injury by improvement of, gives no right of action, 868.

See NAVIGABLE WATERS; WATER-RIGHTS.

WATER-RIGHTS,

- right to front on navigable water is property, 787, 788.
- right of the States to establish wharf lines, 878.

WATER-RIGHTS — continued.

- right to use of, in running stream, 807, 808.
- appropriation of streams under right of eminent domain, 757, 769, 770.
- See NAVIGABLE WATERS; WATERCOURSES.

WAYS. See HIGHWAYS; PRIVATE ROADS; ROADS; STREETS.WEIGHTS AND MEASURES,

- Congress may fix standard of, 12.
- regulation of, by the States, 887-889.

WEST VIRGINIA,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- protection to person and property by law of the land, 500, n. 2.
- liberty of speech and of the press in, 596, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious liberty in, 662, n. 3.
- damaging property in the course of public improvements, 810, n. 2.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

WHARFAGE,

- right to, is property, 787, 788.
- States may establish wharf lines, 878.

WHIPPING,

- punishment by, 373.

WIDOW. See DOWER.WIFE. See DIVORCE; DOWER; MARRIED WOMEN.WILL,

- imperfect, cannot be validated after title passed, 156, n. 2.

WISCONSIN,

- special statutes licensing sale of lands forbidden, 141, n. 1.
- divorces not to be granted by legislature, 153, n. 2.
- privilege of legislators from arrest, 192, n. 1.
- title of act to embrace the subject, 202, n. 3.
- no act to be amended by mere reference to its title, 215, n. 1.
- time when acts take effect, 224, 225.
- restriction upon power to contract debts, 325.
- liberty of speech and of the press, 566, n.
- privilege of legislators in debate, 634, n.
- religious tests for office forbidden in, 662, n. 3.
- religious belief not to be test of incompetency of witness, 677, n.
- exclusions from suffrage in, 902, n. 1.

WITCHCRAFT,

- confessions of, 444.

WITNESSES,

- power to summon and examine before legislative committees, 193.
- accused parties to be confronted with, 450-452.
 - not compellable to be against themselves, 442-452, 564.
 - evidence by, in their own favor, 449, n. 2.
- not liable to civil action for false testimony, 629, 630.
 - unless the testimony was irrelevant, 629, n. 2.
- competency and credibility of, as depending on religious belief, 676, 677, n.
- testimony of wife on behalf of husband, 447, n. 4.

WOMEN,

regulation of employments of, 889, n. 3.

may hold office, 894, n.

may not vote, 57, 568, n. 1, 902.

See DIVORCE; DOWER; MARRIED WOMEN.

WORKS OF ART,

liberty of criticism of, 644, 645.

WRITS OF ASSISTANCE, unconstitutional character of, 425-429.

WRITS OF HABEAS CORPUS. See HABEAS CORPUS.

WRITTEN CONSTITUTIONS, object of, 78, n. 2.

Y.

YEAS AND NAYS,

in some States, on passage of laws to be entered on journals, 115, 201.